DAY 1 · WEEK 1

Genesis 1:1-2:3

God speaks creation into existence; the six days; the goodness of all things

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Reading · 34 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 1:1-2:3 slowly, and aloud if you can. It is the opening of the Bible and takes about five minutes. Notice the rhythm of the six days and the line that keeps returning: "And God saw that it was good." Read it once for the story, and once more asking what it tells you about God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Genesis is the first book of the Pentateuch, the five books of Moses, and was written for Israel as they prepared to enter the land God promised to Abraham. The original audience had just been delivered from slavery in Egypt, where they had lived for four hundred years under a culture full of competing gods: the sun, the river, the storm, and Pharaoh himself, who was called divine. Genesis 1 was a direct answer to all of that. It told them whose world they actually lived in.

This opening chapter is also the beginning of the entire biblical story, the foundation on which every covenant, every promise, and every redemptive act will rest. Before there can be a story of redemption, there must first be a creation worth redeeming. Before there can be a Savior, there must first be a Creator. Genesis 1 tells us who God is, what kind of world he made, and what humanity was made for. Everything that follows in Scripture depends on getting this beginning right.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The chapter follows a clear pattern: "And God said… and it was so… and God saw that it was good." Notice how often this rhythm repeats. Counting them is itself an act of observation.

2. There is a parallel structure between the days. Days 1-3 form realms (light/dark, sky/sea, land/vegetation), and Days 4-6 fill those realms with their inhabitants (sun and moon, fish and birds, animals and humans). Creation is ordered, not chaotic.
3. God speaks. He does not struggle, fight, or shape creation out of pre-existing material that opposes him. He commands, and reality obeys.
4. The creation of humanity is set apart. There is a divine deliberation ("Let us make man in our image"), a doubling of the verb "created" in verse 27, and the explicit blessing and commission given to no other creature.
5. The seventh day is the climax, not the sixth. The creation of humanity is the high point of the work, but the Sabbath is the high point of the week.
6. The phrase "it was good" appears seven times. After humanity is made, it becomes "very good." Goodness is woven into the fabric of what God has made.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 1 is not primarily concerned with how God created or how long it took. Its concern is who God is, what he made, and what kind of world we live in. Every other ancient creation story in the world that Israel encountered, Babylonian, Egyptian, Canaanite, featured gods who fought, struggled, killed one another, or formed the world out of corpses and chaos. Genesis 1 stands utterly apart. There is one God. He is sovereign over all things. He creates by speaking, not by struggling. And what he makes is good.

The opening verse establishes everything: "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth." Before there was time, there was God. Before there was matter, there was God. He is not part of the created order; he is its source. The Hebrew word for "created" here is bara, a verb used only of God, never of human making. It signals something only God can do: bring into existence what was not there before.

Then comes the pattern. God speaks, and what he says becomes reality. Light comes into being at his word. Land separates from sea at his word. Plants grow, stars appear, creatures swim and fly and walk, all at his word. This is the doctrine of creation by divine speech, and it carries enormous theological weight. It means God's word is not advisory or decorative; it is creative. What God says, is. When you later read that the gospel comes to you "through the word," or that you are "born again by the imperishable seed of the word," remember that the same word that called galaxies into existence is now calling sinners into new life.

The chapter unfolds in a deliberate, beautiful symmetry. Days 1, 2, and 3 form realms, God separates light from darkness, waters above from waters below, and dry land from sea. Days 4, 5, and 6 fill those realms, sun and moon for day and night, birds and fish for sky and sea, animals and humans for the land. The world is not random. It is shaped, ordered, and prepared like a home being made ready for its inhabitants. And the chief inhabitant for whom the home is prepared is humanity.

When the sixth day arrives, the pattern shifts. God deliberates: “Let us make man in our image, after our likeness.” The plural is striking, Christian readers have long seen here the first hint of the triune nature of God, though the doctrine of the Trinity is not yet articulated. What is articulated is that humanity is unique. Of every other creature, God said “Let the earth bring forth” or “Let the waters swarm.” But of humanity, God said “Let us make.” Humanity bears God’s image, male and female together, blessed, commissioned, and given responsibility over creation. This is the foundation of all Christian anthropology. Every human you will ever meet bears the image of God.

And then, on the seventh day, God rests. Not because he is tired. He rests because the work is finished, and rest is the goal of the work. The Sabbath is woven into the fabric of creation before any law is given. It tells us that the universe has a purpose, and that purpose is not endless production but communion with God in restful joy. Every Sabbath the church gathers, every Lord’s Day a believer enters worship, points back to this seventh day, and forward to the eternal rest that awaits the people of God.

STEP 5

Connection

Day 1 is the foundation. There is no previous reading to build on, but everything that follows in this plan will build on this. The God who speaks here is the same God who will call Abraham, deliver Israel from Egypt, give the law at Sinai, raise up David, send his Son, and pour out his Spirit. The world he makes here is the same world that will be cursed in Genesis 3, redeemed at the cross, and renewed in the new heavens and new earth. Watch how often the rest of Scripture echoes this chapter: John’s Gospel opens “In the beginning was the Word,” directly mirroring Genesis 1:1. Revelation closes with a new creation that fulfills what began here. The whole Bible is in some sense the story of how God brings his good creation to its appointed rest in Christ.

STEP 6

Application

Begin where Scripture begins: with God as Creator. This is not a doctrine you accept once and move past. It is the lens through which you see everything else. Because God made you, you have inherent dignity that no one can give and no one can take. Because God made your body, your body is not a prison or an accident, it is good. Because God made the world, your work in the world matters; gardening, parenting, building, studying, serving are all forms of carrying out the mandate given to humanity in the image of God. Because God made the Sabbath, your rest is not laziness but worship.

Today, consider one practical response: where in your life have you been treating something God made as either worthless or as ultimate? The created order points beyond itself to its Creator. Eat your food with gratitude. Take in a sunset and let it lead you to praise. Treat the people around you as image-bearers worthy of dignity. And when you grow tired, let your weariness remind you that the goal of creation is not endless work but the rest of God himself, a rest finally fulfilled in Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God as Creator, and thank him for one thing in your life you have received as a gift from his hand.
- Ask him to open your eyes to see his goodness in ordinary things today.
- Tell him what you want to learn about him as you begin this journey.

GENESIS 1:1

DAY 2 · WEEK 1

2 Timothy 3:14-17; 2 Peter 1:16-21

The Doctrine of Scripture (Bibliology)

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Timothy 3:14-17 and 2 Peter 1:16-21 prayerfully. These are the two most direct New Testament passages on what Scripture is and where it comes from. Read each twice, slowly. Notice how Paul speaks of Scripture, and notice how Peter speaks of the prophetic writings. Read aloud if you can.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Today is the first doctrinal pause day in the plan. Throughout these two years, the regular flow of reading will be interrupted occasionally by a day devoted to articulating a major Christian doctrine, not because doctrine is separate from Scripture, but because Scripture itself teaches doctrine and asks us to think clearly about it. These days take a short passage of Scripture as the anchor and explore the teaching that emerges from it.

Before going further in this plan, we need to settle a foundational question: why trust this book? Yesterday you read Genesis 1, and across the next two years you will read every other book of the Bible. But every word of every reading rests on a prior conviction, that the Bible is not merely a human collection of religious literature, but the very word of God to humanity. The two passages you just read are where the Bible most directly tells us what it is and where it came from. Before we read anything else, we need to know what we are reading.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Paul tells Timothy that he has known the “sacred writings” from childhood, these were the Old Testament Scriptures. Paul assumes the OT is Scripture.
2. The phrase “breathed out by God” (theopneustos in Greek) is striking. Scripture is not just inspired in the way poets are “inspired”; it is the very breath of God in written form.

3. Scripture is described as "profitable" for four things: teaching, reproof, correction, and training in righteousness. It both informs and forms.

4. The goal of Scripture is the maturity and equipping of the man of God, "complete, equipped for every good work." Scripture is sufficient.

5. Peter writes that the gospel message is not "cleverly devised myths." He claims eyewitness authority and points to the prophetic word as "more fully confirmed."

6. The famous phrase "men spoke from God as they were carried along by the Holy Spirit" uses a sailing metaphor, the human authors were genuinely active, but the Spirit determined the direction.

7. Both passages root Scripture's authority in God himself, not in human committees, religious institutions, or personal experience.

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

The doctrine of Scripture, sometimes called bibliology, is the foundation of every other Christian doctrine. If we cannot trust this book, we have nothing to say about God, sin, salvation, the church, or the future. So the first question is the most important: what is the Bible?

The Bible's own answer is that it is the inspired Word of God. The Greek word Paul uses, theopneustos, does not mean that God's people came up with religious ideas and God endorsed them. It means that Scripture is breathed out by God himself. The human authors wrote real letters, with their own vocabularies, personalities, and circumstances, but what they wrote, God wrote. Peter's image of being "carried along" by the Spirit (the same word used of a ship driven by the wind) captures the same point: God's authorship works in and through human authorship, not around it.

From this doctrine of inspiration flows four other claims the church has historically made about Scripture.

First, inerrancy. Because Scripture is breathed out by God, and because God cannot lie or be mistaken, Scripture in its original form does not err. This does not mean every translation is perfect, or that every word must be read with a flat literalism. It means that when properly understood, Scripture does not lead us into falsehood. What God teaches in his Word is true.

Second, authority. Because Scripture is God's Word, it has the authority God has. To submit to Scripture is to submit to God; to dismiss Scripture is to dismiss God. The Bible is not one voice among many that the Christian considers; it is the voice to which all other voices are accountable.

Third, sufficiency. Paul says Scripture is enough, that through it the believer becomes "complete, equipped for every good work." Christians do not need new revelations, secret traditions, or extra-biblical mystical experiences to know what God requires of them. Scripture contains all that is necessary for salvation, faith, and life.

Fourth, clarity (or perspicuity). The Bible is not so obscure that only the highly trained can understand it. The main message, who God is, what humanity has done, what Christ has accomplished, how we are saved, is clear enough that an ordinary believer reading prayerfully can grasp it. This does not mean every passage is easy. It means the gospel is not hidden.

A few common misunderstandings deserve mention. Inspiration does not mean dictation, as if the human authors were typewriters and God pressed the keys. The authors' personalities and styles are visible everywhere. Authority does not mean the church's authority over Scripture, but Scripture's authority over the church. Sufficiency does not rule out the use of pastors, teachers, study aids, or tradition, it rules out treating any of those as equal to Scripture. And inerrancy applies to what Scripture teaches, not to incidental matters about which it makes no claim.

When we approach the Bible, we approach the voice of God himself. That is why every study of the faith begins here, and why every Christian's life of discipleship is sustained, by the regular, prayerful reading of Scripture.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The two passages you read make claims about Scripture that nothing else in the world makes about itself. Paul calls the Bible the breath of God. Peter says its writers were carried along by the Holy Spirit. These are not modest claims, and they have shaped Christianity from the beginning.

Consider Paul's words to Timothy first. Paul is writing to a young pastor who is facing opposition, false teaching, and discouragement. What does Paul tell him to rely on? Not his own giftedness, not his connections, not even Paul's continued mentorship, but the Scriptures he has known from childhood. Why? Because they are "able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus." This is a remarkable statement. Paul does not say Scripture is one tool among many; he says it has the power to bring a person to saving wisdom. The Bible does what no other book does. It carries the breath of God.

Peter's testimony adds a different angle. He is writing as someone who has seen the transfiguration with his own eyes. He could appeal to his apostolic eyewitness, and he does. But then he says something stunning: we have the prophetic word "more fully confirmed." More confirmed than his own eyewitness experience. Why? Because Peter knows that even his experience must be tested by Scripture, not the other way around. He calls Scripture "a lamp shining in a dark place." Not a lamp that helps a bit, but the lamp by which we navigate the darkness of this age.

This is the posture every Christian must take toward the Bible. The world we live in is full of competing voices, cultural assumptions, personal feelings, political loyalties, religious traditions. None of these is wholly absent from a Christian's life, and not all of them are bad. But none of them is the voice of God. When they speak against Scripture, they are wrong. When they align with Scripture, it is Scripture that gives them their weight. The Bible is the lamp; everything else gets its light from it.

This is also why the regular reading of Scripture is not an optional Christian habit. It is the way the breath of God reaches you. Through this book, the Spirit who carried the writers along still carries the readers along, into greater knowledge of Christ, into deeper repentance, into more mature obedience. You will not grow as a Christian apart from this book. And you do not need any other book to grow. Whatever else might be helpful, and many things are, the Bible is sufficient. The God who breathed out these words breathes them into your soul as you read them.

The implication is enormous. This is not a museum piece, not an inspirational anthology, not a religious classic. This is God speaking. When you open Scripture, the same God who said "Let there be light" is speaking to you, and what he says, taught, reproved, corrected, trained, is meant to make you complete. Approach it accordingly.

STEP 5

Connection

Yesterday you read Genesis 1, where God created by speaking. The doctrine of Scripture takes that same divine speech and tells us that what God has breathed out is not only the heavens and the earth, but also this written word. The God of Genesis 1, who spoke worlds into being, is the same God who has spoken in Scripture, and as you keep reading, you will hear his voice through every page. Every reading after today rests on what was settled here: this book is the breath of God, sufficient and authoritative, the lamp that lights our way through the entire story of redemption you are about to read.

STEP 6

Application

Trust this book. That is the practical heart of today's doctrine. Trust it when it speaks comfortably to you, and trust it when it confronts you. Trust it when it agrees with your culture, and trust it when it contradicts your culture. Trust it when it confirms what you already wanted to believe, and trust it especially when it tells you something you did not want to hear. The Bible is the breath of God; treat it as such.

Practically, this means three things. First, ask whether Scripture holds first place in your days. What would it look like for hearing God to become a habit and not a project? Second, when Scripture and your feelings disagree, trust Scripture. Feelings are real but unreliable; God's Word is reliable. Third, when teachers or churches contradict Scripture, trust Scripture. The Bible is not under any earthly authority. It is the authority over them.

There is one more practical implication: do not be afraid to read this book. Yes, it has hard parts. Yes, it asks more of you than you can give. But it was written to be understood by ordinary believers under the guidance of the Spirit. Read it humbly. Pray before you read. Read with the church when you can. And expect God to speak. He does, every time.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he has spoken, and that you are not left to guess who he is.
- Confess any place where you have trusted your own judgment over what Scripture says.
- Ask him for a humble, hungry heart toward his Word.

GENESIS 1:1

DAY 3 · WEEK 1

Genesis 2:4-25

The garden, the man, the woman; the covenant of works arranged

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Reading · 22 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 2:4-25 slowly. Genesis 1 gave a wide view of creation; this chapter zooms in on the garden, the man, and the woman. Notice what God provides, what he commands, and the one thing he calls “not good.” Read it aloud if you can.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Genesis 2 is not a second, contradictory creation story. It is a deliberate narrowing, a re-telling that zooms in on Day 6 of Chapter 1 to show us how humanity, in particular, was made and where humanity was placed. In Hebrew literary form, this kind of telescoping is common: first a wide overview, then a closer look at the part that matters most for the story to follow.

What follows in the Bible, the Fall, the covenants, the long history of redemption, only makes sense if we understand what humanity was originally meant to be and where humanity was originally meant to live. Genesis 2 sets up the covenant relationship between God and Adam that the next chapter will catastrophically break.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The name “LORD God” (Yahweh Elohim) appears here for the first time. Genesis 1 used Elohim, the general word for God. Now we encounter God’s covenant name combined with that title, the same God, but now revealed in personal relationship.
2. God forms man from the dust and breathes into his nostrils. Humanity is both earthly (made of the same material as the ground) and uniquely alive with God’s own breath.
3. The garden is described in beautiful detail, trees pleasant to the sight and good for food, a river that divides into four headwaters. This is paradise, but it is also a real place.

4. There are two named trees: the tree of life and the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. The command not to eat from the second is the first command God gives to humanity.

5. Adam is told to "work and keep" the garden. These same two Hebrew verbs are later used of the priests' service in the Tabernacle. Adam is, in a sense, the first priest.

6. The making of the woman is preceded by Adam discovering that nothing in creation corresponds to him. The woman is made from his side, not from his head to rule him or his feet to be ruled, but from his side as his equal partner.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 2 reveals that the creation account is, at its heart, a covenant account. The setting is a garden, Eden, but the garden is more than a beautiful place. It is the temple of creation, the meeting place between God and humanity, the original holy ground. The river that flows out of it waters the world, suggesting that what happens in this garden is meant to spread outward, that the holiness and life of God's presence is meant to extend to the ends of the earth.

Into this garden God places the man, and the words used to describe his task are loaded. He is to "work" and "keep" it, the same words later used of the priests who served in the Tabernacle. Adam is given a role that is simultaneously royal (exercising dominion) and priestly (serving and guarding the sacred space). He is a king-priest in a garden-temple, representing God to creation and creation to God.

Then comes the command. "Of every tree of the garden you may surely eat, but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil you shall not eat, for in the day that you eat of it you shall surely die." Notice the structure: God's generosity comes first ("of every tree… you may surely eat") and the one prohibition follows. This is the pattern of all true covenant relationship with God. Grace and gift come first; obedience is the response. The single commandment is not God being stingy or cruel. It is the test of whether Adam will trust God's wisdom about good and evil, or whether he will reach out and try to define those things for himself.

This arrangement is what theologians have long called the covenant of works. God offered Adam a relationship of life and blessing on the condition of obedience. Had Adam obeyed, he would have come into the fullness of what God offered, life confirmed, blessing extended, perhaps eventually access to the tree of life itself. But the conditional nature of the arrangement also meant that disobedience would bring death. The stakes were not arbitrary; they were the natural consequence of either trusting God or refusing to.

Then the narrative slows down again. God observes that "it is not good that the man should be alone." This is the first thing in creation declared not good, and it is not a flaw in creation, but a deliberate setup. Adam needs to discover his own lack before he receives the gift of a partner. So God brings the animals, and Adam names them, exercising his dominion, but also noticing that none of them correspond to him. None is a true partner.

So God puts Adam into a deep sleep, takes a rib from his side, and forms the woman. Adam's response is the first poetry in the Bible: "This at last is bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh." Marriage is established before the Fall, before sin enters the world. It is part of God's original good design, a covenant between a man and a woman that pictures, in its own way, the deeper covenant between God and his people. The chapter ends with the haunting line: "And the man and his wife were both naked and were not ashamed." There was no fear, no hiding, no covering. That is the world we lost.

Connection

Yesterday we saw God speak the cosmos into existence. Today we see him stoop to the dust and form a man with his own hands. The same God who is transcendent over creation is also intimate with his creatures. This is the God whose Son will later "take on flesh and dwell among us," who will gather children in his arms, who will form a new humanity from his pierced side as Adam's bride was formed from his. The pattern of Genesis 2, a man, a garden, a tree, a bride, will echo throughout Scripture all the way to the new creation in Revelation 22, where the tree of life appears again, and the river flows again, and the bride of Christ is finally united to her husband forever.

STEP 6

Application

If you are tempted today to think God is distant or impersonal, return to Genesis 2. The God of the Bible is not aloof. He kneels in the dust to form humanity. He plants a garden by hand. He breathes his own life into Adam's nostrils. He notices when his creature is alone and provides for him. This is the kind of God you serve.

Practically, consider three things today. First, your body is not a problem, it is part of God's design, formed by God himself. Treat it as such. Second, work is not a curse from the Fall; it was given before sin entered. The work you do this week is part of God's image-bearing commission. Do it well. Third, the relationships God has given you, spouse, family, friends, church, are reflections of the original "it is not good for man to be alone." You were not made for isolation. Show up. Be present. Let the people God has put in your life see your face without shame, as far as it is possible.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for making you a creature with a body, a place, and relationships, and tell him if any of that is hard to receive as a gift.

Ask him to show you what he has placed in your care.

Speak to him about any place where you are tempted to doubt his good word.

GENESIS 1:1

DAY 4 · WEEK 1

Genesis 1:26-28; Genesis 9:6; James 3:9

The Image of God

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 1:26-28, Genesis 9:6, and James 3:9 prayerfully. These three passages are short, but they are the foundation of everything the Bible says about being human. Read them aloud if you can. Notice how each one applies the doctrine of the image of God to a different situation.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Two days ago you read Genesis 1, where God made humanity in his image. Yesterday's doctrinal day set the foundation of Scripture itself. Today we take the central claim of Genesis 1, that humanity is the image of God, and explore what it actually means. This is the most important question any human being can ask: what am I, and why does my existence matter? The Christian answer is not that humans are slightly evolved animals, or accidentally meaningful collections of atoms, or self-defining beings free to invent their own purpose. The Christian answer is that every human being bears the image of God, and that this image carries with it dignity, vocation, and destiny.

The three short passages you read today show this doctrine applied in three different ways: as the source of human dignity at creation, as the basis for the sanctity of life after the flood, and as the reason ordinary speech matters in everyday Christian behavior. The doctrine is not abstract; it presses on every part of human existence.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Genesis 1:26 uses a plural, "Let us make man in our image", which Christians have long seen as a hint of the triune nature of God.

2. The image of God is given to humanity as male and female together, not to one sex alone. Both fully bear the image.
3. The image is connected immediately to a commission: "be fruitful and multiply… have dominion." Image-bearing is not just a status; it is a vocation.
4. Genesis 9:6 grounds the prohibition against murder in the image of God. To take a human life is to assault the One whose image that life bears.
5. James 3:9 applies the image of God to speech, cursing other people is incompatible with worshiping God, because those people bear God's image.
6. Across all three passages, the image of God is never said to be partial or lost. Even fallen humans, even violent humans, even people we are tempted to curse, still bear it.

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

The doctrine of the image of God, what theologians call the imago Dei, is one of Christianity's most distinctive contributions to human thought. Every Christian doctrine about humanity begins here. To answer the question "what is a human being?" Christians answer: a creature made in the image of God.

But what does that mean? Theologians have offered three main approaches that emphasize different aspects of the biblical witness.

The first is the substantive view, which says the image consists in some quality humans share with God, rationality, moral capacity, self-awareness, a soul, the ability to know God. There is something to this. Humans are unlike other creatures in their capacity for abstract thought, moral reflection, language, and worship.

The second is the relational view, which emphasizes that humans were made for relationship, with God, with one another, with creation itself. We image God not just in what we are, but in how we relate. The fact that Genesis 1 says we were made "male and female" right alongside the image language supports this. The Trinity itself is eternal relationship, and image-bearers are made for relationship too.

The third is the functional view, which highlights the immediate commission given in Genesis 1: dominion over creation. In the ancient Near East, kings were sometimes called the "image" of their gods, meaning the king represented the god's rule on earth. Humanity, plural and equal, is given that role. We are not gods, but we are God's image-bearers, his representatives in the world he made.

The fullest understanding includes all three. We image God in our being (rationality, morality, capacity for worship), in our relating (to God, to one another), and in our doing (representing his rule in creation). The image is not one thing; it is the whole shape of what it means to be human.

A critical implication: the image of God was damaged but not destroyed by the Fall. Genesis 9, written after the Fall, still grounds the value of human life in the image of God. James, written to Christians, still calls fellow humans image-bearers. Sin distorts the image; it does not erase it. Every human being you will ever meet, your closest friend, your worst enemy, the unborn child, the elderly grandmother with dementia, the criminal, the saint, the stranger you will never know, bears the image of God. This is the ground of universal human dignity.

But there is more. The New Testament reveals that the image of God is most fully expressed not in fallen Adam, but in Christ. Paul calls Jesus "the image of the invisible God" (Colossians 1:15). Christ is what we were meant to be, the true human, the second Adam. And through union with Christ, believers are being "transformed into the same image from one degree of glory to another" (2 Corinthians 3:18). Sanctification is the restoration of the image. Heaven is the image fully restored.

So when you ask "what am I?" the Christian answer comes in three tenses. You were made in God's image. That image was marred in the Fall. And in Christ, that image is being restored, and one day will be perfectly fulfilled in glory.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The three passages you read show the doctrine of the image of God doing actual work in Scripture. None of them stops at "humans are special." Each one draws an ethical conclusion from the doctrine.

Genesis 1:26-28 sets the foundation. Notice the structure: God deliberates ("Let us make"), God acts ("So God created"), and God commissions ("Be fruitful… have dominion"). Image-bearing is not a passive identity; it is a calling. To be made in God's image is to be tasked with reflecting God's rule in the world. Marriage, family, work, creativity, stewardship of the earth, all of these flow from this opening commission. When you raise children, build something, grow a garden, organize a project, or care for a place, you are doing image-bearing work.

Genesis 9:6 takes the doctrine into the most extreme ethical territory: the taking of human life. Right after the flood, as humanity begins again, God establishes the boundary that protects human life: "Whoever sheds the blood of man, by man shall his blood be shed, for God made man in his own image." The reason given is theological, not pragmatic. Murder is not just a social problem or a personal tragedy. It is an attack on the image of God himself. This is why every human life, regardless of usefulness, age, ability, or status, carries an irreducible weight. To diminish a human being is to insult the One whose image that human bears.

James 3:9 brings the doctrine right into ordinary life: how you talk. "With it we bless our Lord and Father, and with it we curse people who are made in the likeness of God." James sees a contradiction, and notice what he calls the contradiction. Not that we are inconsistent in our speech, or hypocritical, though those things are true. The contradiction is that the same God we praise has made the people we curse in his own likeness. You cannot worship God on Sunday and despise your spouse, coworker, neighbor, or political opponent on Monday. They bear the image of the One you claim to worship. Image-bearing makes every encounter with a human being an encounter with the dignity of God himself.

This is why Christianity has, throughout history, been the source of the strongest claims about universal human dignity. Not because Christians have always lived consistently, they haven't, but because the doctrine forces the issue. If every human bears the image of God, then slavery is wrong, infanticide is wrong, racism is wrong, abuse is wrong, neglect of the poor is wrong. Not wrong because we feel they are, but wrong because God has put his image in every person, and you cannot trample on that image without trampling on God himself.

The doctrine also means something about you. You are not nothing. You are not a mistake. You are not less than anyone. The God who made the stars made you in his image, called you good, and gave you a calling to image him in the world. Whatever lies you have believed about your worth, whether from yourself or from others, Genesis 1 outranks all of them.

Connection

In Genesis 1 the image of God was given. In Genesis 3 (which you read yesterday) that image was marred, humans began to image themselves as gods rather than to image the true God. But the image was not lost. Every page that follows in the Bible assumes humans still bear it: that is why Cain's murder of Abel matters in Genesis 4, why the law protects the dignity of every Israelite, why the prophets thunder against the abuse of the poor. And the whole story climaxes in Christ, the perfect image of God in human form. Through union with him, the image in us is being restored. The doctrine of the image of God runs from Genesis 1 to the new creation, where image-bearers will reign with Christ over the renewed earth, finally being what we were always meant to be.

STEP 6

Application

Treat people as image-bearers. That is the daily, practical heart of this doctrine. The cashier at the store, the driver who cut you off, your spouse on a hard day, the colleague you disagree with, the family member who has hurt you, the stranger on the corner asking for change, each of them bears the image of the same God you worship. You cannot honor God while dishonoring his image.

This works two directions. It calls you to higher respect for others than the world's standards of usefulness or attractiveness or moral worth would suggest. And it calls you to higher respect for yourself than your own self-loathing might allow. You are an image-bearer. So are they. The doctrine permits neither contempt of others nor self-contempt.

Today, identify one person in your life who is hard for you to honor. It might be someone who has wronged you, someone you find irritating, someone you have written off, or someone you simply do not notice. Think of that person as one who bears the image of God. Pray for them. Speak kindly of them, or at least refuse to speak cruelly. And ask the Spirit to keep forming Christ, the true image of God, in you, so that one day your imaging of God will be as true and as full as his.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that you were made in his image, and tell him where you struggle to believe it about yourself.

Ask him to show you someone you have treated as less than an image bearer, and to change how you see them.

Praise Jesus as the perfect image of the Father.

"In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth."

GENESIS 1:1

DAY 5 · WEEK 1

Genesis 3:1-24

Temptation, the Fall, the curse, and the first gospel promise

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Reading · 24 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 3:1-24 slowly, and aloud if you can. This is the saddest chapter in the Bible and the most important for understanding everything that follows. Notice what the serpent asks, how Adam and Eve respond, and how God appears in the story, both in judgment and in promise (look closely at verse 15).

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday we saw the world as it was meant to be: a garden, a man, a woman, work and rest, presence and partnership, no shame. Today everything changes. Genesis 3 is the story of how the very good creation of chapters 1 and 2 was broken. But more than that, it is the chapter that explains every news headline, every funeral, every estrangement, every disease, every disordered desire you have ever experienced. The whole biblical story of redemption assumes Genesis 3. Without this chapter, the gospel makes no sense, because without this chapter, there is nothing for the gospel to fix.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The serpent does not begin with a direct contradiction. He begins with a question: “Did God actually say…?” Doubt is planted before disobedience.
2. Eve’s response slightly distorts God’s command, she adds “neither shall you touch it.” The slightest drift from God’s actual word makes further drift easier.
3. The serpent finally contradicts God directly: “You will not surely die.” He then accuses God of withholding something good, “you will be like God.”
4. The order of the temptation is striking: the woman saw that the tree was good for food (the appetite), a delight to the eyes (the senses), and to be desired to make one wise (the mind). 1 John 2:16 echoes this triad.

5. Adam was "with her." He was not deceived in the same way; he failed in passive silence.
6. Their first response to sin is shame, they suddenly know they are naked and try to cover themselves. Their second is hiding from God. Their third is blame, Adam blames the woman (and implicitly God for giving her), the woman blames the serpent.
7. Verse 15 is the first gospel promise: the offspring of the woman will crush the serpent's head. Before any curse is even spoken to humanity, a promise of victory is given.
8. God himself clothes them with garments of skin, the first death in Scripture is an animal slain to cover human shame.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 3 is the most consequential chapter in the entire Old Testament. Everything in human experience that you grieve, every relational wound, every body that breaks down, every system that goes wrong, finds its origin here. And yet, before the chapter ends, the gospel has already been promised. This is both the worst news in Scripture and the moment when the best news begins.

The temptation is subtle. The serpent does not roar in declaring God a liar; he whispers a question. "Did God actually say...?" Doubt always precedes rebellion. Notice what is being attacked: not God's existence, not even God's power, but God's word. If God's word cannot be trusted, if it is unclear, or stingy, or designed to keep us from something better, then disobedience starts to feel reasonable. The serpent's whole strategy is to make God seem less generous than he is. He frames God's one prohibition as if it were God's whole posture: "Did God actually say you shall not eat of any tree?" But God had said the opposite, eat of every tree, except this one. Generosity comes first, prohibition is the exception. The serpent inverts it.

Eve's response begins well but slips. She defends God's generosity, but then she adds something God never said: "neither shall you touch it." It is a small drift, but every great failure begins with a small drift from God's actual word. The serpent then makes his move. He flatly contradicts God ("you will not surely die") and slanders God's motives ("God knows that when you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God, knowing good and evil"). The accusation is that God is holding out on them, that obedience keeps them from their true potential.

And here is the heart of all sin: the desire to define good and evil for ourselves, to be like God on our own terms. Eve's eyes go to the fruit. It is good for food, pleasing to look at, and seems to offer wisdom. Three categories of desire are activated, appetite, beauty, ambition, and she takes. The Hebrew word translated “took” is the same word later used for taking another man’s wife or seizing what is not yours. It is the language of theft. And Adam, who has been “with her” through the whole exchange, takes too, in silence.

What happens next is the world we now live in. Their eyes are opened, but not to be like God. They are opened to shame. They cover themselves with leaves. They hide from God when he comes walking in the garden. When God confronts them, they blame, Adam blames Eve, and implicitly God himself (“the woman whom you gave to be with me”); Eve blames the serpent. Sin always fractures relationships. With God, with each other, with creation itself.

Then come the curses. The serpent is cursed first. The woman’s pain in childbearing and her relationship with her husband are disordered. The man’s work, once a joy, will now be filled with thorns and sweat. And finally death, “to dust you shall return.” The full weight of God’s earlier warning falls. But there, in the middle of the cursing of the serpent, comes verse 15: “I will put enmity between you and the woman, and between your offspring and her offspring; he shall bruise your head, and you shall bruise his heel.” This is the protoevangelium, the first gospel. Before any judgment is pronounced on humans, before any human is sent out of the garden, a promise has already been made: a son of the woman will one day come and crush the serpent’s head. The cost will be real, the serpent will bruise his heel. But the victory belongs to the woman’s offspring.

And then, in a quiet act of mercy, God makes garments of skin and clothes Adam and Eve. Animals die to cover human shame, the first hint of a sacrificial principle that will run through the entire Bible, all the way to a cross where the Lamb of God will bear the sin of the world.

STEP 5

Connection

Yesterday’s covenant of works has been broken. The man and woman who were placed in the garden as priest-king and partner have failed the test, and the consequences fall on themselves, their children, and the creation entrusted to them. But the story does not end with the curse. Genesis 3:15 is the seed from which every later promise grows, the promised offspring of Abraham, the suffering servant of Isaiah, the son of David, the Word made flesh. When Romans 16:20 says God will “soon crush Satan under your feet,” it is echoing Genesis 3:15. When Christ on the cross declares “It is finished,” he is fulfilling Genesis 3:15. The whole Bible is the unfolding of the promise made in this chapter, that the seed of the woman would do what Adam failed to do, and would crush the head of the one who deceived humanity.

STEP 6

Application

Look at the serpent's strategy and recognize it, because it is still in use today. "Did God actually say…?" The accusation that God is withholding something good. The framing of obedience as oppression and disobedience as liberation. These are the same temptations you will face this week, this year, your whole life. The defense is not stronger willpower. The defense is a settled trust in God's word and God's character. The serpent could not have succeeded if Eve had said: "Whatever God said, he said because he is good. I do not need to be like God; I am made by God, and that is enough."

Today, consider one place in your life where you are tempted to think God is holding out on you. Maybe it is a desire you are being asked to wait on or set aside. Maybe it is a command that feels restrictive. Bring it before God honestly. And then remember that the very God who gave that command is the God who, in this same chapter, made the first promise of a Savior, and who, in the fullness of time, sent his only Son to crush the serpent and clothe sinners not in leaves but in his own righteousness. Your trust in God's word and your trust in God's love are not separable. Trust both today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess in your own words where you have listened to the serpent's doubt about God's word or goodness.

Thank God for the promise of the one who would crush the serpent, and tell him what that means to you.

Ask him to clothe you in Christ rather than in your own coverings.

GENESIS 1:1

DAY 6 · WEEK 1

Genesis 3:1-24; Romans 5:12-21

The Doctrine of Sin (Hamartiology)

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Re-read Genesis 3:1-24, yesterday's passage, and then read Romans 5:12-21. These two passages together form the backbone of the Christian doctrine of sin. Genesis tells the story; Romans tells you what the story means. Read slowly, especially the Romans passage, which is one of the densest in the New Testament.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday you read the Fall in Genesis 3, the narrative of how sin entered the world. Today we step back to ask the larger question: what exactly happened, and what does it mean for every human being who has ever lived? This is the doctrine of sin, sometimes called hamartiology.

The doctrine of sin is the most empirically verifiable doctrine in all of Christianity. You see its effects every day, in yourself and in everyone you know. The problem is not knowing whether something is wrong with humanity. The problem is understanding what is wrong, how deep it goes, and what can be done about it. Genesis 3 and Romans 5 give us the answer. Today we explore what they teach.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Romans 5:12 traces sin and death back to one man: "sin came into the world through one man, and death through sin." The doctrine of original sin is not invented; it is taught.
2. Notice the parallel Paul builds: "as by the one man's disobedience the many were made sinners, so by the one man's obedience the many will be made righteous" (5:19). Adam and Christ stand opposite each other.

3. Death is described as reigning "from Adam to Moses, even over those whose sinning was not like the transgression of Adam." Death affects even those who did not personally break a specific command.

4. The Greek word for "sin" (hamartia) means "missing the mark", failing to be or do what God made us to be and do.

5. Genesis 3 shows sin entering through doubt of God's word, distrust of God's character, and the desire to define good and evil for oneself.

6. The first effect of sin is shame and hiding. The image-bearers who walked with God now flee from him.

7. Sin's consequences ripple outward: from the relationship with God (alienation), to the marriage relationship (blame), to the body (death), to the ground itself (cursed).

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

The Christian doctrine of sin makes four claims that distinguish it from every other diagnosis of the human condition.

First, sin is universal. Every human being, without exception (Christ alone excepted), is a sinner. This is not a claim about culture or upbringing or environment. It is a claim about human nature itself, since the Fall. "All have sinned and fall short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:23). You did not choose to become a sinner; you were born one. Even before you committed your first conscious act of disobedience, you were already inheriting the corrupted nature passed down from Adam.

Second, sin is deep. The traditional name for this is "total depravity," and the term is often misunderstood. It does not mean every human is as evil as they could possibly be, clearly people are capable of impressive virtues, kindnesses, and acts of love. What it means is that sin has touched every part of human existence, the mind, the will, the affections, the body, the conscience. There is no part of you that is untainted, no morally neutral zone that sin has not penetrated. This is why Paul says even our good works, apart from Christ, are insufficient. Sin runs all the way down.

Third, sin is inherited. This is the doctrine of original sin. When Adam fell, he did not fall as a private individual but as the federal head of humanity, the representative in whom all his descendants are reckoned. Paul makes this explicit in Romans 5: through Adam, sin and death spread to all. This is why babies die, why every culture in every era produces both wonders and atrocities, why your own heart deceives even you. The corruption did not start with you; it was waiting for you the moment you were conceived.

Fourth, sin is offensive to God. This is what makes sin sin and not merely failure or error. Sin is a moral assault on the holiness of God. It is treason against the rightful Lord of creation. It deserves judgment, not just because God is angry, but because God is just. A holy God cannot be indifferent to sin without ceasing to be holy.

These four claims paint a picture darker than most modern people are comfortable with. But notice what they make possible. If sin is universal, no one can save themselves by being a better person, and so no one is left behind, every human equally needs grace. If sin is deep, surface-level moralism cannot fix us, and so the gospel offers a new heart, not a self-improvement program. If sin is inherited, salvation must also be inherited from a new representative, and that representative is Christ, the second Adam. If sin is offensive to God, it must be punished, and Christ has taken that punishment on himself.

The doctrine of sin is bad news. But every Christian doctrine of grace is only good news because of how bad the news of sin is. The depth of the disease tells you the depth of the cure. If sin were only a failure of effort, Christ's death on the cross would be absurd overkill. But if sin is what Scripture says it is, then Christ's death is precisely what we need.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 3 and Romans 5 together tell us not just what sin is, but how it works.

In Genesis 3, sin begins with doubting God's word. The serpent's first question is "Did God actually say?" Before Eve had eaten anything, the soil of her heart was being prepared for rebellion by being asked to question what God had spoken. This is still how sin operates today. Long before a Christian falls into open disobedience, the foundation has usually been laid by questioning whether God really said what he said, really means what he means, really cares what he cares about. Watch the pattern. Sin always starts with the word.

Then sin moves to distrust of God's character. The serpent does not just question the content of God's word; he attacks God's motives. "God knows that when you eat of it your eyes will be opened, and you will be like God." Translated: God is holding out on you. He is not generous; he is stingy. He is not a good Father; he is a withholding tyrant. This lie is in every temptation you face. If you could see that God is good and that his command is for your flourishing, sin would lose almost all of its power. But the serpent works to make God look smaller, meaner, and less trustworthy than he is.

Finally, sin culminates in self-deification, the desire to be the one who decides what is good and what is evil. This is the heart of sin. Not just disobedience to a command, but the assertion of moral autonomy: I will define right and wrong for myself. Every sin is, in some sense, a small repetition of this. Whenever you choose to override what God has said because you have decided your way is wiser, kinder, more loving, or more reasonable, you are echoing Eden.

Romans 5 then takes this story and tells you why it matters for you. Paul's argument is breathtaking in its scope. The world we live in, full of death, decay, injustice, futility, is the world that Adam's sin has brought about. Not because each of us has personally sinned the way Adam did (though we have), but because we are all in Adam. The technical term is "federal headship." Adam represented humanity. His fall was our fall. His exile was our exile. His death is our death.

But that is not the end of Paul's argument. He sets up the contrast precisely so he can flip it. If one man's disobedience could plunge all of humanity into sin and death, then one man's obedience can lift all who are in him out of sin and death. That second man is Christ. Just as we were in Adam by birth, we are in Christ by faith. Just as Adam's failure was counted as ours, Christ's success is counted as ours. Just as we inherited death from Adam, we inherit life from Christ. The whole gospel hinges on this parallel.

So the doctrine of sin is not Christianity's primary message. It is the dark background against which the bright news of Christ stands out. You cannot understand the gospel without it. You cannot rejoice in the cross until you have grieved over Eden. But once you have done both, you will see the wonder of what Christ has done with a clarity that no shallower doctrine could ever produce.

STEP 5

Connection

Genesis 1 and 2 showed us what we were meant to be, image-bearers in covenant with God, called to rule the world he made. Genesis 3 showed us what we became, exiles, hiding, ashamed, dying. The doctrine of sin is the bridge that explains every other tension in Scripture. It is why the law has to be given. It is why blood has to be shed. It is why prophets weep and kings fail. It is why God's people need a Savior, not just a teacher or a king. And it is why, when Christ enters the world in the New Testament, he comes not as a moral example to imitate but as a substitute to die. As you continue reading, you will see this doctrine confirmed at every turn, and you will see, with growing clarity, why the gospel of Christ is the only answer to the catastrophe of Genesis 3.

STEP 6

Application

Take sin seriously. This is hard in a culture that wants to soften every category and rename every failure. But you will not grow as a Christian if you minimize what is actually wrong with you. The depth of grace can only be felt by those who have honestly faced the depth of sin.

Practically, three habits help. First, regular self-examination, not in a morbid way, but honestly asking God to show you where you have sinned in the past day, week, month. The psalmist's prayer is a good one: "Search me, O God, and know my heart" (Psalm 139:23). Second, confession, both in personal prayer and, when appropriate, with trusted believers. Sin loses much of its power when it is brought into the light. Third, repentance, not just feeling bad about sin, but turning from it toward Christ, again and again.

But also, take grace seriously. The doctrine of sin is not meant to keep you in despair. It is meant to drive you to Christ. If you are in him, the verdict over you is no longer "in Adam, condemned" but "in Christ, justified." The sin still in you does not define you; Christ does. The doctrine of sin should produce humility, not self-loathing. It should produce vigilance, not paranoia. It should produce gratitude, because you know what you have been rescued from.

If you have never trusted in Christ as the Savior who bore your sin and gave you his righteousness, today is a good day to do so. The serpent's lie was that God is not good. Christ's death is the answer: God is so good that he sent his own Son to bear what we deserved.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God honestly what you see when you look at your own heart, and ask for his mercy.
- Thank Jesus for doing what Adam failed to do.
- Ask him to keep you close to the cross, taking sin seriously and grace more seriously still.

Sabbath Rest

No new reading today. Rest, remember, and look back over the week.

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Sabbath

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. This is your weekly Sabbath, a day to rest from the work of new content and to let what you have read this week settle into your heart. If you can, set aside your normal time for this rest day just as you would for any reading day. The discipline of stopping is its own form of worship.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth."

GENESIS 1:1

REST

Meditation

Spend a few minutes saying this verse aloud. Say it slowly. Say it again. The goal of weekly memory work is not perfection but possession, by the end of this week, you should be able to recall this verse from memory without effort.

Sit with the verse phrase by phrase. "In the beginning", there was a beginning, and God was already there. "God created", not chaos, not gods, not accidents. "The heavens and the earth", everything that is, in every realm. Seven English words that refute atheism, polytheism, pantheism, dualism, and naturalism all at once.

Carry this verse with you through the day. When you see something beautiful in creation, say it. When something feels chaotic in your life, say it. When you wake tomorrow, say it again. By next week, it will be yours.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This was the first week of the plan. You began with creation itself, Genesis 1, the ordered making of all things by the speech of God. You paused on the doctrine of Scripture and learned why this book carries the very breath of God. You read Genesis 2 and saw humanity as image-bearers in covenant with their Maker. You paused again on the image of God, what it means to be human, and why every person you meet bears irreducible dignity. You read Genesis 3 and watched the fall, the first sin, the first promise of a Redeemer. And you paused a third time on the doctrine of sin, universal, deep, inherited, offensive to God, and the very thing Christ came to bear.

Six days. Three readings. Three doctrinal anchors. This is the foundation under everything else you will read in the next two years. The God who created. The image he made. The Scripture he gave. The sin we committed. The Redeemer he promised. Every page that follows builds on what you read this week.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

What is one thing about God's character this week that struck you in a new way? The first chapters of Genesis introduce God as Creator, as the one who speaks, as the one who walks with his people, as the one who calls humans into covenant, as the one who pursues them even after they have fallen. Where did your sense of who God is deepen this week?

How does this week's reading point you to Christ? The doctrine of Scripture you read on Day 2 reaches its climax in the Word made flesh. The image of God you read about on Day 4 is fully and perfectly seen in Jesus, the true image of the invisible God. The doctrine of sin you read on Day 6 is the very catastrophe Christ came to undo. Where have you seen Christ in the foundations this week, and where do you most need to bring your sin and rest in his finished work?

What does it mean for you, today, that every person you encounter bears the image of God? Whose face will you see this week that you have not been treating as an image-bearer?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the week behind you, and for one thing he has shown you about himself.

Rest in what he has done instead of what you must still understand, and say so to him.

Ask him to settle the memory verse in your heart.

DAY 8 · WEEK 2

Psalm 8

The glory of God in creation and the dignity of man

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 9 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 8 slowly, twice, and aloud if you can. It is short, only nine verses. Notice that it begins and ends with the same line, and notice the question in the middle: “What is man that you are mindful of him?” Let the psalm lead you to look at the night sky as the psalmist did.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Psalms are the prayer book of the Bible, the songs, laments, and praises that the people of God have prayed for three thousand years. They were sung in the Temple, prayed by Jesus on the cross, and read in the church from the beginning. This plan weaves them in alongside the historical books because the Psalms teach us not just what God has done, but how to respond to him. Psalm 8 is the first Psalm we will read together, and it is fitting: it picks up exactly where the last three days have left us, meditating on the same creation and the same dignity of humanity that Genesis 1-2 described.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens and closes with the same line: “O LORD, our Lord, how majestic is your name in all the earth.” This is called an inclusio, it frames the whole psalm in worship.
2. Babies and infants are mentioned in verse 2 as the means by which God establishes strength against his enemies. Strength comes from unexpected places in God’s economy.
3. The psalm moves from the cosmic (the heavens, the moon, the stars) to the personal (what is man that you are mindful of him?) and back to the cosmic.

4. The question “what is man?” is asked in the middle of looking at the night sky. Smallness is felt; the answer comes anyway: humanity has been crowned with glory and honor.

5. Verses 6-8 echo Genesis 1:26-28, dominion over the works of God’s hands, all things under his feet.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 8 is David’s response to the same wonder that Genesis 1 and 2 set up. Looking at the night sky, David asks the question every honest person eventually asks: in this enormous universe, why does humanity matter? The stars are vast. The moon hangs distant and unchanging. Compared to the cosmos, a human being is small, fragile, and temporary. So why does God care?

David’s answer is not that humanity is, in fact, more impressive than it seems. It is that God has chosen to crown humanity with glory and honor. The dignity of humans is not earned, it is given. We have value because God has assigned us value, made us in his image, and given us responsibility over what he has made. Verse 6 directly echoes Genesis 1:28: “You have given him dominion over the works of your hands; you have put all things under his feet.”

But the psalm has a depth that the New Testament will later uncover. When the writer of Hebrews quotes Psalm 8 in Hebrews 2, he applies it to Jesus. “You have crowned him with glory and honor”, yes, that is true of humanity in general, but it is most truly fulfilled in the one true human, the second Adam, who succeeded where the first Adam failed. Jesus is the man who actually fulfills the role Psalm 8 describes, the human under whose feet all things will finally be subjected. Already, Hebrews says, we see him “crowned with glory and honor because of the suffering of death.” The dignity of humanity, lost in Genesis 3, is recovered in Christ.

So Psalm 8 is both a celebration of the dignity God has given us and a confession of the wonder that God should bother with us at all. It is honest about smallness. The night sky humbles. But the smallness only makes the love of God more astonishing. He sees you. He knows your name. He has crowned you with glory and honor. This is the truth that Christianity proclaims against every philosophy that says humans are accidents and against every culture that reduces humans to their usefulness.

STEP 5

Connection

For three days we have been reading Genesis, the creation, the garden, the fall. Psalm 8 is the appropriate response. It looks at what God has made and worships. It looks at what God has done for humanity and marvels. And it does so without yet knowing what we know, that the one truly crowned with glory and honor will be Jesus, the Son of David, in whom the dignity of humanity is finally restored. Pray this Psalm today as someone who knows the rest of the story.

STEP 6

Application

Read this Psalm again, slowly, as a prayer. When you reach the question "what is man that you are mindful of him?", let yourself sit with both the smallness and the dignity. You are smaller than you think and more loved than you can imagine.

This week, look at the sky at night, if you can. Let it remind you of how vast God's creation is, and let that vastness lead you to worship rather than despair. Then look at the people around you, your spouse, your children, the cashier at the store, the stranger in traffic, and remember that each of them has been crowned with glory and honor by God. The doctrine of human dignity is not a slogan; it is a practice. It changes how you treat the people God has made.

And finally, look at yourself. If you have ever wondered whether you matter, Psalm 8 answers you. The God who counts and names every star is mindful of you. The maker of galaxies cares about your life. You are not an accident, and you are not insignificant. You are an image-bearer crowned with glory by the Creator of all things, and in Christ that glory is being restored.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Stand in wonder before God's majesty, and tell him what stirs in you when you think of how small you are and how much he has given you.

Thank him that Christ restores the dignity Adam lost.

Ask him to help you see each person you meet today as crowned with honor.

PSALM 19:1

DAY 9 · WEEK 2

Psalm 104:1-23

God as creator, O LORD, how manifold are your works

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 104:1-23 slowly, twice. This psalm retells the creation story as praise. As you read, see if you can match its verses to the days of Genesis 1, and notice how God is pictured as providing for every creature, from the wild goats to the lions to the people who work the land.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 104 is one of the longest creation poems in the Bible, and it follows the same order as Genesis 1: light, heavens, waters, earth, vegetation, sun and moon, creatures, humanity. The psalmist appears to be deliberately taking us back through Genesis 1, but as praise rather than narrative. If Genesis 1 is the architect's blueprint, Psalm 104 is the hymn sung when you walk through the finished house and marvel at the craftsman. Today's reading covers the first two-thirds, through the work of the day. We will save verses 24-35 for another day in the plan.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with the same call as Psalm 103: "Bless the LORD, O my soul." This is self-talk, the psalmist commanding his own heart to worship.
2. God is described as clothed in splendor and majesty, wrapped in light, riding on the clouds. The imagery is regal and cosmic.
3. The order of creation in this psalm mirrors Genesis 1: light, the firmament, the waters, dry land, vegetation, the heavenly bodies, the creatures.
4. Notice how much attention is given to water, springs gushing, rivers running, animals drinking. Water is life in the ancient Near East, and the psalmist sees it everywhere as evidence of God's provision.

5. Verses 19-23 take the same heavenly bodies that Genesis 1 calls "lights" and shows them at work: the moon marks seasons, the sun governs the rhythm of work and rest for both humans and animals.

6. Even the lions are seen as "seeking their food from God", predators included in the picture of God's provision.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 104 is what creation theology looks like when it is set on fire. The same God who, in Genesis 1, simply spoke and reality obeyed, is here described in vivid, sensory language. He wraps himself in light as a garment. He stretches out the heavens like a tent. He makes the clouds his chariot and walks on the wings of the wind. The psalm is not just telling us that God made creation; it is showing us that God is intimately involved with every part of it.

This is a crucial corrective to a common misunderstanding. Many people, even Christians, drift toward a kind of deism, the idea that God created the world like a watchmaker, wound it up, and now stands back to watch it run. Psalm 104 refuses that picture. God is not absent from his creation. He is sustaining it moment by moment. The springs in the valleys are flowing right now because God makes them flow. The grass grows for the cattle because God makes it grow. The young lions roar because God provides their food. Every animal you have ever seen drink from a stream is participating in the providence of God.

The structure of the psalm mirrors Genesis 1 deliberately. The same order, light first, then heavens, then waters, then dry land, then vegetation, then heavenly bodies, then animal life, but where Genesis tells you what God did, Psalm 104 tells you that God is still doing it. The verbs are present tense. He is making the wind his messenger right now. He is covering the earth with the deep right now. He is making springs to gush forth right now. This is the doctrine of providence, that God's care of his creation did not stop at the end of the sixth day. It continues, every second, in every corner of what he has made.

Verse 23 is especially worth lingering on. After describing the night when the lions hunt, the psalm says: "Man goes out to his work and to his labor until the evening." Human work is part of the rhythm of creation. The sun rises, animals retreat, humans go out to labor, all of it under God's ordering. The work you will do today, however mundane, however tiring, is part of the symphony of creation that Psalm 104 is celebrating. You are not interrupting God's work by going to your job. You are participating in it.

This is the kind of meditation Psalm 104 teaches us. To see creation rightly is to see the Creator behind every part of it. To look at a tree is to see God's craftsmanship. To feel rain on your face is to feel God's provision. To hear birds in the morning is to hear what God is feeding right now. The whole world becomes a sanctuary when you read it through this psalm.

STEP 5

Connection

The first three days of this plan walked through Genesis 1 to 3. Yesterday we let David teach us how to respond to the creation account with Psalm 8, the dignity of humanity. Today the psalmist takes us deeper into the wonder of creation itself. Tomorrow we will return to narrative as Genesis continues. The Psalms are not interruptions to the story; they are the heart's response to the story. As the plan unfolds, watch how the Psalms keep reframing what we have just read in the language of prayer, lament, and praise. The Bible is not just telling you about God; it is teaching you how to talk back to him.

STEP 6

Application

Today, take Psalm 104 with you. As you go through your day, practice what the psalmist practices: noticing God's hand in what would normally be background. The water from your tap. The food on your plate. The light in the sky. The wind in the trees. The birds you hear. None of these are accidents. All of them are God's ongoing creative care, sustained moment by moment by his word.

If you have time, take a short walk outside today and let Psalm 104 shape your eyes. Notice five things you might normally walk past, and silently thank God for each. The point is not to feel mystical, the point is to recover sight. We live in a world that has trained us to see creation as raw material, as background, as something we use. Psalm 104 trains us to see it as a hymn we are walking through. Recovering this vision changes how you treat your food, your body, your environment, and your neighbor. Worship begins with seeing.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bless the LORD for something you can see or touch right now that he is sustaining.

Ask him to help you receive today's work and meals as gifts and not as entitlements.

Tell him what it would mean to walk through this day as through a temple.

PSALM 19:1

DAY 10 · WEEK 2

Psalm 104:24-35

Creation praises its maker; the Spirit renews the face of the ground

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 104:24-35 slowly, twice. Yesterday you read the first half of this psalm. Today you read the conclusion. As you read, notice how the psalm shifts from describing creation to praising the Creator, and how it ends with a startling line about the wicked, before closing in worship.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the second half of Psalm 104, the great creation hymn we began yesterday. The first half walked us through the order of creation in the same sequence as Genesis 1. Now the psalmist steps back to take in the whole picture, the manifold works of God, the dependence of every creature on his hand, the sea and its creatures, the cycle of breath and death, and finally the worship that all this should produce. The psalm ends as it began: "Bless the LORD, O my soul."

For new believers, this Psalm is a school of seeing. It teaches us to look at creation not as a backdrop or a resource but as a hymn of God's craftsmanship.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 24 is the great summary: "O LORD, how manifold are your works! In wisdom have you made them all." The whole psalm is gathered into one cry of wonder.
2. The sea, often a symbol of chaos in the Bible, is here just another part of God's well-ordered domain. Even Leviathan, the great mythic sea monster, is reduced to a creature who "plays" in the water.
3. Every living thing is described as dependent on God for food, breath, and life itself. When he opens his hand, they are filled; when he hides his face, they are dismayed.

4. Verses 29-30 form a remarkable picture: God "takes away their breath" and they die, then "sends forth your Spirit, they are created", the language of ongoing creation through the Spirit.

5. The psalmist's response is to commit himself to lifelong praise: "I will sing to the LORD as long as I live."

6. Verse 35 is jarring: "Let sinners be consumed from the earth, and let the wicked be no more." Even a creation psalm acknowledges that something is wrong with the world.

7. The psalm closes with "Praise the LORD", the first appearance of the word "Hallelujah" in the Psalter.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The second half of Psalm 104 takes everything described in the first half and gathers it into one great act of worship. Verse 24 is the hinge: "O LORD, how manifold are your works! In wisdom have you made them all; the earth is full of your possessions." Every creature, every detail, every system in the natural world is the work of God's wisdom. The psalmist is not just looking at the world; he is reading it as a manuscript of divine craftsmanship.

The sea passage is especially worth pausing over. In the ancient Near East, the sea symbolized chaos, danger, and the realm where gods battled monsters. But Psalm 104 reframes it completely. The sea is just another part of God's good order. Ships pass through it. Creatures live in it. And Leviathan, the dreaded sea-monster of pagan mythology, is reduced to a creature that "plays" in God's waters like a dolphin in a tide pool. The God of Psalm 104 has no rivals. What other religions feared, he created and tamed.

Then comes the most theologically rich section: verses 27-30. Every creature looks to God for food. When he gives, they are filled. When he hides his face, they are dismayed. When he takes away their breath, they die. When he sends his Spirit, they are created and the face of the ground is renewed. Christian readers have always noticed the trinitarian echoes here, Father, Spirit, and the implicit Word, at work in ongoing creation. The Spirit who hovered over the waters in Genesis 1:2 is still active in sustaining and renewing what God has made. Creation is not a one-time event in the distant past. It is a present, continuous act of God.

The psalm reaches its climactic resolve in verses 33-34: "I will sing to the LORD as long as I live; I will sing praise to my God while I have being. May my meditation be pleasing to him, for I rejoice in the LORD." The right response to creation is not awe alone, or even gratitude alone, but worship, the deliberate, sustained, lifelong singing of praise to the Creator. This is what creation is for. It is not just a stage on which human dramas unfold. It is a sanctuary in which the Creator is to be worshiped.

And then, just when you expect a peaceful close, comes verse 35. “Let sinners be consumed from the earth, and let the wicked be no more.” It is a jarring line in such a serene psalm. Why is it here? Because the psalmist cannot praise creation without acknowledging that something is wrong with creation. The world that God called “very good” is now full of sinners and wickedness. Genesis 3 has happened. The psalm refuses to be naive about this. Praise of the Creator and longing for the renewal of creation are not in tension, they belong together. The same God who made all things will one day cleanse all things. And until then, the believer praises him both for what he has made and for what he will yet do.

The psalm closes with “Bless the LORD, O my soul. Praise the LORD.” The first “Hallelujah” in the Psalter. Worship is the final note.

STEP 5

Connection

For two days you have been meditating on Psalm 104, God’s creation as ongoing wonder. But notice how the psalm refuses to stop at creation. It ends with a longing for the wicked to be no more, and with an unrestrained burst of praise. This is the same arc you will see throughout this plan: the Bible never stays at creation alone, because creation is broken. The story moves through Fall, redemption, and toward new creation. Psalm 104 already feels the tension and looks forward to the resolution. When you reach Revelation at the end of this plan, the new creation will be the answer to Psalm 104:35, wickedness will be no more, and creation will sing the praise of God forever.

STEP 6

Application

Spend some time today simply praising God for creation. Not as a meditation technique or a stress-relief practice, but as the response that creation itself demands. The psalmist resolved: “I will sing to the LORD as long as I live.” Can you say the same? If not yet, can today be a day to begin?

Practically: walk outside if possible, even briefly, and let yourself see. Notice three things, a tree, the wind, a bird, the warmth of the sun, anything. Name them silently as gifts. Then say, in your own words or in the psalmist’s: “How manifold are your works, O LORD! In wisdom you have made them all.” Worship begins with seeing, and seeing must become saying.

But also, do not flinch from verse 35. The world is broken. There is wickedness in it, in others and in your own heart. Praise of creation that ignores this is dishonest. The Christian’s praise of the Creator always includes a longing for the Creator to come and make all things new. Pray today not just “thank you” but also “come, Lord Jesus.” Both prayers belong in the mouth of every believer who reads Psalm 104.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God for the wisdom in what he has made, in your own words.

Thank him for the Spirit who renews, and ask him to renew something in you that feels worn out.

Pray “Come, Lord,” longing for the day when all things are made new.

PSALM 19:1

DAY 11 · WEEK 2

Psalm 19:1-6

The heavens declare the glory of God

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 6 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 19:1-6 slowly, twice. This is the opening section of one of the most famous psalms in Scripture. C.S. Lewis called it "the greatest poem in the Psalter and one of the greatest lyrics in the world." Notice the wordless preaching it describes, and how creation itself becomes a sermon.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 19 is famously structured in three movements: the first six verses praise God for his revelation in creation, the next five praise him for his revelation in the law, and the closing verses turn to personal prayer. Today's reading covers the first movement only, the wordless witness of the heavens. The plan will return to verses 7-14 on another day, when the law has become more central to our reading.

This first section is a meditation on what theologians call general revelation, the knowledge of God that is available to all people, everywhere, through what he has made. Long before any Bible reaches a human soul, the heavens are already preaching.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The first verse is one of the most quoted in Scripture: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky above proclaims his handiwork."
2. The preaching of creation happens "day to day" and "night to night", it never stops.
3. Verse 3 contains a striking paradox: "There is no speech, nor are there words, whose voice is not heard." Creation's witness is wordless but universally audible.
4. The "voice" of creation has gone out "through all the earth", Paul will quote this verse in Romans 10:18 to describe the spread of the gospel.

5 The sun is described in vivid poetic imagery, a bridegroom emerging from his chamber, a strong man running his course with joy.

6 Nothing in creation is hidden from the sun's heat, a poetic image of how thoroughly God's witness penetrates the world.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 19:1-6 makes a quiet but enormous claim: God has not left himself without a witness. Every star, every dawn, every sunset, every breath of wind has been speaking about him since the beginning. The witness is constant ("day to day pours out speech, and night to night reveals knowledge"), universal ("their voice goes out through all the earth"), and silent. This is what is meant by general revelation.

The wordlessness matters. Creation is not preaching with sermons or sentences. It is preaching with its very existence. The fact that there is something rather than nothing, that the something is ordered rather than chaotic, that the something is breathtakingly beautiful rather than merely functional, these things are themselves a testimony. As Paul will say in Romans 1, since the creation of the world, God's "invisible attributes, namely, his eternal power and divine nature, have been clearly perceived, ever since the creation of the world, in the things that have been made. So they are without excuse." Every human being who has ever lived has been preached to by the heavens.

This means something important about evangelism and missions. When the gospel arrives in a new place, it is never the first word about God that has reached that place. The heavens have already been speaking for thousands of years. The gospel is not introducing God to people who have heard nothing. It is naming and identifying the God whom every human has already been hearing about, wordlessly, since the day they were born. This is why Paul could preach in Athens by quoting their own poets, and why missionaries often find their message resonating in cultures that, on the surface, seem to have no connection to Christianity.

But general revelation has limits. The heavens declare that God exists, that he is powerful, that he is good. They do not declare that humanity is fallen, that Christ has come, or how to be saved. For that, you need special revelation, the words of Scripture, the gospel of Christ. General revelation is sufficient to leave humanity without excuse. It is not sufficient to save. That is why the psalm itself does not stop at verse 6. The next section turns to the law, the special revelation of God in his Word. Both are necessary. Both are gifts.

The image of the sun is particularly worth meditating on. The psalmist personifies the sun as a bridegroom emerging from his marriage chamber, full of joy and strength, running his course across the sky, leaving nothing hidden from his heat. This is not the sun-worship of pagans. It is the use of a vivid image to communicate something about God himself. God's revelation, like the sun, reaches everywhere. Nothing is hidden from it. The light of God's glory is the universal background of human existence, even when we close our eyes to it.

The deeper Christian reading of this image is that Jesus Christ is the true Sun of righteousness (Malachi 4:2), the one through whom God's full glory enters the world. The wordless preaching of the heavens has now been joined by the audible preaching of the Word made flesh. The same God who has been signaling himself through every sunrise has now spoken plainly through his Son.

STEP 5

Connection

For ten days now, this plan has been meditating on creation. Genesis 1 and 2 told us how it was made. Genesis 3 told us how it fell. Psalm 8, Psalm 104, and now Psalm 19 teach us how to respond to it. The pattern is becoming clear: creation is meant to lead us to the Creator, and the Creator has chosen to be revealed not only in the wordless preaching of the heavens but also, ultimately, in the spoken word of Scripture and the incarnate Word who is Christ. As you finish this first week of reading, you have begun to inhabit the basic biblical instinct: see the world, see the Maker; see the Maker, fall on your knees and worship.

STEP 6

Application

Today, let creation preach to you. The next time you step outside, the next time you see the sun rise or set, the next time you look up at the night sky, listen. The heavens are still declaring the glory of God. The question is not whether they are speaking; the question is whether you are paying attention.

A practical exercise: take a few minutes today to look at the sky. It does not need to be at a famous landmark or in beautiful weather. The sky above your driveway, your apartment building, your office, will do. Stand there for two or three minutes and let yourself hear what it is saying. Then say aloud (or silently, if that's better): "The heavens declare the glory of God." That is not a feeling; it is a fact. The sky is preaching. Your job is to receive the sermon.

But also: do not be content with general revelation. Psalm 19 itself does not stop at verse 6, and neither should you. The heavens point you to God; the Bible names him as your Father in Christ. Both belong together in the Christian life. The believer who learns to see the wordless witness of creation and the spoken witness of Scripture is the believer whose worship is full.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that creation keeps speaking of him, and ask him to give you ears to hear it.
- Confess any days you have walked under his sky without noticing him.
- Thank him that he has spoken more clearly still in his Son.

PSALM 19:1

DAY 12 · WEEK 2

Psalm 33:1-9

By the word of the LORD the heavens were made

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 9 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 33:1-9 slowly, twice. This psalm begins with a call to worship and quickly turns to the same theme our recent readings have explored, the word of the LORD as the agent of creation. Read it aloud if you can. The psalm was originally meant to be sung.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 33 is one of the great praise psalms of the Psalter. It opens with a vigorous call to worship, shouts, songs, harps, lyres, new songs sung well. Then in verses 6-9 it grounds that worship in a specific theological claim: by the word of the LORD the heavens were made. This little psalm captures, in a few lines, what Genesis 1 narrated and Psalms 8, 19, and 104 celebrated.

The whole opening third of this plan is meditating on God as Creator. Today's psalm crystallizes one specific aspect of that doctrine: God created by speaking, and his word still carries the same power today.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with five different verbs of praise: shout, give thanks, sing, play skillfully, sing aloud. Worship is not lazy; it is energetic.
2. Praise is described as "fitting for the upright", worship is the natural and right response of the righteous.
3. Verses 4-5 ground praise in God's character: his word is upright, his work faithful, he loves righteousness and justice, the earth is full of his steadfast love.
4. Verse 6 is the theological climax: "By the word of the LORD the heavens were made, and by the breath of his mouth all their host." This directly echoes Genesis 1.

5. The Hebrew for “breath” (ruach) is the same word used for “Spirit”, the trinitarian echoes are subtle but real.
6. God “gathers the waters of the sea as a heap”, taming the chaotic waters with the ease of stacking blocks.
7. Verse 9 sums up the doctrine of creation by word: “For he spoke, and it came to be; he commanded, and it stood firm.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 33:1-9 is a compact meditation on what theologians call creation by divine fiat, the doctrine that God created by speaking, and that his speech carries the power to bring reality into being. It is the doctrine of Genesis 1 set to music.

The psalm begins with the call to worship. Notice the verbs: shout, give thanks, sing, play, sing aloud. Worship in the Psalter is not a quiet, internal feeling. It is a public, embodied, often loud act. The instruments are named, harp, ten-stringed lyre. The skill is required, “play skillfully.” A “new song” is called for, not just rote repetition. Christian worship has always taken this seriously. Why? Because the God we worship is worthy of more than half-hearted attention.

Then comes the foundation. Why is God worthy of this energy of praise? Verses 4-5: because his word is upright, his work is faithful, he loves righteousness and justice, and the earth is full of his steadfast love. This is the theological ground beneath worship. We do not praise God because we feel like it, or because of what we hope to get, or because praise is good for us (though it is). We praise God because of who he is and what he has done. The verbs of praise in verses 1-3 are anchored in the truths about God in verses 4-5.

Then verse 6 arrives, and it is one of the most concentrated creation statements in the Old Testament: “By the word of the LORD the heavens were made, and by the breath of his mouth all their host.” The structure is parallel: word and breath, made and all their host. The word of the LORD is not just a sound; it is the agent of creation. The breath of his mouth is not just air; it is the Spirit at work. This is why John could later begin his Gospel with “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.” John was not introducing a new idea; he was identifying the eternal Word through whom Psalm 33:6 says the heavens were made, and revealing that Word as the Son of God.

This is the doctrine that Christians call divine speech-act. God’s words do things. When God says “let there be light,” there is light. When God says “be still” to a storm, the storm becomes calm. When God says “your sins are forgiven,” sins are forgiven. The same power that made the universe is at work whenever God speaks. This is why the Bible matters. This is why preaching matters. This is why prayer matters. We are dealing with a God whose word is creative.

Verse 7 describes the taming of the waters, God gathers the seas as a heap. In Genesis 1, the waters of chaos were separated and ordered. In Exodus 14, the Red Sea was parted as a heap. In the Gospels, Christ walks on the water and calms the storm with a word. The God of Psalm 33 has been doing this his whole story: speaking, and chaos becoming order.

The psalm concludes the section with verse 9, which is almost a confessional summary of the doctrine: "For he spoke, and it came to be; he commanded, and it stood firm." This is who God is. And this is the God we worship.

STEP 5

Connection

For more than a week now, this plan has been circling around creation, Genesis 1 and 2, Psalm 8, Psalm 104, Psalm 19, and now Psalm 33. Each angle has shown something slightly different: creation's order, humanity's dignity, the wordless preaching of the heavens, the still-flowing providence of God. Psalm 33 zooms in on the mechanism: God spoke. This will become crucial as the plan continues. The God who speaks the universe into being is the God who will later speak through his prophets, then through his Son, then through the apostles. The whole Bible is the speech of the God of Psalm 33:9. When we read it, we are not consulting religious literature, we are listening to the voice that made the stars.

STEP 6

Application

Take the power of God's word seriously today. Twice over.

First, when you open Scripture, remember that the same word that made the heavens is what you are reading. That is why Scripture reading is not just information-gathering. It is communion with the living God. When you open your Bible, you are sitting under the voice that called galaxies into being. Ask yourself how you usually approach it, and what would change if you came expecting to be addressed.

Second, take the energy of worship seriously. The psalm calls for shouts, songs, instruments, skill, new songs. If your worship has gone flat, if it has become a routine, a habit, a duty, Psalm 33 is a prophetic reminder that God deserves more. This is not about being emotional for its own sake. It is about giving the God who spoke the universe into being the response he is owed. Sing on your way to work. Listen to a worship song between meetings. Read a hymn before bed. Let the energy of praise come back into the corners of your week where it has slipped away.

And when you face circumstances today that feel chaotic, uncertain plans, difficult relationships, struggles in your own heart, remember verse 9. He speaks, and it comes to be. The God who tamed the waters is the same God who can speak peace into your storms.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Marvel that the God who spoke the universe into being speaks to you, and tell him what that does to the way you open his Word.

Bring him one chaotic area of your life and ask him to speak peace into it.

Ask him to revive your worship where it has gone flat.

DAY 13 · WEEK 2

Psalm 29

The voice of the LORD over the waters

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 29 slowly, twice. This is one of the shortest and most thunderous psalms in the Psalter. Read it aloud if you can. As you read, pay attention to the repeated phrase "the voice of the LORD", it appears seven times, and it is the spine of the whole poem.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 29 is widely considered one of the oldest psalms in the Hebrew Bible. Its imagery, the LORD enthroned over the flood, the voice that shatters cedars and shakes the wilderness, uses storm-language that the surrounding pagan cultures used for their storm-gods. But the psalm radically reframes the imagery. Whatever the Canaanites attributed to Baal, the Psalter attributes to the one true God. The storm belongs to him alone.

This psalm closes our string of creation meditations in a thunderous way. Where Psalm 19 heard creation's quiet, wordless witness, Psalm 29 hears its booming, shaking, magnificent voice. Both are true, and both belong to the same God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with a call to the "heavenly beings" (literally "sons of God") to ascribe glory to the LORD. Even the angels are summoned to worship.
2. The phrase "the voice of the LORD" appears seven times in seven verses. Seven is the number of completeness in Hebrew thought.
3. Each occurrence of "the voice of the LORD" shows that voice doing something powerful in nature: thundering over waters, breaking cedars, flashing flames of fire, shaking the wilderness, twisting oaks.

4. Verse 9 ends with the surprising note: in his temple, "all cry, Glory!" Even creation's chaos becomes a sanctuary of praise.
5. Verse 10 says "The LORD sits enthroned over the flood; the LORD sits enthroned as king forever." He is not threatened by chaos; he reigns over it.
6. The psalm ends with a benediction: "May the LORD give strength to his people! May the LORD bless his people with peace!" Power leads to peace.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 29 is one of the most theologically rich short psalms in the Bible. In just eleven verses, it gathers up the doctrine of God's sovereignty, the worship of the heavenly host, the power of God's voice over chaos, and the blessing of peace upon his people. The whole psalm is built around the sevenfold repetition of one phrase: "the voice of the LORD."

The psalm begins by addressing the "heavenly beings", angels, the divine council, the celestial court. The call is for them to ascribe to the LORD glory and strength. This is significant. Worship is not just a human activity. The angels worship. The heavens worship. The whole created universe is summoned to give glory to the God who made it. When you worship as a Christian, you are not initiating a private religious moment, you are joining an unbroken cosmic chorus that has been praising God since before you were born.

Then the storm rolls in. Beginning in verse 3, the psalm describes the voice of the LORD with vivid, almost violent imagery. It thunders over the waters. It is powerful and full of majesty. It breaks the cedars of Lebanon, and the cedars of Lebanon were the strongest, tallest trees in the ancient Near East. It makes Lebanon skip like a calf. It flashes forth flames of fire. It shakes the wilderness. It strips the forests bare. The same voice that whispered in Genesis 1 also thunders. The same voice that gently spoke creation into being can shake the foundations of the world.

This is important pastoral theology. Many people, when they think of God, imagine either a gentle grandfather figure or a distant cosmic principle. Psalm 29 shatters both pictures. The God of the Bible is glorious in a way that should make the cedars tremble. He is no tame deity. He is the maker and sustainer of all things, and his voice can rip the earth open.

And yet, and this is the breathtaking turn, verse 9 ends with this surprising line: "in his temple all cry, Glory!" In the middle of all this thunder, in the holy sanctuary of God's presence, there is one response: worship. The shaking forests, the trembling wilderness, the broken cedars, they are all part of one great hymn. Even chaos cannot help but praise the Creator.

Then verse 10 brings the great theological summary: “The LORD sits enthroned over the flood; the LORD sits enthroned as king forever.” The flood here likely echoes both the Genesis flood and the chaotic waters of creation. The point is the same in both cases: God is not threatened by the chaos. He reigns over it. Whatever is shaking your life today, political turmoil, personal crisis, fear of the future, God sits enthroned over it. He is king forever.

The psalm ends, then, with a quiet benediction: “May the LORD give strength to his people! May the LORD bless his people with peace!” The God whose voice shakes the world gives strength and peace to his people. The same power that shatters the cedars protects and blesses his children. Power in the service of love is the heart of the Christian God.

STEP 5

Connection

A week ago we read in Genesis 1 that God spoke creation into being. In the days since, the Psalms have echoed that creation theme in many ways, the dignity of humanity, the manifold works of the Maker, the wordless witness of the heavens, the breath of his mouth as agent of creation. Today’s psalm completes the picture by showing us what that voice sounds like in its full power, and that it always ends in blessing for God’s people. The God who made the universe by speaking is the same God who will one day still every storm with a word, and whose voice will say to his redeemed: “Behold, I am making all things new.” The voice of the LORD has been the spine of every reading we have done. It will be the spine of everything yet to come.

STEP 6

Application

Worship God for his greatness today. Not just for his goodness, that you are familiar with, but for his greatness. The God of Psalm 29 is not a comfortable deity to manage. He is a thundering Lord whose voice shakes the wilderness. If your sense of God has shrunk to the size of your prayer requests, this psalm is a prophetic correction.

Today, find one place where you can experience something of the power of creation. The wind in trees. A thunderstorm if there is one. A vast view. The sound of a river. And let it remind you that the God you worship is the God whose voice still shakes the cedars. Then worship him for that. Not just thank him; ascribe to him glory and strength. The fact that he is so much greater than you is not bad news, it is the reason you can trust him with everything.

But also receive verse 11 today: “May the LORD give strength to his people! May the LORD bless his people with peace!” The same God whose voice splits the wilderness gives you strength and peace as his child. If you feel weak, ask for his strength. If you are anxious, ask for his peace. The power that shook Lebanon is at your service through Christ, who has reconciled you to the King who sits enthroned forever.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ascribe glory and strength to the LORD in your own words.

Name a storm you are facing and remind yourself that he sits enthroned over every flood.

Ask him for the peace he promises to his people.

No new reading today. Rest, remember, and look back over the week.

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Sabbath

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. After a week of creation Psalms, this is the right day to step outside if you can, look up, and simply receive what creation has been preaching. The Sabbath is not just rest from work, it is rest into worship.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky above proclaims his handiwork."

PSALM 19:1

REST

Meditation

Read this verse aloud several times. Then sit with the two halves. "The heavens declare", they are constantly speaking, day and night, in every place. "The glory of God", not their own beauty, not random wonder, but the glory of a Person. The sky preaches. The question is whether we are listening.

The Hebrew word for "declare" is intense, it is the language of proclamation, of a herald announcing news. The heavens are not whispering. They are heralding. Every sunrise is a sermon. Every star is a syllable in a sentence about God's glory.

Carry this verse with you outdoors today, even briefly. Look up. Hear what is being said. By the end of this week, the verse should rise to your mind every time you see the sky.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This was a week entirely of creation Psalms. You read Psalm 8, where David marveled that the God of the stars cares for humanity. You read both halves of Psalm 104, walking through creation as ongoing providence. You read Psalm 19:1-6, where the heavens preach without words. You read Psalm 33:1-9, where creation is grounded in the power of God's spoken word. And you read Psalm 29, where the voice of the LORD thundered seven times across the wilderness.

Six Psalms. One theme. Six different angles on the same truth, the world we inhabit is loud with the glory of God. After last week's foundational doctrines, this week trained you in the appropriate response to those doctrines: worship. Worship is not optional for the Christian. It is the only sane reaction to what we now know.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Which Psalm this week resonated most with you, and why? Each Psalm captured a different aspect of God's glory in creation, the stars, the storm, the silent witness of the heavens, the voice that shakes the cedars. Sit with the one that struck you most deeply. What does your response to it reveal about what you most need to learn about God?

How does the creation testimony of these Psalms point you to Christ? Paul tells us in Colossians 1 that "by him all things were created, in heaven and on earth." The Word who spoke creation into being in Genesis 1 is the same Word who became flesh and dwelt among us. Every sunrise you have ever seen was a gift from the hand of the one who would die for you. How does that change how you receive creation today?

Where has your worship gone quiet? The Psalms this week were exuberant, shouts, songs, instruments, lifted eyes. If your worship has shrunk to a routine, what would it take to recover the energy these Psalms model?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for what the heavens and the Psalms have taught you this week, and tell him what you have noticed.

Confess any distraction that has kept you from praise, and ask him to restore your wonder.

Thank Christ, through whom all things were made and hold together.

DAY 15 · WEEK 3

Psalm 65

You visit the earth and water it, God's good provision for creation

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Psalm · 13 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 65 slowly, twice. This is the final psalm in our opening string of creation meditations. It is also the perfect transition: it praises God for both creation and salvation in one breath, anticipating the rest of the biblical story. Notice how the psalm moves through three movements, the forgiveness of sin, the sovereignty of God, and the blessing of creation.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 65 is in many ways the perfect bridge from Unit 1 into the rest of the plan. It is one of David's psalms, and it weaves together three themes that the plan has been building: the forgiveness of sin, the awesome sovereignty of God, and the providential blessing of creation. The psalm anticipates the harvest, likely sung at a festival celebrating God's provision of rain and crops, but it sees the harvest as woven together with God's redemption of his people.

This is the kind of psalm that teaches us how to integrate doctrines we have studied separately. Creation and salvation are not two unrelated themes; they are two acts of the same God, by the same word, for the same purpose: the flourishing of his people in the world he made.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with a remarkable line: "Praise is due to you, O God, in Zion, and to you shall vows be performed." Worship is presented as the natural posture of God's people.
2. Verse 3 is striking, sin is acknowledged immediately: "When iniquities prevail against me, you atone for our transgressions." Atonement before creation language.

3. The temple is described as the place of nearness: “Blessed is the one you choose and bring near, to dwell in your courts!”
4. God is addressed as the “God of our salvation” and “the hope of all the ends of the earth and of the farthest seas”, both personal and cosmic.
5. Verses 6-8 portray God establishing mountains, stilling the seas, and silencing the tumult of peoples, sovereignty over both nature and nations.
6. Verses 9-13 are a lyrical celebration of agricultural blessing, God “visits the earth,” enriches it with rain, fills the streams, prepares the grain, blesses the harvest.
7. The closing lines are pure exuberance: “The hills gird themselves with joy, the meadows clothe themselves with flocks, the valleys deck themselves with grain; they shout and sing together for joy.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 65 is a feast of biblical theology in twelve verses. It moves through three distinct movements, and each one builds on the last in a way that captures the whole sweep of Scripture.

The first movement (verses 1-4) begins where the Christian life begins: at the doorstep of God, with the question of how a sinner can come near. The opening is gentle, “Praise is due to you, O God, in Zion.” But then verse 3 takes a turn: “When iniquities prevail against me, you atone for our transgressions.” The honest acknowledgment of sin is immediately answered by God’s atoning work. Notice the order: sin acknowledged, atonement provided, then access granted. “Blessed is the one you choose and bring near, to dwell in your courts!” This is not vague religious sentiment. This is the gospel’s basic structure: sin, atonement, fellowship. David did not have the full revelation of Christ, but he had the substance, that God himself takes initiative to atone for sin and bring his people near.

The second movement (verses 5-8) zooms out to the cosmic. God is “the God of our salvation,” the “hope of all the ends of the earth and of the farthest seas.” His power establishes mountains, his strength girds itself, his voice stills the roaring of the seas and the tumult of the peoples. The horizon expands from personal forgiveness to global sovereignty. The God who atones for one believer’s sin is the same God who orders the nations and silences storms.

And then the third movement (verses 9-13), the one most often quoted, turns to the agricultural blessing of God in creation. “You visit the earth and water it.” “You crown the year with your bounty.” The streams are full, the grain is ready, the meadows are clothed with flocks, the valleys deck themselves with grain. And the closing line is one of the most extraordinary in the Psalter: "They shout and sing together for joy." The hills, the meadows, the valleys, they sing. Creation itself rejoices in the goodness of God.

Now notice what David has done. He has not separated salvation from creation. He has not separated personal from cosmic. He has not separated divine sovereignty from the dew on the grass. All of it is woven together. The same God who atones for sin sustains the harvest. The same voice that silences the seas brings rain to the fields. The same hand that brings the worshiper near to his courts also crowns the year with bounty. This is the integrated vision of the Bible: there are not many gods doing many jobs in an unrelated universe. There is one God, doing one great work, of which creation and redemption are two faces.

This is also why a Christian's gratitude must always be comprehensive. We do not just thank God for spiritual blessings as if material blessings came from somewhere else. We do not just thank him for the harvest as if salvation were unrelated. Every good thing comes from the same hand, and the harvest itself, the dew, the rain, the meadows full of flocks, all of it bears witness to the goodness of the God who saves us.

Psalm 65 ends in such joy that even the inanimate creation is portrayed as singing. This is the sound of creation as it was meant to be, and as it will one day be again in the new heavens and new earth. The plan's first unit ends on this note: the doctrines of creation, fall, and the foreshadowing of redemption have been laid down. Now the rest of the story can unfold.

STEP 5

Connection

This is the last reading day of Unit 1, and Psalm 65 is the perfect summary. The unit began with creation in Genesis 1, God speaks, and the heavens declare. It moved through the fall in Genesis 3, and the first promise of a Redeemer. It paused on the doctrines of Scripture, the image of God, and sin. And it ranged through Psalms 8, 104, 19, 33, and 29, each praising the Creator from a different angle. Today's psalm gathers all of it together: sin acknowledged, atonement provided, sovereignty over nature and nations celebrated, the goodness of the harvest received with joy. Tomorrow's review day will help you consolidate what you have learned. And then we will move into Unit 2, the spread of sin and God's covenant with Noah, to continue the story.

STEP 6

Application

Receive God's goodness today, across every level of your life. The integrated vision of Psalm 65 is meant to shape how you live. The same God who forgives your sin gives you your daily bread. The same God who atones for your transgressions waters the fields that feed you. The same God who brings you near to his courts holds together the cosmos. Gratitude is meant to run wide.

Three practices for today. First, give honest thanks for one tangible blessing of creation, your food, the weather, a place you find beautiful, the breath in your lungs. Receive it as a gift from the hand that also forgives your sin. Second, examine where you have been treating the spiritual and material as if they came from different sources. Have you been thanking God on Sunday and forgetting his providence on Monday? Have you been crediting your salvation to God and your harvest to yourself? Bring the two back together. Third, let yourself rejoice. The psalm ends with hills singing and valleys shouting for joy. If creation rejoices in God's goodness, surely you can too. Joy is not optional for the Christian. It is the appropriate response to the kind of God this psalm describes.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Give thanks to God for one specific provision in your life this year.
- Thank him that he forgives iniquity and brings sinners near.
- Ask him to make you a joyful, thankful child today.

DAY 16 · WEEK 3

Review and Reflection

Unit 1 review, Creation & the Covenant of Works

Year 1 · Unit 1 · Review

MEMORY

Unit Verse

> "In the beginning, God created the heavens and the earth."
> GENESIS 1:1

REST

Meditation

Today there is no new reading. Today is for review and reflection on what you have learned in Unit 1.

Begin by memorizing the verse above if you have not already. Genesis 1:1 is the foundational sentence of the entire Bible. Everything that follows, every covenant, every promise, every doctrine, rests on the claim it makes. There is a God. He created. He made the heavens and the earth. Before any biblical doctrine can be constructed, this single verse must be settled.

Say it aloud several times today, slowly. Notice each phrase. "In the beginning", there was a beginning, and God was there. "God created", not chaos, not gods, not accidents. God. "The heavens and the earth", everything that is, in every realm, from every angle, all of it. This one verse refutes atheism (God exists), polytheism (one God), pantheism (God is distinct from creation), dualism (one source, not two), and naturalism (the universe is not self-existent). All of it, in seven English words.

Carry this verse with you through the day. Repeat it when you encounter something beautiful in creation. Repeat it when something feels chaotic. Repeat it when you doubt the goodness of the world. The God who began everything is the God who oversees everything still.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 1 you have traveled through the first three chapters of Genesis and met the foundational doctrines on which the entire Christian faith rests. The unit began with creation itself, the God who speaks, the world he ordered, the humanity he crowned with glory and honor. You then descended into Genesis 3, where the rebellion of humanity broke what God had made good, and yet, even in that chapter, the first promise of a Redeemer was spoken.

Along the way, the plan paused three times for doctrinal reflection: on the Bible itself, the foundation of everything else; on the image of God, the basis of human dignity; and on the doctrine of sin, the diagnosis of what is wrong with the world and with each of us.

The Psalms then taught us how to respond to what we had learned. Psalm 8 marveled at the dignity God has given humanity. Psalm 104 led us through creation as ongoing providence. Psalm 19 listened to the wordless witness of the heavens. Psalm 33 contemplated the power of God's word. Psalm 29 thundered with the majesty of his voice. And Psalm 65 brought together creation, atonement, and joy in a single song.

This first unit has done foundational work. You have met the God of the Bible, Creator, holy, sovereign, near. You have met humanity as it was meant to be, image-bearing, dignified, in covenant. You have met sin, universal, deep, devastating. And you have heard the first whisper of grace, the offspring of the woman who would crush the serpent's head. Everything that comes next in the Bible builds on this foundation. The unit you are completing is the soil out of which the rest of the story grows.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What does the order and goodness of creation reveal about God's character?

Think about what Genesis 1 shows us through its pattern and rhythm. Creation is ordered, not chaotic, speaking to God's mind. It is good, not neutral, speaking to God's character. It is given as gift to image-bearers, speaking to God's generosity. Sit with this question: if you knew nothing about God except what Genesis 1 reveals, what would you conclude about him? Write a few sentences in your own words.

What was the nature of the covenant God made with Adam in the garden?

Revisit Genesis 2. God provided abundantly ("of every tree you may surely eat"), placed one prohibition, and made it a test of trust. This is sometimes called the covenant of works. What were the terms? What was at stake? And what does the structure tell you about the pattern of all true relationship with God, gift before command, grace before obedience?

What did the Fall change about the relationship between God and humanity?

Walk through Genesis 3 in your memory. What broke between God and Adam and Eve? What broke between Adam and Eve themselves? What broke between humanity and creation? What broke inside the human heart? The Fall was not just one bad decision; it was a comprehensive shattering. Identify three specific things that changed.

Where is the first promise of redemption in Scripture, and what does it tell us?

Genesis 3:15, sometimes called the protoevangelium, the first gospel. Read it again. What does it promise? Who is the "offspring of the woman"? What does it cost him, and what does he accomplish? And how does this single verse plant the seed of everything that will follow in Scripture? Pray through this verse, thanking God that he did not abandon humanity even in the moment of our rebellion.

DAY 17 · WEEK 3

Genesis 4:1-26

Cain and Abel; sin crouching at the door; the line of Seth

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Reading · 26 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 4:1-26 slowly. This is the first chapter after the Fall, and it shows immediately what sin does in the second generation. Notice the contrast between the two brothers, the warning God gives Cain before the murder, and the closing note about people calling on the name of the LORD.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Unit 1 ended with Adam and Eve being driven from the garden. The first promise of redemption had been given, the offspring of the woman would one day crush the serpent's head, but the immediate landscape was bleak. Today's reading is what happens next. Genesis 4 is the first chapter of life east of Eden. It shows us a world where the consequences of sin are not theoretical but lethal, and where God is still speaking, still warning, still naming his people.

This unit covers Genesis 4 through 11, the early chapters of human history before Abraham, sometimes called the "primeval history." These chapters trace the spread of sin from one family to all humanity, and the response of a patient God who preserves creation for the sake of his redemptive purposes.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Eve names Cain with what appears to be hope: "I have gotten a man with the help of the LORD." Some scholars see her hoping that Cain might be the promised offspring of Genesis 3:15.
2. Cain brings "of the fruit of the ground"; Abel brings "of the firstborn of his flock and of their fat portions." The text does not condemn agriculture, but it does say God "had regard for Abel and his offering" but "for Cain and his offering he had no regard."

3. God does not abandon Cain when his sacrifice is rejected. He warns him: “sin is crouching at the door. Its desire is for you, but you must rule over it.”
4. Cain does not respond to God’s warning. The first murder follows, and it happens to a brother, not to a stranger or an enemy.
5. When God asks Cain where his brother is, Cain echoes the deflection of his parents in Eden: “Am I my brother’s keeper?”
6. The blood of Abel “cries out from the ground”, the Hebrew is plural, “bloods”, suggesting not just Abel’s life but all his potential descendants who will never be.
7. Lamech (4:23-24) embodies sin’s escalation: he boasts of killing a young man for striking him, and demands sevenfold-times-eleven vengeance.
8. The chapter ends, unexpectedly, on a note of hope: Seth is born, Enosh is born, “At that time people began to call upon the name of the LORD.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 4 is one of the most psychologically penetrating chapters in the Bible. In just twenty-six verses, the story moves from the first act of worship after the Fall, through the first warning about sin’s nature, into the first murder, and finally to the first sustained worship of God outside the garden. It is a chapter about what happens to humanity after the Fall, and it tells us things we need to know.

The chapter begins with two brothers and two offerings. Why was Abel’s accepted and Cain’s rejected? The text gives no detailed explanation, but the writer of Hebrews tells us “by faith Abel offered to God a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain” (Hebrews 11:4). The difference was not in the type of offering but in the heart of the worshiper. Cain went through the motions; Abel offered in faith. From the very beginning of human worship after the Fall, God has cared about the heart, not just the ritual.

Then comes God’s warning to Cain, and notice what it tells us about sin. “Sin is crouching at the door. Its desire is for you, but you must rule over it.” Sin is personified as a predator at the threshold of Cain’s heart. The language echoes Genesis 3:16, where the woman’s desire is for her husband, but he will rule over her, the language of distorted, fallen relationships. Sin is not a passive failure; it is an active force seeking to consume. And critically, God speaks to Cain about it. The first warning about indwelling sin in the Bible comes from God himself, gently, before any violence has occurred. God is not absent from a fallen world; he speaks to his image-bearers even when they are angry, even when they are about to do terrible things.

But Cain does not listen. The next thing he does is invite his brother to a field and kill him. The first murder in human history is a fratricide. This is significant. The Bible does not present sin as an abstract problem; it presents it as something that ruptures the most intimate relationships. The first violence is not war between nations but a brother killing a brother. From this point forward, every act of human violence will be, in some sense, an echo of Cain, the strong against the weak, the older against the younger, the resentful against the favored, all of us against one another, all of us forgetting that the person we strike is our kin.

When God confronts Cain, Cain replies with the most famous deflection in Scripture: "Am I my brother's keeper?" The answer, of course, is yes. You are. Every human is the keeper of every other human, because all bear the image of God. Cain's question contains its own indictment.

Then God speaks of Abel's blood crying out from the ground. The Hebrew uses the plural form, bloods, which Jewish tradition has long understood as including not only Abel himself but all the descendants he would have had. Every murder is a multiplication, a cutting off of countless lives that would have come. The earth itself, the very ground that received Adam's body in the garden, now testifies against violence.

And then we see Cain's lineage drift further away from God. By the time we reach Lamech (verses 23-24), sin has metastasized. Lamech kills a man for merely striking him, and boasts about it to his wives in a poem. He invokes the principle of measured vengeance that God had used to protect Cain, "if Cain's revenge is sevenfold, then Lamech's is seventy-sevenfold", and weaponizes it for his own ego. Sin not only spreads; it amplifies. Each generation, left to itself, escalates the cycle.

But the chapter does not end there. Verse 25 brings Seth, the replacement for Abel. And verse 26 brings a single beautiful sentence: "At that time people began to call upon the name of the LORD." Even in the depth of human degradation, even in the first generations after exile from Eden, there is a remnant, people who worship. The story of redemption is the story of this remnant, called by God, kept by God, leading through generations all the way to Christ.

STEP 5

Connection

Unit 1 told us what humanity was meant to be (Genesis 1-2) and what humanity became (Genesis 3). Genesis 4 is the immediate aftermath. The covenant of works was broken, the curse was pronounced, the gospel was promised, and now we begin to see what life under those conditions actually looks like. The seed of the woman (Genesis 3:15) is still in view: Cain is rejected as the promised one, Abel is killed, but Seth is born to continue the godly line, and his son Enosh leads people to call on the name of the LORD. The line of promise will run through Seth, then through Noah, then through Abraham, then through David, all the way to Christ. The first hint that God's redemptive plan will be preserved despite human violence appears in the very chapter where the first violence happens.

STEP 6

Application

Listen to God's warning to Cain, it is a warning to you. "Sin is crouching at the door. Its desire is for you, but you must rule over it." This is a profound psychological insight. Sin in the believer's life is not a one-time event but a persistent presence, waiting at the doorway of every heart, looking for an opportunity. The Christian life is not the absence of temptation; it is the daily ruling over sin by the Spirit's power.

Practically, where is sin crouching at your door today? Maybe it is bitterness toward someone. Maybe it is a habitual indulgence. Maybe it is anger you have been nursing. Maybe it is comparison or envy or the slow drift away from prayer. The point is not to be paranoid, it is to be honest. God spoke to Cain before the murder. He still speaks to his people before the sin. Are you listening?

And take Cain's deflection seriously. "Am I my brother's keeper?" In a world that is happy to pretend we are not responsible for each other, the Christian remembers: every person you encounter bears the image of God, and you are accountable for how you treat them. This applies to your closest family and your most distant neighbor. The blood of Abel still cries out from the ground when we forget this.

But take heart from verse 26. Even in the worst of times, "people began to call upon the name of the LORD." The remnant is always there. The line of promise is always preserved. The faithful worship of God always survives, even when the world is sliding into Lamech's violence. You are part of that continuing remnant. Today, call upon his name.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to show you where sin is crouching at your door, and tell him the truth about it.
- Confess any place you have deflected blame or refused to care for another person.
- Thank him that he is merciful even in the darkest chapters.

GENESIS 6:8

DAY 18 · WEEK 3

Genesis 5:1-32

The genealogy of Adam, life, death, and the promise preserved

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Reading · 32 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 5:1-32 slowly. Yes, this is a genealogy, and it may feel like one of those passages that's tempting to skim. Don't. Genealogies in Scripture are theological documents. As you read, notice the repeated phrase "and he died," the curious exception in verse 24, and the way the chapter ends in suspense.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday we read about the first murder and the spread of sin from one generation to the next. Genesis 5 takes a step back and gives us the full genealogy of Adam through Noah, ten generations from creation to the flood. It is one of the most important genealogies in the Bible, and it sets up everything that comes next. This is also the first genealogy of Scripture, and it teaches us how to read all the ones that follow.

Genealogies are not filler. They are theological records. They tell us who is in the line of promise, how God's faithfulness has been transmitted from generation to generation, and how the world fits together as one story. This genealogy in particular establishes that there is an unbroken line from Adam to Noah, that humanity has been multiplying across the earth, that death has been spreading along with humanity, and that one man in particular, Enoch, escaped death by walking with God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 1 explicitly recalls Genesis 1:27: God "made him in the likeness of God. Male and female he created them, and he blessed them." The image of God survived the Fall, humanity still bears it.
2. Adam's first descendant is described differently from himself: "Adam … fathered a son in his own likeness, after his image, and named him Seth." The image of God is now mediated through fallen humanity.

3. Each generation follows a strict formula: [Name] lived X years, fathered [Son], lived Y more years, fathered other sons and daughters, and the years of his life were Z, AND HE DIED.
4. The phrase “and he died” appears eight times. Death, the consequence promised in Genesis 2:17, has come true and is now the universal human experience.
5. Enoch is the seventh from Adam and breaks the pattern. He “walked with God, and he was not, for God took him.” He does not die.
6. Lamech (a different Lamech than Cain’s descendant) names his son Noah, saying “this one shall give us rest from our work and from the painful toil of our hands because of the ground that the LORD has cursed.”
7. The genealogy ends not with “and he died” for Noah, but with the open-ended note that he “had three sons”, Shem, Ham, and Japheth. The story is not over yet.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 5 looks like a list, but it is preaching. The whole chapter is built around a tension: the image of God in humanity, and the reality of death that now follows every human life. Both are true. The chapter holds them together and lets us feel the weight.

Verse 1 deliberately echoes Genesis 1:27. “When God created man, he made him in the likeness of God. Male and female he created them, and he blessed them when they were created.” After the Fall and after Cain’s violence, the writer wants us to remember: humanity is still in the image of God. The Fall did not erase the image. It marred it, but it did not destroy it. Every person born to Adam and Eve, including Cain, bears the image of God. And this matters because the image will run through this chapter, generation by generation, all the way to Noah and beyond.

But then verse 3 introduces a haunting modification. Seth is born, and the text says Adam “fathered a son in his own likeness, after his image.” The phrase has shifted. Adam was made in God’s image; Seth is made in Adam’s image. The image is now mediated through fallen humanity. This is the doctrine of original sin being expressed not through theological argument but through narrative shading. The image survives. But it is now passed down through people who have already inherited the corruption of the Fall. Every child born is in the image of God and in the image of fallen Adam at the same time.

Then comes the repeated rhythm of the chapter: "and he died." Eight times. Each life recorded, each life ended. The chapter is, in one sense, a long funeral. The promise of Genesis 2:17, "in the day you eat of it you shall surely die", is being slowly, generation by generation, fulfilled. Death is not just an unfortunate biological fact; it is a theological reality. It is the consequence of sin. And it is now woven into the fabric of human existence.

This is what makes Enoch's story so stunning. Verse 24: "Enoch walked with God, and he was not, for God took him." Enoch is the seventh from Adam, and seven is the number of completeness, of fullness, and he breaks the pattern. He does not die. The text does not explain how or why, but the phrase "walked with God" appears only twice in the Old Testament about an individual: about Enoch here and about Noah in Genesis 6:9. The implication is clear: there is a kind of life that escapes the universal sentence of death. There is a way of relating to God that transforms what death does to a person. Hebrews 11:5 puts it this way: "By faith Enoch was taken up so that he should not see death." Enoch is the first hint in Scripture that death is not the final word, even though death has come for everyone else, there is one who walks with God and bypasses the grave entirely.

The chapter then comes to its climax with Lamech and Noah. Lamech names his son Noah, which sounds like the Hebrew word for "rest." And he explains the name: "this one shall give us rest from our work and from the painful toil of our hands because of the ground that the LORD has cursed." Lamech is reaching back to Genesis 3:17, where the ground was cursed because of Adam's sin, and he is hoping, perhaps even prophesying, that this child will somehow lift the curse. He doesn't fully grasp what he is saying. Noah will not lift the curse permanently. But Noah will be the means by which God preserves humanity through the flood, and through Noah's line the true rest-giver will eventually come. The line of promise runs from Adam to Seth to Enosh to Enoch to Noah, and from there, all the way to Christ, who alone gives true rest to the weary.

STEP 5

Connection

Yesterday's reading showed sin spreading after the Fall, from Cain's anger to Lamech's vengeance. Today's chapter shows the bigger picture: ten generations of human history, with death claiming each one in turn. This is the world that the gospel will eventually answer. The promise of Genesis 3:15 (the offspring of the woman) is being preserved through a particular family line, Seth, Enosh, and onward to Noah, and ultimately to Abraham and David and Christ. Enoch's escape from death foreshadows the resurrection. Lamech's hope for rest through Noah foreshadows the deeper rest we have in Jesus. Even a genealogy is gospel-shaped when you know how to read it.

STEP 6

Application

The repeated phrase “and he died” is meant to land on you. Every human life that has ever been lived will end with that phrase. Yours will too. The Bible does not let you forget this, because pretending death is not coming is one of the most spiritually corrosive habits a human can have. Death is real. It is the consequence of sin. And it will claim you.

But Enoch is in this chapter for a reason. Enoch walked with God, and death did not have its way with him. The Christian message is not that death is unreal or that we should be brave about it. The Christian message is that death has been conquered by the one who walked with God perfectly, Jesus, and that those who are in him will follow him through death into life. Hebrews 11 lists Enoch among the heroes of faith because his story is a sign: there is a way of relating to God that changes what death does to you.

Today, ask yourself: am I walking with God? Not perfectly, Enoch alone is described that way among ordinary humans, but truly. Is my life a daily walk with the God who made me, redeemed me, and is sanctifying me? Or have I drifted into a religious routine that does not feel like walking with anyone? The phrase “walked with God” appears precious few times in Scripture. It is offered to you. Take it up.

And if you have lost someone, or are afraid of losing someone, or are afraid of your own death, let Genesis 5 do its work in two directions. Yes, death is real. Yes, it is coming. But the same chapter that records death also records Enoch, who walked with God and was taken. In Christ, that is the trajectory of every believer.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that his image still marks you, and tell him how you feel when you think about death.

Ask him to help you walk with him as Enoch did, day by day.

Thank Christ that death is not the end for those who are his.

GENESIS 6:8

DAY 19 · WEEK 3

Genesis 6:1-22

The corruption of creation; Noah finds grace; the ark commanded

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Reading · 22 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 6:1-22 slowly. This is one of the most sobering chapters in the Bible. It contains both the grimmest assessment of human depravity in the Old Testament and the first glimpse of God's grace toward a particular man. As you read, notice the contrast between verses 5 and 8.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday we walked through ten generations from Adam to Noah, watching death claim each generation in turn while the line of promise quietly continued. Today we arrive at the crisis point. Sin has not just spread, it has saturated. The world God called "very good" in Genesis 1 has become a world God grieves over in Genesis 6. The chapter we read today is the prelude to the flood. It is also the chapter where the word "grace" first appears in the Bible.

The chapter has several unusual features that have puzzled interpreters for centuries, the sons of God taking the daughters of men, the Nephilim, the lifespan limit of 120 years. These are real interpretive challenges, but they are not the point of the chapter. The point is this: humanity has become so corrupt that God will start over, but one man has found grace.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The chapter opens with a strange episode (verses 1-4) about the "sons of God" taking the "daughters of man" as wives. Many interpretations exist; the text itself is sparse.
2. Verse 3: "My Spirit shall not abide in man forever, for he is flesh: his days shall be 120 years." This may be a divine deadline before the flood, or a general statement on human lifespan.

3. Verse 5 is one of the bleakest assessments of humanity in the Bible: "every intention of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually."
4. Verse 6 attributes genuine emotion to God: he was "grieved" and his heart "was sorrowful." God is not impassive in the face of human sin.
5. Verse 8 is the hinge of the chapter: "But Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD." The Hebrew word for "favor" here is hen, the first appearance of the word grace in Scripture.
6. Noah is described as "a righteous man, blameless in his generation. Noah walked with God." The same phrase used of Enoch.
7. The ark's dimensions are precise: 300 cubits long, 50 wide, 30 high. Roughly 450 feet by 75 feet by 45 feet.
8. God establishes a "covenant" with Noah (verse 18) before the flood comes, the first explicit use of the word covenant in the Bible.
9. The chapter ends: "Noah did this; he did all that God commanded him." Obedience born of grace.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 6 is one of the most theologically loaded chapters in the entire Bible. In just twenty-two verses, we see the depth of human sin, the genuine sorrow of God, the first mention of grace, the introduction of the word covenant, and the obedience of one man who walks with God against the entire grain of his culture.

The chapter opens with a mysterious passage (verses 1-4) about the "sons of God" who take the "daughters of man" as wives, producing offspring described as Nephilim and "mighty men of old, men of renown." Three main interpretations have been offered through church history: that the sons of God were fallen angels, that they were powerful human rulers, or that they were descendants of the godly line of Seth intermarrying with the corrupt line of Cain. The text itself is sparse, and good Christian interpreters have differed. What matters for our purposes is the result: a further escalation of human corruption that prompts God's verdict in verse 3 and his action in verses 5-7.

Verse 5 is the most devastating sentence in the Old Testament about the human condition. "The LORD saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every intention of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." Every intention. Of the thoughts. Of the heart. Only evil. Continually. This is total depravity in narrative form. The doctrine of sin you read about on Day 6 is not a theological abstraction; it is what God himself saw when he looked at his creation a few generations after Adam.

And then comes one of the most surprising verses in the Old Testament. Verse 6: "And the LORD was sorry that he had made man on the earth, and it grieved him to his heart." This is not the cool, detached God of philosophy. This is a God who genuinely feels. He grieves over what humanity has become. He is sorrowful over the broken relationship with his image-bearers. We must be careful not to read this as a God who was surprised, the same Bible insists that God knows the end from the beginning. But we must also not flatten this into a metaphor. The God of the Bible has real affections, and human sin really grieves him.

Then verse 8, in the middle of the catastrophe: "But Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD." The conjunction is everything. The world is drowning in evil, and God is grieving, BUT Noah found grace. The Hebrew word translated "favor" is hen, which appears here for the first time in Scripture and will run through the entire Old Testament as the language of unmerited divine kindness. Notice carefully what the text does not say. It does not say Noah earned God's favor or deserved God's favor. It says he found it. Grace, by definition, is found, not earned. And then it tells us what kind of man Noah was: righteous, blameless in his generation, walking with God. This is not the basis of his grace; it is the fruit of it. Noah's righteousness is what grace had made of him in a world where everyone else was evil.

The rest of the chapter is the introduction of a new covenant arrangement. God reveals his judgment plan to Noah, gives him precise instructions for the ark, and says: "I will establish my covenant with you" (verse 18). This is the first use of the word "covenant" (berith) in the Bible. From this point on, covenant will be the central category of biblical theology. God always relates to his people through covenant, first with Noah, then with Abraham, then with Israel at Sinai, then with David, and finally through the new covenant in Christ. Genesis 6 is where this great covenantal story begins.

The chapter ends with a single, climactic sentence: "Noah did this; he did all that God commanded him." It would have taken many decades to build the ark. The world was watching, probably mocking. There was no rain yet, Noah was building a sea-going vessel inland, on God's word alone. And he did everything God commanded. This is what faith looks like when grace meets a person: obedience that does not need to see results before it acts.

STEP 5

Connection

Yesterday's genealogy showed the line of promise being preserved through Seth and his descendants. Genesis 6 narrows the focus to one man, Noah. The doctrine of sin you encountered on Day 6 is here demonstrated in its most extreme form: every intention of the human heart was only evil continually. And the doctrine of grace, which the rest of the Bible will develop, makes its first explicit appearance: "Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD." From the very beginning of Scripture, the pattern is set, humanity in rebellion, God in patient grief, and one chosen by grace to receive what others cannot. This pattern will repeat with Abraham, with Israel, and ultimately in Christ, who alone is the truly righteous one through whom all who are in him are preserved through the judgment to come.

STEP 6

Application

Sit with verse 5 for a moment before you move on. "Every intention of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." This is what God saw when he looked at humanity then, and it is what God still sees when he looks at humanity now apart from his grace. Not just bad behavior on the surface, but evil running all the way down to the intentions of the heart. This is not exaggeration. It is what your Maker sees.

And sit with verse 8. "But Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD." Grace is the only difference between you and the world headed for judgment. Not your morality, your church attendance, your good intentions, your spiritual disciplines, your theology. Grace. God's free, unearned, unmerited choice to set his favor on you in Christ.

Today, consider three things. First, take your own sin seriously. The same evil that filled the earth in Noah's day is still in human hearts, yours included. Do not minimize what God grieves over. Second, take grace seriously. You did not find God; he found you. Whatever righteousness has been worked in your life is the fruit of grace, not its cause. Be humble about it. Third, take obedience seriously. Noah heard God's word and obeyed in a world that thought he was crazy. If you are following Christ today in ways that confuse or anger people around you, you are in good company. Build your ark. The flood is real. And Christ is the door.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what you see in your own heart when you look honestly at it.

Thank him for the grace that has found you apart from any merit of your own.

Ask him for the kind of obedience Noah showed, even when it looks foolish to others.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 3

GENESIS 6:8

DAY 20 · WEEK 3

Genesis 7:1-8:19

The flood, judgment and preservation; God remembers Noah

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Reading · 57 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 7:1-8:19. This is the flood narrative itself, one of the longest single readings of Unit 2. Read steadily; don't get lost in the technical details of the chronology. The heart of the passage is the rhythm of judgment and preservation, and the great pivot in chapter 8:1: "But God remembered Noah."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday we saw God's verdict on the corrupt earth and his choice of Noah to be the one through whom humanity would be preserved. Today we read the flood itself. This is one of the most well-known stories in the Bible, but it is much more than a children's story about animals on a boat. Genesis 7-8 is a theological meditation on judgment and grace, on the de-creation and re-creation of the world, on God's commitment to preserve what he has made even while he judges what has gone wrong with it.

As you read, watch for the deliberate echoes of Genesis 1. The waters above and below come unbound. The breath of life is taken from creatures. Then, on the other side, the waters subside, dry land appears, the breath of life returns to creatures, and humanity emerges to be fruitful and multiply. This is not just a story about a flood. It is a story about creation itself starting over.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God's instruction in 7:1 is intimate: "Go into the ark, you and all your household, for I have seen that you are righteous before me in this generation."
2. Pairs of animals come in by twos for unclean animals, but by sevens for clean animals, anticipating Noah's later sacrifice.

3. Noah was 600 years old when the flood came (7:6). The text takes the long lifespans of Genesis 5 seriously.
4. The waters come from two directions: "the fountains of the great deep burst forth, and the windows of the heavens were opened" (7:11). This is a reversal of Genesis 1, where God separated the waters above from the waters below.
5. The rain falls for 40 days; the waters prevail for 150 days. The flood is not a brief thunderstorm; it is a sustained judgment.
6. Genesis 7:21-23 echoes Genesis 1 in reverse: every creature, every kind of life, on the land, perishes. De-creation.
7. Chapter 8:1 is the hinge: "But God remembered Noah and all the beasts and all the livestock that were with him in the ark." God does not forget the righteous in judgment.
8. God sends a "wind" (Hebrew ruach, also "spirit") over the earth, and the waters subside. This echoes Genesis 1:2.
9. Noah's first reconnaissance is a raven, then a dove. The dove returns with an olive leaf, life is returning to the earth.
10. When the family finally leaves the ark, they emerge into a world that, in many ways, mirrors the original creation.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The flood is one of the most theologically rich narratives in the Old Testament. To read it as merely a disaster story is to miss almost everything that matters. Genesis 7-8 is a story about creation, judgment, and new creation. Every detail is shaped by the larger biblical pattern, and once you see the pattern, the story becomes much more than a tale of survival.

First, the flood is a deliberate undoing of creation. Look back at Genesis 1. On Day 2, God separated the waters above from the waters below by placing the firmament between them. He made dry land appear. He populated the air with birds, the seas with fish, the land with animals. The world is a place of order, where the waters of chaos are held back so that life can flourish.

Now read Genesis 7:11 again. "The fountains of the great deep burst forth, and the windows of the heavens were opened." The waters above are no longer separated from the waters below. The firmament has been overwhelmed. The world is collapsing back into the chaotic, uninhabitable state of Genesis 1:2, "the earth was without form and void, and darkness was over the face of the deep." The flood is not just a natural disaster; it is creation reversing itself. Sin has so deeply corrupted the world that God allows the world to slide back toward the chaos from which he originally rescued it. Verse 23 makes this explicit: every creature, every breath, every form of land-based life is "blotted out." The earth becomes, again, what it was before God spoke.

But not entirely. In the ark, a wooden box floating on the waters, a remnant of creation is preserved. One man, one family, pairs of every creature, the seeds of plant life, the breath of God in living things. The ark is a microcosm of the world, a fragment of creation rescued from the chaos. Some theologians have called it "creation in miniature." It is the means by which God preserves what he will then renew.

Then comes the most beautiful sentence in the entire narrative. Genesis 8:1: "But God remembered Noah and all the beasts and all the livestock that were with him in the ark." When the Bible says God "remembered" someone, it does not mean he had forgotten and then recalled. It means he is now acting on what he has known all along. God remembered Abraham, and brought Israel out of Egypt. God remembered Hannah, and gave her a son. God remembered his covenant, and acted to keep it. When God "remembers" Noah, it is the moment of grace breaking through judgment. The flood has done its work. Now the new creation can begin.

And the new creation echoes the first creation in beautiful, deliberate ways. A wind (ruach) blows over the waters, just as the Spirit (ruach) hovered over the waters in Genesis 1:2. The waters subside. Dry land appears. The breath of life returns to creatures. The dove brings back a green leaf, vegetation has survived. Noah and his family emerge from the ark into a world that, in its broad outlines, looks like the world God first made. The flood narrative ends not with destruction but with creation renewed.

This pattern, of de-creation through judgment and re-creation through grace, is one of the most important patterns in all of Scripture. It will reappear in the Exodus (Israel passes through the chaotic waters of the Red Sea into a new identity). It will reappear in the prophets (the exile is a kind of flood, and the return is a kind of new creation). It will reappear in the New Testament (baptism is a passage through water that pictures death and new life). And it will reach its climax at the end of Scripture (the present world is judged, and a new heavens and new earth emerge). The flood is the first major preview of how God works in history. Judgment and grace, death and resurrection, the old order undone and a new order rising. This is the pattern of the gospel itself.

STEP 5

Genesis 6 introduced Noah and the ark; today we see God's judgment fall and his preservation work. The pattern established here, de-creation through judgment, re-creation through grace, will run through the entire Bible. The Exodus will be a flood-like deliverance

(Israel passes through chaotic waters into a new identity). Baptism will be a flood-like ritual (the believer passes through water into new life with Christ). And the consummation of all things in Revelation will be the final undoing of the present order and the emergence of new heavens and new earth. When Peter writes that "baptism, which corresponds to this, now saves you" (1 Peter 3:21), he is making this exact connection. Noah is a type of every believer who is brought safely through judgment in the ark of God's grace.

STEP 6

Application

The flood is a sobering picture, but it is meant to comfort believers as much as it warns sinners. Two applications follow from this.

First, take judgment seriously. The God of Genesis 7 is the same God of the New Testament. He is patient, slow to anger, abundant in mercy, but he is not indifferent to evil. Peter explicitly draws the lesson in 2 Peter 3, comparing the flood that came on the ancient world to the judgment by fire that is yet to come on this present world. Do not let the patience of God become an excuse for casualness about sin. The reason the flood didn't come for the first six hundred years of Noah's life was not that God was unconcerned. It was that God was patient. Read your Bible knowing the same is true now. We are living in the long patience of God before a final judgment that will surely come.

Second, take grace seriously. When the floodwaters come, you do not need a stronger swimming stroke. You need an ark. And the ark, as 1 Peter teaches, is Christ. To be "in Christ", joined to him by faith, hidden in him, sealed in him, is to be safe through every judgment, both temporal and eternal. The wood of the ark in Noah's day prefigured the wood of the cross. The door that God himself closed on the ark prefigures the salvation God himself secures for his people. If you are in Christ, the flood has already passed over you, judgment fell on him, not on you, and you have emerged into a new creation.

Today, ask yourself: am I in the ark? Not, do I think well of Christianity, or do I attend church, or do I believe in God in general. Am I in Christ? Have I trusted him as my refuge, my safe passage through the judgment my sin deserves? If the answer is yes, then "God remembered Noah" is a promise for you. God remembers his own. He will bring you safely through every storm, including the last one. And the world that meets you on the other side will be a renewed creation, where righteousness dwells.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he judges sin and saves sinners, and that you are among the saved.

Praise Christ as the ark who carried you through judgment.

Ask him to keep both his patience and his coming judgment real to you.

GENESIS 6:8

REST

Meditation

Genesis 6:8 is the first appearance of the word "grace" (Hebrew hen) in the Bible. The conjunction "But" is everything. The verses surrounding it describe the worst assessment of humanity in the Old Testament, "every intention of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually" (6:5). And then: BUT Noah found favor.

Notice what the verse does not say. It does not say Noah earned favor. It does not say Noah deserved favor. It says he FOUND it, and grace, by definition, is what is found, not what is achieved.

Say the verse with the conjunction loud in your mind. The "But" is the gospel's word. In a world of judgment, there is a "But." In a heart of rebellion, there is a "But." That "But" is the difference between being lost with the world and being saved by grace.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week was a pivot. You finished Unit 1 with Psalm 65, David's integrated meditation on creation and atonement, and the Unit 1 Review, anchored on Genesis 1:1. Then Unit 2 began. You met Cain, the first murderer, and heard God's warning that "sin is crouching at the door." You walked through the genealogy of Genesis 5, with the repeated phrase "and he died" broken only by Enoch, who walked with God. You met Noah in Genesis 6 and learned that grace is what is found, not earned. And you began the flood narrative in Genesis 7, watching judgment fall on a world that had refused God's patience.

The arc of the week is the arc of the gospel itself. Sin spreads. Judgment comes. But Noah, and ultimately Christ, finds favor with God, and through that one, others are preserved.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where do you see God's patience and his judgment held together in this week's readings? The first half of the week celebrated creation; the second half showed the spread of sin and the coming of judgment. Both are true at once. Where do you most need to remember God's patience this week? Where do you most need to remember his judgment?

How does Noah's grace prefigure the grace you have received in Christ? Noah did not deserve to be saved any more than the people who drowned. He found favor. Through one righteous man, his family was preserved through the flood. Through one righteous Man, you have been preserved through the judgment your sin deserved. Sit with this. What does it mean that you have found grace, not earned it?

What does it look like for you, today, to "walk with God" as Enoch did? The phrase appears only twice about individuals in the Old Testament, Enoch and Noah. Both lived in cultures sliding into wickedness. Both were marked by a different kind of life. What would it take for that to be true of you?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the grace behind every "But God" in your own story.

Ask him to help you walk humbly and gratefully this week in a world that does not walk with him.

Rest in the favor he has shown you in Christ.

DAY 22 · WEEK 4

Genesis 8:20-9:29

The Noahic covenant; common grace; the rainbow sign

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Reading · 30 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 8:20-9:29 slowly. After the floodwaters recede, Noah disembarks and builds an altar. What follows is one of the most important covenant passages in the Old Testament, the Noahic Covenant, God's pledge to preserve creation, and the rainbow as its sign. The chapter also ends on a sober note about Noah himself, reminding us that sin survived the flood.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After a year on the ark, Noah and his family emerge into a renewed world. Today's reading covers what happens immediately after the flood, Noah's first act of worship, God's resolution never again to destroy the earth by water, the establishment of the Noahic Covenant, the institution of capital punishment for murder, the renewal of the dominion mandate, and a strange final episode involving Noah's drunkenness and his sons.

The Noahic Covenant is one of the most important covenants in the Bible, but also one of the most misunderstood. It is not a covenant of salvation; it is a covenant of preservation. It is God's commitment to maintain the natural order so that the larger story of redemption can unfold. Without the Noahic Covenant, there is no stable world in which Abraham can be called, Israel can be formed, or Christ can come. This covenant is the foundation of common grace, the kindness God shows to all people, not just to his chosen people.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The first act after the flood is worship. Noah builds an altar and offers burnt offerings.
2. God "smelled the pleasing aroma" and resolved in his heart never again to curse the ground because of man. The change is in God's commitment to creation, not in humanity's heart.

3. Verse 21 candidly admits: “the intention of man’s heart is evil from his youth.” Human nature has not been reset by the flood.
4. Verse 22 establishes the rhythm of creation: “seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night, shall not cease.” The natural world will be stable.
5. 9:1 echoes Genesis 1:28: “Be fruitful and multiply and fill the earth.” Humanity is given a new beginning.
6. 9:6 grounds the prohibition of murder in the image of God: “whoever sheds the blood of man, by man shall his blood be shed, for God made man in his own image.”
7. The covenant is established with Noah AND with “every living creature”, it is universal in scope.
8. The rainbow is the sign of the covenant, a visible promise that judgment by water will not come again.
9. The chapter ends with Noah getting drunk, his nakedness exposed, and conflict among his sons, proving that human sin survived the flood.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Noahic Covenant is one of the most theologically significant moments in the Old Testament, but it is often overlooked in favor of the more familiar covenants with Abraham, Moses, and David. Yet without the Noahic Covenant, none of those later covenants could exist. This is the covenant that holds the world together so that redemption can unfold within it.

Notice first how the section begins. Noah builds an altar and offers burnt offerings. This is the first explicit act of sacrificial worship after the flood. Before God says anything about a covenant, before any blessing is given to the new humanity, Noah worships. And God responds. Verse 21 says, “When the LORD smelled the pleasing aroma, the LORD said in his heart, “I will never again curse the ground because of man.”” The atoning sacrifice is not yet what it will be in Christ, but the principle is there: worship offered in faith elicits divine favor. God responds to sacrifice with promise.

And what a promise it is. Verse 21: “Neither will I ever again strike down every living creature as I have done. While the earth remains, seedtime and harvest, cold and heat, summer and winter, day and night, shall not cease.” This is God’s commitment to stability. The natural world will continue. The seasons will turn. The earth will produce food. Day will follow night. This is what theologians call common grace, the kindness God extends to the entire created order, both the righteous and the wicked, simply by sustaining the conditions of life.

Why does this matter? Because the verdict on humanity has not changed. Verse 21 admits it plainly: "the intention of man's heart is evil from his youth." The flood did not reset human nature. Noah and his family are not better than the people who died. They are saved by grace, not by superior virtue. And yet, despite humanity's continued wickedness, God commits himself to preserving the world. Why? Because he is planning something larger. The flood was a temporary judgment that prefigured the final judgment to come. But before the final judgment can come, the story of redemption must unfold. The line of Seth must continue through Noah to Abraham. The nation of Israel must be formed. The prophets must speak. Christ must come. The gospel must spread to the nations. All of that requires a stable world, with seasons and harvests and history continuing. The Noahic Covenant is what makes that possible.

The covenant is then formally established in chapter 9. It has several distinctive features. First, it is universal. Verse 9 says God makes the covenant "with you and your offspring after you, and with every living creature that is with you", every bird, animal, and human, present and future. Unlike the covenant with Abraham, which is particular to a specific people, this covenant is for all humanity and all creation. Every person who has ever lived, regardless of nation or religion, is a beneficiary of the Noahic Covenant. The food they eat, the seasons they enjoy, the air they breathe, these are gifts of common grace under this covenant.

Second, it includes the prohibition of murder, grounded in the image of God (9:6). This is the principle of the sanctity of human life. Whoever sheds human blood must answer for it, "for God made man in his own image." The reasoning is theological, not pragmatic. Murder is not just a social crime; it is an attack on God's image. This verse will become the foundation for all just systems of human government, the right to life, the responsibility to defend life, the establishment of justice systems to address violence.

Third, the covenant has a sign: the rainbow. "I have set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be a sign of the covenant between me and the earth." Every time it rains, the rainbow is meant to remind both God and humanity of this promise. Some scholars note that the Hebrew word for "bow" is the same word used for a weapon, and that God has "hung his bow" pointing upward, as if to say his weapon of judgment has been laid down. The rainbow is God's commitment, written in the sky, that judgment by water is over.

Then comes the strange and sobering closing scene. Noah, the righteous one through whom humanity was preserved, gets drunk and lies naked in his tent. His son Ham sees him and apparently mocks him. His other sons cover him without looking. When Noah wakes, he curses Ham's son Canaan. This passage has been misused throughout church history, especially to justify slavery and racism, interpretations that have no basis in the text. The point of the episode is simpler and more painful: sin survived the flood. Even the man through whom humanity was preserved is still a sinner. Drunkenness, family dysfunction, and curses all reappear in the very first generation after the flood. The flood washed away the world's wickedness but not the wickedness in the human heart. A deeper solution will be needed.

STEP 5

Connection

Yesterday we saw the flood as judgment and the ark as preservation. Today we see the covenant that follows: God's commitment to maintain the world so that the story of redemption can unfold. The Noahic Covenant is the foundation of all common grace, every harvest, every season, every birth in every culture is a gift under this covenant. It is also the foundation on which the later covenants with Abraham, Moses, and David will be built. Without a stable world, there is no Israel, no land, no temple, no Bethlehem. And when Christ comes, he will fulfill not only the special covenants of grace but will reveal himself as the true Lord of the natural order, calming storms, multiplying food, raising the dead. The renewed creation that the Noahic Covenant points to will be fully realized in the new heavens and new earth.

STEP 6

Application

Today, recognize and respond to common grace. Every meal you eat, every breath you take, every sunrise you witness is a gift under the Noahic Covenant. God is patiently sustaining the world, including the parts of it that are still in rebellion against him, so that the gospel can reach more people, so that more sinners can be brought into the family of God. The reason your unbelieving neighbor's garden grows is the same as why yours does: God's faithfulness to the covenant he made with Noah.

This has practical implications. First, you can enjoy creation without guilt. The pleasures of food, music, beauty, friendship, work, these are gifts of common grace, given to all humanity, including you. Receive them with thanksgiving. Second, you can affirm what is good and true in the wider world without compromising your faith. When unbelievers do beautiful work, in art, science, justice, medicine, parenting, they are operating under common grace, and their work can be honored as such. Third, you can have hope for a world that often seems to be falling apart. The Noahic Covenant is still in force. God is still preserving creation. The story is not over.

And take seriously the dignity of human life. Genesis 9:6 grounds the sanctity of life in the image of God. Every human being you encounter, born and unborn, weak and strong, in your circle and outside it, bears that image. To diminish a human is to attack God's image. To honor a human is to honor God. Today, look at the people around you with this conviction. Each one is a recipient of common grace, an image-bearer of God, a person for whom Christ died. Treat them accordingly.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for a gift of common grace that you rarely notice, such as the seasons, harvests, or order in the world.

Ask him to help you honor someone you meet today as an image bearer.

Thank him that his patience gives time for the gospel to reach people.

GENESIS 9:13

DAY 23 · WEEK 4

Genesis 10:1-11:32

Table of nations; Babel and the scattering; Abram introduced

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Reading · 58 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 10:1-11:32. This is the longest single reading of Unit 2, but it moves quickly because much of it is genealogy. The two chapters fit together: chapter 10 lists the nations that descend from Noah's three sons, chapter 11 explains why the nations are scattered and speak different languages. The reading ends with the introduction of Abram, setting up the next unit.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday we saw God establish the Noahic Covenant, a promise to preserve creation despite human sin. Today's reading shows that human sin has not been reset, and the consequences continue to spread. Genesis 10-11 covers the transition from the post-flood world to the calling of Abram. It is the bridge between primeval history and patriarchal history.

These two chapters are a deliberate pair. Chapter 10 (the Table of Nations) lists seventy nations descended from Noah's sons, a panoramic view of how the post-flood world filled up. Chapter 11 then circles back to explain how that scattering happened: the tower of Babel, where humanity's pride attempted to make a name for itself and was scattered by God. The order is intentional, the result before the explanation, the consequence before the cause.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Genesis 10 lists 70 nations descended from Noah's three sons: Japheth (14), Ham (30), and Shem (26). Seventy will become a significant number throughout the Bible.
2. The list is theologically loaded, these are not just family trees but the world's nations as God sees them.

3. Babel/Babylon (in the line of Cush) is highlighted in 10:8-10. The kingdom of Nimrod begins at Babel.
4. Genesis 11:1 makes a striking claim: "the whole earth had one language and the same words." This is the situation before the scattering.
5. Humanity gathers on the plain of Shinar (the same region as Babel) and decides: "let us build ourselves a city and a tower with its top in the heavens, and let us make a name for ourselves."
6. Note the verbs: "let us build… let us make a name." Humanity attempts what only God can rightly do, establish itself and make a name.
7. God "comes down" to see the tower, language of divine condescension, perhaps with a hint of irony at humanity's tiny achievement.
8. God confuses their language so they cannot understand one another. The result is the scattering of the nations.
9. Genesis 11:10-26 is the second post-flood genealogy, narrowing from all nations down to Shem's line, all the way to Terah and Abram.
10. The reading ends with Terah's family in Haran, and Abram set up for the great call that opens the next unit.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 10 and 11 belong together as a single theological unit. They tell us how the world we live in came to be, a world of many nations, many languages, scattered across the globe, and they tell us why. The two chapters together teach us about the unity and diversity of humanity, about the perennial human temptation to self-aggrandizement, and about how God's redemptive plan narrows down to one family in preparation for the next stage of the story.

Genesis 10, sometimes called the Table of Nations, is unique in ancient literature. No other ancient civilization produced a document like it, a genealogical map of the entire known world, organized around three brothers and seventy descendants. The number seventy is significant. It will reappear in the seventy elders who go up with Moses (Exodus 24), the seventy who descend to Egypt with Jacob (Genesis 46:27), and the seventy disciples Jesus sends out in Luke 10. The implication is that God's view of "the nations" is comprehensive but not chaotic. There is order, even in a scattered world.

But Genesis 10 also contains a quiet hint of trouble. In verses 8-10, we are told that Nimrod, a descendant of Ham, became "a mighty hunter before the LORD," and that "the beginning of his kingdom was Babel, Erech, Accad, and Calneh, in the land of Shinar." Babel, and the land of Shinar, will appear again in chapter 11 as the place where humanity organizes itself against God. Nimrod is the first empire-builder in the Bible, and his domain is the same domain that will become Babylon, the great archetypal enemy of God's people throughout Scripture. The shadow is already falling.

Then chapter 11 explains how the scattering of the nations actually happened. Verse 1 sets the scene: "the whole earth had one language and the same words." This is the pre-Babel world, unified, with shared communication. Then humanity migrates to the plain of Shinar and proposes a building project. The language is striking. "Let us build ourselves a city and a tower with its top in the heavens, and let us make a name for ourselves." Three verbs in one sentence: let us build, let us make a name, lest we be dispersed. Each of these is a usurpation. Humanity is meant to be fruitful and multiply across the earth (Genesis 1:28; 9:1), but they are gathering in one place. Humanity is meant to receive a name from God (Adam was named by God; Eve was named by Adam, but in submission to God's word), but they are making a name for themselves. Humanity is meant to fill the earth, but they are trying to avoid being dispersed.

The tower itself is a profound theological symbol. A tower "with its top in the heavens" is an assault on the boundary between heaven and earth. It is an attempt to ascend to where God dwells, on humanity's own terms, by humanity's own engineering. It is the sin of Eden in architectural form, "you will be like God", repeated on a civilizational scale. And the motive is pride: "let us make a name for ourselves." The reason God's people make a name for themselves at all in Scripture is when God gives them a name. To make a name for yourself is to claim what only God can give.

God's response is gracious irony. "And the LORD came down to see the city and the tower" (verse 5). The tower whose top was in the heavens is so small that God has to come down to see it. The pride of humanity is reduced to its true scale. And then God acts. He confuses their language, and they cannot understand one another, and the project collapses. Humanity is scattered across the face of the earth, which is what they were supposed to do all along.

But the chapter does not end in judgment. Verses 10-26 narrow the focus down. From all the nations of chapter 10, we are now tracing one line, Shem's descendants. From Shem to Eber (whose name probably gives us "Hebrew"), from Eber to Peleg, all the way to Terah, who fathers Abram, Nahor, and Haran. The genealogy is selective and deliberate. The whole world has been mapped in chapter 10. The whole world has been scattered in chapter 11. And now the redemptive story is going to narrow to one man, Abram, through whom all the scattered nations of the earth will eventually be blessed.

This narrowing is not a contraction of God's purposes. It is the strategy by which his purposes will reach all the nations. God will not save the world by addressing all nations equally. He will save the world by calling one man, forming one nation, fulfilling his promises through one descendant, who will then bring blessing back to all the families of the earth. The pattern is set here in Genesis 11 and will define the rest of the biblical story.

STEP 5

Connection

Unit 2 has traced the trajectory of sin in the post-Eden, post-Fall world. Genesis 4 showed it in one family, Cain and Abel. Genesis 5 showed it as the universal experience of death across generations. Genesis 6-9 showed it overflowing into corruption, then judgment, then preserved by covenant. Today's reading shows it on a civilizational scale, humanity united in rebellion at Babel, scattered by God, and yet through it all, the line of promise is preserved. The genealogy that ends Genesis 11 sets up Unit 3 perfectly: out of the scattered nations, God will call one man, Abram. Through him, the blessing will eventually come to "all the families of the earth" (Genesis 12:3). Pentecost in Acts 2 will be the great reversal of Babel, when the gospel is preached, the languages are heard, and the nations begin to come back to God through Christ.

STEP 6

Application

The temptation of Babel is not ancient. It is contemporary. "Let us build ourselves a city... and make a name for ourselves." Humans still want to make a name for themselves. Still want to ascend to heaven on their own terms. Still want to gather in unified rebellion against the boundaries God has established. The names of the projects change. The technologies change. The slogans change. But the impulse is the same.

Examine your own ambitions today. What names are you trying to make for yourself? In your career, your relationships, your social presence, your accomplishments, where are you trying to ascend to a place where you can stand without need of God? The Christian life is not about achieving namelessness; it is about receiving the name God gives. Abram becomes Abraham. Jacob becomes Israel. Simon becomes Peter. Saul becomes Paul. And every believer is given the name of Christ. The name you are seeking is already being offered, freely. Let go of the tower.

There is also a positive application. The scattering of Babel was a judgment, but it was also a strategy. By dispersing humanity, God set up the long story by which the gospel would one day reach every nation. At Pentecost, the curse of Babel was beginning to be reversed, people from every nation under heaven heard the gospel in their own language. The Great Commission picks up where Babel left off: go to all the nations, baptize them, teach them. The diversity of the nations is not a problem to be undone; it is a stage on which the glory of God's redemption can be displayed.

If you are part of a church today, you are part of the answer to Babel. The blood of Christ has begun to do what scattered languages could never undo, bring people together not into a single tower of pride but into a single body of grace. Pray for the gospel to keep doing this. And live in the awareness that your role, however small it feels, is part of the great reversal that began at Pentecost and will be consummated when the nations gather around the throne of the Lamb.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess any tower you have been building to make a name for yourself.
- Ask him to help you rest in the name he gives you in Christ.
- Pray for people from nations and languages that are not yours, that they would be gathered in.

GENESIS 9:13

DAY 24 · WEEK 4

Psalm 36:5-12

Steadfast love reaches to the heavens, common grace celebrated

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 36:5-12 slowly, twice. This is the second half of Psalm 36, the first half describes the wicked, the second half praises God's steadfast love. Today's portion is the praise section. Read it as the appropriate response to all we have seen in Genesis 4-11: in a world of human wickedness, God's love reaches to the heavens.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

We have just spent six days walking through the bleakest portion of the early Bible, Cain's murder of Abel, the universal spread of death in Genesis 5, the corruption of all flesh in Genesis 6, the flood, the post-flood failure of Noah, and finally the pride of Babel. The human story so far has not been encouraging. We have seen humanity in rebellion at every scale: individual, family, civilization, world.

Today's psalm reminds us that the bleakness of human sin is not the last word. God's steadfast love is bigger. His faithfulness reaches to the clouds. His righteousness is like the mountains. His justice is like the great deep. In a world of Cains and Lamechs and Babels, God's love runs deeper than human evil ever can.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 5: "Your steadfast love, O LORD, extends to the heavens, your faithfulness to the clouds." The vertical scale of God's love matches the vertical attempts at Babel, but God truly reaches the heavens.
2. Verse 6: God's righteousness is "like the mountains of God," his judgments "like the great deep." The natural world is the measure of his moral attributes.

3. Verse 6 ends with a beautiful inclusion: “man and beast you save, O LORD.” Common grace is in view, God’s care extends to all creatures.
4. Verse 7: “How precious is your steadfast love, O God! The children of mankind take refuge in the shadow of your wings.” Image of a mother bird sheltering her young.
5. Verses 8-9 use feast and water imagery: “they feast on the abundance of your house… For with you is the fountain of life; in your light do we see light.”
6. Verse 9 contains one of the most theologically rich lines in the Psalms: “in your light do we see light.” Knowledge of God comes through God himself.
7. The psalm closes with a prayer that God will preserve his people from the wicked and ensure the downfall of evildoers, fitting after the chapters we just read.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 36:5-12 is one of the most expansive descriptions of God’s love in the entire Psalter. After the first half of the psalm describes the wicked, those who flatter themselves, who plot evil on their beds, who do not reject what is evil, the second half lifts our eyes upward to behold something greater than human wickedness: the steadfast love of God himself.

Notice the vertical movement of verse 5: “Your steadfast love, O LORD, extends to the heavens, your faithfulness to the clouds.” Right after we have just read about humanity building a tower whose “top is in the heavens” (Genesis 11:4), this psalm announces that God’s love is what actually reaches the heavens. The Babel-builders tried to make their name reach to the clouds. They failed. But God’s faithfulness already reaches there. The human pride that tried to bridge heaven and earth from below is unnecessary, because God’s love has already bridged it from above.

The next image is equally striking. “Your righteousness is like the mountains of God, your judgments are like the great deep.” God’s character is given the scale of creation itself. His righteousness is mountainous, solid, immovable, towering. His judgments are deep, beyond human plumbing, profound, unsearchable. We do not measure God’s morality by our own intuitions. We measure our intuitions by his unchanging character. And both of these, the heights of his love and the depths of his judgments, are realities we can stake our lives on.

Then verse 6 ends with a sentence that lands with extra weight after the readings of Unit 2: “Man and beast you save, O LORD.” Save. The Hebrew word is yasha, the same root from which we get the name Yeshua, Jesus. God saves not only humans but animals. He cares for all his creatures. After the flood narrative, where animals were taken into the ark, after the Noahic Covenant which explicitly includes “every living creature”, this verse rings with theological weight. God’s saving care extends across all his creation.

Verse 7 introduces one of the most tender images in the Psalter. “How precious is your steadfast love, O God! The children of mankind take refuge in the shadow of your wings.” This is the image of a mother bird sheltering her chicks under her outstretched wings. Jesus will use this very image later in his lament over Jerusalem (Matthew 23:37): “How often would I have gathered your children together as a hen gathers her brood under her wings, and you would not!” The God of Psalm 36 is the God of Christ, the one who longs to gather his people under his protection.

Then comes a feast. Verse 8: “They feast on the abundance of your house, and you give them drink from the river of your delights.” This is hospitality. God does not merely tolerate his people; he feeds them lavishly. The “river of your delights” (Hebrew Eden, the very word!) recalls the garden of Eden and its rivers of life. What was lost in the Fall is offered again to those who take refuge in God. The original garden has not been forgotten; it is being recovered for those who come to him.

Then verse 9 lands as one of the most theologically dense lines in all of Scripture: “For with you is the fountain of life; in your light do we see light.” Both parts of this verse contain entire theologies. Life itself flows from God, he is the fountain, the source, the spring. Apart from him, there is no life. And we see light only by his light. Knowledge of God is not human achievement; it is divine self-revelation. We do not climb up to see God; he shines down so that we can see him. This is the doctrine of revelation in eight words.

The psalm closes with a prayer that God will continue his steadfast love to those who know him, and that the wicked will not have the final word. This is exactly the right prayer after Unit 2. We have seen the wicked, Cain, the world before the flood, the Babel-builders. We have seen God’s patience and grace. And now we pray, with the psalmist, that God’s steadfast love will continue, and that the trajectory of the wicked will end in judgment, while the trajectory of those who know God will end in light.

Connection

Six days ago we read about Cain, whose anger was not ruled. Today’s psalm describes those who “have no fear of God before their eyes” (the first half of Psalm 36, not in our reading), Cain’s spiritual descendants. But after the description of wickedness comes the description of God’s love, and it is overwhelming. After all we have read in Unit 2, the spread of sin, the flood, Babel, this psalm is the appropriate worship. Yes, the world is full of human wickedness. But God’s love reaches to the heavens. His faithfulness to the clouds. His righteousness like mountains. His judgments like the great deep. The God of common grace, who preserves creation under the Noahic Covenant, is the God whose love is bigger than every evil we have witnessed.

STEP 6

Application

The psalmist's response to wickedness is not despair, and not vengeance. It is to lift his eyes to the steadfast love of God. This is a learnable habit. When you read the news, when you face conflict in relationships, when you see injustice that grieves you, you have a choice. You can let your soul shrink down to the size of the wickedness in front of you, or you can lift your eyes to the love of God that reaches to the heavens. The wicked are real. So is God's steadfast love. Choose which one you will let define your day.

Practically, take verse 9 with you today. "In your light do we see light." We do not see clearly by our own effort. We see by God's light. This applies to almost every dimension of the Christian life. We do not understand Scripture by our own intelligence; we understand it by the illumination of the Spirit. We do not pray well by our own ability; we pray well by the Spirit who teaches us to cry "Abba, Father." We do not love well by our own willpower; we love well by the love of God poured into our hearts. The light is his, given to us. Receive it.

And consider the image of taking refuge in the shadow of God's wings. In a world where everything feels exposed, where reputations can be destroyed by a single tweet, where lives can be unraveled by a single accident, God offers shadow. Hiddenness. Protection. The Christian is not asked to be impressive in the world's eyes. The Christian is invited to be hidden under God's wings, fed at his table, given to drink from his river. This is your inheritance in Christ. Today, claim it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God for steadfast love that is bigger than the wickedness you see, including your own.

Ask him to hide you in the shadow of his wings today.

Pray that in his light you would see yourself, the world, and Christ more truly.

DAY 25 · WEEK 4

Psalm 33:10-22

The LORD frustrates the plans of nations, sovereign over Babel

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Psalm · 13 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 33:10-22 slowly, twice. This is the second half of Psalm 33, earlier in this plan we read verses 1-9, which praised God for creation. Today's portion turns to God's sovereignty over the nations and his particular care for his people. It is the perfect Psalm after the scattering of Babel.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Two days ago we read the tower of Babel, humanity united in pride against God, scattered in confusion. Today's psalm gives us the divine perspective on the affairs of nations. From God's vantage point, the schemes of humans are nothing. The plans of kings come to nothing apart from his will. And yet, the God who frustrates the proud also watches faithfully over those who fear him. This psalm is the right meditation after the events of Genesis 11.

We read Psalm 33:1-9 on an earlier day in this plan. That section celebrated creation by God's word. Today's half completes the meditation by showing that the same God who created by his word governs history by his sovereignty.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 10: "The LORD brings the counsel of the nations to nothing; he frustrates the plans of the peoples." Babel is exactly this, counsel of nations brought to nothing.
2. Verse 11: "The counsel of the LORD stands forever, the plans of his heart to all generations." Contrast, human plans fail, God's plans endure.
3. Verse 12: "Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD, the people whom he has chosen as his heritage!" Election language, God chooses a people.

4. Verses 13-15: God looks down from heaven and sees ALL the children of man. He fashions their hearts. He observes their deeds.
5. Verses 16-17: “The king is not saved by his great army… the war horse is a false hope.” Military power is unreliable apart from God.
6. Verse 18: “Behold, the eye of the LORD is on those who fear him, on those who hope in his steadfast love.” His attention is fixed on his people.
7. Verse 19: God delivers from death and keeps alive in famine. Common life-preservation under the Noahic Covenant.
8. Verses 20-22 close in waiting: “Our soul waits for the LORD; he is our help and our shield.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 33:10-22 picks up where the first half left off. Verses 1-9 praised God for creating by his word. Now the focus shifts to God’s sovereign rule over history, and to his particular care for the people who fear him.

Verse 10 lands with extra weight after our reading of Genesis 11. “The LORD brings the counsel of the nations to nothing; he frustrates the plans of the peoples.” Babel is the paradigm example of this verse in action. Humanity united in counsel, “let us build a tower”, and God brought the counsel to nothing in a single act of language-confusion. The verse is not nostalgic about Babel; it is descriptive of God’s ongoing sovereignty. Every empire that has ever risen against God has eventually come to nothing. Babylon. Assyria. Persia. Rome. Every modern attempt to construct human autonomy apart from God ends in the same way, sooner or later, in confusion and scattering.

But the verse is followed immediately by its inverse. Verse 11: “The counsel of the LORD stands forever, the plans of his heart to all generations.” The same sovereignty that frustrates human plans establishes God’s plans. History is not a contest between God’s purposes and humanity’s purposes that might go either way. God’s plans are unshakeable. They will endure when every empire has fallen. This is not a depressing verse for the believer; it is the most hope-filled verse imaginable. The plans of God’s heart, including his plan to redeem you, to keep you, to bring you safely home, will stand forever.

Verse 12 then makes a particular claim: “Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD, the people whom he has chosen as his heritage!” In Old Testament context, this referred primarily to Israel. But in the New Testament, the apostle Peter applies this language to the church: “you are a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for his own possession” (1 Peter 2:9). The church is now the people whom God has chosen as his heritage. The blessing of verse 12 belongs to every believer who is in Christ.

Verses 13-15 give us the vantage point of the King of heaven. “The LORD looks down from heaven; he sees all the children of man; from where he sits enthroned he looks out on all the inhabitants of the earth.” Nothing escapes his gaze. Babel’s tower was not impressive to him; the present rebellions of contemporary humanity are not impressive to him either. From his throne, he sees everything, knows everything, fashions every heart, observes every deed. This is sobering for the wicked. It is comforting for the faithful. You are seen. By the God who matters.

Then verses 16-17 deliver one of the great political theology passages of the Psalter. “The king is not saved by his great army; a warrior is not delivered by his great strength. The war horse is a false hope for salvation, and by its great might it cannot rescue.” This is a stunning claim in the ancient Near East. Every nation around Israel boasted in its military strength. Israel was tiny by comparison. And the psalmist says, plainly: military might does not save. Armies are not the deciding factor. War horses are not the source of victory. The Lord is. Whatever strength a king or nation has is temporary, contingent, and ultimately useless against the will of God.

Then verse 18 brings us to the warm center of the psalm. “Behold, the eye of the LORD is on those who fear him, on those who hope in his steadfast love.” The same God whose eye sweeps over the whole earth has his eye fixed in particular on those who fear him. His attention is not divided thinly across humanity. It is concentrated on his people. Those who fear him, who hope in his steadfast love, they are watched, kept, loved with focused attention.

And what does God do for them? Verse 19: “that he may deliver their soul from death and keep them alive in famine.” This is the Noahic Covenant language at the personal level. God preserves life. He delivers from death. He keeps his people alive through times when others perish. This is true at the temporal level (sometimes God protects believers from physical disasters), and it is supremely true at the spiritual level (the eternal life he gives in Christ delivers from the second death and keeps the believer alive forever).

The psalm closes with a posture of waiting. “Our soul waits for the LORD; he is our help and our shield. For our heart is glad in him, because we trust in his holy name. Let your steadfast love, O LORD, be upon us, even as we hope in you.” The Christian life is, in large part, a posture of waiting, waiting for promises to be fulfilled, for prayers to be answered, for the final consummation of all things. But it is not anxious waiting. It is glad waiting, trusting waiting, hoping waiting. We wait because we know whom we are waiting for.

Connection

Today's psalm is the divine perspective on yesterday's reading. Where Genesis 11 showed us Babel from the ground, humans plotting, building, getting scattered, Psalm 33 shows us Babel from heaven. God sees the counsel of the nations and brings it to nothing. His own counsel stands forever. And while he scatters the proud, his eye remains on those who fear him. The psalm anticipates everything Unit 3 will develop. God is about to bring the counsel of his heart to bear in human history by calling one man, Abram. From Abram will come Israel, the "nation whose God is the LORD" (verse 12), the heritage God has chosen. And from Israel will come Christ, in whom the chosen heritage now includes every nation that believes.

STEP 6

Application

Live today in the light of God's sovereignty. Two specific applications follow.

First, do not be intimidated by what the world calls power. The psalm is candid: the king is not saved by his great army. The war horse is a false hope. The political powers that loom over your news feed, the cultural forces that seem unstoppable, the corporate behemoths that shape your daily life, none of them is ultimate. God brings the counsel of the nations to nothing. He does it on his own timeline, often invisibly, but he does it. Live as someone who knows this. Do not give your fear to anything that God can dismantle with a thought.

Second, take the comfort of verse 18 into your day. "The eye of the LORD is on those who fear him." If you fear God, if you love him, trust him, follow him, then his eye is on you in particular. Not as a generalized providence that covers everyone equally, but as the focused attention of a Father who has chosen you as his heritage. You are seen. You are watched over. You are not lost in the crowd of humanity. Whatever you are facing today, the eye of the LORD is on you.

And take the posture of verses 20-22. Wait. Trust. Hope. Receive God's steadfast love. The Christian life is not a sprint to fix everything that is wrong. It is a long walk of waiting on the LORD who is your help and your shield. Be glad in him today. Trust his holy name. Let his steadfast love be upon you, even as you hope in him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what feels out of control in your life or the world right now.

Thank him that nothing escapes his sight and nothing thwarts his purposes.

Ask him for a soul that waits for him.

DAY 26 · WEEK 4

Psalm 9

I will give thanks; God judges the world in righteousness

Year 1 · Unit 2 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 9 slowly, twice. This is a longer Psalm, twenty verses, but it moves quickly. As you read, notice how the Psalm alternates between thanksgiving for God's past faithfulness and prayer about God's future judgment. It is a fitting Psalm to close out the meditations of Unit 2.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

We are at the end of Unit 2. We have walked through the spread of sin in the post-flood world, the catastrophe of the flood itself, the Noahic Covenant of preservation, and the pride and scattering of Babel. Throughout, we have seen a particular pattern: human evil is real, judgment is real, but God's faithfulness to preserve his people and his world is also real. Today's psalm gathers up many of these threads in worship.

Psalm 9 is attributed to David, sung "to the tune of Muth-labben," the meaning of which is uncertain. The psalm celebrates God's righteous judgment of the nations and his vindication of the oppressed. It is the perfect Old Testament prayer for those who have just been reading about humanity in rebellion.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with whole-hearted thanksgiving: "I will give thanks to the LORD with my whole heart; I will recount all of your wonderful deeds."
2. Verses 4-6 describe past acts of divine judgment: God has rebuked the nations, the wicked have perished, their cities have been overthrown.
3. Verse 7 is theological: "The LORD sits enthroned forever; he has established his throne for justice." Justice is built into the throne itself.

4. Verse 8: “He judges the world with righteousness; he judges the peoples with uprightness.” Universal scope, all nations, with perfect justice.
5. Verse 9: “The LORD is a stronghold for the oppressed, a stronghold in times of trouble.” Justice for the wicked is mercy for the oppressed.
6. Verse 10: “Those who know your name put their trust in you, for you, O LORD, have not forsaken those who seek you.” Knowing God’s name leads to trust.
7. Verses 11-12 are about declaring God’s deeds to the nations, taking the message outward.
8. Verses 15-16: The wicked are caught in the nets they set for others. Justice is poetic, sin returns on itself.
9. Verse 17: “The wicked shall return to Sheol, all the nations that forget God.” Forgetting God has eschatological consequences.
10. Verse 18 is the great hinge: “For the needy shall not always be forgotten, and the hope of the poor shall not perish forever.”
11. The psalm closes with a prayer for God to arise and judge, “Let the nations know that they are but men.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 9 is a song about the justice of God, sung by someone who has seen enough of human wickedness to want it. It is honest about evil and confident about God’s response. It is exactly the right psalm after Unit 2.

The psalm opens with thanksgiving, but notice what David is thankful for. He is thankful for God’s “wonderful deeds.” And as you read on, those wonderful deeds include God’s acts of judgment against the wicked. This sets a tone that may feel strange to modern ears. We tend to be uncomfortable with celebrating divine judgment. But the psalmist is not uncomfortable. To him, God’s judgment of the wicked is something worth singing about, because it means the oppressed are vindicated, the world is being put right, and the king of justice is on his throne.

Verse 7 captures the heart of the psalm’s theology: “The LORD sits enthroned forever; he has established his throne for justice.” Justice is not a peripheral concern for God. It is built into the foundation of his kingship. He does not occasionally judge; he reigns from a throne whose central purpose is judgment. And the next verse expands the scope: “He judges the world with righteousness; he judges the peoples with uprightness.” This is universal. Every nation. Every person. All judged by God’s perfect standard, in his perfect time.

But here is where the psalm reframes everything. The judgment of the wicked is the salvation of the oppressed. Verse 9: "The LORD is a stronghold for the oppressed, a stronghold in times of trouble." The same God who is terrifying to the proud is a refuge for the broken. The same justice that frightens the comfortable is good news for the abused, the forgotten, the powerless. If you are tempted to wish God were less just, ask yourself what you are wishing for. A God who does not judge is a God who does not care about the oppressed. A God who never punishes is a God who never vindicates. The justice of God is the hope of the poor.

Verse 10 introduces a tender phrase: "Those who know your name put their trust in you." Knowing God's name is biblical shorthand for knowing God personally. To know his name is to know who he really is, his character, his promises, his commitments. And to know him is to trust him. People do not trust strangers. They trust people they know. The reason some people do not trust God is that they do not yet know him. The reason believers can trust him even in dark times is that they have come to know his name.

Then comes the great social vision of the psalm in verses 11-12 and 16-18. The God who judges remembers the blood of the oppressed. He does not forget the cry of the afflicted. The needy will not always be forgotten. The hope of the poor will not perish forever. These verses are the seedbed of the entire prophetic tradition in the Old Testament, where the prophets thunder against injustice on God's behalf. They are also the foundation of the church's commitment to the poor and the oppressed. The God we worship is the God who hears the cry of the needy.

There is also a fascinating image of poetic justice in verses 15-16. "The nations have sunk in the pit that they made; in the net that they hid, their own foot has been caught. The LORD has made himself known; he has executed judgment; the wicked are snared in the work of their own hands." Evil has a way of consuming those who practice it. The traps set for others entangle their setters. The systems built to oppress eventually collapse on those who built them. This is not karma in an impersonal sense; it is the moral grain of the universe set by God. Sin destroys those who indulge it. The wicked are not so much punished by God as left to be destroyed by their own choices.

The psalm closes with a prayer: "Arise, O LORD! Let not man prevail; let the nations be judged before you! Put them in fear, O LORD! Let the nations know that they are but men!" This is a strong prayer, and it should feel strong in our mouths. It is a prayer for God to be God, for him to step in, judge the nations, and remind them of their creatureliness. After reading about Babel, this prayer feels exactly right. The nations have forgotten that they are but men. We pray that God will remind them.

STEP 5

Connection

Unit 2 has shown us human sin at every scale, individual (Cain), familial (Noah's drunkenness), civilizational (Babel). Psalm 9 is the appropriate prayer in response. We have seen the wicked, and we cry out for justice. We have seen God's preservation through covenant, and we give thanks. We have seen the oppressed of every era, those crushed by Lamechs and Nimrods, and we trust that God will not forget them. The psalm anticipates everything Unit 3 will develop: God arises, the nations are judged, and one man (Abram) is called to be the beginning of God's plan to bless the very nations that have rebelled against him.

STEP 6

Application

Today, let this Psalm shape three things in you.

First, your view of God's justice. Many modern Christians have unconsciously absorbed the idea that God's judgment is embarrassing or harsh, something to apologize for. The psalmist shows us a different posture. Divine justice is something to thank God for. It is the foundation of his throne. It is the hope of the oppressed. If you struggle with the doctrine of God's wrath, read this Psalm and ask why the people of God have sung it joyfully for three thousand years. The answer is that they knew what we sometimes forget: justice is mercy when it is directed at oppression.

Second, your view of God's care for the oppressed. The God of Psalm 9 hears the cry of the afflicted. He does not forget the blood of the oppressed. The needy shall not always be forgotten. This commits the believer to active concern for those who suffer in this world. If God remembers the oppressed, his people cannot pretend not to see them. Today, ask yourself: who in your life is being forgotten? In your church, your neighborhood, your city, your family? The God you worship sees them. Let your eyes see them too.

Third, your view of your own situation. If you are facing injustice today, at work, in your family, in your community, Psalm 9 is your prayer. The LORD is a stronghold for the oppressed. He has not forsaken those who seek him. The traps set for you will, in God's time, fall on the heads of those who set them. You do not have to retaliate, because justice is not your job. Justice is God's throne. Trust him. Wait for him. Sing his praise. And know that the same God who judged Babel will, in his time, vindicate every faithful sufferer.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give thanks to God with your whole heart, naming something he has done.

Ask him to help you trust him more fully as you know him better.

Pray for someone who is poor or oppressed, and ask what he might have you do.

Unit Verse

> GENESIS 6:8

REST

Meditation

Today there is no new reading. Today is for review and reflection on what you have learned in Unit 2.

Begin by memorizing the verse above if you have not already. Genesis 6:8 is the hinge of the entire Noah narrative. Surrounding this single sentence is the bleakest assessment of humanity in the Old Testament (verse 5: "every intention of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually") and the announcement of the coming flood (verse 7). But in the middle of judgment, this one verse stands out: "But Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD."

This is the first occurrence of the Hebrew word hen, favor, or grace, in the Bible. Everything that the New Testament will say about salvation by grace is anticipated here. Noah did not earn favor. He did not negotiate for favor. He found it. Grace, by definition, is what is found, not what is achieved.

Say this verse aloud several times today. Notice the conjunction: "But Noah found favor." That "but" is everything. In a world of judgment, there is a "but." In a heart of rebellion, there is a "but." That "but" is the difference between being lost with the world and being preserved by grace. The same "but" applies to every believer in Christ, in a world that is, in the language of Romans 1, under the wrath of God, there is a "but" for those who have found favor through faith in Jesus. "But God, being rich in mercy…" (Ephesians 2:4). The story of salvation always turns on that small word.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 2 you have traveled through Genesis 4 to 11, the early chapters of humanity after the Fall. The unit began with Cain's murder of Abel, the first violence in human history, and the warning that "sin is crouching at the door." It then moved through the genealogy of Adam to Noah, where ten generations were punctuated by the repeated phrase "and he died", except for Enoch, who walked with God and was not. The pre-flood corruption of humanity was so total that God resolved to start over, but Noah found favor.

The flood narrative was one of the longer readings of the unit: judgment by water, the ark as a microcosm of creation, the de-creation and re-creation of the world, the great hinge of "God remembered Noah." Then came the Noahic Covenant, God's pledge to preserve creation, including "man and beast," under the sign of the rainbow. This is the foundation of common grace.

The unit's final reading was Genesis 10-11: the Table of Nations showing how the post-flood world filled up, and the tower of Babel showing how quickly human pride re-asserted itself. Humanity tried to make a name for itself; God scattered them. But the chapter ended with the line of Shem narrowing down to Terah and Abram, setting up Unit 3.

The Psalms then taught us how to respond to all of this. Psalm 36 lifted our eyes to God's steadfast love that reaches to the heavens, bigger than every wickedness we had witnessed. Psalm 33 reminded us that God brings the counsel of the nations to nothing while his own counsel stands forever. And Psalm 9 sang the justice of God who hears the cry of the oppressed and reigns from a throne of judgment.

The big theological lessons of this unit are these: Sin spreads from generation to generation, but the line of promise is preserved. Judgment is real and is sometimes severe, but it is always paired with mercy for the faithful. The Noahic Covenant is God's commitment to maintain the world as a stage on which redemption can unfold. Common grace touches every life and every culture, regardless of belief. And underneath every story of rebellion, God is patiently moving toward Abram, through whom blessing will eventually come to all the families of the earth.

REFLECT

Review Questions

How does the story of Cain and Abel show the nature and spread of sin?

Revisit Genesis 4. Sin is shown crouching at the door, an active force seeking to consume. Cain refuses to rule over it, and the result is the first murder. Notice how quickly sin escalates: by Lamech (verses 23-24), the cycle of vengeance has multiplied seventy-sevenfold. Sin is not just an individual failure; it is a multiplying force that ruptures families, communities, and generations. Write a few sentences in your own words about what Genesis 4 teaches you about how sin works.

What is the Noahic covenant, and who does it include?

Read Genesis 9:8-17 again. The Noahic Covenant is God's promise never again to destroy the earth by flood. Notice its scope: it is made with Noah and his descendants, but also with "every living creature" on the earth. This is the most universal of God's covenants. It is also the foundation of common grace, every harvest, every season, every birth in every culture is a gift under this covenant. What does it tell you about God that he extends this covenant to all of creation, even to people who do not believe in him?

What does the tower of Babel reveal about human nature and God's purposes?

Look at Genesis 11:1-9. Humans gathered together to "make a name for ourselves" and to build a tower "with its top in the heavens." Three sins converge in this story: pride (making a name), idolatry (replacing God's name with their own), and disobedience (gathering rather than filling the earth). God's response, confusion of language and scattering, is judgment, but also redemption strategy. Through scattering, God sets up the long story by which the gospel will eventually reach every nation. The reversal begins at Pentecost. How does this shape the way you see the world today?

How does common grace differ from saving grace?

Common grace is the kindness God extends to all humanity, regardless of belief, the rain that falls on the just and the unjust, the harvests, the seasons, the beauty in human cultures, the goodness in human relationships. It is grounded in the Noahic Covenant. Saving grace is the particular grace by which God redeems his elect through Christ, the grace by which Noah found favor in God's eyes, and by which every believer is brought into the family of God. Both are gifts. Both are unearned. But common grace preserves the world; saving grace transforms hearts. Sit with the distinction. How does understanding the difference help you appreciate both the beauty in the unbelieving world and the particular wonder of your own salvation?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for his patience with the world and with you, in your own words.

Thank him for the line of promise that leads to Christ.

Memory Verse for the Week

"I have set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be a sign of the covenant between me and the earth."

GENESIS 9:13

REST

Meditation

The rainbow is the sign of the Noahic Covenant, God's promise never to destroy the earth by flood again. In the ancient Near East, a bow was a weapon. Here, God hangs his bow in the sky with the string pointing AWAY from the earth, as if to say: my weapon of judgment has been laid down.

Every rainbow you have ever seen is a reminder of this covenant, and a promise that God's judgment is not the last word for his world. The covenant is universal in scope, made with "every living creature" on earth. Every harvest, every sunrise, every breath taken on this planet is a gift under this covenant.

Carry this verse with you this week. The next time you see a rainbow, say it. The next time it rains, remember the bow that hangs above the storm. By next week, the verse should be yours.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

The week centered on the Noahic Covenant. You read Genesis 8:20-9:29, Noah's first sacrifice after the flood, God's resolve never to curse the ground again, the institution of the rainbow as covenant sign. You read Genesis 10-11, the Table of Nations and the tower of Babel, humanity's pride scattered into the diverse peoples that the gospel would one day gather. You worshiped through Psalm 36 (God's steadfast love), Psalm 33:10-22 (God's sovereignty over nations), and Psalm 9 (the justice of God who hears the cry of the oppressed). And yesterday you completed the Unit 2 review, with Genesis 6:8 as the anchor, Noah found favor in the eyes of the LORD.

The week's theme is the foundation of common grace. Every harvest, every birth in every culture, every flicker of beauty in a fallen world, all of it operates under the Noahic Covenant. God preserves the world he made, so that redemption can unfold within it.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where in your life have you been taking common grace for granted? The Noahic Covenant is the foundation of every meal you eat, every season you enjoy, every breath you draw. These are gifts, not entitlements. Name one specific gift of common grace today, and receive it as such.

How does the Noahic Covenant point you to Christ? God's commitment to preserve the world after the flood was not the end of the story, it was the structural promise that held creation together so that the deeper covenant in Christ could come. The rainbow promises that God's judgment is not final; the cross proves it. Where do you most need the assurance today that judgment is not the final word for those in Christ?

How does the tower of Babel reshape how you see today's news? Humanity still gathers in pride. Humanity still tries to ascend to heaven on its own terms. Humanity still gets scattered. Where in your own life or your culture do you see Babel patterns? Where do you see Pentecost answers?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

The call of Abram; the covenant promise; election and blessing

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 31 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 12:1-13:18 slowly. This is one of the most important moments in the Bible, the call of Abram, which sets in motion the entire story of redemption. Notice what God promises, what Abram does, and how Abram's faith is mingled with very real failure.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Unit 2 ended at the scattering of Babel and narrowed to one man, Abram. Today the story shifts decisively. From here forward, the Bible focuses on one family through whom God will bring blessing to all the families of the earth. This is the great narrowing that becomes the great expanding. Abram is called out of Ur, away from his land and kindred, to a place he does not know. The promise he receives is unconditional: God will make him a great nation, bless him, and bless all nations through him. Everything in the rest of the Bible, Israel, Christ, the church, flows from this call.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God's call comes with three commands ("go") and seven promises, land, nation, blessing, great name, blessing to others, cursing of enemies, blessing of all families.
2. Abram is 75 years old and childless when he is called. The promise of a great nation requires faith from the start.
3. Verse 4: "So Abram went, as the LORD had told him." Obedience is immediate, without discussion.
4. Abram builds altars at Shechem and Bethel, claiming the land for the LORD by worship before he possesses it.

5. Famine drives Abram to Egypt, where he lies about Sarai being his sister. The chosen patriarch fails morally almost immediately.
6. Pharaoh, not Abram, ends up rebuking him. God protects the promise even when Abram does not.
7. Genesis 13: Lot and Abram separate. Abram gives Lot first choice of land, generosity flowing from trust in God's promise.
8. After Lot leaves, God reiterates and expands the promise: "all the land that you see I will give to you and to your offspring forever."

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 12 is where the story of redemption truly begins. The first eleven chapters of Genesis are sometimes called the prologue, creation, fall, flood, and Babel. From Genesis 12 onward, the Bible follows one family through whom God will reverse the curse of Babel and bring blessing to all the scattered nations.

Notice the structure of the call. God says three things to Abram: go from your country, go from your kindred, go from your father's house. Each command requires more sacrifice than the last. Country is general; kindred is closer; father's house is closest. God strips away every layer of identity Abram has built, geography, ethnicity, family, and asks him to find his identity in God alone. This is what every call of God involves at some level. Discipleship means letting God redefine who you are.

In exchange, God makes seven promises. He will make Abram a great nation, bless him, make his name great, make him a blessing, bless those who bless him, curse those who dishonor him, and bless all the families of the earth in him. Seven is the number of completeness. This is not a partial promise; it is a full, comprehensive commitment. And it is given to a 75-year-old man with a barren wife. From a human standpoint, every promise is impossible.

But Abram goes. Verse 4 is breathtaking in its brevity: "So Abram went, as the LORD had told him." No negotiation. No clarifying questions. He goes. This is what the New Testament will later call the obedience that comes from faith. Abram does not have full understanding. He has a promise from God, and that is enough.

Yet the chapter is honest about Abram's failure. As soon as famine strikes, he goes to Egypt, and there he lies about Sarai. He calls her his sister so that the Egyptians will not kill him to take her. The chosen patriarch protects himself by endangering his wife. God has just promised to bless him and curse those who curse him, and Abram does not trust the promise enough to tell the truth. The result is that Pharaoh rebukes Abram. The pagan king has more integrity in this moment than the called patriarch. This is one of the Bible's repeated patterns: God's chosen people are real people with real failures, and the promise of God succeeds despite them, not because of them.

Then in chapter 13, after returning to Canaan, conflict arises between Abram's herdsmen and Lot's. Abram offers Lot first choice of land. Lot chooses the well-watered Jordan plain near Sodom. Abram is left with the hill country. But notice, after Lot leaves, God speaks again to Abram and expands the promise. "Lift up your eyes and look… for all the land that you see I will give to you and to your offspring forever." Abram lets go of his rights and God gives him more than he could have grasped for himself. This will be a pattern throughout the patriarchal narratives. Those who trust God do not need to defend their own interests; God defends them.

STEP 5

Connection

The scattering of Babel ended Unit 2 with humanity in pieces, alienated from God and from one another. Today's reading begins the answer. God will reunite the nations not by undoing the scattering but by working through one chosen family. The blessing promised to Abram in verse 3, "in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed", is the New Testament's gospel in seed form (Galatians 3:8). Every promise made to Abram is eventually fulfilled in Christ, who is the offspring through whom all nations are blessed.

STEP 6

Application

The call of Abram is the pattern for every Christian life. God calls. We go. We trust in promises we cannot fully see. We fail along the way, and God's promise stands anyway. Today, ask yourself: what is God asking you to leave behind? What identity, what comfort, what security has he asked you to release in order to find your life in him alone? And what promise has he given you that you are tempted not to trust? Faith is not the absence of fear or even of failure. It is going when God says go, building altars of worship along the way, and trusting that the same God who called you will keep his word.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what "going" might look like for you, and what makes it hard to trust him with it.

Confess any time you have schemed to protect yourself instead of trusting his promise.

Ask him to make you a person who builds altars of worship wherever he leads.

Genesis 14:1-24

Abram rescues Lot; Melchizedek, priest and king, bread and wine

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 24 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 14:1-24 slowly. This chapter contains a battle scene, a rescue, and one of the most theologically loaded encounters in the Old Testament: Abram's meeting with Melchizedek, a priest-king who blesses him with bread and wine. The chapter is short, but pay close attention, Hebrews 7 will treat this as a key Christological text.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday Abram and Lot separated. Lot chose the lush Jordan plain near Sodom, the region of cities we will hear about throughout the rest of Genesis. Today's chapter shows the danger of Lot's choice and the courage of Abram. Four kings from the east invade the area, defeat the kings of the cities of the plain, and carry off the spoils, including Lot. Abram, with only 318 trained men, pursues, defeats the invaders, and rescues Lot. On his return, he is met by two very different kings: the king of Sodom, who tries to negotiate with him, and Melchizedek, the mysterious king of Salem, who blesses him. The contrast between these two encounters is the heart of the chapter.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 13 calls Abram a "Hebrew" for the first time in Scripture, the term means "one who crosses over" and may relate to Abram's journey from Mesopotamia.
2. Abram has 318 trained men "born in his house." His household is large enough to constitute a small army.
3. He pursues the four kings as far as Dan in the north, over a hundred miles, and defeats them in a surprise night attack.

4. Melchizedek appears in only three verses (18-20), with no genealogy, no introduction, no follow-up, and never appears again in Genesis.
5. His name means “king of righteousness.” Salem (an early name for Jerusalem) means “peace.” He is king of righteousness and peace.
6. He brings out bread and wine, striking imagery that the New Testament will pick up.
7. Abram pays Melchizedek a tithe, a tenth of the spoils. This is the first tithe in the Bible, and it is paid to a priest greater than Abram.
8. The king of Sodom offers Abram the goods of victory. Abram refuses, swearing not to take “a thread or a sandal strap”, he will not be enriched by Sodom.
9. Abram’s refusal of Sodom’s wealth is paired with his receiving of Melchizedek’s blessing, accepting from God what he refuses from the world.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 14 is one of those chapters that seems simple on the surface but is theologically explosive once you see what it is doing. At the surface level, it is a story of military rescue. Underneath, it introduces one of the most important typological figures in all of Scripture: Melchizedek, the priest-king who prefigures Christ.

The military narrative is striking on its own. Abram, a peaceful nomadic patriarch, becomes a warrior to rescue his nephew. With 318 men, he pursues an alliance of four kings over a vast distance and defeats them. The text is not glorifying violence; it is showing that the man of faith is also a man of action when family is in danger. Faith does not produce passivity. It produces the kind of trust that enables courage.

But the heart of the chapter comes when Abram returns. Two kings meet him. The king of Sodom approaches with a transactional proposal: keep the goods, give me the people. The king of Salem approaches with bread, wine, and a blessing. The contrast is total. Sodom represents the world’s economy, favors traded, debts owed, transactions made. Melchizedek represents God’s economy, gifts given, blessings spoken, worship offered. Abram knows the difference. He refuses Sodom’s wealth and accepts Melchizedek’s blessing.

Who is Melchizedek? The text is remarkably restrained. He appears with no genealogy, no history, no future. He is king of Salem (later Jerusalem). He is priest of God Most High. He brings bread and wine. He blesses Abram. He receives a tithe. And then he vanishes from the narrative. The very absence of information is itself meaningful. He stands as a figure outside the normal patterns of biblical genealogy, older than Abram (who pays him a tithe), greater than Abram (who receives his blessing), and unique in that he is both king and priest in a culture where those offices were rigidly separated.

The New Testament will pick this up with stunning force. Psalm 110 will declare of the coming Messiah: "You are a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek." And Hebrews 5-7 will spend three chapters showing that Jesus is the true Melchizedek, a priest-king greater than Aaron, greater than Abram, who offers bread and wine at the institution of the new covenant, who reigns over the true Salem, who blesses the children of Abram with all the spiritual blessings of God Most High. When Abram pays a tithe to Melchizedek, he is, in a sense, acknowledging the priority of Christ even before Christ comes. The whole Levitical priesthood that will later be established under Moses is foreshadowed and, in a sense, surpassed before it begins.

Abram's refusal of Sodom's wealth is the other side of the same coin. The man who has received from Melchizedek does not need to receive from Sodom. The believer who has received the blessing of God Most High does not need to be enriched by the world. The two transactions are mutually exclusive. You cannot worship at both altars. Abram chooses the higher one.

STEP 5

Connection

Abram's encounter with Melchizedek is one of the great Christological foreshadowings of the Old Testament. The priest-king of Salem, who brings out bread and wine and blesses the father of faith, points forward to the true priest-king Jesus, who instituted his new covenant with bread and wine and who blesses all the children of faith. Yesterday we saw the call of Abram, the beginning of God's promise to bless all nations. Today we see that the priest who blesses Abram already prefigures the priest through whom that blessing will ultimately come.

STEP 6

Application

Abram knew the difference between accepting blessing from God and being entangled with the world. Today, examine where you stand. From whom are you willing to receive? Are there "gifts" from the world, promotions, friendships, opportunities, recognition, that come with strings attached, that would compromise your loyalty to Christ? Abram knew that if he took Sodom's wealth, he could later be claimed by Sodom. The same is true today. Some offers must be refused, not because the things offered are inherently evil, but because their source would entangle you. Conversely, learn to receive from God. The Christian life is not earned; it is received. Receive your forgiveness. Receive your identity. Receive your daily provisions. Receive the bread and the wine at the Lord's Supper, they come to you from your priest-king. And tithe, give back to God a portion of what he has given, as Abram did, recognizing the priority of the one who blesses you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Christ for being the priest and king who blesses you.

Ask God to help you refuse the gifts of Sodom and receive from him alone.

Tell him how you want to give back generously to him.

DAY 31 · WEEK 5

Genesis 15:1-21

The covenant cut; God alone passes through, pure grace

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 21 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 15:1-21 slowly. This is one of the most important chapters in the Old Testament. The Abrahamic Covenant is formally cut here, and the way God cuts it is shocking. Pay especially close attention to verse 6, which the New Testament will quote repeatedly as the foundation of justification by faith.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Abram has been called, has separated from Lot, has rescued Lot, and has refused Sodom's wealth. Now God comes to him again with reassurance. But Abram has been thinking. He is wealthy but childless. The promise of a great nation seems further away with each passing year. So in today's chapter, Abram does what he has not done before, he questions God. And God responds not with rebuke but with one of the most extraordinary covenant ceremonies in all of Scripture. This chapter contains the formal cutting of the Abrahamic Covenant, the seedbed of the gospel.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God's opening words are striking: "Fear not, Abram, I am your shield; your reward shall be very great." God himself is Abram's shield and his reward.
2. Abram questions God for the first time: "O Lord GOD, what will you give me, for I continue childless?" Faith is allowed to ask honest questions.
3. God takes Abram outside, points him to the stars, and tells him his offspring will be that many. The promise is sealed under the night sky.
4. Verse 6 is the theological climax: "And he believed the LORD, and he counted it to him as righteousness." Justification by faith is born here.

5. When Abram asks how he will possess the land, God responds with a covenant ceremony, animals cut in two, pieces arranged in two rows.
6. Abram falls into a deep sleep and great darkness, the same word used of Adam's sleep in Genesis 2. Covenants involve a kind of death.
7. God reveals the future: 400 years of slavery in a foreign land, followed by exodus "with great possessions." History is foreseen and ordered.
8. Then "a smoking fire pot and a flaming torch passed between these pieces." God alone walks the path of the covenant, Abram does not.
9. The covenant is one-sided. God binds himself to fulfill the promise, regardless of Abram's faithfulness.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 15 is the chapter where the Abrahamic Covenant is formally cut, and the way God does it is one of the most remarkable scenes in the Bible. Once you understand what is happening, the gospel itself comes into focus.

The chapter begins with God reassuring Abram: "I am your shield; your reward shall be very great." This is enormous. God is not just giving Abram things; he is giving Abram himself. The shield is God. The reward is God. Every other promise, land, descendants, blessing, is secondary to this central reality. The greatest gift God gives his people is not what he gives them; it is himself.

But Abram is troubled. Time is passing and the promised son has not come. So Abram does something significant: he asks God a hard question. "What will you give me, for I continue childless?" This is faith being honest. Faith is not pretending that the promises feel fulfilled when they do not. Faith is bringing the unfulfilled promise back to the God who made it. Abram is not faithless here; he is faith-full in the most mature way. He takes God's promise seriously enough to ask about it.

God's response is to take Abram outside. Imagine the moment. The patriarch and the LORD, standing under the stars of the ancient Near East, a sky with no light pollution, blazing with millions of stars. "Look toward heaven, and number the stars, if you are able to number them. So shall your offspring be." It is a visual gospel. The promise is as vast as the cosmos.

And then comes verse 6, the single most important verse in the Old Testament for understanding the New Testament's doctrine of salvation. "And he believed the LORD, and he counted it to him as righteousness." Notice three things. First, Abram believed. Faith, not works, is what God responds to. Second, God counted his faith as righteousness. The verb is the language of bookkeeping. God moves something into Abram's account. Third, Abram did nothing to earn this. He simply believed the promise and was reckoned righteous. Romans 4 and Galatians 3 will use this verse as the foundational proof that justification has always been by faith, never by works of the law.

But the chapter is not done. Abram still wants assurance about the land. "How am I to know that I shall possess it?" God responds by establishing the covenant in the way covenants were sealed in the ancient Near East. Two parties seeking covenant would cut animals in half, arrange the pieces in two rows, and walk together between them, a vivid symbol meaning, "Let me become like these animals if I break this covenant." It was a self-curse oath.

Abram prepares the animals as God instructs. He waits. A deep sleep falls on him. God speaks the future: 400 years of slavery in Egypt, then deliverance, then return to the land. History is being scripted from this moment forward.

And then comes the most stunning detail in the chapter. As the sun sets, "a smoking fire pot and a flaming torch passed between these pieces." The fire and the smoke represent God's presence, the same imagery that will later mark Mount Sinai and the Tabernacle. And God alone walks between the pieces. Abram, the human partner, sleeps. Only God passes through.

The meaning is overwhelming. In every other covenant ceremony of this kind, both parties walked through. Both parties bound themselves. Both said, "Let me become like these animals if I break my word." But here, only God walks. God binds himself unconditionally. Whatever happens to Abram or to Abram's descendants, the covenant rests on God alone. He alone is responsible for keeping it. And if anyone is to be torn like these animals to maintain the covenant, it will be God himself.

That is exactly what will happen. Centuries later, on a hill outside Jerusalem, God in human flesh will be torn, bearing the curse of the covenant his people have broken, so that the promise to bless all nations can stand. Abram saw it in shadow. We have seen it in light.

STEP 5

Connection

The first promise of redemption was given in Genesis 3:15, the offspring of the woman would crush the serpent. The line of promise has been preserved through Seth, Noah, Shem, and now Abram. Today the promise becomes covenant, formal, ceremonial, sealed in blood. Verse 6, "he believed the LORD, and it was counted to him as righteousness", is the heart of the gospel that Paul will preach in Romans 4 and Galatians 3. Abram is justified by faith, not by works. And the one-sided nature of the covenant points forward to Christ, who alone passes through the pieces, bearing the curse so that the blessing might come to all nations.

STEP 6

Application

Today, sit with verse 6 until it lands. You are justified by faith. Not by your performance. Not by your moral track record. Not by your religious effort. By faith, by believing the God who has promised, who has acted, who has sent his Son. Abram believed and was reckoned righteous. The same is true for you. If you have believed in Christ, his righteousness is counted to you, just as Abram's faith was counted to him. This is not a metaphor. It is the legal verdict of God over your life.

And sit with the one-sided covenant. God alone walked between the pieces because the covenant depends on him, not on you. If your faith feels weak, the covenant is still secure. If you fail, the covenant still stands. The God who bound himself to Abram has bound himself to you in Christ. Your security is not in the steadiness of your walking but in the faithfulness of his.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that your standing with him rests on his faithfulness and not yours.
- Confess any striving to earn what he has already given.
- Praise Christ who was torn so that you could be blessed.

Genesis 15:1-21; Jeremiah 31:31-34; Hebrews 8:6-13

Covenant Theology, A Framework

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 15:1-21 again, then Jeremiah 31:31-34 and Hebrews 8:6-13. These three passages span the Bible's covenantal arc: the Abrahamic covenant, the promise of the new covenant, and the New Testament's announcement that the new covenant has come in Christ. Read them with the question in mind: what is a covenant, and why is it the structure of God's relationship with his people?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday you read the formal cutting of the Abrahamic Covenant, God alone walking between the pieces, binding himself to keep what he had promised. Today we pause to think more carefully about what covenants are and how they shape the entire Bible. Covenant is not a technical theological term invented by scholars. It is the Bible's own primary category for describing how God relates to his people. From Noah to Abraham to Moses to David to the new covenant in Christ, God always relates to his people through covenant. Understanding this category is essential for reading the Bible well.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Genesis 15 shows the basic pattern of a covenant: a sovereign initiates, makes promises, and seals them with an oath ceremony.
2. The Hebrew word berith ("covenant") first appears with Noah (Genesis 6:18), then runs through Abraham, Moses, David, and the prophets.
3. Jeremiah 31:31-34 promises a "new covenant" that will be different from the one God made when he brought Israel out of Egypt.

4. The new covenant features: law written on hearts, all knowing the LORD, sins forgiven and remembered no more.
5. Hebrews 8 explicitly identifies Christ as the mediator of this new covenant.
6. Christ's institution of the Lord's Supper uses the language of Jeremiah 31: "this is the new covenant in my blood" (Luke 22:20).
7. Every major covenant has a sign: rainbow (Noahic), circumcision (Abrahamic), Sabbath (Mosaic), throne (Davidic), the Lord's Supper (New).
8. The covenants build on one another, each new covenant fulfills what the previous covenants promised.

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

A covenant, in the biblical sense, is a sworn relationship of personal commitment between God and his people. It is more than a contract, which is a transaction between equals for limited purposes. A covenant is a personal bond, sealed with promises and signs, that creates a relationship of mutual belonging. God says, in essence: I will be your God, and you will be my people.

The Bible's story is structured around a series of covenants. Each one builds on the others, fulfilling earlier promises while opening new dimensions. Understanding this structure is essential for reading Scripture well.

The first covenant in Scripture is the covenant with Noah (Genesis 9). It is universal, made with all humanity and all creation, and its purpose is preservation. God commits to maintain the natural order so that the larger story of redemption can unfold. The sign is the rainbow. This covenant is still in effect today.

The second is the covenant with Abraham (Genesis 12, 15, 17). It narrows from all humanity to one family, but with a promise that will eventually re-expand to bless all the families of the earth. Three things are promised: land, offspring, and universal blessing. The sign is circumcision. As you have just seen in Genesis 15, this covenant is unconditional, God alone walks between the pieces.

The third is the covenant with Moses at Sinai (Exodus 19-24). This is a covenant with the nation of Israel, organizing them as God's people under his law. Unlike the Abrahamic Covenant, this one has conditions, blessings for obedience, curses for disobedience. The sign is the Sabbath. The Mosaic Covenant does not replace the Abrahamic; it serves it, providing the structure by which Abraham's offspring would live as God's holy people in the land of promise.

The fourth is the covenant with David (2 Samuel 7). God promises David an everlasting throne. From his line will come a king whose kingdom will never end. The sign is the Davidic dynasty itself. This narrows further still, from a nation to a family within that nation, from a family to a king who will rule forever.

The fifth and final is the new covenant, promised in Jeremiah 31 and ratified in Christ. This is not merely another covenant; it is the fulfillment of all the others. Jeremiah describes it: God's law written on hearts (rather than tablets of stone), every member knowing the LORD personally (rather than learning from others), and sins forgiven definitively. The new covenant accomplishes what the Mosaic Covenant could not, it makes the relationship between God and his people internal, personal, and permanent.

Christians have debated for centuries how exactly the covenants relate to one another. Some traditions emphasize discontinuity, the new covenant is largely replacing the old. Other traditions emphasize continuity, the new covenant fulfills and extends the old. The framework this plan follows, sometimes called progressive covenantalism, sees the covenants as a unified, unfolding story. Each builds on the previous. Each is fulfilled in Christ. The Old Testament is not a different religion from the New Testament; it is the same story moving toward the same goal.

Several things follow from this. First, God always relates to his people through covenant. He does not deal with humanity merely as Creator or Lawgiver or Judge, but as covenant Lord, one who has bound himself to a people. Second, covenant is the structure of grace. Every covenant is initiated by God, not earned by humans. Even the conditional Mosaic Covenant comes only after God has already redeemed Israel from Egypt. Grace comes first; obligation responds. Third, the covenants are interconnected. The Abrahamic promise that all nations would be blessed finds its fulfillment in the new covenant, where Gentiles are grafted in. The Davidic promise of an everlasting king finds its fulfillment in Christ, whose throne is eternal. Fourth, Christ is the center. Every covenant points toward him. He is the offspring of Abraham (Galatians 3:16), the prophet greater than Moses (Hebrews 3:1-6), the Son of David, and the mediator of the new covenant.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The three passages you read together tell the covenantal story of the Bible in three frames. Genesis 15 shows the unconditional commitment of God to Abram. Jeremiah 31 promises a new covenant that will accomplish what the Mosaic Covenant could not. Hebrews 8 declares that Christ is the mediator of this new covenant.

Look at Jeremiah 31:31 carefully. “Behold, the days are coming, declares the LORD, when I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah, not like the covenant that I made with their fathers on the day when I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, my covenant that they broke.” The Mosaic Covenant was broken. Despite all of God’s faithfulness, Israel could not be faithful in return. The law written on tablets of stone did not transform stone hearts. A new covenant was needed, one that would do something the old could not do.

And then Jeremiah lists the features of this new covenant. Three things stand out. First, the law will be written on hearts. The same God who etched the Ten Commandments on tablets at Sinai will now etch his law on the hearts of his people. Internal, not external. Second, all will know the LORD, from the least to the greatest. No more need for one Israelite to teach another to know the LORD; the relationship will be personal and universal. Third, sins will be forgiven and remembered no more. The sacrificial system of the Mosaic Covenant had to be repeated endlessly because the sins kept piling up. The new covenant deals with sin definitively.

Hebrews 8 then identifies the mediator of this new covenant: Christ. By his death, the new covenant has been ratified. By his Spirit, the law is being written on his people’s hearts. By his blood, sins are forgiven and remembered no more. The promise of Jeremiah 31 has been fulfilled. The covenant cut with Abram, sealed with God alone walking through the pieces, finds its ultimate fulfillment when Christ is torn on the cross, the divine party of the covenant bearing the curse so that the blessing of Abraham could come to all nations.

This is what it means to read the Bible covenantally. You do not see disconnected stories or random commandments. You see one God, one people, and one covenant promise unfolding in stages, each stage building on the last, all of them finding their yes in Christ (2 Corinthians 1:20).

STEP 5

Connection

Today’s doctrinal pause names what has been happening throughout your reading. God has been relating to his people through covenants from the beginning. Noah, Abraham, and the others you have read about are all participants in this single unfolding story. When you read the rest of the Old Testament, you will see Moses, David, and the prophets, each adding new dimensions to the covenantal story. And when you reach the New Testament, you will see Christ as the climax: the offspring of Abraham, the prophet like Moses, the Son of David, the mediator of the new covenant. The whole Bible is one story, and covenant is its spine.

STEP 6

Application

If you are a Christian, you are a covenant person. You are not relating to God merely as a generic worshiper or a religious seeker. You are bound to him by the new covenant in Christ's blood. Three implications follow.

First, your relationship with God is secure. Like Abram's covenant, the new covenant rests on God's commitment, not yours. The Father has bound himself to you in Christ. The Spirit has been given as the seal. You cannot break a covenant whose maintenance depends on God. Your assurance is grounded here.

Second, your relationship with God is communal. Covenants always create peoples, not just individuals. You are part of the church, the people of the new covenant. The Lord's Supper you share with other believers is the sign of this covenant. Do not try to live the Christian life alone. The covenant binds you to one another, not just to God.

Third, your relationship with God is transformational. The new covenant promised hearts changed, sins forgiven, and an intimate knowledge of the LORD. These are not future promises; they are present realities for everyone in Christ. The Spirit is writing God's law on your heart even now. Your sins are forgiven and remembered no more. You know the LORD, however dimly, because he has revealed himself to you. Live in light of this. You are not who you were. You are a new-covenant person, in Christ, by grace.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he binds himself to his people by promise, and ask him to make that real to you.

Thank Jesus as the mediator of the new covenant.

Ask him to help you live out of that security, together with his people.

GENESIS 12:3

DAY 33 · WEEK 5

Psalm 105:1-22

God's faithfulness to Abraham's covenant

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 22 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 105:1-22 slowly, twice. This is one of the Psalter's great historical psalms. It walks through the story of God's faithfulness to Abraham and his descendants. Read it as the appropriate response to the Abrahamic covenant story you have been encountering.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 105 is one of the longest historical psalms in the Bible. It rehearses God's saving acts from Abraham to the conquest of Canaan. Today's reading covers the first 22 verses, from the covenant with Abraham through the early years of Joseph in Egypt. The psalm is essentially a hymn-form summary of Genesis 12-41 and a preparation for the Exodus to come. It teaches the people of God how to remember and how to give thanks.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with calls to give thanks, sing, and tell, worship as proclamation.
2. Verse 8 is the theological hinge: "He remembers his covenant forever, the word that he commanded, for a thousand generations."
3. Verses 9-10 specifically name the covenants with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, the patriarchal line.
4. Verse 11 quotes God's promise: "To you I will give the land of Canaan as your portion for an inheritance."
5. The patriarchs are called "few in number, of little account, and sojourners in it." Their smallness is part of the wonder.

6. Verses 14-15: “He allowed no one to oppress them; he rebuked kings on their account, saying, ‘Touch not my anointed ones, do my prophets no harm.’” God protected them.

7. Then the psalm pivots to Joseph: “He sent a man ahead of them, Joseph, who was sold as a slave.” God’s sovereignty in suffering.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 105:1-22 is a worship-form summary of everything you have been reading in Genesis. It begins with the call to remember, to give thanks, to sing, to tell. And then it remembers, by rehearsing the story of God’s covenant faithfulness to Abraham and his offspring.

Verse 8 is the central claim. “He remembers his covenant forever, the word that he commanded, for a thousand generations.” This is the antidote to the despair that often accompanies covenant life. The patriarchs lived through famine, infertility, betrayal, slavery. They lived in a land that was not yet theirs. They saw children but not grandchildren of the promise. And yet, through all of it, God remembered. The Hebrew word for remember in Scripture is not passive recollection. It is active loyalty. When God “remembers” his covenant, he is acting in faithfulness to it. The psalm announces that this remembering is not just for one generation. It is for a thousand. Forever.

Verses 9-11 quote the Abrahamic promise directly. The covenant with Abraham was confirmed to Isaac and renewed with Jacob. It is a single, unfolding promise, the same God to the same family with the same word about the same land. And verse 11 puts in God’s own mouth: “To you I will give the land of Canaan as your portion for an inheritance.” This is what Abram believed in Genesis 15, and what God reckoned to him as righteousness.

Then the psalm becomes startlingly honest about the smallness of the patriarchs. “When they were few in number, of little account, and sojourners in it, wandering from nation to nation, from one kingdom to another people.” This is the truth about Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. They were not powerful. They were not numerous. They were nomads, vulnerable to every famine and every local king. And yet, the psalm says, “he allowed no one to oppress them; he rebuked kings on their account.” Pharaoh in Egypt, Abimelech in Gerar, God protected the patriarchs even from the most powerful men of their day. He still does this with his people. We are few. We are weak. We are sojourners. And he protects us.

The psalm then turns to Joseph. “He sent a man ahead of them, Joseph, who was sold as a slave.” This is the heart of the Joseph story before Joseph even reaches Pharaoh’s house. God sent Joseph. Joseph was sold by his brothers, betrayed, enslaved, imprisoned, but God sent him. The same God who promised Abram a great nation arranged for Joseph to be in Egypt so that the family could later be preserved through famine. What looked from the ground like tragedy and injustice was, from heaven's perspective, sovereign provision. This is the doctrine of providence in narrative form. And we will see it played out in full when we read Joseph's story in the next two weeks of this plan.

STEP 5

Connection

The first chapters of Unit 3 have introduced the patriarchs, Abraham primarily, with Isaac and Jacob and Joseph yet to come in greater detail. Today's psalm teaches us how to receive these stories. They are not just family history. They are the record of God's covenant faithfulness, remembered for a thousand generations. As the unit unfolds, we will see the patriarchs at their best and at their worst. Psalm 105 reminds us that the story is ultimately about the God who remembered, not about the people who were remembered.

STEP 6

Application

Make remembering a habit. The Christian life is not primarily about discovering new truths but about remembering old ones, that you were lost, that you were redeemed, that you are loved, that you are kept. Today, recall one specific way God has been faithful to you in the past. Name it. Thank him for it. Tell someone about it. This is what the psalmist commands: give thanks, sing, tell the deeds of the LORD. Worship is, in large part, memory exercised.

And take comfort from the smallness of the patriarchs. They were few. You may feel few. They were of little account in the world's eyes. You may feel of little account. They were sojourners. So are you. And the same God who protected them protects you. He has not forgotten his covenant. He remembers, for a thousand generations.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for remembering his covenant, and for remembering you in Christ.

Tell him about a season that feels like famine or slavery, and ask him to preserve you through it.

Ask him to teach you to tell of his works.

GENESIS 12:3

DAY 34 · WEEK 5

Genesis 16:1-17:27

Hagar and Ishmael; circumcision as covenant sign

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 43 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 16:1-17:27 carefully. These two chapters belong together: Genesis 16 shows Abram and Sarai trying to fulfill God's promise their own way through Hagar, and Genesis 17 shows God responding with renewed promise and the institution of circumcision as the sign of the covenant.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

It has been more than ten years since the promise. Abram is 86. Sarai is 76 and still childless. Faith and waiting wear on a person. Today's reading shows what happens when waiting becomes too painful, and what God does when his people take matters into their own hands. Genesis 16 is the Hagar story. Genesis 17 is God's reset: a renewed covenant, new names for Abram and Sarai, and the sign of circumcision marking every male in the household as belonging to the covenant.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Sarai's proposal, that Abram conceive a child through Hagar, was a culturally accepted practice in the ancient Near East, but it was outside God's promise.
2. Hagar conceives, and immediately the relationship sours. Hagar despises Sarai; Sarai blames Abram; Abram passes the buck back to Sarai.
3. God meets Hagar in the wilderness, the first appearance of "the angel of the LORD" in Scripture. He sees her and names her son Ishmael ("God hears").
4. Hagar names God: "You are a God of seeing." She is the only person in the Bible to give God a name.
5. Thirteen years pass between chapter 16 and chapter 17, silence between them.

6. God appears as “God Almighty” (El Shaddai), a name that emphasizes power adequate to the impossible.
7. Abram’s name is changed to Abraham (“father of many”). Sarai becomes Sarah. Names matter; identity is being reshaped.
8. Circumcision is instituted as the sign of the covenant, applied to every male in the household, including servants and the not-yet-born Isaac.
9. God repeats and intensifies the promise: nations will come from Abraham; kings will descend from him; the land is given as an everlasting possession.
10. When God promises Isaac will be born to Sarah, Abraham laughs. God names the coming son Isaac, which means “he laughs.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 16 and 17 belong together as a pair. They show what faith and unbelief look like when waiting on God’s promise. Genesis 16 is unbelief masquerading as practical wisdom. Genesis 17 is faith renewed by God himself.

The Hagar episode is a study in what happens when believers try to help God fulfill his promises through ungodly means. Sarai’s proposal was culturally normal in the ancient Near East. A barren wife could have a child through her servant, and the child would legally be considered hers. From a human standpoint, it was a reasonable plan. From God’s standpoint, it was a substitute. God had promised a child through Sarai. The child Sarai wanted through Hagar was not the promised child.

The consequences come quickly. Hagar conceives and despises her mistress. Sarai blames Abram for the situation she created. Abram refuses to lead and passes the problem back to Sarai. The household fractures. Hagar flees into the wilderness. This is what happens when believers try to manufacture God’s promises through their own ingenuity. The results are bitterness, blame, and broken relationships. God’s promises cannot be helped along by human strategy. They can only be received in faith.

But notice what God does for Hagar. He meets her in the wilderness. The angel of the LORD, almost certainly a pre-incarnate appearance of Christ, speaks to her by name. He hears her affliction. He gives her a promise about her son. Hagar’s response is one of the most remarkable confessions in the Bible: “You are a God of seeing… Truly here I have seen him who looks after me.” Hagar is the only person in Scripture who gives God a name. And the God she names is the God who sees the rejected, the abandoned, the wronged. This is who God is. Even in the middle of human failure, he meets the casualties with personal kindness.

Thirteen years of silence pass between chapters 16 and 17. Long silences are common in the patriarchal narratives. Faith must learn to wait. And then God appears again to Abram, this time as "God Almighty", El Shaddai. The name emphasizes God's power to do what nothing and no one else can do. It is the right name for this moment, because what God is about to promise is impossible.

The covenant is renewed with significant changes. Abram becomes Abraham, "father of a multitude." Sarai becomes Sarah, "princess." Names are not arbitrary in Scripture; they carry identity. By renaming them, God is reshaping who they are. They will live, from this point forward, as the people whose new identities reflect the promised future.

The sign of the covenant is introduced: circumcision. Every male in Abraham's household, including the servants, is to be circumcised. Why this sign? Several reasons. It marks the body, a permanent, irreversible sign of belonging to the covenant. It marks the organ of procreation, the means by which the promised line will continue. And it costs something, a literal cutting of the flesh that reminds the bearer that covenant entails cost. Paul will later argue that this sign was meant to anticipate the deeper cutting of the heart that the new covenant brings (Romans 2:29).

The chapter ends with Abraham laughing. God promises that Sarah will bear a son within the year, and Abraham falls on his face laughing, a complex laughter that is part joy, part disbelief, part wonder. God responds by naming the coming child Isaac, which means "he laughs." The first laughter in the Bible is the laughter of doubt; the next will be Sarah's laughter when she overhears the same promise. But God transforms their doubt-laughter into the name of the promised son. The God of grace turns even the patriarchs' unbelief into a memorial of his faithfulness.

STEP 5

Connection

The Abrahamic Covenant was cut in Genesis 15 with God alone walking through the pieces. Here in Genesis 17, it is renewed and given a sign, circumcision. Every Israelite from this point forward will bear in his body the mark of belonging to Abraham's covenant. The sign points forward to the deeper reality of the new covenant, where the heart itself is circumcised by the Spirit (Romans 2:29; Colossians 2:11). The Hagar episode also looks forward, Paul will use Hagar and Sarah as a contrast between the old covenant (children of slavery) and the new (children of promise) in Galatians 4.

STEP 6

Application

Wait. This is the lesson of these two chapters. When God makes a promise, the temptation is always to help him keep it through our own ingenuity. We propose Hagars. We construct alternatives. We persuade ourselves that we are being practical. And we wreck things in the process. Today, ask yourself: is there a promise of God that you have been trying to manufacture through worldly means? A relationship you are trying to force? An outcome you are trying to engineer? A future you are trying to secure on your own? Bring it back to God. Wait. The same God who waited until Sarah was ninety to send Isaac knows how to fulfill his promises in his time.

And take comfort from Hagar. God sees the casualties of human failure. He sees the wronged, the rejected, the abandoned. If you are one of them today, know that the God of Abraham is also the God who sees you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have tried to help God keep his promises by your own schemes.
- Ask him to teach you to wait, and tell him what is hard about it.
- Thank him that he sees and hears those who are overlooked.

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. The week you have completed introduced the man at the center of the rest of the Bible, Abraham. Take time today to let the sweep of his calling settle. The promise made to him is the promise that reaches you.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"In you all the families of the earth shall be blessed."

GENESIS 12:3

REST

Meditation

Genesis 12:3 is the seed of the gospel in the Old Testament. Paul calls it the gospel preached to Abraham (Galatians 3:8). The promise made to one man is the promise that ultimately reaches every nation, every family, every reader.

Say the verse aloud, and notice what is and is not promised. It does not promise Abraham personal prosperity. It does not promise his descendants ease. It promises blessing, and blessing of a particular kind, blessing that flows outward. Abraham is blessed in order to be a blessing.

The same is true of you. If you are in Christ, you are a child of Abraham (Galatians 3:7). The blessing of Abraham, flowing through Christ, has reached you. And it has not reached you so that it stops with you. You have been blessed in order to be a blessing. Carry the verse this week with two questions: How has God blessed me through Abraham's offspring, Jesus? And to whom is he sending that blessing through me?

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week was the great narrowing. After Unit 2 ended with the scattering of Babel, God called one man, Abram, and through him began the redemption of all the nations he had just scattered. You read Abram's call in Genesis 12 and watched him obey, even with his failures. You met Melchizedek, the priest-king who prefigures Christ. You read the formal cutting of the Abrahamic Covenant in Genesis 15, with God alone walking between the pieces. You sat with the doctrinal pause on Covenant Theology, the structure that runs through the entire Bible. You worshiped with Psalm 105:1-22, which sings the patriarchal promise. And you read the Hagar story and the renewal of the covenant in Genesis 17.

The week's center of gravity is the covenant. God binds himself to one family so that, through that family, all families of the earth will be blessed.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where in your life have you been trying to fulfill God's promises through your own scheming? Sarai's proposal of Hagar was the practical, culturally accepted alternative to waiting. It produced bitterness, blame, and broken relationships. Where are you tempted to engineer what God has already promised to provide? What would it look like to wait instead?

What does it mean that you, a Gentile reader, are included in the promise of Genesis 12:3? In Galatians 3, Paul says that those who are of faith are children of Abraham, that the blessing promised to all nations has come to you through Christ. Sit with this. You are part of the answer to Abraham's calling. How does that reshape your sense of identity, your sense of mission, your sense of belonging?

How did the doctrinal pause on Covenant Theology this week clarify your reading of the Bible? Covenant is the structure through which God relates to his people from Noah to Christ. What is one specific way this framework has begun to change how you understand the Bible as one unified story?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that you are a child of Abraham by faith, brought near by Christ.

Thank Christ for keeping the covenant that you could not.

Ask him to make you a blessing to someone this coming week.

DAY 36 · WEEK 6

Genesis 18:1-19:38

The visitors; Abraham intercedes; Sodom destroyed

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 57 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 18:1-19:38. These two chapters tell the linked stories of God's visit to Abraham and the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. They belong together, the same God who promises blessing also brings judgment. Pay attention to Abraham's bold intercession, Lot's compromised life, and the contrasting endings of the two families.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Abraham has been circumcised. The covenant has been renewed. Now three visitors arrive at Abraham's tent in the heat of the day. One of them is the LORD himself. The visit will accomplish two things: confirm the imminent birth of Isaac, and reveal the coming judgment on Sodom. Today's reading shows the close relationship between promise and judgment in the life of God's people. The same God who blesses also judges. And in the middle of it all, Lot, Abraham's compromised nephew, is rescued from the burning cities, barely.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Abraham shows extravagant hospitality to the three visitors, washing their feet, preparing a feast, standing while they eat.
2. The LORD promises that Sarah will have a son "about this time next year." Sarah laughs from inside the tent.
3. Sarah's laughter is rebuked but not punished. God hears her, even when she denies laughing.
4. Verses 17-19 are striking: God deliberates whether to hide his plan from Abraham, then decides to reveal it.

5. Abraham's intercession for Sodom (verses 22-33) moves in stages: 50, 45, 40, 30, 20, 10. Each request is bolder, but each is granted.
6. God's openness to Abraham's prayer is remarkable. The patriarch genuinely shapes the conversation.
7. Genesis 19 opens with Lot sitting in the gate of Sodom, a place of civic leadership. He has become a Sodomite in residence.
8. The men of Sodom demand to abuse the visitors. Lot offers his daughters instead, a horrifying response that shows how compromised he has become.
9. The angels strike the men with blindness and pull Lot back into the house. Even in his failure, God's grace pursues him.
10. Lot's wife looks back and becomes a pillar of salt. Lot's daughters get him drunk and conceive, Moab and Ammon, future enemies of Israel.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 18 and 19 are one of the most stark contrasts in the Old Testament. The two chapters happen at the same time but in different places. In one, the LORD eats a meal with Abraham, promises a son, and listens to bold intercession. In the other, fire falls from heaven and ancient cities are destroyed. The same God acts in both. The difference is not in God; it is in the relationship those two households have with him.

The visit to Abraham is extraordinary. Three strangers arrive at his tent, and Abraham extravagantly serves them. Only as the meal unfolds does it become clear that one of them is the LORD himself, perhaps a pre-incarnate appearance of Christ, accompanied by two angels. The same LORD who promised Abraham a son is now sitting under his tree, eating his food, and confirming the timeline.

But the visit is also for another purpose. The LORD says, "Shall I hide from Abraham what I am about to do?" And he reveals the coming judgment on Sodom. This is what it means to be a friend of God, and Abraham is called the friend of God multiple times in Scripture. Friends are told things. Servants are given orders. Friends are admitted into the deliberations of their friend's heart. Abraham is being told the future not so he can run for cover but so he can intercede.

And intercede he does. The negotiation between Abraham and God is one of the most remarkable passages in the Bible. Abraham works his way down, what if there are 50 righteous? 45? 40? 30? 20? 10? Each time, God agrees. Each time, Abraham draws nearer. This is not Abraham manipulating God. This is God inviting Abraham into a conversation about justice. The patriarch is being trained to think and feel as God does, caring about the righteous, longing for mercy, willing to plead for cities he does not even live in.

Then the scene shifts. Genesis 19 opens with Lot. He has come a long way from when he and Abram first separated. Lot is now sitting in the gate of Sodom, the place where civic leaders gather. He has become a man of standing in a wicked city. His compromise is total. When the angels arrive, the men of Sodom surround the house demanding to abuse them. Lot's response is horrifying: he offers his own daughters to be raped instead. This is what years of living in Sodom have done to him. His moral center has so eroded that he is willing to sacrifice his daughters to maintain the cultural code of hospitality.

The angels rescue Lot anyway. They strike the attackers with blindness, drag Lot back into the house, and the next morning practically force him out of the city. "The LORD being merciful to him." Lot is saved not because of his faithfulness but because of God's mercy and Abraham's prayer. This is one of the clearest pictures in the Old Testament of grace operating despite human failure.

The endings of the two stories are painfully different. Abraham's tent ends in joy, laughter, food, promise, intercession. Lot's home ends in flame, salt, drunkenness, and incest. The two daughters, having lost everything, get their father drunk and conceive children. The two children, Moab and Ammon, will become nations that war against Israel for centuries. Lot's compromise produces a legacy of enemies. Abraham's faithfulness produces a legacy of promise.

The lesson is clear and sobering. Where you choose to live matters. The company you keep matters. The cities of Sodom looked attractive to Lot when he first chose them; they cost him everything in the end. Abraham, who chose the harder hill country, was the one with whom the LORD shared his meals and his plans.

STEP 5

Connection

The Abrahamic Covenant included the promise that God would "curse those who dishonor" Abraham. Today we see the inverse: God reveals his plans to Abraham as his friend, and rescues Abraham's compromised nephew because of him. The intercession Abraham offers prefigures Christ's intercession for his people, bold, persistent, asking for mercy on the basis of God's character. And the destruction of Sodom prefigures the final judgment, which Jesus himself will compare to the days of Lot (Luke 17:28-32).

STEP 6

Application

Two warnings and one comfort.

First warning: be careful where you settle. Lot did not become wicked overnight. He drifted, decision by decision, into a city that ultimately consumed him. The places you choose to live, the people you choose to befriend, the environments you choose to immerse yourself in, these shape you over time. Do not assume you will be unaffected.

Second warning: take Christ's words seriously. Jesus said, "Remember Lot's wife" (Luke 17:32). She turned back. She had been told not to. And her brief, longing look backward froze her in place forever. Do not look back at what God is rescuing you out of. Move forward.

The comfort: Abraham interceded for Sodom, and Lot was rescued. Christ intercedes for his people, and we are rescued. If you know someone today who is compromised, who is sitting in the gate of Sodom, who is drifting away from God, pray for them. Stand before God on their behalf. Abraham's intercession was not wasted, and yours will not be either.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to make you a friend he can trust with his purposes.

Pray for someone you love who is drifting toward compromise, in the way Abraham pleaded for Lot.

Confess any drift of your own, and ask him to turn you.

GENESIS 15:6

DAY 37 · WEEK 6

Genesis 20:1-21:34

Abimelech; Isaac born, the promised son arrives

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 54 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 20:1-21:34. These chapters cover Abraham's second deception (he again calls Sarah his sister) and the long-awaited birth of Isaac. Notice how God protects Abraham even when Abraham fails, and how the promise finally arrives after twenty-five years of waiting.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

It has been twenty-five years since Abraham was first called. He has aged. Sarah has aged. The promise of a son has lived in his household longer than many marriages last. Today's reading is the climax of the long wait. But it begins with another shameful episode, Abraham again lying about Sarah being his sister, this time to Abimelech of Gerar. The text candidly shows that the chosen patriarch has not learned from his earlier mistake. And yet, in the middle of his failure, the promise finally arrives. Isaac is born.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Abraham repeats the sin of Genesis 12, telling Abimelech that Sarah is his sister.
2. Abimelech, the pagan king, has more integrity than Abraham. God protects Sarah by appearing to Abimelech in a dream.
3. Verse 7 calls Abraham a "prophet", the first occurrence of the word in Scripture, applied to the man who has just lied.
4. Abraham prays for Abimelech's household and they are healed. God uses imperfect prophets.
5. Isaac is born in 21:2: "The LORD did to Sarah as he had promised." Twenty-five years of waiting is summed up in one verse.

6. Isaac's name means "he laughs." Sarah says, "God has made laughter for me; everyone who hears will laugh over me."
7. Tensions flare again between Sarah and Hagar. Sarah demands Hagar and Ishmael be cast out. God tells Abraham to do as Sarah says.
8. God meets Hagar in the wilderness a second time. He hears the boy's voice and provides water.
9. The chapter ends with Abraham planting a tamarisk tree at Beersheba and calling on the name of the LORD, "the Everlasting God."

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 20 and 21 belong together as a pair. The first chapter shows Abraham's continuing weakness; the second shows God's unfailing promise. The point is the same one the Bible has been making since Noah: God's covenant succeeds despite his people, not because of them.

Genesis 20 is one of those passages that makes Christians uncomfortable. Abraham, the great patriarch, lies again. He tells Abimelech of Gerar that Sarah is his sister, and Abimelech, believing him, takes her into his household. This is the second time Abraham has done this. He has not learned. The man whom we have come to admire for his faith is also a man who repeatedly tries to protect himself by endangering his wife.

But notice what God does. God comes to Abimelech in a dream and warns him. Abimelech, a pagan king, listens to God and protects Sarah. The text is making a point: God can protect the covenant even from the covenant-bearer's failures. The promise does not depend on Abraham's performance. It depends on God's faithfulness.

And then comes one of the most surprising verses in Genesis. God tells Abimelech, "He is a prophet, and he will pray for you, and you shall live." Abraham, who has just lied, is called a prophet. He is told to pray for the king he wronged. And God heals Abimelech's household. This is the strange and beautiful logic of grace. God uses imperfect people. He calls liars prophets. He turns failures into intercessors. If you have been waiting to be useful to God until you are no longer a sinner, you will wait forever. Abraham was useful to God while still sinning.

Genesis 21 then brings the long-awaited miracle. Verse 2: "Sarah conceived and bore Abraham a son in his old age at the time of which God had spoken to him." Twenty-five years compressed into a single sentence. The covenant has produced its first fruit. The promise has begun to be fulfilled in flesh and blood. Isaac is here.

His name, laughter, captures everything. Sarah laughed in Genesis 18 when she overheard the promise. She is laughing now in Genesis 21 because the promise has come true. "Everyone who hears will laugh over me." The God who keeps impossible promises is the God who produces joy in his people. The laughter of unbelief has been transformed into the laughter of fulfillment.

But the chapter also contains pain. Tensions with Hagar and Ishmael flare again. Sarah demands they be cast out. Abraham is grieved, Ishmael is his son too. But God tells Abraham to do as Sarah says, and God promises to take care of Hagar and Ishmael himself. He does. He meets Hagar in the wilderness a second time, hears the boy's cries, opens her eyes to see a well, and pledges to make Ishmael into a nation.

Paul will later use this episode allegorically in Galatians 4 to contrast the two covenants, Hagar representing slavery and law, Sarah representing freedom and promise. The point Paul draws out is already present in the narrative: the child of the slave woman cannot be the heir of the promise. The promise comes through the impossible son, miraculously given, freely received.

The chapter ends with Abraham planting a tamarisk tree at Beersheba and calling on the name of the LORD, El Olam, the Everlasting God. After twenty-five years of waiting, after laughter and tears, after lies and miracles, Abraham worships the God whose timeline is eternal and whose promises do not fail.

STEP 5

Connection

Twenty-five years ago in this plan's timeline, Abraham was called and given a promise. Today, the promise is fulfilled in Isaac. The faithfulness of God across that long wait is what the whole Bible is about. Isaac is the promised son, born by miracle to aged parents, and he points forward to the greater promised Son, born by miracle to a virgin, the true offspring of Abraham in whom all nations will be blessed. Sarah's laughter prefigures Mary's Magnificat. The God who made Sarah laugh is the God who makes his people sing.

STEP 6

Application

The promise comes, but it takes time. Today, take heart from twenty-five years. The God who fulfilled the promise to Abraham is the same God who has made promises to you. If you have been waiting for years for something, a healing, a reconciliation, a child, a calling, a deliverance, Abraham's story is your story too. God does not forget. He has not abandoned you. The timeline of fulfillment is not the timeline of impatience.

And take heart from the fact that Abraham, who lied repeatedly, was called a prophet and used by God to bring healing. Your failures do not disqualify you from being used by God. The covenant rests on him, not on you. Keep walking. Keep praying. Keep planting trees of worship in every place God brings you. The Everlasting God is faithful.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what you are waiting for, and where waiting has tempted you to scheme.

Thank him that his promises come in his time.

Ask him to use you in the middle of your failures.

"And he believed the LORD, and he counted it to him as righteousness."

GENESIS 15:6

DAY 38 · WEEK 6

Genesis 22:1-24

The binding of Isaac, substitution, faith, the mountain of the Lord

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 24 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 22:1-24 with great care. This is one of the most theologically loaded chapters in the entire Old Testament, the binding of Isaac. Hebrews 11, Romans 8, and the entire Gospel of John echo this passage. Read it slowly, as if you have never read it before.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Isaac is the promised son. He is the fulfillment of twenty-five years of waiting, the carrier of the covenant, the link between Abraham and the great nation that is to come. And today, God asks Abraham to kill him. This chapter is one of the most disturbing and one of the most glorious in the Bible. It tests Abraham's faith to its absolute limit. It reveals the depth of his trust in God. And it foreshadows, more clearly than almost any other Old Testament passage, the sacrifice that God himself will one day make.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 1 frames the entire chapter: "After these things God tested Abraham." What follows is a test, not a divine cruelty.
2. God's command is excruciatingly specific: "Take your son, your only son Isaac, whom you love." Three layers of identity, son, only son, beloved.
3. Abraham rises "early in the morning", immediate obedience, the same phrase used in Genesis 19:27 when he prayed for Sodom.
4. The three-day journey to Moriah gave Abraham time to second-guess. He did not turn back.

5. Verse 5 contains a remarkable statement: “We will worship and come again to you.” Abraham expected to return WITH Isaac.
6. Verse 8: “God will provide for himself the lamb.” This becomes the chapter’s central theological claim.
7. Isaac, old enough to carry the wood, does not resist. He is a willing participant in his own near-sacrifice.
8. The angel of the LORD calls from heaven at the climactic moment. The knife is stopped mid-air.
9. A ram is caught in the thicket. Abraham offers the ram “instead of his son”, substitutionary sacrifice in pure form.
10. Abraham names the place “The LORD will provide” (Yahweh-yireh).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 22 is one of the most theologically dense chapters in the Bible. It tests Abraham’s faith, demonstrates the principle of substitutionary sacrifice, and foreshadows the death of Christ with such specificity that it is hard to read any other way once you see it.

The chapter opens with a sentence that frames everything. “After these things God tested Abraham.” This is a test. God is not changing his mind about the covenant. He is not reverting to child sacrifice. He is testing the depth of Abraham’s faith. Abraham does not know it is a test. We, the readers, are told. This is important. Abraham acts in faith without knowing the outcome. We watch knowing how the story ends. Both perspectives matter.

God’s command lands with maximum weight. “Take your son, your only son Isaac, whom you love, and go to the land of Moriah, and offer him there as a burnt offering.” Three terms of endearment piled on top of each other. The very son who was promised. The son for whom Abraham waited twenty-five years. The son in whom the covenant rests. Offer him. The Hebrew is clear: kill him and burn him.

Abraham’s response is the stuff of faith’s hall of fame. He gets up early the next morning. He saddles the donkey. He gathers wood. He takes Isaac and two servants. He goes. There is no argument, no negotiation, no delay. Hebrews 11 tells us what was going on in his heart: “He considered that God was able even to raise him from the dead, from which, figuratively speaking, he did receive him back.” Abraham reasoned this way: God promised that through Isaac my offspring would be reckoned. If I kill Isaac, God must raise him from the dead, because his promise cannot fail. This is faith at its zenith, trusting God’s faithfulness even more than the apparent meaning of his command.

The three-day journey is excruciating. Abraham had time to second-guess. He did not. When they arrived, he told the servants, “Stay here with the donkey; I and the boy will go over there and worship and come again to you.” Notice: we will come again. Plural. Abraham expected to return with Isaac, one way or another. He did not know how, but he knew God.

The most haunting moment in the chapter is verse 7. Isaac, carrying the wood, asks his father: “Behold, the fire and the wood, but where is the lamb for a burnt offering?” Abraham’s answer is one of the most beautiful sentences in the Old Testament: “God will provide for himself the lamb.” It is both a comforting word to Isaac and a prophecy Abraham could not have fully understood. God will provide the lamb. Centuries later, John the Baptist will see Jesus walking toward him and say, “Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world.” God did provide. He provided himself.

The climactic moment comes with the knife raised. The angel of the LORD calls from heaven. Abraham’s hand is stayed. He sees a ram caught in a thicket. He sacrifices the ram “instead of his son.” This is substitutionary atonement in its purest visual form. The son is spared because the ram dies in his place. Abraham names the place “The LORD will provide”, Yahweh-yireh.

The chapter ends with a renewed and intensified promise. Because Abraham did not withhold his son, God will surely bless him, multiply his offspring as the stars and the sand, and through his offspring all the nations of the earth will be blessed. The blessing is now sealed by Abraham’s tested obedience.

But the deepest layer of this chapter only becomes visible from the New Testament side. Abraham was asked to do what he was, in the end, not asked to complete. God himself, however, did not spare his only beloved Son. Romans 8:32 echoes Genesis 22 directly: “He who did not spare his own Son but gave him up for us all, how will he not also with him graciously give us all things?” The same word, did not spare, appears in both. At Moriah, the son was spared. At Calvary, the Son was not. Because God provided for himself the Lamb.

STEP 5

Connection

The Abrahamic Covenant has been given, cut, signed, fulfilled in Isaac’s birth, and now tested at the mountain of the LORD. The mountain is Moriah, the same region where the Temple will later be built, where centuries of sacrifices will be offered, and (according to Jewish tradition) very near where Christ will be crucified. The chapter is a foreshadowing of the Gospel itself. The beloved son carrying wood up the hill of the LORD. The substitute provided by God. The son spared because another died in his place. The blessing of all nations flowing from one obedient man. Every detail points forward to Calvary.

STEP 6

Application

What is your Isaac? It is a question every believer must eventually face. What has God given you that you would struggle to give back to him? It might be a relationship. A career. A child. A reputation. A dream. The God who tests his people will, sooner or later, ask you to hold whatever you love with an open hand. He may not require you to give it up. He often does not. But he requires you to be willing.

This is hard. It feels like cruelty when you first encounter it. But it is mercy. God knows that whatever you cannot release will eventually rule you. The thing you grip most tightly is the thing most likely to become your god. He asks you to release Isaac so that Isaac can be received back, but as gift, not as idol.

Today, name your Isaac. Bring it before God. Hold it loosely. And remember: the God who tested Abraham is the same God who did not spare his own Son. He has already given his most. Trust him with yours.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he did not spare his own Son for you.

Ask him to show you what you are holding too tightly, and to help you open your hand.

Praise Christ as the Lamb God provided.

Psalm 105:23-45

From Joseph to the Exodus, God's faithfulness through adversity

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 105:23-45 slowly, twice. This is the second half of the historical psalm we began on Day 29. Today's section covers Joseph in Egypt through the Exodus, God's faithfulness across centuries and through hardship. It is the perfect bridge from the patriarchal stories to the next phase of God's covenant work.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 105 began with Abraham and the patriarchs. Today's portion picks up at Joseph's descent into Egypt and traces God's faithfulness through the years of slavery, the plagues, the Exodus, and the wilderness wanderings, all the way to the gift of the land. The psalm is a sweeping summary of the next several units in this plan. It rehearses what God has done so that the people of God will know how to give thanks.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 23: "Then Israel came to Egypt; Jacob sojourned in the land of Ham." The patriarchal family becomes a nation in exile.
2. Verse 24: "And the LORD made his people very fruitful and made them stronger than their foes." Multiplication in exile.
3. Verse 25 is striking: "He turned their hearts to hate his people." Even Egyptian hostility is under God's sovereignty.
4. Moses and Aaron are sent, chosen instruments for the deliverance to come.
5. Verses 27-36 summarize the ten plagues in poetic form. Each is an attack on Egypt's gods.

6. Verse 37: “Then he brought out Israel with silver and gold, and there was none among his tribes who stumbled.” Provision and protection.
7. Verses 39-41: The pillar of cloud, the manna, the water from the rock, wilderness providence.
8. Verse 42 is the theological refrain: “For he remembered his holy promise, and Abraham, his servant.” Everything that happened was the fulfillment of the covenant.
9. The psalm ends with the gift of the land, “the lands of the nations”, and the call to praise the LORD.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 105:23-45 is the divine view of Israel’s long story. From the ground, the descent into Egypt looked like tragedy. The years of slavery looked like abandonment. The plagues and the Exodus looked like a contested struggle. From God’s perspective, every step was the fulfillment of his promise to Abraham. This is what historical psalms do. They take the grand sweep of redemptive history and show how every event served God’s covenantal purposes.

Verse 23 introduces Egypt by saying Jacob “sojourned in the land of Ham.” This is theologically loaded. Ham was Noah’s son, and the land of Ham represents the post-flood world outside the line of promise. Israel is now in that world, far from the land of promise, surrounded by foreign gods, growing in number among people who do not know the LORD.

But notice verse 24: “He made his people very fruitful and made them stronger than their foes.” This echoes Genesis 1:28, be fruitful and multiply. The dominion mandate is being fulfilled even in slavery. God’s people grow in number in the very land that will eventually try to crush them. This is one of the great patterns of biblical theology. God multiplies his people in the most hostile environments.

Verse 25 is one of the most theologically remarkable verses in the Psalter: “He turned their hearts to hate his people, to deal craftily with his servants.” Even Egyptian hostility was under God’s sovereign control. This does not mean God caused sin in the Egyptians’ hearts. It means he ordered history in such a way that their natural hostility served his redemptive purpose. The same Pharaoh who oppressed Israel becomes the means by which Israel is forged into a nation and then delivered with mighty signs. Romans 9 will appeal to this principle when Paul discusses God’s sovereignty over Pharaoh’s hardening.

The psalm then summarizes the plagues. What strikes the modern reader is how each plague is described as God’s action. He turned waters to blood. He sent flies. He gave them hail. He spoke and locusts came. The plagues are not natural disasters. They are direct interventions of the covenant Lord against the gods of Egypt. Each plague targets a specific deity, Hapi the Nile god, Heqet the frog goddess, Ra the sun god, and so on. The plagues are theological warfare.

The Exodus itself is described as victory and provision. "Then he brought out Israel with silver and gold, and there was none among his tribes who stumbled." The people who entered Egypt as a small clan leave as a great nation, loaded with the wealth of their oppressors, none of them sick or weak. This is the God who keeps his promises.

And then verses 39-41 cover the wilderness. The cloud by day, the fire by night. Manna from heaven. Water from the rock. The providence of God in the desert. The psalmist is preparing us for the next two units of our reading, Exodus through Deuteronomy, and reminding us that this whole period was God's faithful provision.

Verse 42 is the hinge: "For he remembered his holy promise, and Abraham, his servant." Everything in the Exodus story flows from the Abrahamic Covenant. The plagues, the deliverance, the wilderness provision, the inheritance of the land, all of it is the fulfillment of what God promised Abraham four hundred years earlier. The covenants of God do not expire. They unfold.

The psalm closes with the gift of the land. God gave them the lands of the nations. They received the fruit of others' labor. Not because they deserved it, but because God had promised. And the only fitting response is praise. Hallelujah.

STEP 5

Connection

Today's psalm is a bridge. It looks back over what we have read, God's covenant with Abraham, his faithfulness through the patriarchs, his preservation in Egypt, and forward to what we will read next: the Exodus, the wilderness, and the entry into the land. Everything that happens in the next several units of this plan is the unfolding of the promise made to Abraham. The psalm helps us see the whole arc.

STEP 6

Application

Live in the awareness that every part of your story is part of God's larger story. The descent into difficult times may feel like loss, but God multiplied Israel in Egypt. The years of waiting may feel like abandonment, but God remembered his promise. The hostility you face may feel personal, but God has used the hostility of others to forge his people for generations. Whatever you are walking through today, ask the question Psalm 105 keeps asking: how is this serving God's larger purposes? You may not know in the moment. Israel did not know in the moment. But God remembered, and he is remembering still.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for being faithful across long years of waiting and trouble.

Tell him about a season that feels like Egypt, and ask him to make you fruitful there.

Ask him to bring you into all he has promised.

DAY 40 · WEEK 6

Genesis 23:1-24:67

Sarah's death; Isaac and Rebekah, the covenant line continues

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 87 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 23:1-24:67. This is a Long reading covering Sarah's death and burial, then the extended narrative of finding a wife for Isaac. Read steadily; do not get bogged down in the details of negotiation. The heart of these chapters is the careful preservation of the covenant line.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Twenty-five years after the call, ten years after Isaac's birth, Sarah dies at 127. Abraham, now 137, buries her in a cave he purchases from the Hittites. This is the first piece of the promised land that the patriarchal family actually owns. Then attention turns to the next generation: a wife must be found for Isaac, and it must not be a Canaanite woman. Abraham sends his trusted servant on a journey to find a wife from his own people. The result is the beautiful story of Rebekah, and the covenant line continues.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Abraham bargains carefully and pays full price (400 shekels of silver) for the cave of Machpelah. The land is legally his.
2. Genesis 24 is the longest single chapter in Genesis, the longest piece of patriarchal narrative.
3. Abraham makes the servant swear by placing his hand under Abraham's thigh, a solemn oath, perhaps connected to circumcision.
4. The servant prays specifically for guidance and asks for a sign, and God answers his prayer before he finishes.

5. Rebekah's offer to water the camels (each drinks 20+ gallons) is the sign of her generous, hospitable character.
6. The servant attributes everything to God: "the LORD has led me" (verse 27), "the LORD has prospered my way" (verse 56).
7. Rebekah is asked, not commanded, whether she will go. Her "I will go" echoes Abraham's earlier obedience.
8. Isaac is meditating in the field at evening when Rebekah arrives. The covenant line is renewed in the next generation.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 23 and 24 are quiet chapters compared to what has come before. There is no dramatic test like Moriah, no destruction like Sodom. But they are essential to the story. Sarah dies, the first ancestor of Israel to be buried in the land of promise. And Isaac is given a wife, ensuring that the covenant line will continue.

The death of Sarah is significant. Abraham, who had been promised the land of Canaan as an everlasting possession, owns nothing in it until now. He must buy a cave from the Hittites to bury his wife. The chapter records the negotiation with great care, Abraham insists on paying full price, refusing the offer of a gift. He wants legal title. This is the first piece of the promised land that actually belongs to Abraham's family, and it is, ironically, a grave. The patriarchs will own the land as dead before they possess it as living. Their tombs become the down payment on the inheritance.

Genesis 24 then turns to the future. Abraham is concerned that Isaac not marry a Canaanite woman. The covenant family must remain distinct. So he sends his servant on a long journey back to Mesopotamia to find a wife from his own people. This is not about ethnic purity for its own sake. It is about preserving a household where the LORD will be known and the covenant will be lived out.

The chapter is remarkable for how prominently prayer features. The servant prays for guidance. He asks for a specific sign. And God answers, before the prayer is even finished, Rebekah appears. Notice how the servant attributes everything to God. He does not boast about his own perceptiveness. He says the LORD has led him, the LORD has prospered his way, the LORD has shown steadfast love. This is what biblical providence looks like in practice. A person walks in obedience, prays for guidance, and recognizes God's hand in what happens.

Rebekah is presented as the ideal partner for Isaac. She is generous, watering ten thirsty camels is no small thing. She is hospitable, inviting strangers to her family's home. She is courageous, willing to leave her home and travel to a husband she has never met. And critically, she is willing. When her family asks if she will go, she says, "I will go." Her words echo Abraham's response decades earlier: he went, when called. Now she goes, when called. The pattern of faith is repeating in a new generation.

The chapter ends with Isaac meditating in the field at evening. He looks up and sees the camels coming. Rebekah looks up and sees Isaac. They marry, and Isaac loves her. The covenant line continues. The promise is being passed to the next generation, not by accident or by mere biological succession, but by the careful providence of God.

STEP 5

Connection

Sarah's burial and Isaac's marriage are two halves of the same theme: the covenant line is being preserved across generations. The cave of Machpelah will eventually receive Abraham, Isaac, Rebekah, Jacob, and Leah, the first lasting presence of the covenant family in the promised land. And Rebekah's "I will go" echoes Abraham's call, preparing us for Jacob and Joseph and all who will follow in the line of faith.

STEP 6

Application

The covenant family is preserved through ordinary obedience and prayer. The servant in Genesis 24 is a model. He prays for guidance. He walks in obedience. He recognizes God's hand. He attributes every success to the LORD. Today, take his pattern with you. Pray about the decisions in front of you, however small. Walk in obedience. When good things happen, name them as gifts. The Christian life is largely the daily, quiet practice of trusting God's providence in unremarkable circumstances.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the quiet faithfulness that carried his promises forward.

Ask him to help you pray for guidance and see his hand in ordinary things.

Pray for the next generation of believers around you.

DAY 41 · WEEK 6

Genesis 25:1-26:35

Abraham's death; Jacob and Esau; Isaac's covenant renewed

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 60 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 25:1-26:35. The first chapter records Abraham's death and the birth of Jacob and Esau. The second focuses on Isaac, his struggles with the Philistines, the renewal of the covenant to him, and Esau's marriage to Hittite women. Watch for how the patterns of Abraham's life are repeating in Isaac's.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Abraham is 175 when he dies, having lived to see Isaac married and the covenant pass to the next generation. After his death, the story narrows to Isaac. Isaac is in many ways the quietest of the patriarchs, there are fewer dramatic episodes in his life than in his father's or his son's. But this chapter shows that the covenant continues to operate. Isaac and Rebekah struggle with infertility, just as Abraham and Sarah did. Twins are born, Esau and Jacob. And the same kinds of trials and blessings that marked Abraham's life now mark Isaac's.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Abraham takes another wife, Keturah, and has more children, but Isaac alone inherits everything (25:5).
2. Abraham dies "in a good old age, an old man and full of years", the first peaceful death in the Bible.
3. Isaac and Ishmael bury Abraham together at Machpelah. Family reconciliation at the grave.
4. Rebekah is barren for twenty years. Isaac prays for her, and she conceives.
5. Two nations struggle in Rebekah's womb. God tells her: "the older shall serve the younger."

6. Esau sells his birthright for stew. The text notes: “Thus Esau despised his birthright.”
7. Genesis 26 echoes Abraham’s life in striking ways: famine, deception about a wife being a sister, conflict over wells.
8. God renews the covenant to Isaac: “I will multiply your offspring… in your offspring all the nations of the earth shall be blessed.”
9. Esau marries two Hittite women, causing grief to Isaac and Rebekah.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 25 and 26 mark a transition. The Abraham era ends; the Isaac era begins. But the patterns continue. The covenant promises are renewed. The same struggles arise. The same faithfulness of God is displayed.

Abraham’s death is significant in its peacefulness. He is described as dying “in a good old age, an old man and full of years, and was gathered to his people.” This is the first instance in Scripture of the phrase “gathered to his people”, language that suggests something more than mere burial, perhaps anticipating the reunion of the patriarchs in the life to come. Abraham’s death is not tragic but full. He has seen the promise begin to be fulfilled, and he dies in peace.

The mention of Ishmael at the burial is touching. Isaac and Ishmael, half-brothers long separated by Sarah’s demand and Hagar’s exile, come together at their father’s grave. Death often brings reconciliation. The covenant blessing passes to Isaac, but the brotherly bond between the two sons is recognized at this moment.

Then attention shifts to Isaac and Rebekah. They have been married for twenty years without children. The pattern of barrenness is repeating, the same struggle Sarah faced. The covenant family seems perpetually on the edge of extinction, and God always answers prayer just in time. Isaac prays. Rebekah conceives.

But the pregnancy is difficult. Twins are wrestling inside her. She inquires of the LORD, and God reveals the future: “Two nations are in your womb… and the older shall serve the younger.” This is the doctrine of election in narrative form. Before either child has done anything good or bad, God has chosen the younger over the older. Paul will pick this up in Romans 9 as a key proof text for God’s sovereign election. The blessing does not flow by birth order. It flows by God’s choice.

Esau and Jacob are born. Esau, the elder, becomes a man of the field, a skilled hunter, his father’s favorite. Jacob, the younger, dwells in tents and is his mother’s favorite. The stage is set for the conflict that will dominate the rest of Genesis.

The famous birthright episode shows the contrast in character. Esau comes in from the field hungry. He sees Jacob's stew. He demands it. Jacob, calculating and opportunistic, offers it in exchange for the birthright. Esau swears, eats, and goes on his way. The text's verdict is brief and damning: "Thus Esau despised his birthright." The blessing of God meant so little to him that he traded it for a meal. Hebrews 12 will hold this up as a warning to believers: do not be like Esau, who sold his blessing for a single meal.

Genesis 26 then echoes Abraham's life in striking ways. Famine drives Isaac to Gerar, the same place his father went. Isaac lies about Rebekah, calling her his sister, the same lie his father told twice. Abimelech (or his successor) again deals with the patriarch's deception. Isaac digs wells; the Philistines stop them up; conflict ensues. The patterns are remarkably similar.

But God renews the covenant to Isaac. "I will be with you and will bless you… and I will establish the oath that I swore to Abraham your father. I will multiply your offspring as the stars of heaven… and in your offspring all the nations of the earth shall be blessed." The promise made to Abraham now belongs to Isaac. The covenant is generational. It does not stop with one person; it is passed to the next.

The chapter ends with a quiet sorrow: Esau marries two Hittite women, against the covenant pattern of marrying within the covenant family. The choices of Esau will have consequences for centuries to come.

STEP 5

Connection

The covenant passes from Abraham to Isaac. The same pattern that marked Abraham, barrenness then miraculous birth, famine then provision, deception then divine protection, now marks Isaac. And the line of promise continues to narrow: not all of Isaac's children, but Jacob in particular, will carry the covenant forward. Romans 9 will return to this chapter to show that God's saving purposes operate by election, not by ethnic descent.

STEP 6

Application

Two warnings emerge from these chapters. First, do not despise your birthright. Whatever spiritual blessings God has given you, your salvation, your church, your access to Scripture, your privileged knowledge of the gospel, do not trade them for cheap satisfactions. Esau sold his birthright for stew because the stew was tangible and the birthright was not. Watch out for the daily temptation to trade eternal goods for momentary pleasures.

Second, take heart that God is faithful across generations. The covenant did not stop with Abraham. It passed to Isaac. The God who blessed your spiritual parents and grandparents is the God who blesses you, and who will bless your children if you walk in faith. The covenant is generational. Your faithfulness today shapes the spiritual inheritance of those who come after you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for carrying his covenant across generations to you.

Confess where you have despised something precious for something immediate.

Ask him to help you pass the faith to someone who comes after you.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And he believed the LORD, and he counted it to him as righteousness."

GENESIS 15:6

REST

Meditation

Genesis 15:6 is the single most important Old Testament verse for understanding the New Testament's doctrine of salvation. Paul quotes it in Romans 4 and Galatians 3 as the proof that justification has always been by faith, never by works.

Three things are happening here. Abraham believed, faith is the means, not earning. The LORD counted, the accounting is divine, not human. And what was counted was righteousness, not credit toward future righteousness, but righteousness itself.

Say the verse and notice: Abraham did nothing to earn this. He had lied about Sarai. He would lie again. He had not yet been circumcised. He had not yet faced Moriah. And he was reckoned righteous on the basis of believing. This is grace. This is also the verdict over you, if you have believed in Christ. Carry the verse with you as the legal verdict over your life. You are reckoned righteous, not because of who you are, but because of who Christ is.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

The week began with Abraham's bold intercession for Sodom and the contrasting end of Lot's compromised life. It moved through the long-awaited birth of Isaac, Sarah's laughter, the fulfillment of twenty-five years of waiting. Then came Genesis 22, the binding of Isaac. The mountain of Moriah. The wood carried by the son. The ram caught in the thicket. The substitute provided by God. You worshiped with Psalm 105:23-45, which carried the patriarchal story forward into the Exodus. You watched Sarah die and Isaac receive Rebekah. And the week closed with the birth of Jacob and Esau, and the long pattern of the unloved younger son being chosen by God.

The week was about tested faith. Faith that lies sometimes. Faith that laughs in disbelief and then in fulfillment. Faith that climbs the mountain with the knife. Faith that, in spite of all its weakness, is reckoned as righteousness.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

What is your Isaac? Genesis 22 asks every believer this question eventually: what has God given you that you would struggle to give back to him? Name it today. Hold it loosely. The God who tested Abraham is the same God who did not spare his own Son. He has already given his most. Trust him with yours.

How does the binding of Isaac point you to the cross? Every detail of Genesis 22 anticipates Calvary, the beloved son carrying wood up the hill, the substitute provided by God, the son spared because another died. But at Moriah, the son was spared. At Calvary, the Son was not. Why does this matter? Sit with the difference today. How does the cross deepen your reading of Abraham's near-sacrifice?

Where is your faith being tested right now, and what does Genesis 15:6 say to you in the test? Faith is not the absence of weakness. Abraham was reckoned righteous even with his lies still ahead of him. If you have believed in Christ, his righteousness has been reckoned to you, and that verdict holds even when your faith feels small.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that your standing with him is righteous in Christ, not good enough by your own effort.

Ask him to show you what you are holding too tightly and to help you hold it loosely.

Thank Jesus for carrying the wood and not being spared.

DAY 43 · WEEK 7

Genesis 27:1-28:22

The stolen blessing; Jacob's ladder, election and promise

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 67 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 27:1-28:22. These chapters tell the story of Jacob stealing Esau's blessing, his flight from his brother's wrath, and his vision of the ladder at Bethel. Notice the messiness of God's election, Jacob is a deceiver, and yet God claims him as the bearer of the covenant.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Isaac is old and nearly blind. He plans to bless Esau, his favorite son, before he dies. But Rebekah overhears and concocts a scheme: Jacob will pretend to be Esau and steal the blessing. The deception works. When Esau discovers it, he plans to kill Jacob, so Jacob flees to Rebekah's family in the east. On the way, he has a dream, the famous vision of the ladder reaching to heaven, with angels ascending and descending, and the LORD himself standing above. This is one of the most theologically rich dreams in the Old Testament.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Isaac wants to bless Esau, his favorite, despite God's word that the older would serve the younger.
2. Rebekah's deception is elaborate, goat skins on Jacob's hands, Esau's clothes on his body, savory food disguised as game.
3. Isaac is suspicious but ultimately deceived. He blesses Jacob, thinking he is Esau.
4. Esau's grief is real and intense: "Bless me, even me also, O my father!" He weeps bitterly.
5. Isaac's second blessing on Esau is much weaker, Esau will live by the sword and serve his brother.

6. Esau plans to kill Jacob “as soon as Father is dead.” Murderous intent toward a brother, echoes of Cain.
7. Jacob flees to Haran, sent by his parents on the pretext of finding a wife.
8. On the way, alone in the wilderness, Jacob has the dream of the ladder.
9. The angels ascend and descend on the ladder. The LORD stands above and renews the covenant promise.
10. Jacob’s response: “Surely the LORD is in this place, and I did not know it.” Awe meets reality.
11. He names the place Bethel (“house of God”) and vows that if God brings him back safely, the LORD will be his God.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 27 and 28 are a study in the messiness of God’s election. Jacob is not a hero. He is a deceiver, manipulating his blind father, profiting from his mother’s scheme, stealing what God had already chosen to give him. And yet God meets him on the run and renews the covenant. This is the doctrine of grace in narrative form. God’s choice does not wait for moral worthiness. It operates on the basis of his own purposes.

The deception in Genesis 27 is excruciating to read. Rebekah, who knew from the womb that Jacob would be the chosen one, does not trust God to bring it about. So she takes matters into her own hands. She prepares the deception. She gives Jacob detailed instructions. She even takes the blame herself: “Let your curse be on me, my son.” Jacob, more cautious than committed, hesitates only because he might get caught, not because the deception is wrong. The scheme works. Isaac is fooled. Jacob receives the blessing meant for Esau.

The aftermath is devastating. Esau returns with the game he had hunted. Isaac trembles when he realizes what has happened. Esau cries out, one of the most painful cries in Scripture: “Bless me, even me also, O my father!” Hebrews 12 records what happened next: “He found no chance to repent, though he sought it with tears.” The blessing once given could not be undone. Isaac speaks a secondary, lesser blessing over Esau, but the primary blessing is gone.

And then comes the consequence. Esau plans to kill Jacob. Rebekah, learning of this, sends Jacob away. The mother who manipulated to get her son the blessing now loses him, perhaps forever, the text suggests she never sees him again. The patriarchal family is fractured by deceit. Jacob flees with nothing but his staff. His scheming has cost him home, mother, father, and brother.

But God meets him on the road. In the wilderness, alone, with a stone for a pillow, Jacob has the dream. A ladder is set up between earth and heaven. The angels of God are ascending and descending on it. And the LORD stands above the ladder and speaks: "I am the LORD, the God of Abraham your father and the God of Isaac... and in you and your offspring shall all the families of the earth be blessed."

The covenant has just been renewed, to Jacob the deceiver, on the run, with nothing to commend him. This is grace. The same God who chose Jacob in the womb is choosing Jacob still. The promises made to Abraham, renewed to Isaac, are now passed to Jacob. The man does not deserve them. God gives them anyway. That is the definition of grace.

The image of the ladder is rich. It is the meeting place of heaven and earth. Angels move between the two realms. The God who seemed distant when Jacob fled is right above him. Centuries later, Jesus will tell Nathanael, "You will see heaven opened, and the angels of God ascending and descending on the Son of Man" (John 1:51). Jesus is the true ladder. He is the meeting place of heaven and earth. The dream Jacob saw was a preview of the incarnation. Jesus is the ladder that brings heaven down to those who are running from their own messes.

Jacob's response is awe. "Surely the LORD is in this place, and I did not know it... This is none other than the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven." He renames the place Bethel, "house of God." And he makes a vow: "If God will be with me and will keep me... then the LORD shall be my God." It is a tentative response, half faith, half bargaining. Jacob is not yet the man he will become. But God has met him, and the journey toward transformation has begun.

STEP 5

Connection

The covenant has now been renewed to all three patriarchs, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Each time, God renews it freely, despite the failures of the recipients. Jacob's ladder will become one of the great Christological images of the Old Testament: Jesus is the true ladder, the meeting place of heaven and earth, the one in whom the promises to Abraham finally find their fulfillment.

STEP 6

Application

If God only worked through moral heroes, none of us would qualify. Jacob was a manipulator. Rebekah was a schemer. Isaac was favoring the wrong son. Esau was profane. And in the middle of this dysfunctional family, God's grace ran on, choosing, renewing, blessing. Today, take comfort from the fact that the God of Jacob is the God of imperfect people. He is not waiting for you to clean up your act before he meets you on the road. He is the God who shows up at Bethel, wherever you are, however you got there, with whatever stones you have for pillows. Look up. The ladder is open. Christ is the meeting place. And the same covenant promises are spoken over you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he meets imperfect people on the run, and tell him where you have been running.

Thank Christ as the true ladder between heaven and earth.

Ask him to speak to you in your own wilderness.

Genesis 29:1-30:43

Jacob with Laban; the twelve sons; God's providence

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 76 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 29:1-30:43. Jacob arrives in Haran, meets Rachel, works for Laban, gets deceived into marrying Leah, marries Rachel as well, and fathers eleven of the twelve tribes of Israel. This is a long, complicated, messy stretch, but it is also the formation of the people of God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Jacob arrives in Haran and meets Rachel at the well. He falls in love with her and agrees to work seven years for Laban as a bride price. Laban, every bit as crafty as Jacob, substitutes Leah on the wedding night. Jacob discovers the deception in the morning but must work another seven years to also marry Rachel. What follows is the painful, fertile, complicated story of how the twelve sons of Jacob, the fathers of the twelve tribes of Israel, were born. It is a story of sibling rivalry, jealousy, manipulation, and the slow forming of a nation.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Jacob meets Rachel at a well, echoing his father's servant meeting Rebekah at a well.
2. Jacob falls in love at first sight and agrees to seven years of work as a bride price. The text says it seemed to him "but a few days because of the love he had for her."
3. Laban switches Leah for Rachel on the wedding night. Jacob, the deceiver, is deceived. Poetic justice.
4. Jacob must work seven more years for Rachel, but receives her immediately after the bridal week.
5. Leah is unloved but fertile; Rachel is loved but barren. The pattern of barrenness continues with the matriarchs.

6. Leah names her first four sons with theological intent: Reuben ("the LORD has seen"), Simeon ("the LORD has heard"), Levi ("attached"), Judah ("praise").
7. Bilhah and Zilpah, the maidservants, are given as concubines, a repetition of the Hagar mistake on a larger scale.
8. Twelve sons (and one daughter, Dinah) are born across the four mothers, the future twelve tribes of Israel.
9. Jacob and Laban's economic struggle (chapter 30:25-43) shows God blessing Jacob despite Laban's repeated manipulations.

STEP 4

Interpretation

These two chapters cover roughly twenty years of Jacob's life, his years in Haran working for Laban, marrying both Leah and Rachel, and fathering the children who would become the twelve tribes of Israel. It is a long, painful, fertile period. And in the midst of all the dysfunction, God is forming a nation.

When Jacob arrives in Haran, he meets Rachel at a well. This is a deliberate echo of how Isaac's bride was found. The God who meets the covenant family at wells is providentially arranging marriages and futures. Jacob falls instantly in love with Rachel. He agrees to seven years of work for her hand. The text says it seemed to him "but a few days because of the love he had for her", one of the most romantic lines in the Bible.

But Laban is every bit as cunning as Jacob. On the wedding night, Laban substitutes Leah (the older sister) for Rachel. Jacob does not realize until the morning. The deception is shocking. The same Jacob who pretended to be Esau by wearing hairy goat skins is now deceived by a woman wearing a wedding veil. The deceiver is deceived. This is one of the Bible's clearest examples of divine justice working through ordinary circumstances. What Jacob did to Esau and Isaac, Laban now does to him. He reaps what he sowed.

But there is more here. The substitution of Leah for Rachel, the unloved sister for the loved one, sets up one of the great tensions of the rest of Genesis. Leah is "not loved" by Jacob (the Hebrew is striking, "hated" is too strong but "less loved" is too soft). And yet God sees her. He opens her womb while Rachel remains barren. Leah's first four sons are named with such theological intent: Reuben means "the LORD has seen my affliction." Simeon means "the LORD has heard that I am hated." Levi means "attached" (perhaps hoping Jacob will be attached to her). Judah means "praise", by the fourth son, Leah stops naming her babies in relation to her husband and starts naming them in praise to God. This is a profound shift. She has learned to find her satisfaction in the LORD rather than in the love of her husband.

And critically, it is Leah, not Rachel, who becomes the mother of Judah. Judah will be the tribe of David. Judah will be the tribe of Christ. The "loved" wife was barren; the "unloved" wife bore the line of Messiah. This is grace's preference for the overlooked.

The two maidservants, Bilhah and Zilpah, are then given to Jacob as concubines. This is a repetition of the Hagar mistake at a larger scale. Just as Sarah tried to fulfill the promise through Hagar, Rachel and Leah try to compete with each other through their servants. The result is twelve sons born across four mothers, in a household full of jealousy and rivalry. This is hardly the picture of a holy family. And yet, these twelve sons will become the twelve tribes of Israel. God forms the nation through this dysfunctional household.

Genesis 30 ends with a long economic conflict between Jacob and Laban. Laban has been cheating Jacob for years. Now Jacob, in turn, engineers a complicated breeding scheme that results in his flocks growing rapidly while Laban's diminish. The text is careful to note that God is the one prospering Jacob, but Jacob is hardly innocent in his methods. The two crafty men are locked in a battle of wits, and God uses it to make Jacob prosperous so he can eventually leave Haran with the resources to start a new life.

Connection

The twelve sons of Jacob are the foundation of the nation of Israel. The twelve tribes named in this chapter, Reuben, Simeon, Levi, Judah, Dan, Naphtali, Gad, Asher, Issachar, Zebulun, Joseph, Benjamin (born later), will become the structure of Israel for the next thousand years. Judah, in particular, will become the tribe of David, and from Judah will come Christ. The unloved wife Leah is therefore the great-great-grandmother of the Messiah. God's redemptive plan ran through the despised.

STEP 6

Application

If God can form his people out of this household, full of deception, jealousy, polygamy, and rivalry, he can form his people out of anything. Take heart if your own family or community feels too broken for God to use. Take heart if you yourself feel too tangled to be useful. The God of Jacob is the God of complicated stories. He works with what is, not with idealizations of what should be.

And if you feel unloved or overlooked, like Leah, remember that she is the one through whom Christ came. God sees those who are not seen by the world. He gives praise to the lips of those who have been demoted by others. The line that mattered most ran through her, not through the favored sister.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that no family story is too tangled for him to redeem, and name one in your own life.

Ask him to help you see and care for the overlooked as he did.

Tell him what you want to praise him for, as Leah learned to.

DAY 45 · WEEK 7

Psalm 121

The LORD is your keeper, the pilgrim's confidence

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 121 twice. This is one of the most beloved psalms in the Bible, the second of the Psalms of Ascent, sung by pilgrims journeying up to Jerusalem. It is a perfect psalm for Jacob's journey, and for yours.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 121 belongs to a group of fifteen psalms (Psalms 120-134) called the Psalms of Ascent. These were sung by Jewish pilgrims as they traveled up to Jerusalem for the great feasts. They are psalms of the road, of journey, danger, trust, and arrival. Psalm 121 specifically is a meditation on God as the keeper of his people on their pilgrimage. After several days walking through the Jacob narrative, the deceiver fleeing from home, traveling alone, having visions and disputes, this psalm is the appropriate pause. It teaches us how to pray as we travel.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 1: "I lift up my eyes to the hills. From where does my help come?" The hills could be a source of danger or a reminder of God's dwelling.
2. Verse 2 answers: "My help comes from the LORD, who made heaven and earth." The Creator is the keeper.
3. The word "keep" (Hebrew shamar) appears six times in eight verses, it is the spine of the psalm.
4. Verse 3: "He will not let your foot be moved; he who keeps you will not slumber." Constant vigilance.
5. Verse 4 expands: "Behold, he who keeps Israel will neither slumber nor sleep." God never rests off duty.

6. Verse 5: “The LORD is your keeper; the LORD is your shade on your right hand.” Protective presence.
7. Verses 7-8: “The LORD will keep you from all evil; he will keep your life. The LORD will keep your going out and your coming in, from this time forth and forevermore.” All-encompassing protection.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 121 is the song of the pilgrim. It begins with a question, “From where does my help come?”, and answers it definitively. Help comes from the LORD, the maker of heaven and earth. Everything else in the psalm flows from that initial confession.

The word that holds the psalm together is “keep”, shamar in Hebrew. It appears six times in just eight verses. The LORD keeps you. He keeps Israel. He keeps your life. He keeps your going out and your coming in. The psalm is essentially a meditation on the fact that God is the keeper of his people. He does not just save them; he keeps them. Salvation is the moment of rescue; keeping is the long, daily, faithful work of preservation that follows.

The psalm makes striking claims about God’s keeping. He will not let your foot be moved. He will not slumber. He will not sleep. These are claims about the unceasing vigilance of God. In a world where every other guardian eventually fails, sleeps, dies, looks away, God never does. The keeper of Israel is awake right now. The keeper of Israel is awake while you sleep. The keeper of Israel is awake when you are unconscious in surgery, when you are flying across oceans, when you are walking through your worst day. He never slumbers.

Verse 5 introduces a beautiful image: “The LORD is your shade on your right hand.” In the ancient Near East, shade was life. The sun beat down relentlessly, and shade was the difference between survival and death. God is shade, the merciful protection that makes life possible. And he is on your right hand, the closest position, the most attentive position.

The psalm closes with a promise that extends in every direction. The LORD will keep you from all evil. He will keep your life. He will keep your going out and your coming in. Every direction of travel, every threshold you cross, every door you walk through, God keeps. And the time frame is total: from this time forth and forevermore. The keeping does not end. Even death does not interrupt it. The same God who keeps you now will keep you through your final breath and into the life to come.

STEP 5

Connection

Jacob, fleeing from Esau, alone in the wilderness, dreamed of a ladder and heard the covenant promise renewed. Now he is on the long pilgrimage of Genesis 29-31, journeying through years of hard labor and difficult relationships. This psalm could have been his, a song for the pilgrim, sung by anyone who is walking through uncertain seasons. And it is yours, too. The God who kept Jacob is the God who keeps you.

STEP 6

Application

Today, lift your eyes. Wherever you are, whatever you are facing, lift your eyes from the immediate to the eternal. Your help is not in your own resources, your own planning, your own strength. Your help comes from the LORD, the maker of heaven and earth. The same God who flung galaxies into space is keeping you right now. He has not slumbered. He has not slept. His shade is on your right hand at this very moment.

And take comfort that God keeps "your going out and your coming in." This is total coverage. The mundane comings and goings of your day, the commute to work, the trip to the grocery store, the school pickup, the walk to the mailbox, all of it is under his keeping. There are no insignificant moments to a God who keeps every coming and going. He is involved in your whole life, not just the dramatic parts. Receive his keeping today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Lift your eyes to God and tell him where you need help today.
- Thank him that he never slumbers and is keeping you right now.
- Ask him to keep your going out and your coming in.

DAY 46 · WEEK 7

Psalm 124; Psalm 125

If the LORD had not been on our side

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 14 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 124 and Psalm 125 slowly, twice. Both are Psalms of Ascent. Psalm 124 looks back at past deliverance; Psalm 125 looks forward in confident trust. Together they are the song of those who have walked through hardship and arrived at certainty about who God is.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

We continue the Psalms of Ascent. Psalm 124 is attributed to David and reflects on what would have happened to Israel if the LORD had not been on their side. Psalm 125 then offers confident trust, those who trust in the LORD are like Mount Zion, which cannot be moved. Together they capture both the memory and the hope of God's people. They are perfect songs for those who have made it through difficulty and are walking by faith toward the future.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Psalm 124 opens with a hypothetical: "If it had not been the LORD who was on our side…", followed by vivid pictures of what would have happened.
2. The threats described are dramatic: men rising up, being swallowed alive, the floods sweeping us away, the torrent going over our soul.
3. Verse 6 turns to praise: "Blessed be the LORD, who has not given us as prey to their teeth!"
4. The bird-and-snare image (verse 7) captures the suddenness of God's deliverance.
5. The psalm closes with the same confession as Psalm 121:2, "Our help is in the name of the LORD, who made heaven and earth."

6. Psalm 125:1 opens with a simile: “Those who trust in the LORD are like Mount Zion, which cannot be moved.”
7. Verse 2: “As the mountains surround Jerusalem, so the LORD surrounds his people, from this time forth and forevermore.”
8. The psalm acknowledges the threat of evil (the “scepter of wickedness”) but promises it will not “rest on the land allotted to the righteous.”
9. It closes with the prayer: “Peace be upon Israel!”

STEP 4

Interpretation

These two short psalms complement one another. The first remembers past rescue. The second confidently anticipates future stability. Together they form the bipolar prayer of the believer: gratitude for what God has done, confidence in what God will do.

Psalm 124 begins with one of the most striking rhetorical devices in the Psalter. “If it had not been the LORD who was on our side…” And then the psalmist runs through the disasters that would have followed: enemies would have swallowed them alive, floods would have swept them away, torrents would have gone over their souls. The whole psalm is built on the contrary-to-fact conditional. If God had not acted, this would have happened. But God did act, and so we are here, singing.

This is one of the most important habits the believer can cultivate. Look back at your life and ask, Where did God intervene? Where did things turn out differently than they could have? The Christian’s memory is not random. It is curated by the Spirit to recall the acts of God. Every time you remember a deliverance, you are doing what Psalm 124 does. You are putting words to what would have been, in order to celebrate what is.

The bird-and-snare image of verse 7 is one of the most evocative pictures of rescue in the Psalter. “We have escaped like a bird from the snare of the fowlers; the snare is broken, and we have escaped!” Anyone who has ever felt trapped, by sin, by circumstance, by fear, by depression, knows what this image describes. The snare is real. The bird really is caught. And then suddenly the snare breaks and the bird is in the air. That is what salvation feels like.

Psalm 125 then turns to the future. “Those who trust in the LORD are like Mount Zion, which cannot be moved, but abides forever.” This is a remarkable promise. Those who trust in the LORD are themselves like Mount Zion, solid, enduring, eternal. Their faith is not just an internal feeling; it produces a kind of life that cannot be shaken. They become, in their very being, immovable.

And the image expands. “As the mountains surround Jerusalem, so the LORD surrounds his people.” Jerusalem is in the Judean hills, ringed by mountains on every side. The natural fortification was significant in ancient warfare. But the psalmist says God himself is the surrounding mountains around his people. Wherever the LORD’s people are, they are surrounded by his presence and protection. And this surrounding is permanent: from this time forth and forevermore.

The psalm is realistic about evil. The “scepter of wickedness” does come upon the land. But it will not rest there permanently. And the psalm closes with the simplest of prayers: “Peace be upon Israel!” Shalom, wholeness, flourishing, the fullness of God’s blessing.

STEP 5

Connection

The Psalms of Ascent fit naturally with Jacob’s life. His life has been a pilgrimage, flight from home, years in Haran, return to Canaan, descent into Egypt to come. The believer’s life is similarly a pilgrimage. We are journeying through this age toward our true home. These psalms teach us how to walk: looking back in gratitude, looking forward in trust, surrounded by the presence of the LORD.

STEP 6

Application

Practice two habits today. First, the habit of Psalm 124: look back. Take a few minutes today to remember one specific way God intervened in your life. Maybe it was a near accident avoided. Maybe it was a relationship saved. Maybe it was a sin you almost committed but didn’t. Maybe it was a prayer answered just in time. Name it. Thank him for it. Tell someone about it.

Second, the habit of Psalm 125: trust. Receive the promise that you, trusting in the LORD, are like Mount Zion. You cannot be ultimately shaken. The same mountains that surround Jerusalem are the encircling presence of God around your life. Whatever feels unstable today, your foundation is not. Pray Psalm 125 over yourself: I trust in the LORD. I am like Mount Zion. He surrounds me. Peace be upon me, in his name.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bless the LORD for a time he did not let you be overwhelmed, and tell him about it.

Thank him for the snares he has broken in your life.

Ask him to make your trust as settled as the mountains that surround Jerusalem.

DAY 47 · WEEK 7

Genesis 31:1-32:32

Jacob departs Laban; wrestling with God at Jabbok

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 75 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 31:1-32:32. Jacob finally leaves Laban, faces him in a confrontation, and then prepares to meet Esau. The chapter climaxes with the famous wrestling match at the Jabbok, where Jacob becomes Israel.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Jacob has spent twenty years working for Laban. Now the LORD tells him to return to the land of his fathers. He leaves secretly, taking his wives, children, and flocks. Laban pursues, the two confront one another, and they part with an uneasy treaty. But the bigger fear ahead is Esau. The brother Jacob deceived twenty years ago is on his way to meet him with four hundred men. The night before the meeting, Jacob is left alone, and there he wrestles with a mysterious man until dawn. The encounter changes everything.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Jacob to return, verse 3: “Return to the land of your fathers and to your kindred, and I will be with you.”
2. Rachel steals her father’s household gods, an action Jacob does not know about, but which puts the family in danger.
3. Laban pursues, accuses, searches, and ultimately makes a treaty with Jacob. The mound of stones (Mizpah) is the witness.
4. Jacob then faces Esau. He prays, the first recorded prayer of Jacob (32:9-12), recalling God’s promise.
5. He sends elaborate gifts ahead to appease Esau. Practical wisdom alongside prayer.

6. Alone at night, he wrestles with a “man” until daybreak. The man cannot prevail by force but disables Jacob’s hip.
7. Jacob refuses to let go without a blessing. He gets one, and a new name: Israel (“he strives with God”).
8. Jacob names the place Peniel (“face of God”), “I have seen God face to face, and yet my life has been delivered.”
9. He walks away limping. The wound is permanent.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 32 contains one of the most mysterious and important events in the Old Testament. Jacob wrestles all night with a man who turns out to be God. He emerges with a new name, a permanent limp, and a new identity.

The chapter is set up by Jacob’s fear. He is returning to face the brother he deceived. He is convinced Esau will kill him. So he prepares in three ways. First, he prays, the first recorded prayer of Jacob in Scripture, and it is full of acknowledged unworthiness: “I am not worthy of the least of all the deeds of steadfast love and all the faithfulness that you have shown to your servant.” Twenty years of dealing with Laban have humbled Jacob. He is no longer the confident schemer of Genesis 27. Second, he sends gifts ahead, wave after wave of livestock, to soften Esau’s heart. Third, he divides his family into two camps, so that if one is attacked, the other might escape.

Then night falls, and Jacob is left alone. A man comes and wrestles him until dawn. The text is deliberately ambiguous at first about who this man is. He is strong but cannot prevail by force. He touches Jacob’s hip and dislocates it. He pleads to be released as dawn breaks. Jacob refuses unless he receives a blessing. The man asks for Jacob’s name, and Jacob, for the first time honestly, admits “Jacob.” The name means “deceiver, supplanter.” Jacob is finally confessing who he has been.

And the man renames him. “Your name shall no longer be called Jacob, but Israel, for you have striven with God and with men, and have prevailed.” Israel means “he strives with God” or “God strives.” Jacob’s identity is fundamentally remade. The deceiver becomes the striver. The man who has spent his life manipulating now becomes the man who wrestles God face to face.

Jacob asks the man’s name. The man does not give it. Instead, he blesses Jacob and departs. Jacob, awestruck, names the place Peniel, “face of God”, and says, “I have seen God face to face, and yet my life has been delivered.” This was no ordinary man. This was the LORD himself, in some form that allowed face-to-face encounter without destroying Jacob.

And Jacob walks away limping. The wound is permanent. From this night forward, his body bears the mark of his wrestling with God. The point is profound. Encounter with God always leaves a mark. You do not walk away from God unchanged. The limp is not weakness; it is testimony. Every step Jacob takes for the rest of his life is a reminder that he met God and lived.

STEP 5

Connection

Jacob the deceiver becomes Israel, the name his descendants will bear for all of history. The covenant family now has its national name. And the wrestling at Peniel is a vivid picture of the believer's relationship with God: it is a struggle, but it is also intimate; it is wounding, but it is also blessing; it leaves us limping, but it gives us a new identity.

STEP 6

Application

Have you wrestled with God? Not in the casual sense, but in the deep sense, staying with him in prayer even when it feels like fighting, holding on for a blessing you cannot articulate, refusing to let go until something is changed in you. This is what serious prayer becomes for the maturing believer. It is not always pleasant. It may leave you limping. But it gives you a new name. Today, if there is something you have been wrestling with God about, a fear, a calling, a relationship, a deep question about your own identity, do not let go. Hold on. The blessing comes at dawn.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God honestly where you need to wrestle with him, and what you want from him.
- Ask him to show you who he is making you to be.
- Ask him to help you walk in what you have met of him, even if it leaves a mark.

Genesis 33:1-35:29

Reconciliation with Esau; Dinah; Bethel revisited

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 74 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 33:1-35:29. Jacob meets Esau and is received in unexpected love. Then comes the tragic Dinah episode. Then God calls Jacob back to Bethel, where the covenant is renewed and Rachel dies in childbirth.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The dreaded reunion with Esau is not what Jacob expected. Esau runs to meet him, embraces him, and weeps. The brothers reconcile, at least for the moment. But the next chapter is one of the most painful in Genesis: the rape of Dinah and the violent revenge of her brothers Simeon and Levi. After this disaster, God calls Jacob back to Bethel, where his journey began with the ladder vision. The covenant is renewed, and Rachel dies giving birth to Benjamin, the last of the twelve sons.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Esau runs to meet Jacob, embraces him, falls on his neck, and weeps. The reunion is more tender than Jacob expected.
2. Jacob calls Esau's face "like seeing the face of God", connecting the reconciliation to his Peniel encounter.
3. The brothers separate again. Reconciliation does not always mean continued closeness.
4. Dinah is raped by Shechem, son of the local ruler. The text is candid about the assault.
5. Simeon and Levi deceitfully arrange the circumcision of all the men, then attack while they are recovering. Mass murder.

6. Jacob rebukes them, but for pragmatic reasons, not moral ones. He fears retaliation, not the immorality of his sons.
7. God calls Jacob back to Bethel. He instructs the household to put away foreign gods, a partial reform.
8. The covenant is renewed at Bethel: "I am God Almighty: be fruitful and multiply." The Abrahamic promises are reaffirmed.
9. Rachel dies giving birth to Benjamin. She is buried near Bethlehem.
10. Isaac dies at the end of the chapter, and Esau and Jacob bury him together.

STEP 4

Interpretation

These three chapters cover a remarkable range, from joyful reunion to brutal violence to renewed covenant to family death. They are the swirling middle of Jacob's life.

The meeting with Esau confounds expectation. Jacob has been terrified for twenty years. He has prayed, sent gifts, divided his family. And Esau runs to him, embraces him, and weeps. The God who blessed Jacob at Peniel has also been at work in Esau. The brother Jacob defrauded has somehow let go of the wrong. They reconcile, at least for the moment. Notice Jacob's striking words: "I have seen your face, which is like seeing the face of God." Jacob is connecting his encounter with Esau to his encounter with God the night before. To see the face of someone you have wronged, and to be received in love, that is, in some sense, to see the face of God.

The brothers do not continue traveling together. Jacob declines Esau's invitation to live near him. Reconciliation does not always mean continued closeness. Sometimes the right thing after forgiveness is to let go and live separately. This is wisdom.

Genesis 34 is one of the hardest chapters in Genesis. Dinah, Jacob's only daughter, is raped by Shechem. Shechem then claims to love her and seeks marriage. Simeon and Levi, two of Dinah's brothers, deceive Shechem's people, telling them they will give Dinah in marriage if all the men of the city are circumcised. When the men are weakened and recovering from the procedure, Simeon and Levi attack and kill them all, plundering the city and taking the women and children captive. It is mass murder.

Jacob's response is notable for what it is not. He does not rebuke his sons for their wickedness, only for the danger they have put the family in. "You have brought trouble on me by making me stink to the inhabitants of the land." This is pragmatic concern, not moral confrontation. Jacob's parenting failures are evident. His silence at moral evil, first with Dinah, now with the sons' revenge, will haunt the family for generations. Genesis 49 will record his deathbed cursing of Simeon and Levi's anger.

But God calls Jacob back to Bethel. The journey that began there twenty years ago must end there. Jacob instructs his household to put away foreign gods. This is a partial reform, Jacob's household has been carrying idols all this time, and only now does he address it. The text is honest about how slow holiness is, even in the chosen family.

At Bethel, God appears again and renews the covenant. The promises given to Abraham, renewed to Isaac, renewed to Jacob at the ladder, are renewed once more. The God who began with Jacob is faithful to finish.

Then Rachel dies giving birth to Benjamin. The beloved wife of Jacob, the woman he worked fourteen years for, dies in labor. She names her son Ben-Oni ("son of my sorrow"), but Jacob renames him Benjamin ("son of my right hand"). The grief of the family is real, but the line of promise continues. The twelfth son is born. The twelve tribes are now complete.

The chapter closes with Isaac's death and burial. Esau and Jacob bury their father together at Machpelah. The patriarchs are being gathered to their people one by one.

STEP 5

Connection

The renewal of the covenant at Bethel ties Jacob's life full circle. He left there a fleeing deceiver; he returns as a wrestling man with a new name. The covenant promises remain unchanged. And the twelve sons are now complete, the twelve tribes that will become Israel.

STEP 6

Application

Reconciliation is possible. The brother you cannot face today, the wound you cannot imagine being healed, God can do it. Esau forgave Jacob, and the impossibility became reality. But also, reconciliation does not always mean continued closeness. Sometimes wisdom is to forgive and live separately. Both are biblical. Both are valid.

And take seriously the cost of parental silence. Jacob did not confront the moral evil in his own sons, and the consequences echo for generations. If you have children, or have influence over young people, speak up. Not just about danger, but about wickedness itself. Silence at evil teaches the next generation that evil is acceptable.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bring a strained relationship to God, and ask what he would have you do.

Ask him for the courage to name wrong where you see it, in love.

Ask him to renew your commitment to him at the places you have wandered from.

THE READING

Today's reading

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Behold, I am with you and will keep you wherever you go."

GENESIS 28:15

REST

Meditation

Genesis 28:15 is the promise God spoke to Jacob at Bethel, to a man who had just deceived his father, stolen his brother's blessing, and was fleeing for his life. He had nothing to commend him to God. And God said: "I am with you and will keep you wherever you go."

This is grace at its purest. The promise is not conditional on Jacob's behavior. It is unilateral. Notice the verbs, God will keep, God will bring, God will not leave. The promise rests entirely on God's faithfulness, not on Jacob's.

Say the verse to yourself. Hear the word "keep" as we heard it in Psalm 121 this week, the LORD as your keeper, never slumbering, watching over your going out and your coming in. Wherever you go, to work, into difficult relationships, into hard seasons, God is with you. By the end of this week, this verse should be your daily reminder that you are not alone.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

The week followed Jacob's whole arc. You read his stealing of Esau's blessing and his flight from home, and then the ladder vision at Bethel, where the covenant was renewed to a deceiver on the run. You watched him spend twenty years with Laban, marry Leah and Rachel, father eleven of the twelve tribes. You sang Psalm 121, the LORD as your keeper, and the Psalms of Ascent that followed. And then came Jacob's wrestling at Peniel, where he received a new name: Israel. And finally his reunion with Esau, where the brother he had wronged ran to him with embrace and tears.

The week's theme is transformation. Jacob the deceiver becomes Israel the striver. The man who manipulated for blessing learns to wrestle for it. And the God who began with him at Bethel keeps him through every twist of his road home.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where has God met you "on the run", in a season when you did not deserve it? Jacob was fleeing his consequences when God appeared at Bethel. Not as a reward for his obedience, but as grace in the middle of his failure. Name a moment in your own life when God met you despite you. How does that memory shape how you receive his grace today?

How does Jacob's wrestling at Peniel point you to Christ? Jacob wrestled with God and emerged with a new name, a permanent limp, and a blessing. The Christian's wrestling with God in prayer is not a struggle against an enemy but a struggle with a Father, and through Christ, every wrestling believer emerges with a new name and a blessing too. Where are you wrestling right now? What blessing are you holding out for?

What does it mean that "God is with you wherever you go"? Today, take the promise of Genesis 28:15 into the specifics of your week, your work, your home, your hardest relationships, the places where you feel most alone. God is with you in each. What would change if you really believed this?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he meets people who have nothing to commend them, and tell him where you need him to meet you.

Ask him to wrestle with you where he must, not to destroy you but to bless you.

Rest this Sabbath in Christ, the true ladder between heaven and earth.

DAY 50 · WEEK 8

Genesis 36:1-37:36

Esau's line; Joseph sold into Egypt, the Christ-type

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 77 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 36:1-37:36. The first chapter is Esau's genealogy. The second begins the Joseph narrative, the dreams, the brothers' hatred, the selling into slavery. Read the genealogy briefly and focus your attention on chapter 37.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Before turning to Joseph's story, Genesis pauses to record Esau's descendants, the Edomites. This is the standard biblical pattern: the line of promise narrows by first noting what happens to the other line. Esau gets a chapter. Then attention returns to Jacob's family and to Joseph. The chapter that follows introduces one of the longest sustained narratives in the Bible, the Joseph story, which will run for thirteen chapters to the end of Genesis. Joseph is seventeen years old, his father's favorite, gifted with prophetic dreams, and hated by his brothers. Today's reading ends with him in chains, on his way to Egypt.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Genesis 36 is the Edomite genealogy. Esau becomes a nation in his own right.
2. The chapter is included as a record but signals that Esau is now off the main path of God's redemptive purposes.
3. Genesis 37 opens: "Jacob lived in the land of his father's sojournings." The journey home is complete.
4. Joseph is seventeen, working with his brothers, and bringing bad reports of them to his father.
5. Jacob loves Joseph more than the others and makes him a special robe, a "coat of many colors" or a long-sleeved garment.

6. Joseph has two dreams. In the first, his brothers' sheaves bow to his. In the second, the sun, moon, and eleven stars bow to him.
7. Even Jacob rebukes Joseph for the second dream, but "kept the saying in mind" (verse 11).
8. The brothers see Joseph approaching at Dothan and plot to kill him. Reuben tries to save him; Judah suggests selling him instead.
9. Joseph is sold to Ishmaelite traders for twenty shekels of silver. He is taken to Egypt.
10. The brothers dip his coat in goat's blood and deceive Jacob, who "tore his garments and put sackcloth on his loins."

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 37 begins one of the most extended narratives in the Bible. The Joseph story will run thirteen chapters and dominate the rest of Genesis. It is a story of providence, suffering, betrayal, and reversal. And it begins with one of the most dysfunctional family scenes in the Old Testament.

Joseph is seventeen. He is Rachel's son, Jacob's favorite wife's firstborn, and so Jacob favors him. Jacob makes him a special robe, marking him out as the heir apparent. This favoritism is the same fault Jacob's own parents had, and the consequences are predictable. The brothers hate Joseph. They cannot speak peaceably to him.

Joseph does not help. He tells his brothers about his dreams, dreams in which they bow down to him. He brings their father bad reports about them. He is, by any honest reading, an entitled and immature young man. The text does not glorify Joseph in his teenage years. He is being prepared by God for greatness, but he is not yet great.

The plot to kill Joseph is chilling. The brothers see him approaching at Dothan, sent by his father to check on them, and they say, "Here comes this dreamer." They decide to kill him and throw him into a pit. Reuben, the oldest, tries to save Joseph by suggesting they not shed blood but throw him into a pit alive (intending to rescue him later). Then Judah, recognizing they could profit from selling Joseph, suggests they sell him to Ishmaelite traders. Joseph is sold for twenty shekels of silver.

This is the Old Testament's first sale of a person for money. The price, twenty shekels, is the value of a young male slave in the ancient Near East. The deal is done quickly, and Joseph is on his way to Egypt before the brothers have even finished celebrating.

They then deceive Jacob with Joseph's bloodied robe. The deceiver is deceived again. The same Jacob who fooled Isaac with goat skins and savory food is now fooled by his sons with goat's blood and Joseph's coat. The Hebrew is striking: "Identify, please", the same words Jacob's brothers say to him are the words Tamar will later say to Judah in chapter 38. The patterns of deception keep circling back.

Jacob's grief is total. He tears his clothes, puts on sackcloth, and refuses to be comforted. "I shall go down to Sheol to my son, mourning." The favorite son is gone. The light of Jacob's life has been extinguished. He has no idea that Joseph is alive, much less that Joseph will one day save the whole family.

But notice the last sentence of the chapter. "Meanwhile the Midianites had sold him in Egypt to Potiphar, an officer of Pharaoh, the captain of the guard." Joseph is in Egypt. The story is not over. What looks from the ground like total loss is, from heaven's perspective, the careful providential placement of a Hebrew son in the household of an Egyptian official. The God who promised Abraham four hundred years in Egypt is moving the pieces.

STEP 5

Connection

Joseph's descent into Egypt is the beginning of the fulfillment of God's prophecy to Abram in Genesis 15:13, "your offspring will be sojourners in a land that is not theirs and will be servants there." The four hundred years of Egyptian sojourning that culminates in the Exodus begins right here, with one teenage boy in chains on his way south.

STEP 6

Application

The worst day of Joseph's life, being sold into slavery by his own brothers, was the start of God's plan to save his family. This is sobering and hopeful. The events that seem most catastrophic in your life may be the very means by which God is positioning you for what he intends to do. You may not see it. Joseph certainly did not see it as the chains were clinking. But God's hand is in things you cannot trace.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God about a hardship, betrayal, or loss that you cannot yet make sense of.

Ask him to help you trust that he is at work even when you cannot see it.

Ask for eyes to see later what he was doing.

GENESIS 39:23

DAY 51 · WEEK 8

Genesis 38:1-39:23

Judah and Tamar; Joseph in Potiphar's house

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 53 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 38:1-39:23. Chapter 38 is the strange and difficult Judah-Tamar story, a pause in the Joseph narrative. Chapter 39 returns to Joseph in Potiphar's house. The two chapters together show the contrasting characters of two of Jacob's sons.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Joseph narrative pauses for a chapter to tell the story of Judah, the brother who suggested selling Joseph. Judah leaves the family, marries a Canaanite woman, has three sons, and then, through a strange series of events, finds himself confronted by his daughter-in-law Tamar with his own moral failure. The chapter is uncomfortable but theologically crucial. After Judah, attention returns to Joseph in Egypt, where his integrity in Potiphar's house leads first to promotion and then to imprisonment on false charges.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Judah leaves his family and marries a Canaanite, exactly what Abraham forbade Isaac from doing.
2. His first two sons, Er and Onan, both die under God's judgment for wickedness.
3. Judah sends Tamar back to her father's house, promising her his third son when he is older, a promise he breaks.
4. Tamar, denied her right, disguises herself as a prostitute and sleeps with Judah, who pledges his signet, cord, and staff.
5. When Tamar is found pregnant, Judah orders her burned, until she produces his signet, cord, and staff.

6. Judah's confession is honest: "She is more righteous than I." He acknowledges his sin.
7. Tamar bears twins. Perez (whose name appears in the genealogy of Christ) is born first.
8. Chapter 39: Joseph is now in Potiphar's house. The LORD is with him, and "all that he did, the LORD made it succeed."
9. Potiphar's wife repeatedly tries to seduce Joseph. He refuses, fleeing one day and leaving his garment behind.
10. She falsely accuses Joseph, and he is thrown into prison. Even there, "the LORD was with Joseph and showed him steadfast love."

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 38 and 39 are a study in contrasts. Judah, the brother who proposed selling Joseph, drifts away from the family, marries a Canaanite, and falls into serious moral failure. Joseph, the brother sold into slavery, lives in moral integrity in a foreign land. Both stories are essential to what comes next.

The Judah-Tamar story is strange and uncomfortable, but it is in the Bible for important reasons. First, it shows Judah's character at his worst. He treats Tamar as disposable, breaking his promise to give her his third son. He treats her again as disposable when he sleeps with what he thinks is a prostitute. And he is ready to have her burned to death when her pregnancy is discovered, until he learns the child is his. The chapter is devastating in its portrait of Judah's hypocrisy and double standard.

But it is also redemptive. When confronted with the evidence, Judah confesses: "She is more righteous than I." This is the first time in Genesis we see Judah taking honest moral responsibility. It is the seed of his eventual transformation. The Judah who emerges from chapter 38 chastened will be a different man than the Judah who proposed selling Joseph. And by chapter 44, he will be the one who offers himself in Benjamin's place, a foreshadowing of Christ himself.

The chapter is also significant because Perez, Tamar's son, becomes an ancestor of David and of Christ. The Messiah's lineage runs through this messy story, through a daughter-in-law disguised as a prostitute, through a patriarch caught in his hypocrisy. Matthew 1:3 names them: "Judah the father of Perez and Zerah by Tamar." Even the scandalous becomes part of God's redemptive plan.

Then Genesis 39 returns to Joseph. He is now a slave in the house of Potiphar, captain of Pharaoh's guard. And the text immediately strikes its theme: "The LORD was with Joseph, and he became a successful man." The phrase "the LORD was with Joseph" appears multiple times in the chapter. It is the key to everything. Joseph is in a foreign land, far from his family, working for a pagan master, and the LORD is with him. The covenant God of his fathers does not stay in Canaan. He travels with his people into exile.

Potiphar quickly recognizes Joseph's competence and gives him oversight of the entire household. Joseph rises from slave to chief of staff. Then comes the test. Potiphar's wife, Joseph's master's wife, repeatedly tries to seduce him. Joseph refuses, day after day. His refusal includes a profound theological statement: "How then can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?" Joseph does not just say he would be wronging Potiphar. He says he would be sinning against God. All sin is ultimately against God, regardless of the human parties involved.

One day Potiphar's wife grabs his garment. Joseph flees, leaving the garment behind. She uses it as false evidence and accuses him of attempted rape. Potiphar throws him in prison. Joseph has done everything right, and the result is worse than before. Demoted from rising star to prisoner. But the chapter closes with the same theme: "The LORD was with Joseph and showed him steadfast love and gave him favor in the sight of the keeper of the prison." Wherever Joseph is, slave, manager, prisoner, the LORD is with him.

STEP 5

Connection

Judah's confession (Genesis 38) and Joseph's integrity (Genesis 39) both serve the larger story. Judah is being prepared for transformation; Joseph is being prepared for elevation. And critically, both are being prepared to be ancestors in the line of Christ. Judah's son Perez will be in Matthew 1. Joseph will save the family that brings forth the Messiah.

STEP 6

Application

Two contrasts to take with you. First, Judah teaches us about the deceptive drift of mixing with the world. He left the covenant family, married outside it, treated others as disposable. The drift was slow but devastating. Examine your own life. Where are you drifting? Second, Joseph teaches us about integrity in exile. Far from family, far from familiar worship, in a culture hostile to his values, Joseph refused to compromise. He said no to a powerful woman's advances, even when no one would have known. The LORD was with him in his integrity. The LORD is with you in yours.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess where you have drifted, as Judah did, or been tempted, as Joseph was.

Ask him for strength to flee sin when no one would know.

Thank him that he is with you in any place where you feel far from home or unfairly treated.

GENESIS 39:23

DAY 52 · WEEK 8

Psalm 37:1-22

Do not fret; trust in the LORD, providence over the wicked

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 22 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 37:1-22 slowly, twice. This is a wisdom psalm, a long meditation on the apparent prosperity of the wicked and the patient confidence of the righteous. It is the perfect psalm for those who have been reading about Joseph's unjust suffering.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 37 is one of the great wisdom psalms, long, calm, deliberate. It addresses the question that has haunted believers in every generation: why do the wicked seem to prosper while the righteous suffer? David's answer is patience and trust. Do not fret. Do not envy. The wicked will fade like grass; the righteous will inherit the land. The psalm fits Joseph's situation exactly, he has just been imprisoned for refusing to sin, while the wicked seem to triumph.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with three commands: "Fret not... be not envious... Trust in the LORD."
2. The wicked are compared to grass that quickly fades.
3. Verse 4: "Delight yourself in the LORD, and he will give you the desires of your heart."
4. Verse 5: "Commit your way to the LORD; trust in him." The verb "commit" literally means "roll", roll your way onto him.
5. Verse 7: "Be still before the LORD and wait patiently for him." Stillness and waiting are part of righteousness.
6. Verse 11 anticipates Jesus' Beatitude: "The meek shall inherit the land."
7. The contrast continues: the wicked plot and gnash their teeth, but the LORD laughs because he sees their day coming.

8 Verse 18: “The LORD knows the days of the blameless, and their heritage will remain forever.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 37 is one of the wisest psalms in the Psalter. It does not deny that the wicked prosper. It does not pretend life is fair. It accepts the painful reality and then offers the corrective: a long view. The wicked seem to flourish for a moment; the righteous inherit forever.

Three commands open the psalm. Fret not. Envy not. Trust. These are the daily disciplines of the believer facing apparent injustice. Fretting is the spiritual equivalent of constantly checking a wound. Envying the wicked is letting their apparent success poison your contentment. Trust is the alternative, letting God hold what you cannot control.

The reason for not fretting is the long view: the wicked are like grass. They look prosperous in the morning. By evening, they wither. Compared with eternity, the success of the wicked is brief. The temptation is to compare time spans incorrectly, to weigh ten years of someone’s worldly success against eternity and conclude that they are winning. But the comparison is wrong. They will fade. The righteous endure.

Verse 4 is one of the most quoted in the Psalter: “Delight yourself in the LORD, and he will give you the desires of your heart.” This is sometimes misread as a transaction, delight in God and you will get what you want. But the deeper meaning is transformative: delight in the LORD, and your desires themselves will be reshaped. What you want will become what he wants. The desires of your heart, properly aligned with God, will indeed be granted, because they will be the right desires.

The image of “rolling your way onto the LORD” in verse 5 is wonderful. You roll your burden onto someone else, and you are free of it. The Christian life involves daily rolling, daily handing over to God what you cannot carry yourself.

Verse 11 anticipates Jesus’ Beatitude: “The meek shall inherit the land.” Jesus quoted this exact verse in Matthew 5:5. The meek, those who do not assert their rights, who do not fret about injustice, who do not envy the wicked, they get the inheritance in the end. The world thinks meekness is weakness. The Bible says meekness is the strongest posture, because it trusts the One who holds the future.

And the psalm gives us a striking image of God: “The LORD laughs at the wicked, for he sees that his day is coming.” God is not anxious about injustice. He laughs. Not in cruelty, but in confidence. He knows the end. He knows when the wicked will fall. He knows when his people will be vindicated. We can rest in that knowledge.

STEP 5

Connection

Joseph has just been thrown into prison for refusing to sin. His brothers, who sold him into slavery, are eating well at home. Potiphar's wife, who lied about him, sleeps in her bed. Joseph sleeps in chains. Psalm 37 is the song Joseph could have prayed. Do not fret. Trust the LORD. The wicked are like grass. The meek inherit. This is the wisdom that sustained Joseph in his unjust suffering, and it is the wisdom that sustains believers still.

STEP 6

Application

Today, examine where you are fretting. What injustice in your life are you turning over and over? What success of someone else are you watching with envy? Bring it before God. Then practice the three commands: Fret not. Envy not. Trust. And practice the discipline of verse 4, delight yourself in the LORD. Not as a strategy to get what you want, but as a means of becoming someone whose wants are right.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what makes you fret or envy, and lay it before him.
- Ask him to reshape your desires by delight in him.
- Pray for patience to wait for him and not for your own way.

GENESIS 39:23

DAY 53 · WEEK 8

Psalm 37:23-40

The steps of a man are established by the LORD

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 18 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 37:23-40 slowly, twice. This is the second half of the great wisdom psalm. The themes continue: the patient confidence of the righteous, the certain end of the wicked. As you read, listen for the personal note David sounds, his own life experience speaking.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The second half of Psalm 37 continues the meditation on the long view. The psalmist now adds his personal testimony: "I have been young, and now am old, yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken." David has lived through enough to know how God's economy works. The patient eventually receive. The wicked eventually fall. The promise of the meek inheriting the land continues to anchor the psalm.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 23: "The steps of a man are established by the LORD, when he delights in his way." God orders the path of his people.
2. Verse 24: "Though he fall, he shall not be cast headlong, for the LORD upholds his hand." Falls happen, but recovery follows.
3. Verse 25 is David's personal testimony: "I have been young, and now am old, yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken."
4. Verses 27-29: Turn from evil, do good, dwell forever. The righteous have the long inheritance.
5. Verses 30-31 describe the speech and heart of the righteous: "the law of his God is in his heart; his steps do not slip."

6. Verse 34: “Wait for the LORD and keep his way, and he will exalt you to inherit the land.”
7. Verses 35-36: The wicked man flourished like a green tree, but when the psalmist looked again, he was gone.
8. Verses 37-38: “Mark the blameless… for there is a future for the man of peace.”
9. The psalm closes: “The salvation of the righteous is from the LORD; he is their stronghold in the time of trouble.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

The second half of Psalm 37 deepens what the first half established. Trust the LORD. Wait for him. The wicked will pass; the righteous will inherit. But now David adds personal witness. He has lived a long life. He has seen things. And what he has seen confirms what the psalm has been saying.

Verse 23 is profound. “The steps of a man are established by the LORD, when he delights in his way.” For the believer who delights in God’s way, every step is established. Not random. Not accidental. Even the falls that happen are caught by the LORD’s hand. Verse 24: “though he fall, he shall not be cast headlong.” This is one of the great pastoral truths of the psalm. Christians fall. We sin. We make mistakes. We stumble. But we are not cast headlong, because the LORD upholds our hand. The fall does not become a free fall, because the same LORD who established our steps catches us when we stumble.

Verse 25 is David’s testimony. “I have been young, and now am old, yet I have not seen the righteous forsaken or his children begging for bread.” This is not a promise of material prosperity, believers do face poverty in this fallen world. But it is a testimony about God’s faithfulness across a lifetime. David has watched. He has paid attention. The righteous get cared for, sometimes in ways that seem miraculous, but always somehow. God does not forsake those who fear him.

The image of the wicked in verses 35-36 is striking. “I have seen a wicked, ruthless man, spreading himself like a green laurel tree. But he passed away, and behold, he was no more; though I sought him, he could not be found.” David is describing what he has watched happen. The villain who seemed unstoppable simply…disappeared. There came a day when his glory was gone, and even the search for his memory turned up nothing. Time is on the side of the righteous.

The psalm closes with a beautiful summary. “The salvation of the righteous is from the LORD; he is their stronghold in the time of trouble. The LORD helps them and delivers them; he delivers them from the wicked and saves them, because they take refuge in him.” This is the architecture of Christian confidence. Not our righteousness, but his salvation. Not our strength, but his stronghold. Not our deliverance, but his hand. We take refuge in him. He does the saving.

STEP 5

Connection

Psalm 37 is the wisdom psalm that fits Joseph's situation, fits David's situation, and fits the believer's situation in every age. Yesterday Joseph was thrown into prison for refusing to sin. Today, Psalm 37 reminds us that the righteous are not forsaken. The LORD establishes our steps. We will yet be vindicated.

STEP 6

Application

Today, mark the blameless. Verse 37 says, "Mark the blameless and behold the upright, for there is a future for the man of peace." Take some time today to think about someone you know who has lived a quiet life of faithfulness. Maybe a parent or grandparent. Maybe a pastor or teacher. Maybe a friend who has walked with God through real hardship. Mark them. Tell them what you have seen. And ask God to make you one of those who, in old age, can say: I have been young, and now am old, and I have not seen the righteous forsaken.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to order your steps today, one by one.

Thank him that when you fall he upholds your hand.

Ask him for a long faithfulness that becomes its own testimony.

Read Genesis 40:1-41:57. Joseph in prison interprets dreams for two of Pharaoh's officials. Two years later, Pharaoh has dreams of his own, and Joseph is finally remembered. The seventeen-year-old slave is now a thirty-year-old vizier of Egypt.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Joseph has been in prison for some time. Two of Pharaoh's officials, the chief cupbearer and the chief baker, are imprisoned with him, and each has a strange dream. Joseph interprets both. The cupbearer is restored to his position; the baker is executed. Joseph asks the cupbearer to remember him, but he forgets, for two years. Then Pharaoh has dreams that none of his wise men can interpret, and the cupbearer finally remembers Joseph. Joseph stands before Pharaoh, interprets the dreams, and is elevated to second in command over all of Egypt.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Joseph's first words about dream interpretation: "Do not interpretations belong to God? Please tell them to me" (40:8).
2. Joseph correctly interprets both dreams, but the cupbearer forgets him.
3. Two years pass before Pharaoh's dream. Joseph is in his early thirties when he finally stands before Pharaoh.
4. Pharaoh's dreams: seven fat cows eaten by seven gaunt cows; seven good ears of grain eaten by seven blighted ears.
5. Joseph attributes everything to God: "It is not in me; God will give Pharaoh a favorable answer" (41:16).

6. He interprets the dream, seven years of plenty followed by seven years of famine, and recommends a plan.
7. Pharaoh promotes Joseph: "Can we find a man like this, in whom is the Spirit of God?"
8. Joseph receives Pharaoh's signet ring, fine linen, a gold chain, and the second chariot. He is renamed Zaphenath-Paneah.
9. Joseph marries Asenath. They have two sons: Manasseh ("God has made me forget all my hardship") and Ephraim ("God has made me fruitful in the land of my affliction").
10. The seven years of plenty come and go; the famine arrives; people from every land come to Egypt to buy grain.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 40 and 41 are the turning point in Joseph's story and the moment when the long providence of God becomes visible. For thirteen years, Joseph has been moving steadily downward, from favored son, to slave, to favored servant, to wrongly accused, to forgotten prisoner. In a single day, he ascends from prison to the second highest position in the empire.

The chapters teach us something essential about God's timing. The cupbearer could have remembered Joseph immediately, and Joseph might have been freed. But God's plan required Joseph in prison for two more years. Why? Because Pharaoh did not yet need a dream interpreter. The famine had not yet come. The whole reason God positioned Joseph in Pharaoh's court was so that he could be there to manage the seven years of plenty and the seven years of famine. If Joseph had been released too early, he would have been just another freed slave. God's timing requires the suffering.

Joseph's interpretive principle is striking. "Do not interpretations belong to God?" he says in chapter 40. And to Pharaoh in chapter 41: "It is not in me; God will give Pharaoh a favorable answer." Joseph has spent thirteen years in adversity. He has every reason to be bitter, to claim credit, to assert himself. Instead, he points to God at every turn. Notice that he is doing this before a pagan king who could grant him freedom or send him back to prison. Joseph is not editing his theology for a different audience. He says the same thing to Pharaoh that he said to the cupbearer in prison.

Pharaoh's response is remarkable. "Can we find a man like this, in whom is the Spirit of God?" An Egyptian king recognizes the Spirit of God in a Hebrew slave. The same Spirit who will fill the prophets and ultimately fill Christ is at work in Joseph, and even Pharaoh can see it. The text is making a point: when God is genuinely with someone, even unbelievers can recognize it.

Joseph's elevation is total. He receives Pharaoh's signet ring (delegated authority), fine linen and a gold chain (royal insignia), and the second chariot (proximity to power). He is renamed, a sign of his new identity. He marries an Egyptian woman, Asenath. He has two sons whose names carry deep theological meaning. Manasseh, "God has made me forget all my hardship." Joseph is naming his first son after the way God has worked in him. The bitter years are not erased, but they are now bearable. Ephraim, "God has made me fruitful in the land of my affliction." Joseph is acknowledging that the place of his suffering became the place of his blessing. Egypt was the place of his slavery, his false accusation, his forgotten years. Now Egypt is the place of his fruitfulness. The land of affliction has become the soil of his calling.

Then the seven years of plenty come and go, and the famine arrives. The text says people from "all the earth" came to Egypt to buy grain. The stage is being set for the family of Jacob to make the journey south. Joseph is in place. The famine is the means. God is preparing to bring his promise, that Israel would sojourn in a land that was not theirs, into history.

STEP 5

Connection

Joseph's elevation is one of the great divine reversals in the Old Testament. Sold for twenty shekels of silver, he becomes the second most powerful man in Egypt. The reversal points forward to Christ, who, sold for thirty pieces of silver, became the King of kings. And the seven years of famine that will draw Joseph's family to Egypt is the beginning of the four hundred years of sojourning that God predicted to Abram in Genesis 15.

STEP 6

Application

Two truths to take with you. First, your timing is not God's timing. The two years Joseph waited in prison felt unnecessary to him; they were essential to what God was doing. The waiting season you are in may feel pointless. It is not. God is using the time. Second, the place of your affliction may become the place of your fruitfulness. Egypt was Joseph's land of suffering before it became the land of his calling. Whatever hard season you are in, physical, emotional, vocational, relational, God can make it the soil of unexpected fruit. Pray today that he will make you, like Joseph, fruitful in the land of your affliction.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God about a season of waiting that feels pointless, and ask him to use it.

Ask him to make you fruitful where you are afflicted.

Ask for grace to give him credit in your conversations and work.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 8

GENESIS 39:23

DAY 55 · WEEK 8

Genesis 42:1-43:34

Brothers in Egypt; Benjamin brought; Joseph's emotion

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 72 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 42:1-43:34. The famine has reached Canaan. Jacob sends his sons to Egypt to buy grain. They stand before Joseph without recognizing him. Joseph plays a long, careful game, testing his brothers, seeing if they have changed.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The famine in Canaan grows severe. Jacob is forced to send ten of his sons, all but Benjamin, the youngest, down to Egypt to buy grain. They stand before the Egyptian vizier without recognizing him, but he recognizes them. Joseph could reveal himself immediately. He does not. Instead, he engineers a careful series of tests to discover whether his brothers have changed. He accuses them of being spies. He demands they bring Benjamin. He keeps Simeon as a hostage. He plants their money back in their sacks. The brothers return home in fear. Then, when the food runs out, they must return, this time with Benjamin.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 42:6, Joseph's brothers bow down before him, fulfilling his dreams from twenty years earlier.
2. Joseph recognizes them but pretends not to. He speaks to them through an interpreter.
3. He accuses them of being spies, threatens them, and tests them. He is harsh on the surface, weeping privately.
4. He keeps Simeon as a hostage and sends the rest home to bring Benjamin.
5. On the journey home, they discover their money returned in their sacks. Their consciences begin to stir: "What is this that God has done to us?"

6. When they reach Jacob, he refuses to send Benjamin. “You would bring down my gray hairs with sorrow to Sheol.”
7. The famine grows worse. Eventually, Judah persuades Jacob: “I will be a pledge of his safety. From my hand you shall require him.”
8. The brothers return with double money and gifts. Joseph receives them, sees Benjamin, and is overcome.
9. Joseph hosts a feast for them. Benjamin’s portion is five times the others, a deliberate test of jealousy. The brothers pass.

STEP 4

Interpretation

These two chapters are an emotional crescendo. Joseph, twenty years after being sold into slavery, finally faces his brothers. He could destroy them. He has the power. They are at his mercy. But Joseph is not interested in revenge. He wants to know if they have changed.

The testing is masterful. Joseph speaks roughly. He accuses them of being spies. He demands they bring their youngest brother. He keeps one as hostage. He plants their money back in their sacks. Every move is designed to put them in a tight place where their true character will surface. And the brothers begin to crack. As soon as the trouble starts, they whisper among themselves: “In truth we are guilty concerning our brother, in that we saw the distress of his soul, when he begged us and we did not listen. That is why this distress has come upon us.” Twenty years of buried guilt rises up. They have not forgotten Joseph. They have just been carrying him as a hidden weight.

Joseph hears them. The text says: “They did not know that Joseph understood them, for there was an interpreter between them. Then he turned away from them and wept.” This is one of the most moving scenes in Genesis. Joseph hears the confession he has been waiting twenty years to hear, and he weeps. Not because they are suffering. Because they are owning what they did. The transformation has begun.

The journey home and the painful conversation with Jacob is excruciating. Jacob cannot bear to lose another son of Rachel. Benjamin is all he has left of his beloved wife. He refuses to send him. The famine forces the issue, but it is Judah who finally breaks through. “I will be a pledge of his safety. From my hand you shall require him. If I do not bring him back to you and set him before you, then let me bear the blame forever.”

This is a transformation. Judah is the brother who once said, “Let us sell him to the Ishmaelites.” Now he is offering himself as security for the youngest. The man who proposed selling Joseph is now pledging his own freedom for Benjamin. This is exactly what Joseph has been testing for. Has Judah changed? The answer is yes.

When they return to Egypt with Benjamin, Joseph cannot keep his composure. He sees his brother, his only full brother, for the first time in over twenty years. He has to leave the room to weep. He composes himself, returns, and hosts a banquet. He seats them in birth order, to their astonishment. He gives Benjamin five times the portion of the others, a deliberate test. Twenty years ago, special favor for the youngest son led to murderous jealousy. How will they react now?

They eat and drink with him. There is no jealousy. The brothers have changed.

STEP 5

Connection

Joseph's dreams from Genesis 37 are now being fulfilled in real time, his brothers bowing before him. But the deeper purpose is the transformation of the brothers themselves. The man who once proposed selling Joseph is now offering himself for Benjamin. This is the seed of Judah becoming the kingly tribe, the tribe from which David and ultimately Christ will come.

STEP 6

Application

Sometimes love requires the long test. Joseph could have revealed himself immediately. He could have showered his brothers with gifts and forgiveness on day one. He did not. He took them through a process. The process was not cruelty, it was love directed at transformation. Sometimes the people we love most need our slowest, most patient confrontation, not our immediate forgiveness. Forgiveness is given. Trust is rebuilt. The two are not the same thing. Today, ask God for wisdom about a relationship where you have been asked to receive someone back. Forgive freely. But do not skip the work of rebuilding trust.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God for the wisdom to forgive freely and to rebuild trust slowly where it has been broken.

Tell him about someone you long to see reconciled, and pray for them.

Ask him to give you a heart like Joseph's, full of love and ready for tears.

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Sabbath

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. The week you have completed followed Joseph from his lowest point, sold into slavery, falsely accused, forgotten in prison, to his elevation as second over Egypt. Take time today to consider how God was with Joseph at every stage of his descent.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD was with Joseph, and whatever he did, the LORD made it succeed."

GENESIS 39:23

REST

Meditation

Genesis 39:23 is the refrain of the Joseph story. The phrase "The LORD was with Joseph" appears multiple times, when he is sold as a slave, when he is in Potiphar's house, when he is in prison, when he stands before Pharaoh. Wherever he is, the LORD is with him.

This is the gospel's promise restated. Joseph's circumstances ranged from privileged son to abused slave to wrongly accused prisoner to ruler of Egypt. In every condition, the LORD was with him. The presence of God was not contingent on Joseph's success. It was the source of his eventual success, but it was equally present in his lowest moments.

Say the verse to yourself, particularly the second half, "whatever he did, the LORD made it succeed." This is not a promise that everything you attempt will work out. It is a promise that God's purposes through you cannot fail. Joseph's "success" included thirteen years of suffering. The LORD's success and our preferred outcomes are not always the same thing, but they are always good, and they are always sure.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

The week began with Esau's genealogy and then plunged into the Joseph story, the dreams, the brothers' hatred, the selling into slavery. You read the strange Judah-Tamar story alongside Joseph's integrity in Potiphar's house. You worshiped through both halves of Psalm 37, learning the wisdom of patience while the wicked seem to prosper. You watched Joseph rise from prison to second in command over all of Egypt. And the week ended with his brothers standing before him without recognizing him, bowing down, just as Joseph's childhood dreams had foretold.

The week is about hidden providence. Joseph could not see what God was doing. The brothers could not see what God was undoing. But the LORD was with Joseph at every step, through betrayal, false accusation, forgotten years in prison, and the same LORD was preparing the moment of reversal.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where in your life right now does it feel like the LORD is not "making it succeed"? Joseph's experience suggests that God's presence is not always evident through circumstances. The thirteen years between Joseph's sale and his elevation included times when even he must have wondered if God had forgotten him. What season are you in? How does Joseph's story help you wait?

How does Joseph point you to Christ? Joseph was the beloved son, sold for silver, falsely accused, imprisoned with criminals, elevated to a throne, and used by God to save the very brothers who had betrayed him. Every detail prefigures Jesus. Where do you see Christ most clearly in the Joseph story? And how does seeing Joseph's reversal deepen your hope in Christ's resurrection?

Where do you need to choose integrity in your own "Potiphar's house"? Joseph said no to a powerful person's advances when no one would have known. He chose the harder right over the easier wrong. Is there a place in your life today where integrity will cost you something? What would it look like to choose it anyway, trusting that the LORD is with you?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for being with Joseph in the pit, in prison, and on the throne, and for being with you in every season.

Ask him to make you a person of integrity in the place you are right now.

Rest in his presence this Sabbath, in success and in failure.

DAY 57 · WEEK 9

Genesis 44:1-45:28

Judah's plea; Joseph revealed, grace to those who betrayed

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 55 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 44:1-45:28. The climax of the Joseph narrative. Joseph stages one final test, Benjamin will be arrested for theft. Judah's response is one of the great speeches in the Old Testament. And then Joseph reveals himself, and the long, agonizing reunion finally happens.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Joseph has tested his brothers thoroughly. He has one final test to administer. He plants his silver cup in Benjamin's sack and sends them home. His steward overtakes them, accuses them of theft, and announces that Benjamin must remain in Egypt as a slave. This is the moment of truth. Will the brothers abandon Benjamin as they abandoned Joseph twenty years ago? Or has something changed in them? Judah's response is one of the most moving speeches in the Bible. And after hearing it, Joseph can no longer hold back.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Joseph plants his silver cup in Benjamin's sack, a final test of how the brothers will respond when Benjamin is in trouble.
2. When the steward catches up to them, all the brothers tear their clothes (a sign of deep grief) and return together.
3. Judah steps forward. His speech (44:18-34) is one of the longest individual speeches in Genesis.
4. Judah recounts the family history honestly. He emphasizes how Jacob loves Benjamin and how his loss would kill the old man.

5. Verse 33: Judah offers himself in Benjamin's place. "Let your servant remain instead of the boy as a servant to my lord, and let the boy go back with his brothers."
6. Joseph cannot hold back. He sends all the Egyptians out of the room and weeps so loudly that the Egyptians outside hear him.
7. His self-revelation: "I am Joseph! Is my father still alive?" The brothers are speechless with dread.
8. Verse 5: "Do not be distressed or angry with yourselves... for God sent me before you to preserve life."
9. Joseph repeats the theme: "It was not you who sent me here, but God" (verse 8).
10. He tells them to bring Jacob and the whole family to Egypt, they will live in Goshen, near him.
11. The chapter ends with Jacob hearing the news and refusing to believe it, then finally believing: "It is enough; Joseph my son is still alive."

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis 44 and 45 are the moral and theological climax of the Joseph story. Everything has been building toward Judah's speech and Joseph's revelation. After this, the rest of Genesis is denouement.

The final test is engineered with perfect insight. Joseph plants his cup in Benjamin's sack. When the brothers are caught, they have a choice. They could blame Benjamin, leave him behind, and walk away. After all, only Benjamin is accused. The rest of them are free to go. This is exactly what they did to Joseph twenty years ago. They handed him over and walked away. The cup test is asking: will they do it again?

Their response is the first proof. Verse 13: "They tore their clothes." All of them. Together. This is communal grief. They cannot bear to lose another brother. They return to the city together, not separately.

Then Judah steps forward. His speech is one of the longest sustained speeches in Genesis, and it is masterful. He recounts the family history honestly. He explains how Jacob has already lost one son (Joseph, presumed dead), and how losing Benjamin would kill the old man. The speech is full of his father's words, Judah quotes Jacob repeatedly, as if he has been listening, as if he finally understands what Benjamin means to his father.

And then comes the moment. Verse 33: "Now therefore, please let your servant remain instead of the boy as a servant to my lord, and let the boy go back with his brothers." Judah offers himself. The brother who once said, "Let us sell him to the Ishmaelites," is now offering to be the slave instead. Twenty years ago, Judah benefited from selling a brother. Now Judah is willing to suffer to save a brother. This is what transformation looks like. The kingly tribe is being formed in this moment. The tribe of David, the tribe of Christ, formed by a Judah who finally learns to lay down his life for his brother.

Joseph cannot hold back. He has been keeping up the appearance of harsh Egyptian official for chapters now, weeping in secret rooms. He cannot any longer. He sends all the Egyptians out, this revelation is family business, and he weeps so loudly that the Egyptians outside the room hear him. And then the words: "I am Joseph. Is my father still alive?"

The brothers are paralyzed with terror. The man they sold has become the man with power over their lives. He could have them all killed in an instant. But Joseph's next words are the heart of the gospel of Genesis. "Do not be distressed or angry with yourselves because you sold me here, for God sent me before you to preserve life." Notice the theology. Their sin was real. God's purpose was real. Both are true. Joseph does not minimize what they did. He acknowledges it. But he sees that, behind their sin, God was working, moving the pieces, positioning Joseph in Egypt, so that when the famine came, life could be preserved. The same event was both wickedness (on the brothers' part) and providence (on God's part). Acts 4:28 will say exactly the same thing about the crucifixion of Christ.

Joseph repeats the point three times in this short speech. "God sent me before you to preserve life." "It was not you who sent me here, but God." "He has made me a father to Pharaoh and lord of all his house." This is not naive optimism. This is hard-won theology. Joseph has spent thirteen years in slavery and prison. He has every right to be bitter. He chooses instead to see the hand of God. And by choosing that, he releases his brothers from their guilt and saves the family.

STEP 5

Connection

Judah's offer of himself for Benjamin is the moment that transforms the kingly tribe. From this man and this moment will come David, and from David will come Christ, the true substitute who takes the place of his brothers. And Joseph's interpretation of his suffering, "You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good" (which will be stated explicitly in chapter 50), anticipates Romans 8:28: "all things work together for good for those who love God."

STEP 6

Application

Look at your story with Joseph's eyes. The wrongs done to you were real. The sin against you was real. But behind every betrayal, every loss, every closed door, God was working, moving the pieces, positioning you for what came next. This is not denial of pain. Joseph wept. But it is faith in providence. Today, name one painful chapter of your life that, in retrospect, you can begin to see God's hand in. Thank him for it. And ask him to give you Joseph's eyes for the chapters you cannot yet read.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Name a wound that was real, and tell God about it without softening it.
- Ask him to give you Joseph's eyes to see how he has used it, or may yet use it.
- Ask him for a heart willing to lay down its life for others, like Judah's.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 9

GENESIS 50:20

DAY 58 · WEEK 9

Genesis 46:1-47:31

Jacob to Egypt; Israel settled in Goshen

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 66 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 46:1-47:31. Jacob and the whole family, seventy people, make the long journey down to Egypt. They are settled in Goshen. Jacob meets Pharaoh. The years pass, and Jacob prepares for his death.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The famine continues. Jacob, now an old man, packs up the entire family and heads to Egypt. On the way, God appears to him at Beersheba and confirms the move: “Do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for there I will make you into a great nation.” Joseph rides out to meet his father after twenty-two years. The family is settled in the region of Goshen, the best of the land. Jacob is presented to Pharaoh. The years pass. Jacob, near death, makes Joseph swear to bury him in Canaan, not Egypt.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Jacob stops to offer sacrifices at Beersheba. He is honoring the place where his father Isaac had also encountered God.
2. God speaks to Jacob in night visions, calling him “Jacob, Jacob”, affectionate repetition.
3. Verse 46:3: “Do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for there I will make you into a great nation.” This fulfills Genesis 15:13.
4. The list of seventy persons (46:8-27) is the foundation of Israel. Seventy is a number of completeness.
5. Joseph rides up in his chariot to meet Jacob. They weep together. Twenty-two years of separation.

6. Jacob is presented to Pharaoh. He blesses Pharaoh, the lesser blessing the greater? Or the patriarch blessing the king?
7. Jacob's life, "few and evil have been the days of the years of my life", is candidly described as hard.
8. The famine grows severe. The Egyptians sell their flocks, then their land, then themselves to Pharaoh in exchange for food.
9. Israel settles in Goshen, prospers, and multiplies (verse 47:27).
10. Jacob, near death, makes Joseph swear with the same oath Abraham used, to bury him in the cave of Machpelah.

STEP 4

Interpretation

These two chapters cover the final settling of the patriarchal family in Egypt. The descent into Egypt that began with Joseph as a slave now welcomes the whole family as honored guests. The four-hundred-year sojourning that God predicted to Abram in Genesis 15:13 has officially begun.

Notice the careful way the move is framed. Jacob does not just rush off to Egypt. He stops at Beersheba, the place his father Isaac worshiped, and offers sacrifices. He pauses to seek God's blessing on the journey. And God meets him. In a night vision, God speaks: "I am God, the God of your father. Do not be afraid to go down to Egypt, for there I will make you into a great nation. I myself will go down with you to Egypt, and I will also bring you up again." This is one of the most important promises in the patriarchal narratives. God is going down to Egypt with them. The God of Canaan is not bound to Canaan. He travels with his people. And he commits to bring them back. The descent is real, but it is not abandonment.

The list of the seventy who came to Egypt is the foundation of Israel. The biblical writers will refer to this number repeatedly. Seventy elders will accompany Moses to Sinai. Seventy disciples will be sent out by Jesus. The number marks the people of God, small, complete, gathered.

The reunion between Joseph and Jacob is brief but powerful. "Joseph presented himself to him and fell on his neck and wept on his neck a good while. Israel said to Joseph, "Now let me die, since I have seen your face and know that you are still alive."" Twenty-two years of grief and waiting end in a single embrace.

Jacob is presented to Pharaoh. The exchange is striking. Jacob "blesses Pharaoh" both at the beginning and end of the encounter. Hebrews 7:7 says, "It is beyond dispute that the inferior is blessed by the superior." The aged patriarch blessing the king of Egypt is a quiet but powerful statement of who really represents the God of heaven. Jacob's life is described candidly: "Few and evil have been the days of the years of my life, and they have not attained to the days of the years of the life of my fathers." Jacob has not had an easy life. He acknowledges it. But he stands before Pharaoh as a man of God.

The famine policy section (47:13-26) is one that bothers many modern readers. Joseph collects all the money from Egypt, then all the livestock, then all the land, in exchange for food. By the end, the Egyptians have sold themselves into Pharaoh's service. Joseph is implementing what is essentially a transition from a free society to a centralized monarchy. The text describes this without moral comment. The full implications will become visible only later, when a new pharaoh, one who "did not know Joseph", uses this centralized power to enslave Jacob's descendants.

The chapter ends with Jacob, near death, calling Joseph and making him swear an oath. The patriarchs are passing the covenant. Jacob will not be buried in Egypt. He will be buried in the cave of Machpelah, with Abraham and Sarah, with Isaac and Rebekah, with Leah. The covenant family does not lose its grip on the promised land even in the years of Egyptian residence. They will be sojourners, but their bones will go home.

STEP 5

Connection

The descent into Egypt is the literal fulfillment of Genesis 15:13. God told Abram his offspring would sojourn in a foreign land for four hundred years. The journey down begins here. And God's promise to Jacob, "I will bring you up again", is the seed of the Exodus, the great act of redemption that will define Israel's identity.

STEP 6

Application

Two truths to take with you. First, when God calls you somewhere difficult, he goes with you. He told Jacob, "I myself will go down with you to Egypt." He still goes with his people. Whatever Egypt you find yourself in, a hard season, a difficult place, an unwelcome calling, God does not stay behind. He goes. Second, your story is part of a longer story. The descent into Egypt would have looked like a tragedy to anyone watching. From God's vantage point, it was the means by which a family became a nation. Your present descent may be the means by which God is making something larger than you can yet see.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he goes with you into every hard place.

Ask him to make you willing to leave what is familiar when he calls.

Thank him that he brings his people up again after every descent.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 9

"You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good, to bring it about that many people should be kept alive."

GENESIS 50:20

DAY 59 · WEEK 9

Genesis 48:1-50:26

Jacob's blessings; Judah's primacy; Joseph's death

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Genesis 48:1-50:26. The final three chapters of Genesis. Jacob blesses Joseph's sons and then blesses all twelve of his own sons in a prophetic poem. He dies and is buried in Canaan. Joseph forgives his brothers a final time. Genesis ends with his bones in a coffin in Egypt, awaiting the return to the promised land.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

We have come to the end of Genesis. Jacob, near death, calls Joseph to him and blesses Joseph's two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, crossing his hands so that the younger receives the greater blessing. Then in chapter 49 he summons all twelve sons and prophesies their futures. The blessing on Judah is particularly significant, a scepter will not depart from him until the one to whom it belongs comes. Jacob dies. Joseph and the brothers travel to Canaan to bury him. Joseph reassures the brothers one final time and dies at 110, his bones embalmed and placed in a coffin in Egypt, awaiting the day they will be carried back to the promised land.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Jacob adopts Joseph's two sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, as his own, they become two of the twelve tribes.
2. Jacob crosses his hands, blessing the younger (Ephraim) over the older (Manasseh), the pattern of election repeats.
3. Genesis 49 is the blessing of the twelve sons, one of the most important prophetic poems in the Old Testament.

4. Reuben loses his birthright for defiling his father's bed. Simeon and Levi are cursed for their violence.
5. Judah receives the great blessing: "The scepter shall not depart from Judah… until tribute comes to him; and to him shall be the obedience of the peoples."
6. This is one of the earliest Messianic prophecies, the one to whom the scepter belongs is the coming Christ.
7. Joseph receives a double portion through his two sons. He is called "a fruitful bough by a spring."
8. Jacob dies. The Egyptians mourn him for seventy days, extraordinary honor.
9. Joseph and his brothers carry Jacob's body to Canaan and bury him in the cave of Machpelah.
10. After Jacob's death, the brothers fear retribution. Joseph weeps: "You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good."
11. Joseph dies at 110. His last words: "God will surely visit you, and you shall carry up my bones from here."

STEP 4

Interpretation

Genesis ends in a way that anticipates everything still to come. Jacob blesses his sons, and the future of the twelve tribes is sketched out in advance. Joseph forgives his brothers in the most theologically loaded sentence in the book. And the patriarchal era closes with Joseph's bones in a coffin, waiting for the Exodus.

Jacob's blessing of Ephraim and Manasseh is the latest example of the pattern that has run throughout Genesis. The younger is preferred over the older. Isaac over Ishmael. Jacob over Esau. Now Ephraim over Manasseh. When Joseph tries to redirect his father's hands to favor the older son, Jacob refuses. "I know, my son, I know." The pattern is not accidental. God's grace consistently overturns natural expectations. He does not save by birth order, by merit, by social standing. He saves by sovereign choice.

Genesis 49 is one of the most important prophetic chapters in the Old Testament. Jacob, dying, calls his sons together and tells them what will happen "in days to come." The text is dense and poetic. Reuben loses his right of firstborn for his earlier sin with Bilhah. Simeon and Levi are cursed for their violent revenge against Shechem, they will be scattered in Israel (which Levi will become, as the priestly tribe scattered among the others, and Simeon, which will eventually be absorbed into Judah).

And then comes the great Judah blessing. "Judah, your brothers shall praise you... The scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor the ruler's staff from between his feet, until tribute comes to him; and to him shall be the obedience of the peoples." This is one of the earliest and clearest Messianic prophecies in the Bible. From Judah will come the line of kings. From Judah will come David. And from the line of David will come the one to whom the scepter ultimately belongs, Jesus Christ, the Lion of the tribe of Judah (Revelation 5:5). The wine and milk imagery in the next verse suggests a kingdom of abundance. The blessing on Judah is the seed of the entire kingdom theology of the Old Testament.

Joseph's blessing is also notable. He receives a double portion through his two sons. He is described as a fruitful bough whose branches run over the wall. The blessings that came to him "are mighty beyond the blessings of my parents, up to the bounties of the everlasting hills." Joseph receives more, in some ways, than his fathers. The suffering son becomes the most blessed.

Then Jacob dies. The Egyptians mourn him for seventy days. Joseph and his brothers travel to Canaan with an enormous procession to bury Jacob in the cave of Machpelah. The covenant family does not stay in Egypt at death. They go home to the land of promise, even just to be buried there.

When they return, the brothers are afraid. They suspect Joseph has only been kind to them because Jacob was alive. Now that Jacob is dead, will Joseph take revenge? They send a message claiming Jacob's deathbed wish was that Joseph forgive them. Whether the message is true or fabricated is unclear. But Joseph weeps. And then he speaks one of the most theologically important sentences in the Old Testament. Genesis 50:20: "As for you, you meant evil against me, but God meant it for good, to bring it about that many people should be kept alive, as they are today."

This sentence is the gospel of Genesis in miniature. Human evil is real. Divine purpose is real. Both are true at once. The same event, the brothers selling Joseph into slavery, was both wickedness (on their part) and providence (on God's part). The same will be true at the cross. The crucifixion of Christ was the most evil act in human history. It was also the most loving act of God in human history. The brothers crucified Christ. God meant it for good.

Genesis closes with Joseph's death. He is 110. He gathers his brothers around him and says, "God will surely visit you, and you shall carry up my bones from here." He is embalmed and placed in a coffin in Egypt. The coffin is the last image of Genesis. Not the promised land. Not victory. A coffin in Egypt. But Joseph has the eyes of faith. He knows God will visit. He knows the bones will be carried up. And four hundred years later, when the Exodus comes, Moses will indeed take Joseph's bones with him out of Egypt (Exodus 13:19). The faith of one man at the end of Genesis becomes the assurance of an entire nation's redemption.

Connection

Genesis ends in suspense. The covenant family is in Egypt. The promise of the land is unfulfilled. Joseph's bones lie in a coffin. But the prophecy of Judah, "the scepter shall not depart", points all the way to Christ. The promise to Abraham is still operative. The God of the patriarchs has gone down to Egypt with them, and he will bring them up again. Everything that follows in the Bible flows from this moment.

STEP 6

Application

Make Genesis 50:20 your own theology. You will face evil in this life. Sins will be committed against you. Tragedies will strike. People will betray you. The Christian does not pretend these are good. They are evil. But the Christian also believes that God is at work behind every evil, not causing it, but ordering history so that even the worst events serve his redemptive purposes. The cross is the proof. The worst day in human history became the day of salvation. If God can do that with Calvary, he can do it with your story too.

And take heart from Joseph's coffin. He died in faith. He never saw the promised land. But he saw it by faith, and he trusted that God would visit his people. Some of God's promises will not be fulfilled in your lifetime. Some answers to your prayers will come after you are gone. The Christian does not need to see everything completed before death. We die in faith, trusting the God who keeps his word across generations.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give God the wrongs and losses you carry, and ask him to use them for the good of others.

Ask him to make you someone who weeps but forgives, suffers but trusts.

Pray that you would hold to his promise to the end of your life.

DAY 60 · WEEK 9

Psalm 47

God has gone up with a shout, the universal king of all nations

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 9 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 47 twice. This is a short, exuberant psalm of God's kingship over all the nations. It is the perfect note on which to close the patriarchal narratives. The promise to Abram, that all nations would be blessed, finds its first hymn-form celebration here.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 47 is a short, festive psalm celebrating God's reign over all the nations. It was probably sung at one of Israel's major festivals, perhaps connected with the ascension of the king or the procession of the ark to the temple. It is one of the most joyful psalms in the Psalter and one of the most explicitly universal. The God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob is also the King of all the earth. The promise to Abram that "in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed" is the theological foundation of this psalm.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with a universal call: "Clap your hands, all peoples! Shout to God with loud songs of joy!"
2. Verse 2: "For the LORD, the Most High, is to be feared, a great king over all the earth." Universal kingship.
3. Verse 3: "He subdued peoples under us, and nations under our feet." Israel's victories are framed as God's reign.
4. Verse 4: "He chose our heritage for us, the pride of Jacob whom he loves." The patriarchal covenant celebrated.
5. Verse 5: "God has gone up with a shout, the LORD with the sound of a trumpet!" Image of divine ascension.

6. Verses 6-7 call repeatedly for praise: “Sing praises to God, sing praises!”
7. Verse 8: “God reigns over the nations; God sits on his holy throne.”
8. The psalm ends: “The princes of the peoples gather as the people of the God of Abraham. For the shields of the earth belong to God; he is highly exalted!”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 47 is one of the most joyful psalms in the entire Psalter, and it is precisely the right psalm to close out the patriarchal narratives. The whole point of God’s choice of Abraham was that, through one family, all nations would be blessed. Psalm 47 sings that promise as a present reality. The nations clap their hands. The peoples shout. God is king over all the earth.

The opening call is universal: “Clap your hands, all peoples!” Not just Israel. Not just the covenant family. All peoples. The psalmist is summoning every nation on earth to worship the God of Abraham. This is the Abrahamic Covenant set to music. The blessing that began with one man is meant for everyone.

Verse 2 declares the foundation: “The LORD, the Most High, is to be feared, a great king over all the earth.” Notice the divine name, El Elyon, God Most High. This is the very name used by Melchizedek when he blessed Abraham in Genesis 14. The same God who blessed Abraham is the great king over all the earth. The God who chose one family is also the God who reigns over every nation.

Verse 4 makes the patriarchal connection explicit. “He chose our heritage for us, the pride of Jacob whom he loves.” God’s choice of Jacob, the choice that has dominated the chapters we have been reading, is celebrated as his ongoing love for Israel. This is not contradiction to the universal scope. It is the means by which the universal blessing arrives. God chose one family in order to bless all families.

The image of verse 5 is striking. “God has gone up with a shout, the LORD with the sound of a trumpet!” This is the language of triumphal ascension, perhaps originally describing the ark being carried up to the temple, but in Christian reading, it has long been seen as pointing to Christ’s ascension. The same image will be used in Ephesians 4:8 about the risen Christ. The king has ascended. He reigns from above.

Then comes the repeated command: sing praises. Five times in two verses. The psalm cannot contain its joy. The God who reigns deserves praise from every voice.

Verse 8 is the theological climax: “God reigns over the nations; God sits on his holy throne.” This is one of the clearest statements in the Old Testament that God’s kingship is not local. He is not Israel’s tribal deity. He reigns over the nations. He sits on his holy throne. Every other throne is provisional. His alone is eternal.

And the closing verse: “The princes of the peoples gather as the people of the God of Abraham.” This is the climax of the whole patriarchal story. The princes of every people, the rulers of every nation, gather as members of the family of Abraham. The promise has come full circle. Through one family, blessing has come to all families. The God of Abraham is now the God of every nation that worships him.

STEP 5

Connection

We close Unit 3 with this psalm because it is the patriarchal promise in song. The covenant began with one man and one family. By Psalm 47, it has expanded, at least in vision, to embrace all the nations of the earth. Pentecost will be its first historical fulfillment. The new heavens and new earth, where “a great multitude that no one could number, from every nation, from all tribes and peoples and languages” stand before the throne, will be its final fulfillment.

STEP 6

Application

Clap your hands. Shout to God with songs of joy. The God who chose Abraham is your God. The God who reigns over all the earth is your King. There is no nation outside his reach, no people group beyond his redemptive purposes, no enemy too strong for his throne. This should produce joy, not just gratitude, but exuberant celebration. The world’s news will tell you many other things. The truth is that God reigns. Let that truth restore your joy today.

And pray for the nations. The princes of the peoples gather as the people of the God of Abraham. Your prayer for missions, for unreached peoples, for nations that do not yet know the gospel, your prayer is in alignment with this psalm. Pray bigger than your own life today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God as king over all the nations, in your own words.

Ask him to restore your joy in his reign.

Pray for the gospel to reach people in a nation you rarely think about.

DAY 61 · WEEK 9

Psalm 66:1-7

Shout for joy to God, all the earth

Year 1 · Unit 3 · Psalm · 7 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 66:1-7 slowly, twice. This is the opening of one of the Psalter's great worship psalms. The first seven verses summon all the earth to praise God and recall his works of deliverance, particularly the Exodus. It is the right psalm to anticipate the next unit of our plan.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 66 is a great national psalm of thanksgiving. The first half (which we read today) calls all the earth to worship God for his mighty works. The second half (which the plan does not include here) gets more personal, recounting how the worshiper has tested God in suffering and been delivered. Today we read the public, corporate opening of the psalm. It looks back at the Exodus, which we are about to read in detail, and summons every nation to praise the God who made it happen.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Verse 1: "Shout for joy to God, all the earth." Universal call to worship.
2. Verses 2-4: God's name and glory are to be celebrated by all peoples, even God's enemies will cringe before him.
3. Verse 5: "Come and see what God has done: he is awesome in his deeds toward the children of man."
4. Verse 6 specifically recalls the Exodus: "He turned the sea into dry land; they passed through the river on foot."
5. The crossing of the Red Sea and the Jordan are both alluded to, God's redemptive acts in history.

6 Verse 7: “Who rules by his might forever, whose eyes keep watch on the nations, let not the rebellious exalt themselves.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 66:1-7 is a call to worship grounded in God’s mighty acts of redemption. It is, in a sense, the opening anthem of the gospel of God’s deliverance.

The psalm opens by summoning the whole earth. “Shout for joy to God, all the earth.” Notice how universal the call is. This is not a private psalm for Israelites alone. It is a summons to every people, every nation, every voice on earth. Worship is meant to be global. God’s glory is not Israel’s private property; it is a flame that every nation should burn around.

Verses 2-4 connect God’s name with his glory. “Sing the glory of his name; give to him glorious praise!” The name of God is the focus of worship. Throughout the patriarchal narratives, we have seen God revealing his name in different forms, El Shaddai to Abraham, El Olam at Beersheba, the LORD at the burning bush (which we will read soon). The whole patriarchal story has been a gradual unveiling of who God is, and the appropriate response is worship of his name.

But then verse 3 has an arresting note: “Through the greatness of your power your enemies come cringing to you.” Worship is not just from the willing. Even God’s enemies eventually cringe before him. This is not the language of universalism (every soul finally saved) but of universal recognition (every knee will bow, whether in glad worship or fearful submission). The same will be expressed in Philippians 2 about Christ, “every knee should bow… and every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord.”

Verse 5 invites the reader to look at history. “Come and see what God has done.” This is the basic posture of biblical faith. Look at what God has done. The patriarchal story is a record of what God has done. The Exodus is what God has done. The cross is what God has done. Faith is not blind. It looks at the deeds of God in history and worships in response.

And then verse 6 specifically recalls the Exodus: “He turned the sea into dry land; they passed through the river on foot. There did we rejoice in him.” The crossing of the Red Sea, and possibly also the crossing of the Jordan into the promised land, is mentioned as the supreme example of God’s redemptive power. This is the great event that defined Israel as a nation, and it is also the great picture that the New Testament will use for baptism, for salvation, for passing through death into life.

Verse 7 closes the section with a sober reminder. “Who rules by his might forever, whose eyes keep watch on the nations, let not the rebellious exalt themselves.” God reigns. He watches. The rebellious may make a lot of noise, but they should not exalt themselves. God’s eyes are on the nations. Nothing escapes his rule. Whatever it looks like from the ground, the King is on his throne.

STEP 5

Connection

We are about to enter the Exodus narrative in the next unit. Psalm 66 is a fitting preview. It calls every nation to praise the God who turned the sea into dry land. The redemption of Israel from Egypt was not just a national story, it was a public demonstration of God's power that the whole world should learn from and worship in response to. The God of the Exodus is the God who still saves his people from every form of bondage.

STEP 6

Application

Take the psalmist's first command: shout for joy. The Christian life is meant to be full of joy in worship. Not somber acknowledgment, not dutiful gratitude, shouting joy. If your worship has gone quiet over time, let this psalm be a prophetic correction. The God who delivered Israel from Egypt is the same God who delivered you from sin and death. He deserves more than a polite thank-you.

And take the second command: come and see. Look at what God has done. Not just in Scripture, but in your own life. Make a habit of reviewing the redemptive acts of God on your behalf. The healings, the answered prayers, the prevented disasters, the spiritual breakthroughs. Come and see. Then sing.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Come and see what God has done, and tell him what you see in his work, from creation to the cross to your own life.

Ask him to restore your joy in worship.

Pray that the nations would join in praising him.

REST

Meditation

Today there is no new reading. Today is for review and reflection on what you have learned in Unit 3.

Begin by memorizing the verse above if you have not already. Genesis 15:6 is the foundational verse of the doctrine of justification by faith. It is the verse Paul will quote in Romans 4 and Galatians 3 as the proof that justification has always been by faith, never by works of the law. Abraham believed God, and God counted it to him as righteousness. The transaction was simple, and it is the same transaction by which every Christian is justified today.

Say this verse aloud several times. Notice three things. First, Abraham believed. He did not earn, achieve, perform, or negotiate. He believed. Second, God counted it. The accounting is divine. God moves something from heaven's ledger into Abraham's account. Third, what God counted was righteousness. Not credit toward future righteousness. Not the possibility of righteousness. Righteousness itself. Abraham, who had lied about his wife, who had taken Hagar instead of waiting, who would lie again, Abraham was reckoned righteous because he believed.

This is your verse too if you are in Christ. You have believed. God has counted Christ's righteousness to you. You are reckoned righteous before the throne. Not because of your performance. Because you believed.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 3 you have traveled through Genesis 12 to 50, the entire patriarchal narrative. The unit began with the call of Abram, the great narrowing of God's redemptive plan to one man and one family through whom all nations would be blessed. You followed Abraham through his call, his journey, his lies, his rescue of Lot, his meeting with Melchizedek, the formal cutting of the covenant in Genesis 15, the institution of circumcision, the long-awaited birth of Isaac, and the binding of Isaac on Mount Moriah.

Along the way, the plan paused for the doctrine of Covenant Theology, naming the structure that runs throughout the Bible. Five covenants, one unfolding story, all fulfilled in Christ.

The unit then continued through Isaac's quieter life, Jacob's deception and flight, his vision of the ladder at Bethel, his twenty years with Laban, the formation of the twelve tribes through Leah, Rachel, and the maidservants, his wrestling with God at Peniel, his reconciliation with Esau, and the renewal of the covenant at Bethel.

The Joseph narrative dominated the second half of the unit. Joseph sold by his brothers, falsely accused by Potiphar's wife, forgotten in prison, finally elevated to second in command over Egypt, reuniting with his brothers, and forgiving them with the great theological summary: "You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good."

The unit closed with Jacob's death, his blessing of Judah (the scepter that would not depart), and Joseph's bones in a coffin in Egypt, awaiting the Exodus to come.

The Psalms accompanied the journey: Psalm 105 in two parts, summarizing the patriarchal story in song; Psalm 121 and the Psalms of Ascent, teaching us to walk by faith; Psalm 37, the wisdom of patience under apparent injustice; Psalm 47 and Psalm 66, the universal kingship of God over all nations.

The big theological lessons of this unit are these: God's covenant operates by election and grace, not by birth order or merit. Justification has always been by faith. God's promises take time, sometimes decades, and they are fulfilled in his way, not ours. God's providence works behind every event of human history, including the wickedness of others. And the line of Judah, the kingly tribe, runs all the way from Genesis 49 to Christ, the Lion of Judah, in whom every patriarchal promise finds its yes.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What are the three elements of God's promise to Abraham, and how does each find fulfillment in Christ?

Read Genesis 12:1-3 again. The three elements are land, offspring (a great nation), and universal blessing (all families of the earth blessed). Each finds fulfillment in Christ: the land is fulfilled in the new heavens and new earth, the offspring is fulfilled in Christ himself (Galatians 3:16, "to Abraham and to his offspring... who is Christ"), and the universal blessing is fulfilled in the gospel going to every nation. Write a few sentences in your own words about how the gospel today fulfills each element of God's promise to Abraham.

What does the covenant cutting of Genesis 15 reveal about the nature of God's grace?

Look back at Genesis 15. In the ancient Near East, both parties to a covenant walked between the cut pieces, pledging by self-curse to keep the covenant. But in Genesis 15, only God walks between the pieces. The covenant is one-sided. God binds himself to keep what he has promised, regardless of Abram's faithfulness. This is grace in its purest form, God taking on himself the entire weight of the covenant. Centuries later, Christ on the cross was torn like the animals in Genesis 15, bearing the curse so that God's people could be blessed. Sit with this. What does it mean for your assurance that God's covenant with you depends on his faithfulness, not yours?

How does the story of Joseph function as a type of Christ?

Walk through Joseph's life. He was the beloved son of his father (Genesis 37:3). He was hated and rejected by his brothers (37:4). He was sold for silver (37:28). He was wrongly accused and condemned (39:14-20). He was raised from the prison and given a name above every name in Egypt (41:39-43). He saved his brothers, including those who had sold him, by his elevation. He forgave them and provided for them. Every detail anticipates Christ. Take a moment to consider: in what specific ways did Joseph's suffering and exaltation point forward to Jesus' death and resurrection?

What does it mean that Abraham "believed God and it was counted to him as righteousness"?

Genesis 15:6, the most important Old Testament verse for understanding the New Testament's doctrine of salvation. Three things are happening here. First, Abraham believed, faith is the means of justification, not works. Second, God counted, the accounting is divine, not earned. Third, what was counted was righteousness, Abraham was reckoned righteous before God on the basis of faith alone, not on the basis of his moral performance (which had already failed and would fail again). Paul will use this verse in Romans 4 to prove that justification has always been by faith. If you have believed in Christ, this is true of you too. Pray through this. Thank God that you are reckoned righteous, not because of who you are, but because of who Christ is.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for keeping his promise to Abraham when no one else could.

Thank him that you are a child of Abraham through faith in Christ.

Ask him to keep the unit verse in front of you.

GENESIS 50:20

REST

Meditation

Genesis 50:20 is the theological climax of the entire patriarchal narrative, and of the entire book of Genesis. It is two sentences in one.

"You meant evil against me", the brothers' sin was real. Joseph does not minimize what they did. There is no false forgiveness here, no pretending nothing happened.

"But God meant it for good", behind their wickedness, God was working. Moving the pieces. Positioning Joseph in Egypt so that, when the famine came, many lives could be preserved. The same event was both wicked (on the brothers' part) and providential (on God's). Both are true at once.

This will eventually be said about the cross. The crucifixion of Christ was the most evil act in human history. It was also the most loving act of God in history. The same event. Both sentences true.

Carry this verse through your week. When you face injustice, remember it. When you mourn a wrong done to you, remember it. The God who turned Joseph's pit into a throne can do the same with your story.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week closed the patriarchal era and the book of Genesis. You read Judah's plea for Benjamin, the brother who once proposed selling Joseph now offering himself for the youngest. You watched Joseph reveal himself, weep, and forgive. You traveled with the family of Jacob down to Egypt and settled in Goshen. You read Jacob's prophetic blessings on his twelve sons, including the famous promise that the scepter would not depart from Judah. You watched Joseph die, his bones placed in a coffin in Egypt, awaiting the Exodus four hundred years later. You worshiped with Psalm 47 (God's reign over the nations) and the opening of Psalm 66 (all the earth called to praise). And yesterday you completed the Unit 3 review, anchored on Genesis 15:6, justification by faith.

Genesis is over. The patriarchal family is in Egypt. The four-hundred-year sojourning has begun. And the Lion of Judah stands over everything still to come.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Looking back at Genesis as a whole, where did your understanding of God deepen most? You have walked through 50 chapters in about 9 weeks. The book introduced God as Creator, Judge, Covenant-maker, Provider, the God of the patriarchs. Which face of God did you most need to see in this season of your life? Why?

How does Genesis 50:20 prepare you to read about the cross? When you reach the Gospels later in this plan, you will encounter the most evil act ever committed, and the most loving act God ever performed, in the same event. Joseph's words to his brothers are the theological key. Sit with this. How does the resurrection prove that what humans meant for evil, God meant for good?

What patriarchal failure most resembles your own? Genesis is candid about the failures of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph's brothers. Lies. Favoritism. Manipulation. Betrayal. Drift. Where do you see your own story in theirs? And where do you see God's grace operating despite their (and your) failures?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for what you have seen of his hand through the book of Genesis.

Thank him that what others meant for evil he meant for good, supremely at the cross.

Ask him to give you Joseph's eyes for what lies ahead.

DAY 64 · WEEK 10

Job 1:1-2:13

The prologue in heaven; Job's suffering begins

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 42 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 1:1-2:13. This is the prologue, and it is the only place in the book where you are allowed to see behind the curtain. Read it as a story told in two settings: the courts of heaven and the ash heap on earth. Notice that Job never gets to read these two chapters.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

You have finished the Law and are now entering the wisdom literature. Job is probably the oldest story in this stretch of the Bible. The details point to the age of the patriarchs: Job's wealth is counted in livestock, he offers sacrifices as the head of his own household, and there is no mention of Israel, the exodus, or the law of Moses. The land of Uz lies outside the covenant people. That matters. God is showing you a man who knows him and fears him before the nations are sorted into Israel and everyone else. The book asks the oldest question people ask: why do the righteous suffer? And it will not let you answer too quickly.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job is introduced as "blameless and upright, one who feared God and turned away from evil" (1:1). The narrator tells you this before anything goes wrong.
2. Job is wealthy, with seven sons, three daughters, and enormous flocks. He also offers burnt offerings on behalf of his children, "for Job said, It may be that my children have sinned" (1:5).
3. The scene shifts to heaven, where the sons of God present themselves before the LORD, and Satan comes among them (1:6).
4. The LORD, not Satan, brings up Job: "Have you considered my servant Job?" (1:8).

5. Satan's accusation is that Job fears God only because God pays him for it, "Does Job fear God for no reason?" (1:9).

6. God sets a limit. Satan may touch what Job has but not Job himself (1:12). In chapter 2, he may touch Job's body but must spare his life (2:6).

7. Four messengers arrive one after another, and Job loses oxen, donkeys, sheep, camels, servants, and finally all ten of his children (1:13-19).

8. Job worships: "The LORD gave, and the LORD has taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD" (1:21). The narrator adds, "In all this Job did not sin or charge God with wrong" (1:22).

9. Job's wife says, "Curse God and die" (2:9). Three friends arrive and sit with him in silence for seven days (2:11-13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing the prologue does is settle a question that the rest of the book will keep raising. Job's suffering is not a punishment for sin. The narrator says so, and God says so twice (1:8; 2:3). If you forget this, you will read the next thirty-nine chapters the way Job's friends do, looking for what Job must have done wrong.

The second thing the prologue does is show you that suffering has a larger setting than the person suffering. Satan appears as an accuser. His charge is a charge against God as much as against Job: that God's servants love him only because he pays them well, and that if the payment stops, so will the worship. The question on trial is whether God is worth loving for himself. Job does not know he is on trial. He does not know any of this is happening. That is a hard truth and a necessary one: sometimes the most important thing going on in your suffering is something you cannot see.

Notice the limits. Satan is not an equal of God. He cannot act until he receives permission, and the permission has a boundary every time. This is not a comfortable picture, because it means God is sovereign even over the hand that strikes Job. But it is also the only picture in which suffering has a limit and an end. The book will not explain to Job why God permitted it. It will show that God remained in charge.

Then look at Job's response. He tears his robe and shaves his head, which are the actions of real grief, and then he falls to the ground and worships. He does not pretend that nothing happened. He does not say that it is fine. He says that the LORD gave and the LORD has taken away, and he blesses the name of the LORD anyway. Chapter 2 sharpens the test. His wife, who has lost everything too, tells him to give up. Job answers, “Shall we receive good from God, and shall we not receive evil?” (2:10). That is not cold stoicism. It is a man who has decided that God is not only a giver of gifts.

The last scene is the quietest. The friends sit with him for seven days and say nothing. It is the best thing they will do in the whole book.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus’ own story echoes Job’s. He too was declared righteous by the Father (“This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased”) and then led into suffering at the hand of the accuser (Matthew 3:17-4:11). Revelation 12:10 names Satan as “the accuser of our brothers.” James holds up Job as an example of steadfastness (James 5:11).

STEP 6

Application

First, if you are suffering now, hear that your suffering is not automatic proof of anything about you. Do not assume that God is angry, and do not assume that he is absent.

Second, remember that Satan has a leash. Nothing in your life, including the worst thing, falls outside the limits God sets.

Third, practice Job’s honesty. You can grieve openly and worship at the same time. Say the true thing about the pain and the true thing about God, and do not let either cancel the other.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that nothing touches your life beyond the limit he sets.
- Ask him to keep you from believing he has turned against you when you suffer.
- Pray for someone who is grieving today.

JOB 1:21

DAY 65 · WEEK 10

Psalm 10

Where are you, LORD?, the lament when God seems hidden

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 18 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 10. After the prologue of Job, this is the psalm of someone who is living inside the silence. Read it slowly and listen for how the psalmist moves from accusation to confidence.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 10 was probably written by David, and in many ancient manuscripts it was joined with Psalm 9 as a single poem. Psalm 9 celebrates God's justice. Psalm 10 asks where that justice has gone. It is a lament about wicked people who seem to flourish while the poor are crushed. You have just watched Job lose everything while the wicked go on living. This psalm gives you words for what that feels like.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens with two questions: "Why, O LORD, do you stand far away? Why do you hide yourself in times of trouble?" (v. 1).
2. The wicked man hunts the poor and boasts about his desires (vv. 2-3).
3. He does not seek God, and "all his thoughts are, There is no God" (v. 4).
4. He believes he will never be moved, and he treats God as if God has forgotten (vv. 5-6, 11).
5. His mouth is full of lies and oppression, and he lies in wait like a lion (vv. 7-10).
6. In verse 12 the psalmist cries, "Arise, O LORD; O God, lift up your hand; forget not the afflicted."

7. In verse 14 the psalmist says, “But you do see, for you note mischief and vexation.” The tone turns.

8. The psalm ends with confidence: “The LORD is king forever and ever” (v. 16), and he will “do justice to the fatherless and the oppressed” (v. 18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The honesty of this psalm is part of its gift. It begins with a question that sounds close to an accusation: why do you hide? The Bible does not tell you to suppress that question. It hands you a prayer that asks it out loud. Prayer in the Psalms is not polite. It is true.

The middle of the psalm is a portrait of the wicked, and the details are chilling. The wicked man is proud, he is a predator, and he has talked himself into believing that nobody is watching. “God will never see it” (v. 11). Look at what drives his behavior. It is not that he has weighed the evidence and decided God does not exist. It is that he wants the freedom to do what he wants without anyone looking. Practical atheism works like that.

Then the turn at verse 12. The psalmist does not receive an answer to his question. What he does is change what he asks for. “Arise, O LORD” is a petition, and the petition quickly becomes a confession: “But you do see.” The same God who seemed to be hiding is now the God who notes every wrong. The psalmist has not changed his circumstances. He has recalled who God is.

The last verses are certain. “The LORD is king forever and ever.” The wicked have a short reign, and God has a permanent one. The psalm ends with the fatherless and the oppressed, because they are the ones God is listening to. “O LORD, you hear the desire of the afflicted” (v. 17).

This is how lament works. It states the problem honestly, it asks, and then it lets the character of God answer. Job will do exactly this over the next thirty-five chapters.

STEP 5

Connection

The psalm describes the kind of arrogance that Paul quotes in Romans 3:14 (“Their mouth is full of curses and bitterness”), taken from verse 7. Jesus said that God will “give justice to his elect, who cry to him day and night” (Luke 18:7). Revelation 6:10 hears the martyrs ask the same question, “How long, O Lord?”

STEP 6

Application

If God feels distant right now, pray this psalm back to him word for word. Do not clean up the question. Then, as the psalmist does, say out loud one thing you know to be true of God: that he sees, that he is king, that he hears the afflicted.

Also, take note of who in your life is being crushed by someone more powerful, and ask what a God who hears the afflicted would want you to do.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God plainly where he seems far away.
- Pray for someone who is afflicted and ask how you might help.
- Ask him to strengthen your heart to wait.

JOB 1:21

DAY 66 · WEEK 10

Psalm 13

How long, O LORD?, the short lament and its resolution

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 6 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 13. It has only six verses. Read it three times, once for each of its three movements: the questions, the plea, and the song.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is one of the shortest laments in the Psalter and one of the most loved. David wrote it, but we do not know the occasion. Some think it came during the years he was hunted by Saul. Others think it was an illness. The lack of detail is deliberate. The psalm is meant to be prayed by anyone who has asked God, "How long?" It follows Psalm 10 and goes with Job: both are about holding on to God when God seems to be silent.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The first two verses ask "How long?" four times: forgotten forever, hiding his face, taking counsel in my soul, my enemy exalted (vv. 1-2).
2. The psalmist says that God has forgotten him, and the sorrow is "in my heart all the day" (v. 2).
3. In verse 3 the psalm turns to commands: "Consider and answer me, O LORD my God; light up my eyes."
4. He fears death: "lest I sleep the sleep of death" (v. 3).
5. He fears that his enemy will say "I have prevailed" (v. 4).
6. Verse 5 begins with a contrast: "But I have trusted in your steadfast love."
7. The psalm ends in song: "I will sing to the LORD, because he has dealt bountifully with me" (v. 6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This psalm is built like a staircase. Each step is shorter than the last and leads upward. Verses 1 and 2 are four questions, and they are long and heavy. Verses 3 and 4 are three commands and a fear. Verses 5 and 6 are a statement of trust and a vow to sing. The rhythm of the poem acts out what happens in the heart of someone who prays honestly.

Pay attention to the phrase "How long?" It does not say "Why?" The question is not about the cause of the trouble. It is about duration. The psalmist can bear suffering for a season, but he cannot see an end to it, and that is what is crushing him. Many of us are in the same place. The pain is bearable only if it has a limit.

Then see what the psalmist asks for in verse 3. "Light up my eyes." He does not ask for a change in circumstances. He asks for sight. His eyes are going dim with grief, and he wants God to revive them. That is a prayer for perspective, and it is a good prayer.

The turn at verse 5 is the heart of the psalm. "But I have trusted." Nothing about the situation has changed between verse 4 and verse 5. The enemy is still there. God has not answered. What has changed is that the psalmist has chosen where to stand. He stands on God's "steadfast love," the covenant word, the word that means God will not walk away from his people. And from there he can do what seemed impossible in verse 1: rejoice and sing.

Notice that the song is a promise, not a report. "I will sing." He is singing before the rescue comes, and the reason he can is that he has already received something: God has dealt bountifully with him, and he is looking back on it.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus prayed a lament of his own on the cross, quoting Psalm 22:1. Paul said that "for those who love God all things work together for good" (Romans 8:28). Habakkuk 3:17-18 follows the same pattern: no fruit on the vines, yet "I will rejoice in the LORD."

STEP 6

Application

When you are asking "How long?", pray this psalm in the order it is written. State the pain honestly. Then ask God for light, not just for relief. Then say aloud, "But I have trusted in your steadfast love," and name one specific way you have seen that love in the past.

If you know someone who is waiting, send them verses 5 and 6 and tell them you are praying that they will sing again.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God “How long?” about the thing that weighs on you most.
- Remember aloud some ways he has been good to you.
- Tell him you trust him even here.

JOB 1:21

DAY 67 · WEEK 10

Job 3:1-4:21

Job curses the day; Eliphaz responds, suffering as punishment

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 57 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 3:1-4:21. Chapter 3 is Job's lament, and chapter 4 is the first speech of his friend Eliphaz. Read them as a conversation between a man in pain and a man with a theory.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After seven days of silence, Job finally speaks. What comes out is not a prayer to God and not a complaint about the friends. It is a wish to have never been born. The friends who sat silently beside him now begin to talk, and the rest of the book is a series of speeches. Most of Job is written in Hebrew poetry, and it is some of the most difficult poetry in the Bible. The speakers are not always right. The narrator does not tell you in each chapter who is right, so you must read with attention.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job begins, "Let the day perish on which I was born" (3:3). He wishes the day had been darkness.
2. He asks why he was not stillborn, and why light is given to those in misery (3:11-20).
3. He says that death would have meant rest, where "the wicked cease from troubling, and the weary are at rest" (3:17).
4. Job says, "For the thing that I fear comes upon me, and what I dread befalls me" (3:25).
5. Eliphaz begins gently, asking if Job will be impatient (4:2).
6. He reminds Job that he has comforted others (4:3-4).
7. Eliphaz states his principle: "Who that was innocent ever perished? Or where were the upright cut off?" (4:7).

8. He describes a night vision of a spirit that said, “Can mortal man be in the right before God?” (4:12-17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Start with Job’s lament. It would be easy to see it as a failure of faith. It is not. Notice who Job is not cursing. In verse 1 he curses the day of his birth, not God. He has not yet said anything against God. That restraint is easy to miss, and the narrator wants you to see that Job is still holding on even as he wishes he were dead.

The lament also shows how deep the grief is. Job does not want to die in order to be rid of God. He wants rest. “There the prisoners are at ease together” (3:18). He is exhausted. There is something very honest in this chapter, and the Bible makes room for it. You do not have to be strong in order to be faithful.

Then comes Eliphaz, and his first speech sounds reasonable. He is kind at first. He is trying to help. But he holds a theory, and the theory is stated in 4:7-8: the innocent do not perish, and “those who plow iniquity and sow trouble reap the same.” If Job is suffering, Job must have sinned. This is the principle of retribution, and it is true in a general way: sin has consequences, and wisdom tends to lead to life. Proverbs says so. But Eliphaz has taken a general truth and turned it into a rule that explains every single case. Job’s suffering does not fit the rule, and so Eliphaz must either change the rule or accuse Job.

The night vision is worth noticing too. Eliphaz claims a spiritual experience as proof. The message he reports, that no human is righteous before God, is true. Paul will say the same in Romans 3. But it is used wrongly here. It is a true statement that Eliphaz uses as a club.

Be careful to read this as a lesson on how to comfort. The friends could have kept silent. They could have wept. Instead they explained. Explaining pain to a person in pain, before you understand it, is not comfort.

STEP 5

Connection

Jonah also wished to die (Jonah 4:3), and so did Elijah (1 Kings 19:4), and God cared for both of them. Jesus rejected the same theory of retribution when his disciples asked whether a man’s blindness was caused by his sin or his parents’ (John 9:1-3). “Neither this man nor his parents sinned.”

STEP 6

Application

First, if you have said dark things to God in your pain, take comfort that Job did too, and that Scripture records it without rebuke.

Second, watch yourself when someone else is hurting. Before you offer a reason, offer your presence. Ask yourself whether you are trying to help them or to make yourself feel that the world is safe.

Third, test any belief that says "good people always get good things." It is not what the Bible says.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bring God your darkest thoughts without hiding them.

Ask him to keep you from explaining away another person's pain.

Ask him to teach you to sit with those who weep.

JOB 1:21

DAY 68 · WEEK 10

Job 5:1-7:21

Eliphaz concludes; Job replies, the cry of the afflicted soul

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 74 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 5:1-7:21. Eliphaz finishes his speech in chapter 5, and Job answers in chapters 6 and 7. Notice the turn in chapter 7, when Job stops speaking to his friends and begins speaking to God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday Eliphaz began his speech with a general rule. Today he finishes it. His tone moves from correction to advice, and he gives Job a plan: seek God, accept discipline, and everything will be restored. He means well. But a plan of recovery assumes that Job did something wrong. Job's reply is the first long speech where he speaks both to his friends and to God, and it is one of the rawest passages in Scripture.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Eliphaz says, "Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward" (5:7).
2. He advises, "As for me, I would seek God, and to God would I commit my cause" (5:8).
3. He describes God as one who "does great things and unsearchable, marvelous things without number" (5:9) and who lifts the lowly (5:11).
4. He says, "Behold, blessed is the one whom God reproves; therefore despise not the discipline of the Almighty" (5:17).
5. Job answers, "Oh that my vexation were weighed" (6:2), and says his words have been rash because of his pain.
6. Job compares his friends to a seasonal stream that dries up in the heat when travelers need it (6:15-21).

7. He asks, “Teach me, and I will be silent; make me understand how I have gone astray” (6:24).

8. In chapter 7 he says, “My days are swifter than a weaver’s shuttle” (7:6) and “I will not restrain my mouth” (7:11).

9. He asks God, “What is man, that you make so much of him…that you visit him every morning and test him every moment?” (7:17-18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Eliphaz sounds wise because much of what he says is true. God does lift up the lowly. God does discipline those he loves. Later the writer of Hebrews will quote Proverbs about this very thing (Hebrews 12:5-6). The problem is that Eliphaz applies it to Job without knowing anything about Job’s case. The truth is real, and the application is wrong. That is one of the hardest things to learn about reading and using Scripture: a true statement can be false in a particular place.

Job’s reply begins with a plea for understanding. “Oh that my vexation were weighed.” He is not asking his friends to agree with him. He is asking them to see the weight of what he carries. And he makes an honest complaint about their help. They are like a wadi in the desert, running with water in the winter and gone in the heat. When a traveler most needs water, there is none. A friend’s faithfulness is measured in the dry season.

Then he makes a request that is entirely fair. “Teach me, and I will be silent.” He is open to correction. “How forceful are upright words! But what does reproof from you reprove?” (6:25). If they can show him a sin, he will listen. They cannot, because there is none to show.

Chapter 7 is where the speech changes direction. Job stops talking about his friends and begins talking to God. His language is bitter. He sees life as hard service and hired labor, he cannot sleep, and his skin is breaking. He asks God, “Am I the sea, or the sea monster, that you set a guard over me?” (7:12). He even parodies Psalm 8. Where David asked in wonder, “What is man that you are mindful of him?”, Job asks in pain what man is that God cannot leave him alone.

Do not read this as rebellion. Notice that Job is still speaking to God. The friends talk about God, and Job talks to him. That difference is the whole difference between theology as theory and faith as a relationship, and it is the reason God will say later that Job spoke rightly.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 12:5-11 quotes Proverbs 3:11-12 on discipline, and it is meant for children who are being trained, not for people who are suffering unjustly. Psalm 8 is the passage Job twists in 7:17-18, and Hebrews 2:5-9 reads Psalm 8 as fulfilled in Jesus. Psalm 88 will show you another prayer that does not end with comfort.

STEP 6

Application

When you read the Bible to comfort or counsel someone, ask whether the verse fits their situation, or whether you are using it to solve your own discomfort with their pain.

When you are the one in pain, pray as Job did. Speak to God, not only about him. If your prayers sound bitter, take them to the one person who can bear them.

Think of a person who was a seasonal stream for you, and one who was a river. Aim to be the second.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Bring your complaints to God and not around him.
- Ask him to make you a faithful friend in someone's dry season.
- Ask for wisdom to speak truth with love.

JOB 1:21

DAY 69 · WEEK 10

Job 8:1-10:22

Bildad speaks; Job questions God's justice

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 79 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 8:1-10:22. Bildad speaks in chapter 8, and Job responds in chapters 9 and 10. Pay attention to the question Job asks in 9:2, because the whole book is about it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Bildad is the second friend to speak. Eliphaz relied on a personal experience. Bildad relies on tradition: what "the fathers" have taught. His speech is harder than Eliphaz's. He even suggests that Job's children died because of their own sin. Job answers with something new. He does not argue that he is innocent, but he asks a deeper question: even if a man were innocent, how could he ever win a case against God? He wishes there were someone to stand between them.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Bildad asks, "Does God pervert justice? Or does the Almighty pervert the right?" (8:3).
2. He says, "If your children have sinned against him, he has delivered them into the hand of their transgression" (8:4).
3. He tells Job that if he is pure and upright, God will rouse himself and restore him (8:5-6).
4. He appeals to the wisdom of earlier generations (8:8-10).
5. Job answers, "But how can a man be in the right before God?" (9:2).
6. He says that God is so powerful that no one can contend with him: "If it is a contest of strength, behold him! If it is a matter of justice, who can summon him?" (9:19).
7. Job says, "There is no arbiter between us, who might lay his hand on us both" (9:33).

8. In chapter 10 he addresses God directly: “I loathe my life…I will say to God, Do not condemn me; let me know why you contend against me” (10:1-2).

9. He asks God, “Did you not pour me out like milk and curdle me like cheese?” and remembers that God made him (10:10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Bildad’s mistake is cruel, though he does not mean it to be. He does what the friends all do: he turns suffering into a verdict. The death of Job’s children is, to Bildad, proof that they were guilty. It is hard to imagine a colder thing to say to a grieving father. But notice that Bildad believes he is defending God. His first question is a real one: “Does God pervert justice?” The answer is no, and Job would agree. The error is in thinking that he understands how God’s justice works in every case.

Job’s answer is much deeper. The question in 9:2 is the central one: “How can a man be in the right before God?” Job is not asking about his own sin. He is asking something bigger. God is so great and so strong that no human being could stand before him in court. Even if I were innocent, he says, my own mouth would condemn me. He sees clearly what Bildad does not: that the real problem between God and humanity is not a technical question about who deserves what. It is the distance between a holy God and a creature.

That leads Job to the most important wish in the chapter. “There is no arbiter between us.” He wishes for a mediator, someone with a hand on God and a hand on Job, who could bring them together. Job does not yet know that he is longing for a person God will one day send. He only knows that he needs one.

In chapter 10 his wild words turn into something like faith. He remembers that God made him, shaped him like clay, and knit him together with bones and sinews (10:8-12). The one who is attacking him is the one who made him. That memory does not remove the pain, but it makes the pain a question rather than a verdict: if you made me, why are you doing this?

This is one of the strange gifts of Job. He is allowed to ask the question without being told that the question is out of bounds.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that “there is one God, and there is one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus” (1 Timothy 2:5). Hebrews 9:15 says Christ is “the mediator of a new covenant.” Job’s cry for an arbiter finds its answer in Jesus, who has laid a hand on God and on us. The picture of God as potter is also in Isaiah 64:8 and Romans 9:20-21.

STEP 6

Application

Do not think that you can win an argument with God. Ask instead for the Mediator. Spend time thanking Jesus for being the one who stands between you and the Father.

Also, notice how easy it is to comfort yourself by finding a reason that other people suffer, such as "they must have done something." Resist that. Every time you catch yourself doing it, pray for the person instead.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what makes you feel unable to stand before him.
- Thank Jesus for being the mediator Job longed for.
- Ask him to make you gentle with those who suffer.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD gave, and the LORD has taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD."

JOB 1:21

REST

Meditation

Job 1:21 is the confession of a man who has just lost everything. It is short enough to carry in your head, and heavy enough that it will take a lifetime to learn.

"The LORD gave." Job begins with gratitude. He has not forgotten what he received. The children, the land, the livestock, and the health were all gifts, and he names them as gifts. Everything good in your life is a gift too, and gratitude is the first step in learning to worship.

"And the LORD has taken away." This is the hard part, and Job does not soften it. He does not say that Satan took away, or that raiders took away, though both are true in the story. He sees through the second causes to the sovereign God who permits them. He does not say that God is guilty. He says that God is God. This is one of the most mature statements in Scripture, and it is not easy to say.

“Blessed be the name of the LORD.” The verse does not stop with the loss. It ends with praise, and the praise is aimed at the same LORD who gave and took. Job is not praising loss. He is praising the one who is greater than loss.

For the Christian, this verse takes on a new shape in light of the cross. The Father gave his Son, and the Son was taken away, and yet in that giving and taking is the greatest blessing in history. Job could not see that yet. You can.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began Unit 4 and the book of Job. You were taken behind the curtain into heaven, where Satan accused Job and God set a limit on what he could do. You watched Job lose his children and his wealth and his health, and you heard him worship. You read two laments, Psalm 10 and Psalm 13, which gave you words for the question “Where are you, LORD?” and the question “How long?” Then the friends arrived. You heard Eliphaz suggest that Job’s suffering must be the result of sin, and Bildad go further and say that Job’s children had earned their deaths. Job answered with grief, with bitterness, and with the first stirrings of a longing for a mediator. The week taught that suffering is not a verdict, and that faithful people are allowed to ask hard questions.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Job lost almost everything, and he worshiped. Is there something you have lost, or are afraid of losing, that you need to place again in God’s hands? Write down what it is, and then write “The LORD gave, and the LORD has taken away; blessed be the name of the LORD” beside it.

How does Job’s longing for an “arbiter” who could stand between him and God (9:33) point you to Christ? Think about what it means that Jesus has laid his hand on both God and humanity. What would Job say if he could see the cross?

Which of Job’s friends do you most resemble when someone you love is hurting? What would it look like this week to sit silently with someone instead of offering explanations?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for what he has given, and place in his hands what you fear to lose.

Thank Jesus, the mediator Job longed for.

Rest in his care as the week ends.

DAY 71 · WEEK 11

Job 11:1-13:28

Zophar's rebuke; Job answers, I have heard all this before

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 81 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 11:1-13:28. Zophar, the third friend, speaks in chapter 11. Job's reply fills chapters 12 to 14, but you will read the first part today, ending at chapter 13. As you read, mark every place where Job turns from his friends to speak to God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Now all three friends have spoken once. Eliphaz argued from experience and Bildad argued from tradition. Zophar is the sharpest of the three, and he argues from sheer confidence. He tells Job that he knows what God is thinking. Job's answer begins with sarcasm and ends with one of the most daring statements of faith in the Bible. He will not give up on God, and he will not give up on the truth, and he is willing to say so to God's face.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Zophar asks, "Should a multitude of words go unanswered, and a man full of talk be judged right?" (11:2).
2. He wishes that God would speak and tell Job "that God exacts of you less than your guilt deserves" (11:6).
3. He asks, "Can you find out the deep things of God? Can you find out the limit of the Almighty?" (11:7).
4. He promises that if Job repents, "you will forget your misery" and "your life will be brighter than the noonday" (11:13-17).
5. Job answers with sarcasm: "No doubt you are the people, and wisdom will die with you" (12:2).

6. Job says, “I have understanding as well as you; I am not inferior to you” (12:3). He says he has become a laughingstock to his friends.
7. He describes God’s power over nations and rulers: “He makes nations great, and he destroys them” (12:23).
8. He calls the friends “worthless physicians” and “whitewashers” who lie on God’s behalf (13:4, 7).
9. Job says, “Though he slay me, I will hope in him; yet I will argue my ways to his face” (13:15).
10. He asks, “Why do you hide your face and count me as your enemy?” (13:24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Zophar’s speech is a good example of a sound idea turned into a weapon. His question in 11:7 is a good one. No one can fully search out God. But he uses it against Job in the wrong way. He says that God’s wisdom is so deep that Job cannot possibly know that he is innocent. That is a remarkable thing to say to a man who has lost his children. If God is that deep, then Zophar should be more careful about telling Job what God is doing.

Job’s sarcasm in chapter 12 is earned. “Wisdom will die with you.” He tells them that he knows everything they have said. The wise sayings about God’s power and justice are not secret. Everyone knows them. The problem is not information. The problem is that they use these truths to hurt him. And then he does what none of them has done: he describes God’s power honestly. God overthrows the mighty and strips kings of their robes (12:17-21). God is a God who is not predictable, and the friends’ tidy picture of divine justice cannot contain him.

Then comes chapter 13, and the most famous line in this section. “Though he slay me, I will hope in him.” The ESV translation reflects one reading of the Hebrew. Some translations read it as “Behold, he will slay me; I have no hope.” Either way, the verse is full of tension, and the next clause is clear: “yet I will argue my ways to his face.” Job is not giving up on God. He is going to bring his case before God directly. He knows that the godless cannot approach God, and the fact that he is willing to do so is itself evidence of his faith (13:16).

Look at the difference between Job and the friends. The friends talk about God. Job wants to talk to God. They defend God, as though he needed it. Job asks for an audience. He is the one who takes God seriously, and so he is the one who is willing to be honest with him.

This is a kind of faith that asks questions and keeps coming back. It is not a faith that is afraid of the answer.

STEP 5

Connection

The picture of faith that hopes in God even when he seems to be an enemy shows up again in Abraham, who believed that God could raise Isaac from the dead (Hebrews 11:17-19), and in Jesus in Gethsemane: “Not my will, but yours, be done” (Luke 22:42). Habakkuk 3:17-19 is another echo.

STEP 6

Application

Think of one question you are afraid to ask God. Ask it this week, honestly and respectfully, in prayer. Then keep listening.

Be careful of the kind of confidence that Zophar has. If you ever find yourself certain about why someone else is suffering, that is a sign to stop talking.

Consider memorizing Job 13:15 as your own statement of faith.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you do not understand about what he is doing.
- Ask him to give you honesty in prayer and humility to wait.
- Ask him to keep you hoping in him.

JOB 13:15

DAY 72 · WEEK 11

Job 14:1–17:16

"I know that my Redeemer lives"; the friends harden

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 90 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 14:1-17:16. Job reflects on the brevity of life, Eliphaz returns with a harsher speech, and Job answers by looking toward heaven for a witness. Read the speeches for the fragments of hope that keep breaking through.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The first round of speeches is over, and the second begins. The friends are getting harder, not softer. Eliphaz tells Job that his own mouth condemns him, and he spends a whole chapter describing the miserable life of the wicked, which is a pointed way of saying that Job is suffering because he is wicked. Job's replies show someone who is wearing out. He has no hope in his friends and almost none in this life. But in the middle of the despair, he reaches for something he can hardly name: a witness in heaven.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job says, "Man who is born of a woman is few of days and full of trouble" (14:1).
2. He compares a person to a tree: "For there is hope for a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again" (14:7), but man "lies down and rises not again" (14:12).
3. He asks, "If a man dies, shall he live again?" (14:14), and then expresses a hope that God would hide him in Sheol until his wrath has passed and then remember him.
4. Eliphaz accuses Job: "Your own mouth condemns you, and not I" (15:6).
5. Eliphaz describes the wicked man as one who "writhes in pain all his days" (15:20).
6. Job calls them "miserable comforters" (16:2) and says that God has worn him out (16:7).

7. Job says, “Even now, behold, my witness is in heaven, and he who testifies for me is on high” (16:19).
8. He pleads, “O earth, cover not my blood, and let my cry find no resting place” (16:18).
9. In chapter 17 he asks God to “lay down a pledge for me with yourself; who is there who will put up security for me?” (17:3).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to notice is that Job’s questions are about more than his own pain. In chapter 14 he thinks about human life in general. We are short-lived, like a flower, and we are fragile. A tree that is cut down can sprout again from the stump. A person who dies seems to have no such hope. This is the darkest thought in the chapter, and it presses on Job until he asks the question that the rest of the Old Testament will slowly answer: “If a man dies, shall he live again?”

Then Job does something remarkable. He imagines that the answer could be yes. “All the days of my service I would wait, till my renewal should come” (14:14). He pictures God hiding him in Sheol like a man put away until a storm passes, and then calling to him. “You would call, and I would answer you; you would long for the work of your hands” (14:15). Job is not stating a doctrine of resurrection. He is imagining a possibility, and he is aware that it is a longing and not a certainty. But the longing is there, and it will grow.

Eliphaz’s second speech has no such moment. He is stuck in his system and he hardens. He says Job’s own mouth proves his guilt. He gives a long picture of the fate of the wicked. Notice that Eliphaz is not entirely wrong about the general truth. But it has become a trap for him and for Job.

Job’s answer in chapter 16 contains a shift. He first says that God is against him, which is where the pain is sharpest. But then, in 16:19, he turns to heaven. “My witness is in heaven.” He does not know who this witness is. It is another longing, like the arbiter of 9:33. Job has been wishing for someone who can speak for him before God. Now he is saying that such a person exists. God himself, in some mysterious way, will be Job’s advocate against God. It is a paradox and he does not resolve it.

Chapter 17 picks up the same thought. Job asks God to put up security for him, because no one else will. Only God can stand surety for Job against God.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul will say that Christ's resurrection answers Job's question: "But in fact Christ has been raised from the dead, the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep" (1 Corinthians 15:20). 1 John 2:1 says, "We have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." Hebrews 7:22 says that Jesus became "the guarantor of a better covenant," the surety Job longed for.

STEP 6

Application

Spend time today thinking about the shortness of life. It can be a gift when it moves you to trust God, and it can be a burden when you use it as a reason to despair. Ask which one it is for you.

Remember that Jesus is the witness in heaven, the advocate, and the one who stood surety for you. Thank him specifically, and name something you needed an advocate for.

If you are tired of "miserable comforters," ask God to send you a faithful friend, and ask him to make you one.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God how worn out you are, if you are.
- Thank Jesus that because he lives, you will live.
- Ask him to send you comfort, and to make you a comfort to someone else.

JOB 13:15

DAY 73 · WEEK 11

Psalm 22:1-21

My God, my God, why have you forsaken me

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 21 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 22:1-21. This psalm will be read twice in the next two days. Today, read the first half as the voice of someone in agony, and as you read, remember that Jesus quoted its first line from the cross.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 22 is attributed to David. We do not know the circumstances in which he wrote it, but the details of his suffering go far beyond anything we know of David's life. Hands and feet pierced, bones out of joint, clothes divided by lot. The New Testament sees these words as fulfilled in Jesus. The psalm is both a real prayer of a real man and a prophecy, and that is what makes it unique. It stands next to Job as one of the great statements of the suffering of a righteous person who feels forsaken.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm begins, "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me? Why are you so far from saving me, from the words of my groaning?" (v. 1).
2. He says he cries by day and by night, but there is no answer (v. 2).
3. Verses 3-5 turn to God's holiness and the fact that the fathers trusted in him and were delivered.
4. In verse 6 he says, "But I am a worm and not a man, scorned by mankind and despised by the people."
5. The crowd mocks him: "He trusts in the LORD; let him deliver him" (v. 8).
6. He remembers that God has been with him since birth (vv. 9-10).

7. Enemies surround him like bulls and lions (vv. 12-13, 16).
8. His body is poured out like water, his heart is like wax, and "my tongue sticks to my jaws" (vv. 14-15).
9. "They have pierced my hands and feet…they divide my garments among them, and for my clothing they cast lots" (vv. 16-18).
10. He pleads, "But you, O LORD, do not be far off!" (v. 19) and "Save me from the mouth of the lion" (v. 21).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The most striking thing about the first line is the double name: "My God, my God." The psalmist feels forsaken, and in that moment he does not call God by a lesser name. He calls him "my God," twice. The sense of abandonment and the ownership of God sit side by side. This is the same paradox you saw in Job. The one who feels the most forsaken is the one who still says "my."

Verses 3 to 5 show how the psalmist uses memory as a weapon. He says, "Yet you are holy." He remembers that the fathers trusted God and were not put to shame. Memory is the way a person stays alive spiritually in a long night. When feeling fails, history holds.

Then the psalmist describes what it is like to be the object of contempt. "I am a worm and not a man." The crowd's mockery is the same sort of thing Job's friends do, only more brutal: "He trusts in the LORD; let him deliver him." The scorn of the crowd takes the very faith of the sufferer and turns it into a joke. That is a particular kind of pain, and the psalm gives it a name.

The physical description in verses 14 to 18 is overwhelming. And the language is so specific that the early church saw it as a portrait of the crucifixion. Crucifixion was not invented until centuries after David. Yet here are pierced hands and feet, bones out of joint, and a gambling match over clothing. The Gospels do not hide the fact that they are quoting this psalm. John 19:23-24 cites verse 18 directly.

The first half of the psalm ends in the cry of verses 19 to 21. It is still a cry. The rescue has not come yet. But the shift is already beginning, because the psalmist is asking God for help in the second person: "But you, O LORD." The turn happens in the next verse, and you will read it tomorrow.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus cried Psalm 22:1 from the cross (Matthew 27:46). The mockery in verse 8 is repeated by the chief priests (Matthew 27:43). The division of garments in verse 18 is quoted in John 19:24. Hebrews 5:7 says that Jesus "offered up prayers and supplications, with loud cries and tears, to the one who was able to save him from death."

STEP 6

Application

The next time you feel forsaken, use these words. Jesus prayed them before you, and so you are never praying alone. He knows the feeling from the inside.

Take time today to thank him for bearing the real abandonment, so that you might never be forsaken by the Father. Be specific. What did he take on himself?

If you are watching someone else suffer, do not mock their faith, even gently. Ask yourself whether a quick word of religious cheer is really a kind of mockery.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for being forsaken so that you would not be.
- Tell God where you feel far from him.
- Thank him that he is near now.

JOB 13:15

DAY 74 · WEEK 11

Psalm 22:22-31

I will tell of your name, lament turns to praise

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 10 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 22:22-31. Yesterday ended with a cry. Today the cry turns into praise. Read these verses aloud and notice who is included in the praise at the end.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

There is a break in Psalm 22 at verse 21. In Hebrew, the last words of that verse are something like "You have answered me." The psalmist has been rescued. Everything after that point is a different kind of song. The man who was forsaken now tells others what God has done, and the song grows wider and wider until it takes in the whole earth and generations that have not yet been born.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalmist says, "I will tell of your name to my brothers; in the midst of the congregation I will praise you" (v. 22).
2. He calls the congregation to praise: "You who fear the LORD, praise him!" (v. 23).
3. The reason: "For he has not despised or abhorred the affliction of the afflicted, and he has not hidden his face from him, but has heard, when he cried to him" (v. 24).
4. He vows to fulfill his vows in the presence of those who fear God (v. 25).
5. "The afflicted shall eat and be satisfied; those who seek him shall praise the LORD" (v. 26).
6. "All the ends of the earth shall remember and turn to the LORD, and all the families of the nations shall worship before you" (v. 27).
7. "Kingship belongs to the LORD, and he rules over the nations" (v. 28).

8. Even the dead are included: “All the prosperous of the earth eat and worship; before him shall bow all who go down to the dust” (v. 29).

9. The psalm ends with a future generation hearing about it: “that he has done it” (v. 31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Look at what the sufferer does the moment he is rescued. He does not keep it private. “I will tell of your name to my brothers.” The rescue is a story, and a story is for telling. This is the way the Bible thinks of salvation: it is not only something that happens to a person. It becomes something the community knows and celebrates.

Verse 24 is worth stopping at. It is the answer to the first line of the psalm. Back in verse 1, God seemed to have forsaken the psalmist and hidden his face. Now he says, “He has not hidden his face from him.” What looked like abandonment turned out not to be. In the middle of the darkness, God was hearing. That does not mean that the suffering was unreal. But it means that the suffering was never the last word about God’s attitude.

The scope of the praise is dizzying. From one man in agony, we move to the congregation, then to the afflicted who eat and are satisfied, then to all the ends of the earth, then to all the families of the nations, and then to the dead and the unborn. One sufferer’s deliverance becomes the occasion for the worship of the whole world. This is the shape of the gospel. Through one man’s suffering and vindication, the nations are gathered.

That is why the New Testament reads Psalm 22 as the story of Jesus. Hebrews 2:12 puts verse 22 in Jesus’ mouth: “I will tell of your name to my brothers; in the midst of the congregation I will sing your praise.” The risen Jesus calls his people brothers, and he sings with them. The psalm that begins in the loneliest hour of history ends with a Savior who is surrounded by a people he has redeemed.

The last verse is also worth keeping. “They shall come and proclaim his righteousness to a people yet unborn, that he has done it.” Those words reach all the way to you.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 2:10-12 applies verse 22 to Jesus and his brothers. Revelation 7:9 pictures the fulfillment of verse 27: “a great multitude that no one could number, from every nation, from all tribes and peoples and languages.” Jesus’ last words from the cross in John 19:30, “It is finished,” may echo the final words of Psalm 22:31, “that he has done it.”

STEP 6

Application

Tell someone this week what God has done for you. It does not need to be dramatic. Practice saying, “Let me tell you what the LORD did.”

Also think about the nations. Is there a mission or missionary you could pray for or give to in light of verse 27? Choose one.

If you are in a hard season, return to verse 24 and ask God to help you believe it before you see it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he has not hidden his face from you.
- Ask him for words to tell what he has done.
- Pray that he would gather people from every nation.

JOB 13:15

DAY 75 · WEEK 11

Job 18:1-20:29

Bildad and Zophar intensify; Job's redeemer confession

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 79 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 18:1-20:29. Bildad and Zophar both make speeches, and between them Job gives a speech in chapter 19 that contains the most famous words in the book. Read chapter 19 slowly, and read verses 23 to 27 aloud.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the second cycle of speeches, and the friends are escalating. Bildad's second speech is a chilling portrait of the fate of the wicked. Zophar's is much the same. The emotional force behind their words is fear: if Job is innocent, then their whole picture of the world is broken. So they must make him guilty. In the middle comes Job's answer, in which he is crushed, isolated, and accused, and out of the dark he says the thing for which the book is best known.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Bildad says, "Is the earth to be forsaken for you, or the rock to be removed from its place?" (18:4).
2. He describes the wicked as trapped, terrified, and forgotten, and says, "He has no offspring or descendant among his people" (18:19).
3. Job answers, "How long will you torment me and break me in pieces with words?" (19:2).
4. He says that God has wronged him and walled up his way (19:6-8).
5. Job's family and friends have abandoned him, and even young children despise him (19:13-19).

6. “Have mercy on me, have mercy on me, O you my friends, for the hand of God has struck me!” (19:21).
7. “Oh that my words were written! Oh that they were inscribed in a book! Oh that with an iron pen and lead they were engraved in the rock forever!” (19:23-24).
8. “For I know that my Redeemer lives, and at the last he will stand upon the earth” (19:25).
9. “And after my skin has been thus destroyed, yet in my flesh I shall see God, whom I shall see for myself, and my eyes shall behold, and not another” (19:26-27).
10. Zophar answers that the joy of the wicked is short (20:5), and that what they gain will be vomited up (20:15).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Bildad and Zophar use pictures that are meant to frighten. Their descriptions of the wicked person’s end are among the most vivid in the Bible. There is a light that goes out, a net that closes, terrors that chase him. But they are describing Job without saying his name. This is a kind of cruelty that wears the clothes of wisdom.

The speech Job gives in response is full of heartbreak. He lists everything he has lost in relationships: his brothers have estranged themselves, his close friends have forgotten him, his servants do not answer him, and his wife finds his breath strange. Even young boys despise him. To lose possessions is hard. To lose belonging is harder. Job begs his friends, “Have mercy on me.”

And then, out of this, comes the most astonishing section in the book. Job wishes that his words could be written down forever. He wants a permanent record, because he knows that his death will come before he has been vindicated. The words that follow are not a wish, though. They are a statement of certainty: “I know that my Redeemer lives.”

The Hebrew word for Redeemer is go’el, a legal term for the family member who rescues a relative in need: who buys back land lost to debt, who avenges a death, who protects the vulnerable. Job’s longing in chapter 9 for an arbiter and in chapter 16 for a witness has now become a conviction. He does not just hope for someone. He knows there is someone, and he calls that person a living Redeemer who “will stand upon the earth,” as though taking his place in a courtroom at the last.

And then the most daring part. “Yet in my flesh I shall see God.” Job expects to see God with his own eyes, after death, in his body. Whether he fully understood what he was saying is debated. But the words, set in the canon, carry a hope of bodily resurrection that is not fully revealed until the New Testament.

Notice that the verse is spoken from the lowest point of the book. Hope is not the fruit of good circumstances. It is a decision made in the dark.

STEP 5

Connection

Boaz acts as a go'el in the book of Ruth, which you will read in Unit 8. Isaiah calls God Israel's Redeemer many times (Isaiah 41:14; 43:14; 54:5). Paul says in 1 Corinthians 15:51-57 that the dead will be raised imperishable. Jesus says, "I am the resurrection and the life" (John 11:25). Job's hope is realized in the risen Christ.

STEP 6

Application

Memorize Job 19:25 this week. It is the unit's theme verse. Say it aloud in the morning and at night.

Think about the Redeemer you have. What did Jesus do to buy you back, and what did it cost? Write a short paragraph about it.

If you have lost something in a relationship, say so honestly to God. Then ask him to hold the loss in his hand.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you believe about your Redeemer, in your own words.
- Ask him to anchor you in that hope when loss surrounds you.
- Thank Jesus for standing for you.

JOB 13:15

DAY 76 · WEEK 11

Job 21:1-23:17

Job confronts the prosperity gospel; God seems far

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 21:1-23:17. Job answers Zophar and challenges the friends' theory about the wicked. Eliphaz replies in chapter 22 with a direct accusation, and Job answers in chapter 23 with a longing to find God. Read chapter 23 as a prayer.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The friends have claimed that the wicked always suffer and the righteous always prosper. Job's answer in chapter 21 is simple and devastating: look around. In this world, wicked people often grow old, wealthy, and secure, and nothing happens to them. The friends' theory does not match what we see. This is the point where Job's book speaks most plainly against any teaching that promises health and wealth to those who follow God faithfully. Then comes a longing, one of the most moving in the book: Job wants to find God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job says, "Why do the wicked live, reach old age, and grow mighty in power?" (21:7).
2. He describes their children as secure, their herds as fertile, and their houses as safe (21:8-13).
3. The wicked say to God, "Depart from us!" and ask, "What is the Almighty, that we should serve him?" (21:14-15).
4. He says that both rich and poor die and lie down in the dust together (21:23-26).
5. Eliphaz now accuses him of specific sins: "Is not your evil abundant? There is no end to your iniquities" (22:5). He claims Job has not given water to the weary or bread to the hungry (22:7).

6. Eliphaz urges, “Agree with God, and be at peace; thereby good will come to you” (22:21).
7. Job says, “Oh, that I knew where I might find him, that I might come even to his seat!” (23:3).
8. “Behold, I go forward, but he is not there, and backward, but I do not perceive him” (23:8).
9. “But he knows the way that I take; when he has tried me, I shall come out as gold” (23:10).
10. “I have not departed from the commandment of his lips; I have treasured the words of his mouth more than my portion of food” (23:12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 21 is the strongest rebuttal of the idea that faithful living guarantees comfort. Job takes the friends’ favorite claim and demolishes it with evidence. If the wicked always fall, why do so many seem to thrive? His statement is not an invitation to envy. It is an observation about the world as it is, and it agrees with what Psalms 37 and 73 say. Both say that the wicked prosper for a time, and that God’s justice has a different clock.

That matters for how you read the Bible. Proverbs makes general statements about wisdom leading to life. Job reminds you that those are not guarantees. A teaching that says “follow God and you will be healthy and rich” will break the first time it meets a Job. The Bible does not teach that.

Eliphaz’s response is the low point for the friends. He cannot answer Job’s evidence, so he invents charges. Job has never been accused of mistreating the poor, and the narrator has said that he is blameless. But in order to keep his theory, Eliphaz needs Job to be guilty, and so he makes up sins. This is what happens when a doctrine matters more than a person. It starts to lie.

Then Job goes quiet in a new way. In chapter 23 he stops arguing with the friends. He just wants God. “Oh, that I knew where I might find him.” His problem is not exactly that God is angry. It is that God is missing. He looks forward, backward, to the left and right, and he cannot see him. This is the experience of many believers in dark seasons, and it is described here without a trace of blame.

Yet there is trust in the middle of the darkness. “He knows the way that I take.” Job cannot see God, but God can see him. And “when he has tried me, I shall come out as gold.” It is not a claim that he deserves it. It is a confidence that God’s testing has a purpose and an end. Alongside that is his devotion to God’s word: he has treasured it more than his food.

STEP 5

Connection

Psalm 73, which you will read soon, struggles with the same puzzle of the prosperity of the wicked. Jesus said that God "makes his sun rise on the evil and on the good, and sends rain on the just and on the unjust" (Matthew 5:45). 1 Peter 1:6-7 speaks of faith "tested by fire" being "found to result in praise and glory and honor." James 5:11 holds up Job's endurance.

STEP 6

Application

Test any teaching you hear against the book of Job. If it promises that obedience will always bring health and wealth, it is not the teaching of the Bible.

When you cannot find God, pray Job 23:10 and ask him to hold you until you can see him again.

If you are in a season of dryness, treasure his words more than your food. Put your Bible reading first this week, before breakfast.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God honestly where you cannot find him.
- Ask him to refine you through what you are going through.
- Ask him to help you treasure his word above comfort.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Job 13:15 aloud, slowly, several times, and then try to say it from memory. Read the meditation and the review of the week, and then pick one of the three questions for writing, prayer, or conversation.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Though he slay me, I will hope in him; yet I will argue my ways to his face."

JOB 13:15

REST

Meditation

Job 13:15 is the sentence of a man who refuses two temptations at once.

The first temptation is to give up on God. Job has every reason to say that God is not good, that faith is a mistake, and that his friends were right about God being a tyrant. Instead he says, "I will hope in him." The verb is the verb of waiting, of leaning, of staking everything on someone. And the "though" in front of it makes the hope costly. It does not wait for the circumstances to improve. It hopes while the worst is happening.

The second temptation is the opposite one: to pretend. The friends have told Job to be quiet and humble and accept his guilt. He refuses that too. "Yet I will argue my ways to his face." He will not fake agreement. He is going to bring his case before God, in full honesty. His faith is not the silence of someone who has stopped asking. It is the courage of someone who believes that God can be asked.

Together, the two halves give you a picture of mature faith. It is not a calm faith that has no questions. It is a faith that has questions and takes them to God. Many of the saints have prayed this way. Learn it by heart, because you may need it in a hard season.

For the Christian, there is a final note. Jesus said something very close to this in the garden. He asked that the cup be taken from him, and he also said that the Father's will be done. He hoped in the Father even though the Father would slay him, and the Father raised him up.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the middle of the book of Job. You heard Zophar tell Job that he cannot know the mind of God, and Job answer that he has no intention of giving up on God or on the truth. You read Job's meditation on the shortness of life and his dim hope that a man who dies might live again. You read Psalm 22, the great cry of the forsaken and the song of the rescued, and you saw how Jesus prayed it from the cross. Then Bildad and Zophar piled on, and in the middle of the pain Job said, "I know that my Redeemer lives." By the end of the week, Job was confronting the idea that the righteous always prosper, and longing to find God. The week taught that real faith asks, waits, and still holds on.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Which is harder for you right now: to keep hoping in God when things go badly, or to bring him your honest questions? Write about what has made it difficult, and what one small step you could take.

How does Psalm 22, and the way Jesus prayed it, change the way you hear Job's cry? What does it mean that the Redeemer Job longed for has been through the loneliest night himself?

Think of a person in your life who needs a faithful friend, someone who will not give easy answers. What could you do for them this week?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God where you want to hope in him even though you do not understand.

Thank him for the Redeemer who walked the darkest night before you.

Rest in his care this Sabbath.

DAY 78 · WEEK 12

Job 24:1-26:14

Why are times not kept by the Almighty? Bildad's last word

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 51 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 24:1-26:14. Job begins by asking why God does not set times for judgment, Bildad gives his last, very short speech, and Job answers with a hymn to God's power. Read chapter 26 as a poem about how little we know.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the third and final cycle of speeches, and you can feel the friends running out of things to say. Eliphaz has spoken already. Bildad has only six verses left in him, and Zophar will not speak at all. Job's side of the argument keeps growing. In these chapters he first lists injustices that God seems to ignore, and then he turns and praises God's greatness with a sweep and beauty that exceeds anything the friends have said. The man who is accused of doubting God is the one who describes him best.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job asks, "Why are times not kept by the Almighty, and why do those who know him never see his days?" (24:1).
2. He lists the oppressed: the poor driven from the road, orphans taken as a pledge, and laborers who go hungry while they carry the sheaves (24:2-12).
3. He says, "From out of the city the dying groan, and the soul of the wounded cries for help; yet God charges no one with wrong" (24:12).
4. Bildad asks, "How then can man be in the right before God? How can he who is born of woman be pure?" (25:4).
5. He calls man "a maggot" and "a worm" (25:6).

6. Job answers sarcastically: “How you have helped him who has no power!” (26:2).
7. He says, “Sheol is naked before God, and Abaddon has no covering” (26:6).
8. God “stretches out the north over the void and hangs the earth on nothing” (26:7).
9. “Behold, these are but the outskirts of his ways, and how small a whisper do we hear of him! But the thunder of his power who can understand?” (26:14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 24 is a hard chapter to read because it is so honest about injustice. Job does not look away. He describes the poor picking through the leftovers of the rich, children taken as collateral, and the dying crying out in the city. And he says, “God charges no one with wrong.” This is a startling thing for a man of faith to say, but it is true to the way the world looks. Injustice happens, and it seems to go unnoticed. Job is saying what the psalmists say.

It is worth asking what he is asking for. He does not say that God does not exist, and he does not say that God is cruel. He says that the times are not “kept,” that the schedule of judgment is hidden from those who know God. That is a question about timing. And it points forward to a day of judgment, which Job will keep longing for.

Bildad’s speech is a sign that the friends are exhausted. His point in chapter 25 is that no human being is pure before God. That is true, and the New Testament will say it too. But look at what he does with it. He uses it to put Job down, in the cruel language of “maggot” and “worm.” Human weakness is a truth that is supposed to humble us before God. It is not supposed to be used as an insult.

And then Job speaks, and you can hear how much better a theologian he is. He answers Bildad’s short speech with a long, majestic description of God’s power: Sheol is open before him, the earth hangs on nothing, the clouds hold water without bursting, and the pillars of heaven tremble at his rebuke. He ends with a humble line that the friends could never say: “These are but the outskirts of his ways.” Even all of this is only the edge of what God is. We hear a whisper. The thunder is beyond us.

This is the proper stance of a creature. Job is not claiming to understand. He is claiming to trust a God who is bigger than his questions.

STEP 5

Connection

Psalm 94 asks God, “O LORD, how long shall the wicked exult?” Habakkuk 1:2-4 asks the same question about injustice. Paul says in Romans 11:33 that God’s ways are “unsearchable,” and in 1 Corinthians 13:12 that “now we see in a mirror dimly, but then face to face.” Revelation

6:10 and 19:2 show God answering the cry for justice.

STEP 6

Application

Make a list of injustices that weigh on you, in your own life, your community, or the world. Do not rush to resolve them. Take them to God as Job does.

Notice whether you tend to use humility as an insult, either toward yourself or toward others.

Then end by praising God for something in creation you cannot explain: the stars, the ocean, or the birth of a child. Remember that these are only the outskirts of his ways.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Bring an injustice you see to God.
- Thank him that he will one day judge the world in righteousness.
- Ask him to make you someone who acts with justice and mercy.

JOB 28:28

DAY 79 · WEEK 12

Job 27:1-28:28

Job's integrity; the hymn to wisdom, where shall it be found?

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 59 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 27:1-28:28. Job holds to his integrity in chapter 27, and in chapter 28 there is a famous poem about wisdom. Notice how the poem is built: first a long description of what human beings can find, then a question about what they cannot.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Zophar has not replied, and the three friends fall silent. Job speaks on, and in the next three chapters he gives his final defense. Chapter 27 is a vow to keep his integrity. Chapter 28 is different in tone and in kind. It is a hymn on wisdom that sounds almost like Proverbs, and some scholars think it is the narrator's own voice. Whatever its source, it is placed at the center of the book, and it gives the book's central answer to the question of how a person can find wisdom in a world of suffering.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job swears an oath: "As God lives, who has taken away my right, and the Almighty, who has made my soul bitter" (27:2).
2. He says that as long as he has breath, "my lips will not speak falsehood" (27:3-4).
3. "Far be it from me to say that you are right; till I die I will not put away my integrity from me" (27:5).
4. "I hold fast my righteousness and will not let it go; my heart does not reproach me for any of my days" (27:6).
5. Chapter 28 begins with mining: "Surely there is a mine for silver, and a place where gold is refined" (28:1).

6. Humans dig “a shaft in a valley away from where anyone lives” and “overturn mountains by the roots” (28:4, 9).
7. “But where shall wisdom be found? And where is the place of understanding?” (28:12).
8. It cannot be bought for gold or silver or onyx or sapphire (28:15-19).
9. “God understands the way to it, and he knows its place” (28:23).
10. “Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom, and to turn away from evil is understanding” (28:28).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 27 is Job’s refusal to be pushed into a false confession. The friends have told him many times to repent, and he cannot, because he knows that he has not done what they say. He is not claiming to be sinless. He is saying that he did not bring this suffering on himself. To say otherwise would be to lie, and he will not lie even to please God, because he believes that God does not want his lies. This is a quiet kind of courage.

Then chapter 28 shifts the whole mood. The poem begins by describing the astonishing ability of human beings. We dig deep into the earth, we find silver and gold and sapphires, we reach places where birds and lions have never been. There is nothing human beings cannot find with enough labor. This is the picture of a technological, adventurous people.

And then the poem asks the question that all of that effort cannot answer: “But where shall wisdom be found?” It is hidden even from the eagle and the vulture. You cannot buy it. You cannot mine it. Death and the Abyss say, “We have heard a rumor of it.” The whole point of the poem is that wisdom is not something people can find by digging. It is not an object. It belongs to God.

The answer, which comes in verse 23, is that God knows its place, because God made the world by it. And then verse 28 states what he has told humankind: “The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom, and to turn away from evil is understanding.” This is the same line that opens the book of Proverbs (1:7). It is where wisdom begins and also where it ends.

Placed here, in the middle of Job’s suffering, the verse is a challenge and a comfort. Job does not have answers about why he is suffering. But he is being told that wisdom is not the same as having answers. It is fearing God, and refusing evil, in the dark.

STEP 5

Connection

Proverbs 1:7 and 9:10 open and close their wisdom with the same line as verse 28. In the New Testament, Christ is "the wisdom of God" (1 Corinthians 1:24), and in him "are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge" (Colossians 2:3). James 1:5 invites us: "If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask God, who gives generously to all."

STEP 6

Application

When you are tempted to say what is easy rather than what is true, remember Job. Your integrity is worth protecting. Ask God for the courage to say true things even when it costs you.

Think about where you go for wisdom. Is it a podcast, a person, a book? Ask whether you are first going to God and his word.

Pray that the "fear of the Lord" becomes your first instinct, and not just a phrase.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God where you need wisdom you cannot find on your own.
- Ask him for a heart that fears him and turns from evil.
- Thank Jesus, in whom all wisdom is found.

JOB 28:28

DAY 80 · WEEK 12

Job 29:1-31:40

Job's final defense, his past, his suffering, his oath

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 90 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 29:1-31:40. This is Job's final speech to his friends. It has three parts: a look back at his happier past, a description of his present humiliation, and an oath of innocence. It is long, so read it in three sittings if you need to.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Job's last speech is like a legal brief. He lays out what his life was before, what it is now, and why he believes he is not at fault. It reads like an honest man's last defense in court. He does not insult his friends in this section, and he does not curse God. He sets out his case, and then he asks God to answer. The chapters are long, but they give you the most complete portrait of Job as a person in the whole book.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Job longs for "the months of old, as in the days when God watched over me" (29:2).
2. He remembers his authority in the city gate. The young men stepped back, and the old men rose when he came (29:7-8).
3. He rescued "the poor who cried for help, and the fatherless who had none to help him" (29:12).
4. He says, "I was eyes to the blind and feet to the lame. I was a father to the needy" (29:15-16).
5. Now he is mocked by those whose fathers he would not have put with the dogs of his flock (30:1).

6. “I cry to you for help and you do not answer me; I stand, and you only look at me” (30:20).
7. “You have turned cruel to me; with the might of your hand you persecute me” (30:21).
8. “I made a covenant with my eyes; how then could I gaze at a virgin?” (31:1).
9. He swears that he has not been unjust to his servants, has not withheld food from the poor, has not trusted in gold, and has not rejoiced at an enemy’s ruin (31:13-30).
10. “Oh, that I had one to hear me! (Here is my signature! Let the Almighty answer me!)” (31:35). “The words of Job are ended” (31:40).

STEP 4

Interpretation

There is something moving in chapter 29. The picture of Job as the one who defended the weak is a picture of a man who really loved justice. He did not simply enjoy a position. He used it to rescue the poor. He describes himself as clothed in righteousness and justice like a robe. Nothing here is false. The narrator told you that Job was blameless, and this is what blamelessness looked like in practice.

But look at what he misses most. It is not wealth or status. It is the sense that God was watching over him. “When the Almighty was yet with me” (29:5). The loss of God’s felt presence hurts more than the loss of his children or his health. That is the right order of grief.

Chapter 30 is the opposite picture. Those who once respected him now spit at him. He says that God has become cruel to him. That is a severe statement and the narrator does not correct it here. In fact, Job is describing how things feel. He may not be right about God’s intentions, but he is honest about his experience. The Bible lets him say it.

Chapter 31 is the longest oath in the book. It is a series of “if I have” statements: if I have lusted, if I have been dishonest, if I have been unjust to my servants, if I have ignored the poor, if I have put my trust in money. Each one calls down a curse on himself if it is true. This is how people in the ancient world swore to their innocence. And look at what is covered. Job’s integrity touches his eyes, his business, his household, his generosity, and his heart. This is a man who believes that God’s law applies to every part of life.

At the end Job signs his name. “Here is my signature!” He asks God to answer. And he says, “The words of Job are ended.” He has said everything he has to say. Now he is going to wait for God.

STEP 5

Connection

Job's description of rescuing the poor and clothing himself in righteousness is a picture of the righteous king in Psalm 72:12-14 and Isaiah 11:4-5, and ultimately of Jesus. The "covenant with my eyes" is echoed in Jesus' teaching in Matthew 5:27-30. James 1:27 says that pure religion is "to visit orphans and widows in their affliction."

STEP 6

Application

Look at the list of Job's oath in chapter 31. Choose one area where you want to be more faithful, such as your eyes, your honesty in business, how you treat people who work for you, or how generous you are. Write a one-sentence commitment.

Remember that the deepest loss is losing the sense of God's presence. If you feel that loss, bring it to him honestly.

Ask yourself how you can be "eyes to the blind" to someone this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to search your heart and show you what is not right.
- Thank Jesus for being the righteous one who truly cared for the poor.
- Ask him to help you follow Christ in your relationships.

JOB 28:28

DAY 81 · WEEK 12

Job 32:1-34:37

Elihu speaks, a better theology, but still insufficient

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 96 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 32:1-34:37. A new character, Elihu, enters the book. Read his speeches carefully and ask yourself two questions: what does he get right, and where does he go wrong?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Job's friends have stopped speaking, because "he was righteous in his own eyes" (32:1). Then a young man who has been listening, Elihu, speaks up. He has waited because the others were older, but he has grown angry at both sides: at Job for justifying himself rather than God, and at the three friends for failing to answer. Elihu is not mentioned in the prologue or in God's closing words, and scholars have long debated what to make of him. He says some true and fine things, and he also makes errors. Read him critically.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Elihu is the son of Barachel the Buzite, and he is angry with Job "because he justified himself rather than God" (32:2).
2. He says that he waited because the others were older: "I am young in years, and you are aged; therefore I was timid" (32:6).
3. "It is not the old who are wise, nor the aged who understand what is right" (32:9).
4. "The Spirit of God has made me, and the breath of the Almighty gives me life" (33:4).
5. He says, "God speaks in one way, and in two, though man does not perceive it" (33:14), including in dreams and in pain.
6. "If there be for him an angel, a mediator, one of the thousand, to declare to man what is right for him, and he is merciful to him, and says, Deliver him from going down into the pit, I have found a ransom" (33:23-24).

7. "Far be it from God that he should do wickedness, and from the Almighty that he should do wrong" (34:10).

8. He says, "Job speaks without knowledge; his words are without insight" (34:35), and that Job "adds rebellion to his sin" (34:37).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Elihu is a puzzling figure. He is the only one of Job's four counselors who is not rebuked in the epilogue, but he is also never praised. He speaks for six chapters, and then he vanishes. Most readers have found something to admire and something to be wary of in him.

What he gets right is worth noting. He is right that God speaks to people through many means, including suffering. He is right that God is just. He is right that human beings cannot stand on their own righteousness. His speech about the "mediator" and the "ransom" in 33:23-24 is a high point. It echoes the language that Job himself used in 9:33 and 16:19, and it lifts the idea that there is a way for a sinner to be delivered. Some of what he says points in a direction that will be fulfilled in the gospel.

But he also makes a mistake that is perhaps more subtle than the friends'. He sees suffering mainly as discipline. For Elihu, pain is God's way of warning a person who is heading for the pit. This is sometimes true, but he applies it to Job, whose pain was never meant as a correction. He tells Job that he is adding rebellion to sin, which is a harsh charge for a man who is not guilty of the original sin.

Elihu also speaks with unusual confidence for a young man. "One who is perfect in knowledge is with you" (36:4). He is certain that he has the answer. His speeches are full of "I will" and "I will declare." There is a pride in him that the rest of the book will not let stand.

His speeches serve a purpose in the book. They bring together the best of what the friends said and push it toward the speech of God. They show how close a person can come to the truth and still miss the point. Then God speaks, and everything changes.

STEP 5

Connection

The "mediator" and the "ransom" of 33:23-24 point to Christ, who "gave himself as a ransom for all" (1 Timothy 2:5-6) and to whom "the Spirit" bears witness (John 15:26). Hebrews 12:5-11 develops the idea of suffering as discipline for God's children. 1 Corinthians 8:1 warns that "knowledge puffs up, but love builds up."

STEP 6

Application

Think about how you respond to a person who is a good deal younger or older than you. Do you listen well?

When you give advice, test it on yourself. Would you want someone to say this to you if you were in the same pain?

Notice the “mediator” in verses 23 and 24, and spend a few minutes thanking Jesus for being the one who found the ransom.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for the different ways he speaks to you.
- Ask him to keep you listening, not only certain.
- Ask him to make you humble with those who suffer.

DAY 82 · WEEK 12

Job 35:1-37:24

Elihu's case for God's majesty, the storm approaches

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 35:1-37:24. Elihu continues with three more speeches. They get steadily more poetic, ending with a long description of a storm. Read chapter 37 as if you are watching a storm roll in, because the next chapter is the answer from the storm.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Elihu's last three speeches are the finest in his section. He starts with a charge that Job is claiming too much, but the speeches build toward a description of God's majesty in nature. By the end, the sky is darkening and the thunder is rolling. There is a sense of something about to happen. In the next chapter, God will speak, and he will speak from the whirlwind.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Elihu asks, "If you have sinned, what do you accomplish against him?" (35:6).
2. He says that people cry out under oppression but do not ask, "Where is God my Maker, who gives songs in the night?" (35:10).
3. "Behold, God is mighty, and does not despise any; he is mighty in strength of understanding" (36:5).
4. "He delivers the afflicted by their affliction and opens their ear by oppression" (36:15).
5. "Behold, God is great, and we know him not; the number of his years is unsearchable" (36:26).
6. He describes rain, thunder, and lightning as the work of God (36:27-33).
7. "God thunders wondrously with his voice; he does great things that we cannot comprehend" (37:5).

8. He tells Job: “Stop and consider the wondrous works of God” (37:14).
9. The final line: “The Almighty, we cannot find him; he is great in power; justice and abundant righteousness he will not violate. Therefore men fear him; he does not regard any who are wise in their own conceit” (37:23-24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Elihu’s best contribution is his emphasis on God as Maker. In 35:10 he asks a beautiful question: “Where is God my Maker, who gives songs in the night?” It points to something Job and his friends have all but forgotten: God is not only a judge. He is the one who gives songs in the dark. The God who allows the night is also the God who sings in it.

His description in chapter 36 of how God uses affliction deserves attention. “He delivers the afflicted by their affliction.” This is a rich line. God uses suffering to open ears, to teach people, and to bring them to himself. It is a true principle, and many believers can testify that they heard God most clearly in their pain. But Elihu is wrong if he thinks that this is the only reason suffering happens. In Job’s case, the real reason is not that.

The speech ends with weather. The thunderstorm in chapter 37 is a piece of poetry. Elihu says that God sends the snow and the rain, that he controls the clouds, and that no one can comprehend how it all works. “Do you know how God lays his command upon them?” (37:15). It is a series of questions, and it prepares for the greater questions to come. In a way, Elihu has started to do what God will do: use creation to remind a human being how small he is.

The last verse is a good summary. “He does not regard any who are wise in their own conceit.” It is a warning to Job and to Elihu himself. Elihu is also wise in his own conceit, as the book is about to reveal. All the human voices have spoken, and none of them has understood. Now there is silence, and then the storm.

STEP 5

Connection

Psalm 42:8 says, “By day the LORD commands his steadfast love, and at night his song is with me.” Paul and Silas sang hymns in prison at midnight (Acts 16:25). Psalm 29 praises the voice of the LORD in the thunder. Jesus calmed a storm and made the disciples ask, “Who then is this?” (Mark 4:41).

STEP 6

Application

Pay attention to the weather this week. When there is a storm, watch it and pray Psalm 29. Let it remind you that you are small and God is great.

Ask God to give you a song in the night. If you are in a dark season, tell him that you are waiting for the song.

Be wary of any belief that explains everything about suffering. God is great, and we know him not.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God for his greatness, in your own words.

Thank him for songs in the night.

Ask him to keep you from being wise in your own eyes.

JOB 28:28

DAY 83 · WEEK 12

Job 38:1-39:30

God speaks from the whirlwind, "Where were you?"

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 38:1-39:30. Slow down. God has not spoken in the book since the prologue. Read his questions aloud and try to answer them honestly. You will find that you cannot.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After thirty-seven chapters of human speeches, God answers. He comes in a storm, the sort of storm Elihu was describing at the end of his speech. He does not explain Job's suffering. He does not mention the court scene in heaven, or Satan, or the test. He does not defend himself or scold Job. He asks Job a series of questions about the world he has made, and the questions are so large that Job's own question seems to shrink. This is the turning point of the book.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Then the LORD answered Job out of the whirlwind" (38:1).
2. "Who is this that darkens counsel by words without knowledge?" (38:2).
3. "Dress for action like a man; I will question you, and you make it known to me" (38:3).
4. "Where were you when I laid the foundation of the earth? Tell me, if you have understanding" (38:4).
5. "When the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy" (38:7).
6. God shut the sea behind doors and said, "Thus far shall you come, and no farther, and here shall your proud waves be stayed" (38:8-11).
7. "Have you entered into the springs of the sea...Have the gates of death been revealed to you?" (38:16-17).

8. God asks about light, snow, hail, rain, the constellations, and the clouds (38:19-38).
9. “Who provides for the raven its prey, when its young ones cry to God for help?” (38:41).
10. Chapter 39 moves through wild animals: the mountain goat, the wild donkey, the wild ox, the ostrich, the war horse, the hawk, and the eagle.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to notice is what God does not say. He gives no reason for Job’s suffering. If Job had wanted a theological explanation, he does not receive one. Some readers are disappointed. But think about what has happened. Job has been asking for an audience with God for thirty chapters. Now he has it. And what he receives is not an argument. It is a presence.

The second thing is that God’s questions are pitched at the right size. Job has been treating the world as if it should make sense to him, as if God owed him an account. The questions say: do you know how the world works? Where were you when it began? Do you know how to feed the lion, or when the mountain goats give birth? The point is not to humiliate Job. It is to show him that he is in the middle of a world far larger and wiser than he can see. If he cannot understand the sea, how can he understand the plan of God?

Pay attention to the tenderness behind the questions. The sea is shut in with doors, like a newborn wrapped in swaddling clothes (38:9). The morning stars sing at creation. The raven’s young cry out, and God provides. The wild donkey is given the wilderness as a home, and the ostrich is allowed to be foolish, because he made her that way. This is not a cold, mechanical universe. It is full of joy and wildness and care. It is the work of a God who delights in what he has made.

This is, in a way, the answer to Job’s question. Job wanted to know whether God is just. God’s answer is to show him God’s wisdom and God’s care in a thousand other places, and to invite Job to trust that this wisdom extends to the part of the world he cannot understand: his own suffering.

The answer to suffering is not an explanation. It is the character of the one who rules.

STEP 5

Connection

Psalm 104 is a hymn that follows the same path as God’s speech. Jesus used the birds and flowers to say that the Father cares for his children: “Look at the birds of the air…your heavenly Father feeds them” (Matthew 6:26). Colossians 1:16-17 says that all things were created through the Son, and in him all things hold together.

STEP 6

Application

Go outside and spend ten minutes looking carefully at something God made: an insect, a tree, a cloud. Ask God to teach you something about himself from it.

When you are tempted to demand that God explain himself, return to chapter 38 and answer the questions honestly.

Pray that you would trust God's character even when you cannot see his plan.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God for something he has made that you did not.
- Tell him that you are small and that you trust him because of who he is.
- Ask him to help you delight in what he has made.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Job 28:28 several times, and then try to say it without looking. Read the meditation and the week in review, and then choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or discuss with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom, and to turn away from evil is understanding."

JOB 28:28

REST

Meditation

Job 28:28 is the answer to a question that the whole poem has been asking: where can wisdom be found? After describing all the things human beings can discover, the poem gives a single, simple verse.

"The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom." The word "fear" does not mean terror. It means reverence, awe, and a settled sense that God is God and you are not. It is the posture of a creature before the Creator. To fear the Lord is to take him seriously, to take his words seriously, and to let him be the final authority in your life. It is the starting point of all true knowledge.

"And to turn away from evil is understanding." Here wisdom becomes practical. Understanding is not first about having correct information. It is about the direction of your life. It is a turning. The wise person is not the one who has solved every puzzle but the one who walks away from what is wrong, even when it is costly.

Notice that neither half of the verse claims to explain suffering. This is the wisdom Job needs. He cannot solve the puzzle. But he can fear God and turn from evil, and that is what the narrator said about him in 1:1. The book keeps coming back to that.

For the Christian, this wisdom has a face. Jesus is the wisdom of God. To fear the Lord is to come to Christ, and to turn from evil is to follow him.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the last of the debates and the beginning of God's answer. You heard Job describe the oppression of the poor and ask why God does not seem to act, and you heard him praise God's power as only the outskirts of his ways. You read the great poem on wisdom in chapter 28 and Job's vow of integrity. You read Job's long final defense, in which he remembered his better days, described his present pain, and swore that he had not wronged anyone. Then Elihu spoke. He said some wise things and made some mistakes, and he ended with a storm. In the last reading of the week, God answered Job out of the whirlwind with questions about the world he has made. The week taught that wisdom begins with the fear of the Lord, and that God answers not with explanations but with his own greatness.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Chapter 28 says that wisdom cannot be bought or mined. Where have you been looking for wisdom? What would it mean for you to begin with the fear of the Lord this week?

How does Jesus, who is the wisdom of God and who came as a man of suffering, show you what the fear of the Lord and turning from evil look like in practice? Think of one scene from the Gospels where you see this clearly.

God answered Job with questions about creation rather than answers about suffering. What question do you most want God to answer? What would it mean to trust him with it?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to teach you the fear of the Lord.

Thank him that Jesus is the wisdom of God.

Rest in his greatness this Sabbath.

DAY 85 · WEEK 13

Job 40:1-42:17

Job's response; restoration, the answer is a person

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Job 40:1-42:17. This is the end of the book. Job answers God, God speaks again, and then there is an epilogue in prose. Pay special attention to Job's confession in 42:1-6, and to what God says about Job and his friends in 42:7-9.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday God began to speak. Today he finishes. Job has been silent through the first round of questions, and now God presses him again. He describes two great creatures, Behemoth and Leviathan, which are beyond Job's power to control. Then Job speaks for the last time, and the book moves into its quiet ending. In the prologue you were allowed to see what Job could not. In the epilogue Job sees something that you cannot see unless you have been through what he has: God himself.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God asks, "Shall a faultfinder contend with the Almighty?" (40:2). Job answers, "Behold, I am of small account; what shall I answer you? I lay my hand on my mouth" (40:4).
2. God speaks again and asks, "Will you even put me in the wrong? Will you condemn me that you may be in the right?" (40:8).
3. Behemoth is described as "the first of the works of God" (40:19), strong enough to be calm when the river rages.
4. Leviathan is a creature no one can capture or tame. God says, "Who then is he who can stand before me?" (41:10) and calls him "king over all the sons of pride" (41:34).
5. Job answers, "I know that you can do all things, and that no purpose of yours can be thwarted" (42:2).

6. He admits that he spoke of things beyond him: “Things too wonderful for me, which I did not know” (42:3).
7. “I had heard of you by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees you; therefore I despise myself, and repent in dust and ashes” (42:5-6).
8. God tells Eliphaz, “My anger burns against you and against your two friends, for you have not spoken of me what is right, as my servant Job has” (42:7).
9. Job prays for his friends, and the LORD restores his fortunes and gives him twice as much as he had before (42:8-10).
10. Job has seven sons and three daughters again, and he lives 140 years, “old and full of days” (42:13-17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The final answer of the book is not an argument. It is an encounter. Job says it directly: “I had heard of you by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees you.” Before, Job had a faith made of reports and reasoning. He knew the right things about God. Now he has seen him. The suffering did not give Job a reason. It gave him God. That is not a consolation prize. It is the greatest thing that a person can receive.

His repentance needs careful reading. He does not repent of the sins his friends accused him of, because those were false. He repents of speaking about things he did not understand, of treating God as a defendant in his case. “I despise myself” might also be translated “I retract” or “I submit.” He sees how small he is, and how much he had assumed. This is not groveling. It is the right posture of a creature who has seen the Creator.

The surprise in 42:7 is that God vindicates Job over his friends. “You have not spoken of me what is right, as my servant Job has.” How could this be, when Job said such bold and bitter things? The answer seems to be that Job spoke to God, honestly, while the friends spoke about God, dishonestly. They defended him with false claims. Job wrestled with him with true ones. God prefers honest wrestling to false piety.

Notice the next detail. Job prays for the friends who hurt him. The restoration comes after that prayer. The man who longed for a mediator now becomes one. It is a small picture of what Christ will do on a larger scale.

The restoration is real, but it is not the point. The children who died are not replaced, and the new ones are not substitutes for the old. The book does not say that suffering always ends in earthly blessing. But it does say that God is faithful, and that his last word is never the grave.

STEP 5

Connection

James 5:11 says, “You have heard of the steadfastness of Job, and you have seen the purpose of the Lord, how the Lord is compassionate and merciful.” Isaiah 6:5 records a similar response from Isaiah, who sees the Lord and says, “Woe is me!” Paul prays that we might know Christ and the power of his resurrection (Philippians 3:10). Jesus prays for those who persecute him (Luke 23:34).

STEP 6

Application

Think about the difference between knowing about God and knowing him. Which describes you more? Ask God to give you the second.

If someone has wronged you, pray for them this week by name. It may be hard. Do it anyway.

Also, remember that God prefers honest prayer to polite prayer. If you have been holding back what you actually think, tell him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God you want to see him and not only hear of him.
- Confess any place where you have spoken of what you do not understand.
- Ask him to teach you to pray for those who have hurt you.

JOB 42:5

DAY 86 · WEEK 13

Ephesians 1:11; Romans 11:33-36; Job 42:1-6

The Decrees of God and Providence

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ephesians 1:11, Romans 11:33-36, and Job 42:1-6. Read all three as a single statement about God's purposes: that he works all things according to his will, that his ways are beyond tracing out, and that Job's answer to such a God is to say, "I know that you can do all things."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

You have just finished the book of Job, and now you pause. This is a doctrinal day, a chance to step back from the story and think about what the Bible teaches about God's rule over the world. Job's book raises a question that every believer eventually faces: if God is in control, why does he allow evil and suffering? You will not find a full answer here. But the Bible teaches clearly that God is sovereign, that he is good, and that he is not the author of sin. Learning to hold these truths together is part of growing up in the faith.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Ephesians 1:11 says that God "works all things according to the counsel of his will." The word "all" is the key.
2. The context is salvation. We "have obtained an inheritance, having been predestined according to the purpose of him who works all things" (Ephesians 1:11).
3. Romans 11:33 cries out, "Oh, the depth of the riches and wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments and how inscrutable his ways!"
4. Paul asks, "Who has known the mind of the Lord, or who has been his counselor?" (Romans 11:34). He is quoting Isaiah 40:13, and the next verse echoes Job 41:11.

5. “For from him and through him and to him are all things. To him be glory forever. Amen” (Romans 11:36).
6. In Job 42:2, Job says, “I know that you can do all things, and that no purpose of yours can be thwarted.”
7. In Job 42:3, he admits, “I have uttered what I did not understand, things too wonderful for me, which I did not know.”
8. Job 42:5-6 describes his new sight and his repentance.

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

The Christian church has long taught that God has a plan for the world and carries it out. Theologians call the plan God’s decree and the carrying out of it providence. The Westminster Confession puts it this way: God, “from all eternity, did by the most wise and holy counsel of his own will, freely and unchangeably ordain whatsoever comes to pass.” It then adds three careful clarifications. God is not the author of sin. No violence is done to the will of creatures. And the freedom and responsibility of secondary causes are not removed but established.

Providence has three parts. First, God preserves his creation. “In him all things hold together” (Colossians 1:17). If God stopped sustaining the world for a moment, it would cease to exist. Second, God concurs with the actions of his creatures. Everything that happens involves real creatures acting, and God’s rule is in and through them. Third, God governs, directing everything toward his purposes.

The book of Job shows all of this at work. Look at chapter 1. The Sabeans raid, fire falls from heaven, the Chaldeans attack, a great wind strikes the house. Each of these is a real event with real agents, and Satan stands behind them, permitted but limited. And yet Job says, “The LORD has taken away.” That is not because Job is confused. It is because he sees that God is above the causes. He is the first cause, and the others are secondary. The same event can be the sin of the Sabeans and the permission of God. Genesis 50:20 says it clearly in Joseph’s words: “You meant evil against me, but God meant it for good.” The cross is the supreme example: “This Jesus, delivered up according to the definite plan and foreknowledge of God, you crucified and killed by the hands of lawless men” (Acts 2:23). God’s plan and human guilt are both real.

How should we hold these together? We should not claim to understand more than the Bible says. Paul does not try to resolve it. He says, “Oh, the depth!” The right response to this doctrine is worship. And it is a comfort. If God rules everything, then nothing in your life is outside his hand, and nothing is wasted. The Heidelberg Catechism says that all things come to us "not by chance but from his fatherly hand."

There is a caution, too. This doctrine is meant to comfort sufferers, not to be used on them. The friends of Job tried to explain suffering with theology, and God rebuked them. Speak about providence to yourself in your own pain, and to others only with great gentleness.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Job's final answer in 42:2 is a confession of the doctrine we have been discussing. "I know that you can do all things, and that no purpose of yours can be thwarted." It is not the cry of someone who has found a satisfying argument. It is the settled conviction of someone who has been brought low and has seen God.

What makes it remarkable is when Job says it. He says it without having received an explanation. He still does not know about the courtroom scene in heaven. He still does not know why his children died. But he has seen enough of God to know that God's plan will stand. And that is enough.

This is also how Paul speaks in Romans 11. He has just spent three chapters wrestling with how God will bring about the salvation of Israel and the nations. When he reaches the end, he does not offer a final theory. He breaks into praise. The plan is too deep. "To him be glory forever." The doctrine of providence is not meant to end in a diagram. It is meant to end in a doxology.

The lines in Ephesians 1:11 should be read in context. Paul says that God works all things according to the counsel of his will in order to say something about the security of believers. We have an inheritance. We were chosen. God is working, and he will finish what he started. Providence, in the Bible, is mostly a message of hope for the people of God.

STEP 5

Connection

Proverbs 16:9 says, "The heart of man plans his way, but the LORD establishes his steps." Psalm 115:3 says, "Our God is in the heavens; he does all that he pleases." Jesus said that not even a sparrow falls to the ground apart from the Father (Matthew 10:29). Isaiah 46:9-10 declares, "My counsel shall stand, and I will accomplish all my purpose."

STEP 6

Application

First, take a hard thing in your life and ask, "What does it mean that God is sovereign over this?" Write one sentence and one prayer.

Second, notice the difference between the doctrine as a comfort and the doctrine as a weapon. Resolve to use it only for the first.

Third, spend time in worship. Read Romans 11:33-36 aloud as a prayer, and let it end in praise.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that nothing in your life is outside his hand.
- Tell him about a part of his ways you do not understand, and ask him for trust.
- Give him the glory he is owed.

JOB 42:5

DAY 87 · WEEK 13

Romans 8:18-30; 1 Peter 4:12-19; 2 Corinthians 4:7-18

Suffering and the Christian Life

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Romans 8:18-30, 1 Peter 4:12-19, and 2 Corinthians 4:7-18. These three passages are the New Testament's most direct teaching on suffering in the Christian life. Read them side by side, and notice what each says about the purpose, the presence, and the end of suffering.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Yesterday you thought about God's sovereignty. Today you think about how Christians are to live under it. The book of Job asked why the righteous suffer, and the answer it gave was God himself. The New Testament adds the missing piece: the answer is the God who has suffered. Paul, Peter, and the others wrote as people who were being beaten, jailed, and persecuted. They are not theorizing. They are speaking from inside the experience.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Paul says, "I consider that the sufferings of this present time are not worth comparing with the glory that is to be revealed to us" (Romans 8:18).
2. The whole creation "waits with eager longing" and "groans together in the pains of childbirth" (8:19-22).
3. We "who have the firstfruits of the Spirit, groan inwardly as we wait eagerly for adoption as sons" (8:23).
4. "The Spirit helps us in our weakness…intercedes for us with groanings too deep for words" (8:26).

5. “For those who love God all things work together for good, for those who are called according to his purpose” (8:28). The good is defined in verse 29: being “conformed to the image of his Son.”

6. Peter says, “Do not be surprised at the fiery trial when it comes upon you to test you, as though something strange were happening to you” (1 Peter 4:12).

7. “But rejoice insofar as you share Christ’s sufferings, that you may also rejoice and be glad when his glory is revealed” (4:13).

8. “Therefore let those who suffer according to God’s will entrust their souls to a faithful Creator while doing good” (4:19).

9. Paul says, “We have this treasure in jars of clay, to show that the surpassing power belongs to God and not to us” (2 Corinthians 4:7).

10. “For this light momentary affliction is preparing for us an eternal weight of glory beyond all comparison” (4:17).

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

The Christian view of suffering differs from every other view in one important way: it centers on a suffering Savior. Other religions explain suffering as illusion, as karma, or as a mere fact of life. The Bible treats suffering as real, as an enemy, as part of a fallen world, and as something God himself has entered. Jesus “learned obedience through what he suffered” (Hebrews 5:8), and he is “a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief” (Isaiah 53:3). When you suffer, you are not alone.

The New Testament gives several reasons for the suffering of Christians, and it is important to keep them together. First, we suffer because of union with Christ. Paul says we are “fellow heirs with Christ, provided we suffer with him in order that we may also be glorified with him” (Romans 8:17). To belong to Jesus is to share his path, which goes through the cross to glory. Second, suffering refines us. It produces endurance, character, and hope (Romans 5:3-5), and it is the means by which God conforms us to his Son (Romans 8:29). Third, suffering is a witness. Paul carries “the death of Jesus” in his body “so that the life of Jesus may also be manifested in our bodies” (2 Corinthians 4:10). Fourth, suffering is the groaning of a creation that is still waiting for its redemption. We live in the time between the first coming and the second, and all of creation feels it.

We must be careful not to turn any of these reasons into a rule that explains every case. This is exactly what Job’s friends did. Jesus said that a man’s blindness was not caused by his sin or his parents’ (John 9:3). Sometimes we simply do not know why. What we do know is that God has promised never to leave us, that he is working through everything for our good, and that suffering will end.

That promise is the content of Romans 8:28. It is often quoted as if it said that everything that happens is good. It does not. It says that God works all things together for good, and the good is defined: becoming like Christ and sharing in his glory. That is a much deeper kind of good than comfort. And the verses that follow seal it. Nothing can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus (Romans 8:38-39).

The final piece is hope. Paul calls the affliction "light" and "momentary," not because it is trivial but because he is weighing it against "an eternal weight of glory." The scales are not even. The Christian does not deny the pain. He sets it against what is coming.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Each of the three passages tells you something different. In Romans 8, Paul puts our pain in a cosmic frame. It is part of a creation that groans and a Spirit that groans with us. He does not say that the pain is good. He says that it is not the end. The Spirit helps us pray when we have no words, and that is a mercy that Job did not have.

In 1 Peter, the stress is on not being surprised. Peter writes to believers who are facing persecution, and he tells them that this is normal. "Do not be surprised." Many people come to faith expecting an easier life, and they are shaken when trouble comes. Peter says to expect the fiery trial, and to rejoice when you share Christ's sufferings. He also gives a simple instruction for the sufferer: "entrust your soul to a faithful Creator while doing good" (4:19). The phrase "faithful Creator" answers God's speeches in Job. The one who made the world is the one to trust with your soul.

In 2 Corinthians 4, Paul describes himself as a jar of clay. The treasure is the gospel, and the jar is his fragile, breakable body. The weakness is not a flaw in the plan. It is the plan, so that the power will clearly be God's. He says that he is afflicted but not crushed, perplexed but not driven to despair, struck down but not destroyed (4:8-9). Each of the pairs is a picture of someone near the edge who is held.

Together the passages give a full portrait. Suffering is real and costly. It is not a sign that God has left us. It is used by God for good. It is temporary. And it is shared with Christ.

STEP 5

Connection

Job's story points forward to these New Testament passages. Where Job asked for a mediator, Paul says the Spirit intercedes for us. Where Job looked for a redeemer, Peter points to the faithful Creator who is also our Savior. Hebrews 12:1-3 tells us to look to Jesus, who endured the cross. James 1:2-4 and Revelation 21:4 complete the picture: trials now, and no more tears then.

STEP 6

Application

First, if you are suffering now, read Romans 8:18-30 slowly and ask God to help you hear it as a word to you. Identify one phrase that gives you hope.

Second, if you are not suffering, take time to pray for someone who is. Read 1 Peter 4 and ask how you can support a persecuted brother or sister.

Third, learn 2 Corinthians 4:16-17 by heart. It will be a help in your own dark days.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus that he suffered for you and with you.
- Tell God where you are weak and ask him to show his strength.
- Ask him to fix your eyes on what is unseen.

JOB 42:5

DAY 88 · WEEK 13

Psalm 73

I was nearly slipping; yet I am continually with you

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 28 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 73. It is a psalm about a man who nearly lost his faith over the prosperity of the wicked. Read it as a story with a turning point, and find the verse in which everything changes.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 73 is by Asaph, a leader of worship in David's time. It opens the third book of the Psalter, and it is a perfect companion to Job. Both deal with the problem of the prosperity of the wicked and the pain of the righteous. Job came out of the book with a vision of God. Asaph comes out of the psalm with the same thing, and he tells you exactly where it happened.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Truly God is good to Israel, to those who are pure in heart" (v. 1). This is Asaph's starting point.
2. "But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled, my steps had nearly slipped" (v. 2).
3. The reason: "For I was envious of the arrogant when I saw the prosperity of the wicked" (v. 3).
4. The wicked have no pangs until death, and they are not in trouble as others are (vv. 4-5).
5. They speak with malice and set their mouths against the heavens (vv. 8-9). "They say, How can God know? Is there knowledge in the Most High?" (v. 11).
6. Asaph says, "All in vain have I kept my heart clean and washed my hands in innocence" (v. 13).

7. “But when I thought how to understand this, it seemed to me a wearisome task, until I went into the sanctuary of God; then I discerned their end” (vv. 16-17).
8. The wicked are on “slippery places” and are destroyed in a moment (vv. 18-19).
9. “Whom have I in heaven but you? And there is nothing on earth that I desire besides you” (v. 25).
10. “My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever” (v. 26).
11. “But for me it is good to be near God” (v. 28).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The honest first confession of the psalm is worth noticing. Asaph says that he almost fell. He nearly gave up. The reason was not an intellectual doubt but an emotional one: envy. He looked at people who ignored God and seemed to be doing fine, and he felt that his own faithfulness had been a waste. Most believers have felt this.

He describes the wicked in detail. They are fat, free from pain, proud, and violent. They scoff at God. Their prosperity seems to say that there is no judgment. It is a convincing picture, and Asaph does not pretend that it is not.

Then comes verse 16. He tried to think his way through it, and it was “wearisome.” He could not reason it out. The turning point is in verse 17: “until I went into the sanctuary of God.” Something happened in God’s presence that thinking alone could not do. He saw things from the perspective of eternity. “Then I discerned their end.” The picture that looked so solid was a house on slippery ground.

The sanctuary is the place where God is worshiped, and it is where the truth about the world comes back into view. If your perspective is bent by what you see, go to where God is. This is why public worship matters.

What follows is one of the great confessions in the Psalter. “Whom have I in heaven but you?” Asaph moves from envy to desire. He no longer wants what the wicked have. He wants God. He even says that his flesh and heart may fail, and God will still be “the strength of my heart and my portion forever.” The word “portion” recalls the way the tribes were given land. His inheritance is God himself. He ends with the line that carries the whole psalm: “for me it is good to be near God.”

This is exactly where Job ended. The answer to the problem of suffering and unfairness is not a theory. It is God.

STEP 5

Connection

Psalm 37 deals with the same theme, and so does Jeremiah 12:1. Jesus said, “What does it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his soul?” (Mark 8:36). Paul says that his gain is Christ (Philippians 3:7-8). The idea of God as our portion appears in Lamentations 3:24: “The LORD is my portion, says my soul, therefore I will hope in him.”

STEP 6

Application

If you are envious of someone’s success, take your envy to God in worship. Go to a church service or to a quiet place and sit in his presence. Ask him to show you the end.

Pray verses 25 and 26 as your own. Say them aloud, and then ask yourself if they are honestly true. If not, ask God to make them true.

Pay attention this week to what you desire most. Ask God to teach you to want him more than anything else.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess any envy, and tell God where your feet have nearly slipped.
- Ask him to bring you into his presence and show you the truth.
- Tell him what it means that he is your portion.

JOB 42:5

DAY 89 · WEEK 13

Psalm 88

O LORD, God of my salvation, the darkest lament

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 18 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 88. It is the darkest psalm in the Psalter, and it is meant to be. Read it slowly and do not hurry to a happy ending. There is not one. Notice how it begins, and notice what the psalmist keeps doing.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 88 is attributed to Heman the Ezrahite, a wise man mentioned in 1 Kings 4:31. It is the only lament in the Psalter that ends with no note of hope. Other laments move from complaint to trust. This one begins in darkness and ends in darkness. Why would the Bible include a prayer like this? The answer is that God knows some of his people will walk through seasons that feel exactly like it, and he wants them to know that they are allowed to pray in that darkness. Compare it to Job in his worst chapters.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The first line is a statement of faith: “O LORD, God of my salvation” (v. 1).
2. He cries “day and night” before God and asks that his prayer would come before him (vv. 1-2).
3. “My soul is full of troubles, and my life draws near to Sheol” (v. 3). He feels like one who is already dead (vv. 4-5).
4. “You have put me in the depths of the pit, in the regions dark and deep” (v. 6).
5. “Your wrath lies heavy upon me, and you overwhelm me with all your waves” (v. 7).
6. “You have caused my companions to shun me; you have made me a horror to them” (v. 8).

7. “Every day I call upon you, O LORD; I spread out my hands to you” (v. 9).
8. He asks, “Do you work wonders for the dead? Do the departed rise up to praise you?” (v. 10).
9. “But I, O LORD, cry to you; in the morning my prayer comes before you” (v. 13).
10. “O LORD, why do you cast my soul away? Why do you hide your face from me?” (v. 14).
11. The last line is “my companions have become darkness” (v. 18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Start with what the psalm does not have. There is no turn. No “But you.” No vow to praise. No assurance that God has heard. The psalmist ends with the word “darkness.” If you came to this psalm hoping to be cheered up, you will be disappointed.

But look at what the psalm does have. It begins with “O LORD, God of my salvation.” This is the only line in the psalm that points to light, and it comes first. Whatever else is true, the psalmist is still talking to the God who saves. He does not understand how God can be his salvation and feel like his enemy. But he refuses to stop addressing him. And he says, “Every day I call upon you.” He keeps praying. He spreads out his hands. In verse 13, he says that his prayer will come before God “in the morning.” The darkness has not stopped him from praying.

That is the quiet wonder of the psalm. Faith in this psalm is not a feeling of hope. It is the act of continuing to pray when there is no feeling. It is clinging to the one who seems to be against you. The psalm itself is a prayer, and so it is itself the evidence that the psalmist has not let go.

It is also important to see that God’s word includes this prayer. The Bible does not demand that all faith be cheerful. It gives a place for the person who has no light, and it says, in effect, “Here are words you can use.” If you ever find yourself unable to say anything hopeful, this psalm says that you can still say, “LORD, God of my salvation,” and keep praying.

Finally, the psalm points to Christ. The one who, more than any other, was shunned by companions and overwhelmed by waves of wrath is Jesus. On the cross he took the wrath that lay heavy on us, and he went into the darkness so that we could come out of it. Psalm 88 is, in a deeper sense, his prayer.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus' experience of being deserted by his friends (Mark 14:50) and of bearing the wrath of God is a fulfillment of this psalm. Lamentations 3:1-18 is another prayer that ends in the dark, until verse 19 and following. Hebrews 5:7 describes Jesus offering up prayers with loud cries and tears. Romans 8:26 says the Spirit prays for us when we cannot.

STEP 6

Application

If you are in a dark season, pray this psalm. You do not need to add a happy ending. Say "LORD, God of my salvation," and then say whatever is true.

If you know someone who is in a dark season, resist the urge to hand them a quick answer. Sit with them. Sometimes the best thing you can do is to pray Psalm 88 with them.

Thank Jesus for going into the darkness for you, and for the promise that one day there will be no more.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what the dark feels like, without tidying it up.
- Thank Jesus for going into the dark for you.
- Hold in prayer someone you love who is in the dark today.

JOB 42:5

DAY 90 · WEEK 13

Psalm 17

Hear a just cause, O LORD, David's appeal to integrity

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 15 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 17. This is a prayer of David, a man who is under attack and is asking God for vindication. Read it with Job in mind, and notice both the confidence of its opening and the hope of its closing line.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 17 is attributed to David, and its tone is similar to some of Job's. Both men appeal to God as a judge, both claim to have been faithful, and both are surrounded by enemies. David's confidence in his integrity may sound proud at first reading. But look at what he is doing: he is not claiming perfection. He is claiming to be on the right side in a particular dispute, and he is bringing the case to God, the only judge who can settle it. The psalm ends with one of the loveliest hopes in the Psalter.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm begins, "Hear a just cause, O LORD; attend to my cry! Give ear to my prayer from lips free of deceit!" (v. 1).
2. "From your presence let my vindication come! Let your eyes behold the right!" (v. 2).
3. "You have tried my heart, you have visited me by night, you have tested me, and you will find nothing; I have purposed that my mouth will not transgress" (v. 3).
4. "Wondrously show your steadfast love, O Savior of those who seek refuge from their adversaries" (v. 7).
5. "Keep me as the apple of your eye; hide me in the shadow of your wings" (v. 8).
6. The enemies surround him. They are like a lion eager to tear (vv. 9-12).

7. “Arise, O LORD! Confront him, subdue him!” (v. 13).
8. The wicked have their reward in this life, with plenty of children and wealth (v. 14).
9. “As for me, I shall behold your face in righteousness; when I awake, I shall be satisfied with beholding your likeness” (v. 15).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with the language of a courtroom. David is making a case. “Hear a just cause.” He is not demanding mercy because he is weak. He is claiming that his cause is right. And he does so by saying that God has already examined him and found nothing wrong. “You have tried my heart…and you will find nothing.” This is not a statement that David is sinless. It is a statement that he has not done what his enemies accuse him of. It is also a statement that God is the final judge, and that David is willing to have his heart examined by him.

Job made the same appeal. “Oh, that I had one to hear me! Let the Almighty answer me!” The difference is that David is more confident that God will respond. He also adds a second image, one of intimacy and protection. “Keep me as the apple of your eye; hide me in the shadow of your wings.” The apple of the eye is the pupil, the most sensitive and protected part of the body. The shadow of the wings is a picture of a mother bird covering her young. David asks for two things at once: to be vindicated like a defendant in court, and to be held like a child. The psalm is a mixture of legal and tender language, and so is the gospel.

Verse 14 is worth noticing. The wicked are filled with the things of this life: wealth, children, a full belly. David does not envy them. He simply notes that this is all they have. Their “portion is in this life.” It echoes Psalm 73 and the end of Job.

And then the ending, which is the heart of the psalm. “As for me, I shall behold your face in righteousness.” David does not say that he wants to be wealthy or safe. He wants to see God’s face. He says that when he wakes, probably a reference to waking from death or from the long night of trouble, he will be “satisfied with beholding your likeness.” This is the same longing Job had in 19:26. “In my flesh I shall see God.” It is the hope that the Old Testament believers held onto: to see God.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus speaks of the pure in heart who “shall see God” (Matthew 5:8). Paul says, “Now we see in a mirror dimly, but then face to face” (1 Corinthians 13:12). John writes, “We know that when he appears we shall be like him, because we shall see him as he is” (1 John 3:2). Revelation 22:4 says, “They will see his face.” Jesus compared himself to a hen who gathers her chicks under her wings (Matthew 23:37).

STEP 6

Application

Ask God to examine your heart, as David does. Say “You have tried my heart” and then listen. Confess whatever comes to mind, and receive the forgiveness that is yours in Christ.

Ask yourself if you want to see God’s face more than anything else. If not, ask him to put that desire in you.

Take comfort in the picture of the apple of his eye. Say aloud, “I am the apple of his eye.” If that is hard to believe, bring that to him too.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to search your heart and show you what is wrong.
- Ask him to hide you in the shadow of his wings.
- Tell him you long to be satisfied in him.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"I had heard of you by the hearing of the ear, but now my eye sees you."

JOB 42:5

REST

Meditation

Job 42:5 is the center of the book of Job. After forty-one chapters of arguing, questioning, suffering, and listening, Job says something quiet.

"I had heard of you by the hearing of the ear." This is how most of us begin. We hear about God from our parents, a preacher, a book, or a friend. We know the facts. We can say the creeds. That is a good beginning, and it is a real knowledge, but it is secondhand. It is a report.

"But now my eye sees you." Something has changed. Job has encountered God. He is no longer relying on what others have said. He has seen the Lord in the whirlwind, heard his voice, and been met by his presence. The word "now" tells you that this is the result of everything that has come before. Suffering, with all its pain, led him here.

This is one of the most hopeful statements in the Bible. It means that the purpose of suffering, in the deepest sense, is not to teach us a lesson or to punish us. It is to bring us to the place where we see God. This does not mean that the suffering is good in itself. It is not. But God can use it to give you a clearer sight of himself than you had before.

For the Christian, the verse is even richer. In Jesus, "we have seen his glory" (John 1:14). He is the one in whom the invisible God has become visible. To see Jesus is to see the Father (John 14:9). Every Christian's journey is from hearing to seeing, and it is finished when we see him face to face.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished the book of Job. You read God's answer from the whirlwind and the questions about creation that silenced Job. You read the last chapters, in which God vindicated Job over his friends, Job prayed for them, and the LORD restored his fortunes. You paused for two doctrinal days: on the decrees of God and providence, and on suffering and the Christian life. You saw that God rules over every event, that he is not the author of sin, and that Christians suffer in union with a suffering Savior. You prayed three psalms alongside Job. Psalm 73 showed you the sanctuary as the place where perspective returns. Psalm 88 gave you a prayer for the dark that has no easy ending. Psalm 17 gave you the hope of seeing God's face. The week taught that the answer to suffering is the presence of God.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Job went from hearing about God to seeing him. Where are you on that path? What would it look like for your knowledge of God to become less secondhand?

How does Jesus, the visible image of the invisible God, fulfill what Job longed for? Think about a moment in the Gospels where Jesus shows you what God is like, and what it means that you can see him there.

Of the three psalms you read this week, which one was closest to where you are right now? Write a prayer in your own words that begins with that psalm.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you want to see him and not only hear of him.

Thank him for Jesus, in whom you see his glory.

Ask him to use suffering to draw you nearer.

DAY 92 · WEEK 14

Psalm 26

Vindicate me, O LORD, for I have walked in my integrity

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 26. It is another prayer of David about integrity. Read it carefully, and watch for the way the confident opening gives way to a request for mercy in the final verses.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the last psalm of the unit, and it fits the theme well. Job swore an oath of integrity in Job 31, and David does something similar here. He asks God to examine him and declares that he has walked faithfully. The question is how a sinful man can say such things. The answer is in the last two verses, where David asks to be redeemed. His integrity is real, but it is not his ground of acceptance. His ground is God's steadfast love.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Vindicate me, O LORD, for I have walked in my integrity, and I have trusted in the LORD without wavering" (v. 1).
2. "Prove me, O LORD, and try me; test my heart and my mind" (v. 2).
3. "For your steadfast love is before my eyes, and I walk in your faithfulness" (v. 3).
4. He does not sit with the worthless or go in with hypocrites (vv. 4-5).
5. "I wash my hands in innocence and go around your altar, O LORD" (v. 6).
6. "O LORD, I love the habitation of your house and the place where your glory dwells" (v. 8).
7. "Do not sweep my soul away with sinners, nor my life with bloodthirsty men" (v. 9).
8. "But as for me, I shall walk in my integrity; redeem me, and be gracious to me" (v. 11).

9 “My foot stands on level ground; in the great assembly I will bless the LORD” (v. 12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This is a psalm that raises a question for many new believers: how can anyone say “I have walked in my integrity”? It sounds like boasting. But there are three things to see.

First, the integrity is about direction, not perfection. David says that he has trusted in the LORD “without wavering.” He is not claiming to have never sinned. He is saying that his life has been oriented toward God, and that he has not given his loyalty to anyone else. The Hebrew word for integrity means wholeness or completeness. It describes a life that is not divided.

Second, the integrity is rooted in God’s love. Look at verse 3: “Your steadfast love is before my eyes.” The reason he walks faithfully is that he has been looking at God’s love. His obedience is a response to grace, not an attempt to earn it.

Third, and most important, the psalm ends with a request for mercy. “Redeem me, and be gracious to me.” David has been describing his faithfulness for ten verses, and then he asks for redemption and grace. These are the words of someone who knows he needs saving. He does not say, “Redeem me because I deserve it.” He says, “Redeem me, and be gracious.” He is trusting in God, not in his own record. The same is true in Job, who is declared righteous by God and yet longs for a Redeemer.

The picture at the end is of firm ground. “My foot stands on level ground.” In a psalm full of danger and temptation, the final image is of a safe place to stand, and a congregation gathered to praise.

This is what the unit has been moving toward. In the face of suffering and injustice, the faithful person says: I will walk in my integrity, and I will trust in God’s grace.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that his own righteousness is “a righteousness not my own, but that which comes through faith in Christ” (Philippians 3:9). In Psalm 130:3-4 the psalmist says, “If you, O LORD, should mark iniquities, O Lord, who could stand? But with you there is forgiveness.” Hebrews 10:22 invites us to draw near “with a true heart in full assurance of faith.”

STEP 6

Application

Pray this psalm as a final prayer for the unit. Ask God to test your heart and mind. Then, like David, say, “Redeem me, and be gracious to me.”

Think about where you have been divided. What would it mean for your life to be more whole this week?

Plan to be in the “great assembly” on Sunday, and sing with the congregation.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to test your heart and mind.
- Admit that you cannot walk in integrity on your own, and ask for his help.
- Bless him for setting your foot on level ground.

EXODUS 3:14

DAY 93 · WEEK 14

Review and Reflection

Unit 4 review, Job, Suffering & Sovereignty

Year 1 · Unit 4 · Review

MEMORY

Unit Verse

> "For I know that my Redeemer lives, and at the last he will stand upon the earth."
>
> JOB 19:25

REST

Meditation

Job 19:25 is the unit's anchor verse, and it deserves a final look. Read it aloud once more before you go on.

"For I know." This is the language of certainty. Job has been saying "I do not understand" for eighteen chapters. Now he says "I know." The things he does not know are many. What he knows is one thing, and it is enough.

"That my Redeemer lives." The word for "Redeemer" is the family rescuer, the one who steps in when a relative is in trouble. Job does not say that he hopes for one or that he wishes for one. He says that he has one, and that this person is alive. In the middle of death and loss, he points to life.

"And at the last he will stand upon the earth." There will be a final day. The Redeemer will take his place on the earth, as a judge or an advocate in a courtroom. The one who seems to be missing will come. The wrongs will be set right.

Job could not have known how fully this would be fulfilled. In Jesus, the Redeemer has come, lived, died, and risen. He lives, and he will stand upon the earth again. Every Christian can say this verse with more confidence than Job, because we have seen the empty tomb. Keep the verse close. It will carry you through the hardest days.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 4 you have read the book of Job and a series of psalms that go with it. The unit began with a scene that Job himself never saw: the heavenly court, where Satan accused Job of serving God only for the benefits. God allowed Job to be tested, within limits, and Job lost his children, his wealth, and his health. Even so, he worshiped. You prayed Psalms 10 and 13, which gave you words for “Where are you?” and “How long?”

Then the friends came. Eliphaz, Bildad, and Zophar each spoke three times, and they all said the same thing in different ways: Job must have sinned. They defended God with false claims, and they turned a general truth about wisdom and consequences into a rule that crushed a suffering man. Job answered them with grief and anger and honesty. Through his speeches, a longing grew: for an arbiter, for a witness in heaven, and for a Redeemer who lives. In chapter 19 he said the words that anchor this unit.

You read Psalm 22, the great psalm of the forsaken and the vindicated, and saw how Jesus prayed it on the cross. In the later chapters, Job insisted on his integrity, praised God’s power as only the outskirts of his ways, and heard the poem on wisdom that ends with the fear of the Lord. Elihu spoke last among the humans, and he said some wise things and some mistaken ones.

Then God answered from the whirlwind. He did not explain, but asked questions about the world he had made. Job saw him, repented of his presumption, and prayed for his friends. God vindicated Job and restored him. In two doctrinal pauses, you studied God’s providence and the Christian’s suffering. In Psalms 73, 88, 17, and 26, you found a sanctuary where the truth comes back into focus, a prayer for the darkest night, the hope of seeing God’s face, and a plea for redemption.

The unit taught that suffering is not a verdict, that God is sovereign and good, and that the answer to suffering is not an explanation but a Person.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What does the prologue of Job reveal about the nature of suffering and Satan’s role?

Look back at chapters 1 and 2. Satan can act only with God’s permission, and every time the permission has a limit. Job’s suffering was not punishment, and he never learned the reason. What does this teach you about how to think about suffering in your own life? How does it help you to know that Satan is on a leash?

Where do Job's friends go wrong in their theology of suffering?

The friends held a general truth, that sin has consequences, and turned it into a rule that explained everything. Recall how they treated Job, and how God responded in 42:7. What lessons about comforting people and handling Scripture do you take from their mistakes? Is there a place where you are tempted to do what they did?

How does God's answer from the whirlwind address Job's questions?

God did not give Job an explanation. He asked questions about creation, and showed Job his own wisdom and care. Job's response was, "Now my eye sees you." Why was that enough? Write a few sentences about what it means that the answer to suffering is God himself.

How does Job's story point forward to Christ, the truly righteous one who suffered?

Think about Job's longing for a mediator, a witness, and a Redeemer, and about Psalm 22. Jesus is the righteous one who suffered unjustly, the mediator who stands between God and us, and the Redeemer who lives. Write a short prayer of thanks to him for each of these roles.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that suffering is never a sign he has left you.

Ask him to help you trust him when you do not understand.

Ask him to prepare you for what comes next.

Exodus 1:1-2:25

Israel enslaved; Moses born, hidden, and called

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 47 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 1:1-2:25. Four hundred years pass between the end of Genesis and the opening of Exodus, and the chapters you are reading cover the start of Israel's slavery and the birth of its deliverer. Read the story with the Genesis promises in mind, and notice how often God works through small, hidden acts of courage.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Genesis ended with Joseph's family safe in Egypt. Exodus begins with a sentence that sounds like a continuation: "These are the names of the sons of Israel." But the world has changed. Joseph's generation has died, and the descendants of Jacob have become a great nation within Egypt's borders. That is the fulfillment of God's promise to Abraham to make him a great nation (Genesis 12:2). It is also the cause of Egypt's fear. The book of Exodus is the second book of the Law, and it tells how God turned a family of slaves into a covenant people. Everything in the Bible that speaks of redemption looks back to what happens here.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The people of Israel are "fruitful and increased greatly; they multiplied and grew exceedingly strong, so that the land was filled with them" (1:7). This echoes the creation command in Genesis 1:28.
2. "Now there arose a new king over Egypt, who did not know Joseph" (1:8). He fears that Israel will join Egypt's enemies and enslaves them (1:9-11).
3. The more they were oppressed, "the more they multiplied and the more they spread abroad" (1:12).

4. The midwives Shiphrah and Puah "feared God" and did not obey Pharaoh's order to kill the Hebrew boys (1:17).
5. God "dealt well with the midwives" (1:20), and Pharaoh then commands that every newborn Hebrew boy be thrown into the Nile (1:22).
6. A Levite woman hides her baby son for three months, and then puts him in a basket among the reeds (2:1-3). The word for "basket" is the same word used for Noah's ark.
7. Pharaoh's daughter finds him, takes pity, and names him Moses, "because I drew him out of the water" (2:10). His sister Miriam arranges for his own mother to nurse him (2:7-9).
8. Moses, as an adult, kills an Egyptian who is beating a Hebrew, and flees to Midian when it becomes known (2:11-15).
9. In Midian, he marries Zipporah and has a son named Gershom, "I have been a sojourner in a foreign land" (2:21-22).
10. "God heard their groaning, and God remembered his covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. God saw the people of Israel, and God knew" (2:24-25).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The opening chapters of Exodus are told in a quiet way. God is not named as acting until the last verses of chapter 2. Until then, the story is carried by people: a frightened king, two midwives, a mother and a sister, and a princess. The reader is invited to see how God's purposes move forward even when he seems to be absent. It is a pattern you have seen before, in Joseph's story, and in Job's.

Pharaoh is a portrait of power that fears. He has the largest empire in the world, and he is afraid of a population of slaves. His answer is violence, first by labor and then by murder. But every plan he makes fails. The more he oppresses, the more Israel grows. The Nile that he orders the babies thrown into becomes the place where a rescuer is drawn out. The book is teaching you early that God's promises cannot be defeated by the schemes of rulers.

The midwives are among the quiet heroes of Scripture. They "feared God" more than they feared Pharaoh. The fear of God, as you learned in Job 28:28, is the beginning of wisdom, and it is also the source of courage. They have no power, and they do something small: they let the boys live. God honors them and gives them families of their own. Their story is a reminder that obedience to God sometimes means quiet resistance to unjust authority.

Moses' own story is full of echoes. A baby is put in a floating basket, the same word as Noah's ark, and is saved through water. He is raised in the house of the oppressor, and he is then a fugitive. At first he tries to rescue his people by his own strength, with violence, and it fails. He needs to be taught a better way. Forty years in the wilderness will do that.

But the center of the passage is the last two verses. God hears, remembers, sees, and knows. These are four verbs, and the first three recall what God does in covenant. "Remembered his covenant" does not mean that God had forgotten. It means that he is now acting on what he promised. The slavery of Israel has not made God forget Abraham. It has set the stage for him to keep his word.

STEP 5

Connection

Stephen retells this story in Acts 7:17-29, and Hebrews 11:23-27 praises the faith of Moses' parents and of Moses himself. Matthew presents the infant Jesus escaping Herod's murder of the boys in a way that echoes this chapter (Matthew 2:13-18). Paul says that God "chose what is weak in the world to shame the strong" (1 Corinthians 1:27), and Moses is an early example.

STEP 6

Application

Think of a place where you feel powerless. Remember the midwives. A small act of faithfulness is not wasted.

Notice how often God's actions in this story are hidden. If you are in a season where you cannot see God working, ask him to show you where he is, and trust that he has heard.

Pray for people who are living under oppression today, and ask what you could do to help.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he hears groaning and remembers his covenant.
- Ask for courage to fear him more than anyone with power.
- Pray for someone who is crying out today.

EXODUS 3:14

DAY 95 · WEEK 14

Exodus 3:1-4:31

The burning bush; the divine name I AM; Moses commissioned

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 53 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 3:1-4:31. This is the call of Moses. Read it slowly. Pay special attention to what God says about himself, and to each excuse that Moses offers and how God answers it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Forty years have passed since Moses fled Egypt. He is now eighty, a shepherd in the desert of Midian, and everything he once hoped to be has been left behind. Then, one day, he sees a bush burning that is not consumed. What follows is one of the most important encounters in the Bible. God reveals his name, announces his plan, and commissions an unwilling servant. Almost everything that comes later in the Old Testament, the exodus, the covenant, the law, the prophets, grows out of this scene.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Moses comes to Horeb, “the mountain of God,” and sees “the angel of the LORD” in a flame of fire in the midst of a bush that is not consumed (3:1-2).
2. God calls, “Moses, Moses!” and tells him not to come near, “for the place on which you are standing is holy ground” (3:4-5).
3. God says, “I am the God of your father, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob” (3:6). Moses hides his face.
4. “I have surely seen the affliction of my people who are in Egypt and have heard their cry…and I have come down to deliver them” (3:7-8).
5. Moses asks, “Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh?” God answers, “But I will be with you” (3:11-12).

6. Moses asks for God's name. God says, "I AM WHO I AM...Say this to the people of Israel: I AM has sent me to you" (3:14).
7. God adds, "The LORD, the God of your fathers...has sent me to you. This is my name forever, and thus I am to be remembered throughout all generations" (3:15).
8. Moses offers objections: they will not believe me (4:1), I am not eloquent (4:10). God gives him signs, and reminds him, "Who has made man's mouth?" (4:11).
9. God is angry at Moses' final request, "Oh, my Lord, please send someone else" (4:13), but provides his brother Aaron as a spokesman (4:14-16).
10. God tells Moses to say to Pharaoh, "Israel is my firstborn son...Let my son go that he may serve me" (4:22-23). The people believe and worship (4:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The bush that burns without being consumed is a picture of God himself. Fire is a common symbol of God's holy presence, and here it burns without destroying what it touches. God's holiness is dangerous, and yet it does not have to be fatal. That is a hint of what is to come in the tabernacle, and in Christ.

The ground is holy because God is there, not because of anything about the place. Moses is told to take off his sandals. It is a physical way of saying that he is in the presence of someone infinitely greater than he is. Many of the Bible's accounts of meeting God begin this way, and they end with someone who has been changed.

Now look at how God introduces himself. First as the God of the fathers: Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. He is the God who made promises. Then as the God who sees, hears, knows, and comes down. These are verbs of nearness, and they are what Israel needs to hear. Then God sends Moses, and the sending is hard, because Moses does not want to go.

Moses' objections are worth looking at one by one. "Who am I?" is a question of worthiness, and God does not answer it by telling Moses that he is great. He answers by saying, "I will be with you." The solution to his smallness is God's presence. "What is your name?" is a question about God's character, and the answer is the most mysterious in Scripture. "They will not believe me" is a question of credibility, and God gives signs. "I am not eloquent" is a question of ability, and God replies, "Who has made man's mouth?" Every excuse is met with a reminder of who God is.

The name "I AM WHO I AM" has been studied for thousands of years. It seems to say that God is self-existent: he does not depend on anything else, and he simply is. It also seems to say that he will be what he will be: he is free, and he will show himself faithful. The name connected to it, the LORD (Yahweh), becomes the personal name by which Israel knows him. You will see that name in capital letters throughout your English Bible. Tomorrow's doctrinal day will look at it more closely.

Finally, notice what God calls Israel: "my firstborn son." This is the language of family. Before the law, before the covenant at Sinai, God says that Israel is his son. Redemption is not a business arrangement. It is the rescue of a child.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus uses the burning bush to teach about the resurrection (Mark 12:26-27). He also speaks the divine name of himself: "Before Abraham was, I am" (John 8:58), and the "I am" sayings in John (6:35; 8:12; 10:11; 11:25; 14:6). Hebrews 3:1-6 compares Moses and Jesus as faithful servants. Paul says that God's "power is made perfect in weakness" (2 Corinthians 12:9).

STEP 6

Application

Take off your shoes, so to speak. Before you pray this week, spend a minute simply remembering who you are speaking to.

Identify your own list of excuses: "Who am I? What if they do not listen? I am not good enough." Read God's answers to Moses as answers to you.

Say aloud, "I will be with you." If you can, write it on a card where you will see it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God for being holy and near.
- Tell him where you feel inadequate for what he asks, and ask him for his presence.
- Ask him to help you go where he sends and speak what he gives.

EXODUS 3:14

DAY 96 · WEEK 14

Exodus 3:13-15; Exodus 34:5-7

The Existence and Attributes of God

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 3:13-15 and Exodus 34:5-7. The first passage is the revelation of God's name at the burning bush. The second is God's own description of his character, given after Israel's sin with the golden calf. Read them together, and ask what each says about who God is.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the first doctrinal pause in Unit 5. Each time you meet one of these days, you step back from the story and ask what the Bible teaches. Today the topic is the most basic one: who God is. You have just read the call of Moses, where God revealed his name and described himself as the God of the fathers. Now you look at the two most important self-descriptions in the Old Testament. One tells you that God exists on his own. The other tells you what God is like.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Moses asks, "If I come to the people of Israel and say to them, The God of your fathers has sent me to you, and they ask me, What is his name? what shall I say to them?" (3:13).
2. God answers, "I AM WHO I AM" and "I AM has sent me to you" (3:14).
3. He then says, "The LORD, the God of your fathers…has sent me to you. This is my name forever" (3:15).
4. In Exodus 34, Moses is on Mount Sinai after Israel's sin with the golden calf. The LORD passes before him and proclaims, "The LORD, the LORD" (34:6).
5. God describes himself as "a God merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love and faithfulness" (34:6).

6. He “keeps steadfast love for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin” (34:7).

7. But he is also one “who will by no means clear the guilty, visiting the iniquity of the fathers on the children and the children’s children, to the third and the fourth generation” (34:7).

8. Moses quickly bows his head and worships (34:8).

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

What is God like? The Bible’s answer starts with what theologians call his “aseity,” from a Latin phrase meaning “from himself.” God has life in himself. He does not need anything or anyone. He was not created, and nothing sustains him. When God says, “I AM WHO I AM,” he is saying, among other things, that he is the one who simply is. Everything else depends on him, and he depends on nothing. This is the foundation for all that follows. It means that God is not one more thing in the universe, even the greatest of them. He is the Creator of everything that is not himself.

The name given at the burning bush, written in English Bibles as “the LORD” in capital letters, is God’s personal name, Yahweh. It is related to the verb “to be,” and it speaks of his eternal, unchangeable presence. He is faithful to his promises because he does not change. Malachi 3:6 says, “For I the LORD do not change; therefore you, O children of Jacob, are not consumed.” James 1:17 speaks of the “Father of lights, with whom there is no variation or shadow due to change.” This is what theologians call God’s immutability. It does not mean that God is cold or distant. It means that his character and purposes are utterly reliable.

Then there is the self-description in Exodus 34:6-7, which becomes the most quoted passage in the Old Testament. Over and over, in the Psalms, the Prophets, and Nehemiah, writers return to these words (Numbers 14:18; Nehemiah 9:17; Psalm 103:8; Joel 2:13; Jonah 4:2). It is God’s own summary of his character. Notice how it starts: with mercy, grace, patience, steadfast love, and faithfulness. These are the words that come first. God’s character is, above all, a character of love. And yet the passage does not stop there. God “will by no means clear the guilty.” He is holy and just. His love is not weak, and his justice is not harsh.

Theologians sometimes divide God’s attributes into two groups. Some are incommunicable, meaning that they belong to God alone: his self-existence, his infinity, his unchangeableness, his omnipresence, his omniscience, his omnipotence. Others are communicable, meaning that human beings, made in his image, can reflect them in a limited way: love, mercy, justice, holiness, wisdom, faithfulness. This division helps explain why the Bible calls us to be like God (Ephesians 5:1) and also reminds us that he is infinitely beyond us.

The two attributes in tension in Exodus 34 are love and justice, and the rest of the Bible is the story of how they meet. How can a God who forgives iniquity also refuse to clear the guilty? The answer is not given here. It is given at the cross, where, as Paul writes, God is "just and the justifier of the one who has faith in Jesus" (Romans 3:26). The two halves of Exodus 34:7 are held together in Christ.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Look at the setting of each passage. The first comes at the beginning of God's work of redemption, when he sends Moses to bring Israel out of Egypt. The second comes after Israel has broken the covenant by worshiping the golden calf. In the first, God's name is an assurance that he will keep his promises. In the second, God's character is his answer to the question that Israel's sin raises: is it over?

God's response to a failed covenant is to describe himself. He does not explain a method or lay out terms. He says who he is. "The LORD, the LORD, a God merciful and gracious." The ground for hope after sin is not that people will do better but that God is who he is. This is what makes grace possible.

It matters, too, that Moses bows and worships. A right knowledge of God does not lead to pride but to worship. If you ever study the doctrine of God and find it making you proud or merely curious, something has gone wrong. The right response is Moses' response: to bow your head, and worship.

Finally, take note of the two kinds of statements in 34:7. They are not in contradiction. God is serious about sin because he is good. And he is willing to forgive because he is good. If he ignored sin, he would not be good. If he never forgave, he would not be merciful. The God of the Bible is both.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus claims the divine name in John 8:58 and says, "Whoever has seen me has seen the Father" (John 14:9). John 1:14 says that the Word "dwelt among us, and we have seen his glory…full of grace and truth," echoing "abounding in steadfast love and faithfulness." Paul writes that God put forward Christ "to show his righteousness, because in his divine forbearance he had passed over former sins" (Romans 3:25).

STEP 6

Application

Try to describe God, in your own words, using the list in Exodus 34:6-7. Which attribute do you find easiest to believe? Which is harder?

If you find it hard to believe in God's mercy, read these verses again, and notice that he said them about himself after Israel's worst sin.

Pray the passage as a prayer: "LORD, you are merciful and gracious, slow to anger, abounding in steadfast love and faithfulness." Let it become your first thought about God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God for who he is: self-existing, unchanging, merciful, and just.

Thank him that in Jesus the name I AM is made known.

Tell him which of his attributes you most need to remember today.

EXODUS 3:14

DAY 97 · WEEK 14

Psalm 106:1-23

Israel's history of unfaithfulness, grace despite rebellion

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 106:1-23. This is a confession psalm, a summary of Israel's early failures told from the standpoint of people who know that their own record is no better. Read it slowly and listen for the one line that keeps the history from being a list of defeats.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

You have just begun the story of the exodus, and this psalm looks back on it from centuries later. It is one of the great historical psalms of the Bible, along with Psalms 78, 105, and 136. The author does not know the details of how it will all turn out, but he knows that Israel has a long history of failing God, and that God has a long history of being faithful. The psalm will return in two parts, and between them you will read the whole exodus story. Think of it as a preview.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm begins with praise: "Praise the LORD! Oh give thanks to the LORD, for he is good, for his steadfast love endures forever!" (v. 1).
2. A confession follows: "Both we and our fathers have sinned; we have committed iniquity; we have done wickedness" (v. 6).
3. At the Red Sea, the fathers "did not consider your wondrous works…but rebelled by the sea" (v. 7).
4. "Yet he saved them for his name's sake, that he might make known his mighty power" (v. 8).
5. "He rebuked the Red Sea, and it became dry" (v. 9). "Then they believed his words; they sang his praise" (v. 12).

6. “But they soon forgot his works; they did not wait for his counsel” (v. 13).
7. In the wilderness, they “craved to the full,” and God “gave them what they asked, but sent a wasting disease among them” (vv. 14-15).
8. The earth swallowed Dathan and Abiram, who challenged Moses’ authority (vv. 16-18).
9. “They made a calf in Horeb and worshiped a metal image. They exchanged the glory of God for the image of an ox that eats grass” (vv. 19-20).
10. “Therefore he said he would destroy them, had not Moses, his chosen one, stood in the breach before him, to turn away his wrath from destroying them” (v. 23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The structure of the psalm is a lesson in itself. It begins and ends with praise. In the middle, it tells a long story of failure. The psalm is not a bitter complaint about Israel. It is an act of worship that tells the truth about sin and the truth about God.

Notice the first confession in verse 6: “Both we and our fathers have sinned.” The psalmist does not blame his ancestors. He includes himself. This is the heart of honest confession. It is not enough to say that the past generation failed. We are part of the same story, with the same tendencies.

Then look at the pattern in the history. Israel sees a miracle and believes. A few days later, they forget. This is the thing the psalm keeps saying: “They soon forgot his works.” Forgetting is a form of sin, and it is the root of other sins. When you stop remembering what God has done, you stop trusting what he will do. This is why the Bible so often calls people to remember: to keep the Passover, to set up memorial stones, to tell the story to children.

The most shocking detail is verse 20: “They exchanged the glory of God for the image of an ox that eats grass.” It is meant to sound absurd. The people have seen the greatest display of God’s power in history, and they traded it for a statue of a grass-eating animal. Paul will pick up this phrase in Romans 1:23 to describe the human condition. We all do this, with money, success, comfort, and image.

But the line that carries the psalm is verse 8. “Yet he saved them for his name’s sake.” God’s rescue does not depend on Israel’s merit, since they did not have any. It rests on his own character and name. That is the foundation of grace.

The last verse in the section points to a mediator. “Moses, his chosen one, stood in the breach.” A breach is a gap in a wall, and a man standing in it takes the full force of the attack. God would have destroyed Israel, but Moses stepped between. It is a picture of what Christ will do on a much grander scale.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul uses the phrase of verse 20 in Romans 1:23, and in 1 Corinthians 10:1-13 he uses Israel's wilderness history as a warning and encouragement to the church. Hebrews 3:7-19 calls believers not to harden their hearts as Israel did. Ezekiel 22:30 describes God looking for someone to "stand in the breach" and finding no one. Jesus stands in that breach fully.

STEP 6

Application

Make a short list of what God has done for you in the past year. Put it somewhere you will see it. Forgetting is the first step toward drifting.

Confess honestly, as the psalmist does, using the word "we." Pray for your church and community, not only for yourself.

Ask yourself what you are tempted to exchange for the glory of God, and bring it to Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess the lesser things you have exchanged for God's glory.
- Thank him for saving you for his name's sake.
- Thank him for the one who stands in the breach for you.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Exodus 3:14 slowly, several times, and then try to say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"God said to Moses, I AM WHO I AM. And he said, Say this to the people of Israel: I AM has sent me to you."

EXODUS 3:14

REST

Meditation

Exodus 3:14 gives you a name to carry with you, and it is not an easy one. "I AM WHO I AM." It is the most compact statement about God in the Bible, and it has been a source of wonder for the people of God for three thousand years.

Begin with the simplicity of it. God does not say, "I am the powerful one," or "I am the king," or "I am the one who will save you." He says, "I AM." He is. He exists. He is the source of all that is, and he needs nothing. Before there was anything, there was God.

Notice who God says this to. It is not to philosophers or scholars. It is to a shepherd who is afraid, in the middle of a desert. The God who exists in himself, who does not depend on anything, has come to a nobody in a wilderness to say that he will rescue a nation of slaves. The greatest being in the universe is the one who sees the affliction of his people.

And notice the second half: “I AM has sent me to you.” The name is not just a statement about God’s nature. It is a promise to his people. He will be there. He will be what they need. “I will be with you,” he said to Moses in verse 12, and the name is the guarantee.

For the Christian, there is a final note. Jesus said, “Before Abraham was, I am” (John 8:58). The one who spoke from the bush became flesh and walked among us. Everything that is true of God’s name is true of Jesus.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began the book of Exodus. You read how a new king arose who did not know Joseph, how Israel was enslaved, and how two midwives saved the Hebrew boys. You watched Moses be born, hidden in a basket, raised in Pharaoh’s house, and driven into the wilderness. You stood with him at the burning bush and heard God reveal his name. You saw him offer every excuse and God answer each with himself. On the doctrinal day, you studied the existence and attributes of God, from his self-existence in the name I AM to his character of mercy and justice in Exodus 34. In Psalm 106, you read a confession of Israel’s early failures and heard the line that holds it together: God saved them for his name’s sake. The week taught that God sees, hears, and remembers, and that he comes down to rescue.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Moses had a list of excuses, and God answered each one with a promise of his own presence. What is your list of excuses for something God has asked of you? Write them down, and next to each one write a promise from God.

How does Jesus’ statement, “Before Abraham was, I am,” change the way you read the burning bush? What does it mean to you that the God of Exodus 3 has come in the flesh?

Which part of the description in Exodus 34:6-7 do you find hardest to believe about God? Why? How would your life change if you believed it more fully?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he sees, hears, and knows.

Rest in who he is, and tell him what you are laying down this Sabbath.

Thank him for Jesus, in whom his name is fulfilled.

DAY 99 · WEEK 15

Exodus 5:1-7:25

Pharaoh hardens; Moses discouraged; the plagues begin

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 65 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 5:1-7:25. Moses and Aaron go to Pharaoh for the first time, and everything gets worse. Read it as the story of a man who obeys God and sees the result make his people's lives harder, and notice how God responds to Moses' discouragement.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

You have just left Moses at the burning bush with a commission and a promise. Now he goes to Egypt and puts it to the test. The next several chapters tell the story of the ten plagues, which are the most dramatic series of events in the Old Testament. They are a contest between the LORD and the greatest empire on earth. But before the plagues begin, there is a long scene of disappointment. The first attempt to free Israel does not work. In the process, the question the whole book turns on is made clear: who is the LORD, and will Pharaoh obey him?

STEP 3

Observation

1. Moses and Aaron say to Pharaoh, "Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, Let my people go, that they may hold a feast to me in the wilderness" (5:1).
2. Pharaoh answers, "Who is the LORD, that I should obey his voice and let Israel go? I do not know the LORD, and moreover, I will not let Israel go" (5:2).
3. Pharaoh makes the labor harder by requiring bricks without straw (5:6-9).
4. The Israelite foremen blame Moses: "You have made us stink before Pharaoh" (5:21).
5. Moses complains to God: "O Lord, why have you done evil to this people? Why did you ever send me?" (5:22).

6. God answers, “Now you shall see what I will do to Pharaoh” (6:1), and he says again, “I am the LORD” (6:2, 6, 7, 8).
7. God makes a series of promises: “I will bring you out…I will deliver you…I will redeem you…I will take you to be my people, and I will be your God” (6:6-7).
8. But the people “did not listen to Moses, because of their broken spirit and harsh slavery” (6:9). Moses says he has “uncircumcised lips” (6:12).
9. God says, “I have made you like God to Pharaoh, and your brother Aaron shall be your prophet” (7:1). He says, “I will harden Pharaoh’s heart” (7:3).
10. Aaron’s staff becomes a serpent and swallows the magicians’ serpents (7:10-12). The Nile is turned to blood (7:14-25).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Pharaoh’s first question is the right one. “Who is the LORD?” He does not know, and he will find out. The whole sequence of plagues is the answer. God says over and over that the purpose is that Egypt and Israel will know that he is the LORD (7:5). It is a knowledge that comes through action.

The worsening of Israel’s conditions is a test of Moses’ faith, and it is a test for every believer. Often, when you try to obey God, things get harder before they get better. The people blame Moses. Moses blames God. This is one of the more honest scenes in the Bible. Moses does not hide what he feels. He says, “Why did you ever send me?” And God does not rebuke him. He answers with a restatement of who he is and what he will do.

God’s answer in chapter 6 is the heart of the passage. Listen to the four, or five, “I will” statements: bring out, deliver, redeem, take, and later in verse 8, bring in. This is a gospel in miniature. He will free them from the burden, rescue them from slavery, and redeem them with an outstretched arm. And then comes the covenant goal: “I will take you to be my people, and I will be your God.” The purpose of redemption is relationship. They are rescued in order to belong.

The people cannot hear it. Their spirit is broken. This is another honest detail. Some pain makes it hard to receive good news. God does not scold them for it. He continues to act.

The hardening of Pharaoh is a topic that deserves care. The text speaks of it in several ways. God says he will harden Pharaoh’s heart (4:21; 7:3). Pharaoh’s heart is also described as hardened without any stated agent (7:13), and later Pharaoh hardens his own heart (8:15, 32). The Bible holds these together: God is sovereign over Pharaoh’s will, and Pharaoh is responsible for his choices. Paul will take this up in Romans 9:17-18, saying that God raised up Pharaoh to show his power. You may find this hard. It is worth sitting with the discomfort rather than explaining it away. The first thing to see is that God's purpose is to reveal who he is, and the second is that Pharaoh was not coerced into evil. He was an oppressor who did what he wanted.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus says to his disciples that "in the world you will have tribulation," and then, "take heart; I have overcome the world" (John 16:33). The four "I will" promises of 6:6-7 are echoed in Jesus' words in John 10:28 and in Titus 2:14, where he "gave himself for us to redeem us from all lawlessness and to purify for himself a people for his own possession." Romans 9:14-24 takes up the question of Pharaoh's hardening.

STEP 6

Application

Are you discouraged because obeying God made things harder? Take Moses' complaint to God, as he did. He can bear it.

Memorize Exodus 6:6-7. Use the promises as your own. Notice that they are about God's action, not yours.

If someone in your life is too broken to hear good news, pray for them and keep showing them love.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Bring your complaint about how hard things are to God, honestly.
- Ask him to remind you who he is.
- Ask for the courage to keep going.

EXODUS 12:13

DAY 100 · WEEK 15

Exodus 8:1-9:35

Plagues of frogs, gnats, flies, livestock, and boils

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 65 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 8:1-9:35. These chapters contain the plagues of frogs, gnats, flies, the death of livestock, boils, and hail. Do not rush. Look for the phrase “that you may know,” and watch what happens each time Pharaoh seems to give in.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The plagues are not random disasters. Each one is aimed at something the Egyptians trusted, such as the Nile, the frogs associated with the goddess Heqet, the animals associated with their religion, and the sky. God says that through the plagues he will execute “judgments” on all the gods of Egypt (Exodus 12:12). They are a contest between the LORD and the powers that seemed to rule Egypt. They are also a mercy, because they give Pharaoh repeated chances to let Israel go.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Moses says, “Let my people go, that they may serve me” (8:1). The plague of frogs fills the land, and Pharaoh asks Moses to pray to the LORD to remove it (8:8).
2. When the frogs die, Pharaoh “hardened his heart and would not listen to them” (8:15).
3. The magicians cannot produce gnats and say to Pharaoh, “This is the finger of God” (8:19).
4. With the flies, God says, “I will set apart the land of Goshen…that you may know that I am the LORD in the midst of the earth” (8:22).
5. The livestock of Egypt die, but not one of the animals of Israel (9:6).

6. The boils afflict the magicians themselves, so that they "could not stand before Moses" (9:11). "The LORD hardened the heart of Pharaoh" (9:12).
7. God says to Pharaoh, "For this purpose I have raised you up, to show you my power, so that my name may be proclaimed in all the earth" (9:16).
8. Before the hail, God offers a chance to shelter the servants and livestock. Some Egyptians who feared the word of the LORD brought them in (9:19-21).
9. Pharaoh says, "I have sinned this time; the LORD is in the right, and I and my people are in the wrong" (9:27), and then he sins again (9:34-35).

STEP 4

Interpretation

There is a pattern in the plagues, and it is worth noticing. Pharaoh is confronted. He stalls, then gives way under pressure, and then goes back on his promise when the pressure is lifted. This is a picture of a heart that is not changed by judgment alone. Frogs, gnats, flies, and boils make him say what he must, but nothing in him changes. This is a warning to every one of us that pain alone does not make a person repent. You need a new heart.

The magicians are a surprising feature of the story. At first they copy Moses' signs. But with the gnats, they fail and confess, "This is the finger of God." Even Pharaoh's own advisers have to admit that something beyond them is at work. And by the sixth plague they cannot even stand. The power of the Egyptian gods is shown to be empty.

God makes a distinction between Egypt and Israel. In the land of Goshen there are no flies, and Israel's livestock do not die. The plagues are not simple natural disasters. They are directed, and God protects his own. This is the theme of redemption, to which the narrative keeps returning: God sets his people apart.

The most important statement in these chapters comes in 9:16. "For this purpose I have raised you up, to show you my power, so that my name may be proclaimed in all the earth." God's goal is bigger than freeing Israel. He wants all the world to know who he is. You can see that the exodus is always for the sake of his name, and that this is a good thing. The best thing that could happen to any person is to know the true God.

Then there is the hail. God gives a warning to those who will hear. Some Egyptians, "who feared the word of the LORD," gather their servants and flocks indoors. This is a small piece of mercy in the middle of judgment: even in Egypt, anyone who trusted God's word was spared. It is a hint of what the book will say later, that foreigners could join Israel (12:38).

Pharaoh's confession in 9:27 is the most striking detail. He says all the right words: "I have sinned. The LORD is in the right." But by verse 34 he is sinning again. A confession without repentance is just speech. Compare it to Psalm 106, where Israel also sang God's praise and soon forgot.

STEP 5

Connection

Revelation 16 describes the bowls of judgment in language drawn from these plagues. Romans 9:17 quotes Exodus 9:16. Jesus said that "everyone to whom much was given, of him much will be required" (Luke 12:48). Jesus also distinguishes true repentance from regret in the parable of the two sons (Matthew 21:28-32) and in Paul's words about "godly grief" in 2 Corinthians 7:10.

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself if there is a pattern in your life of making promises to God under pressure and forgetting them afterward. Bring it to him honestly.

If you are tempted to think that God's judgments are arbitrary, notice how patient he is in these chapters. He gives repeated warnings and offers shelter.

Remember that God sets his people apart. Thank him for the ways he has marked you as his own.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God for his patience with those who resist him, and for the mercy in his warnings.

Ask him for a heart that truly repents, not just a mouth that says so.

Thank him for setting his people apart.

EXODUS 12:13

DAY 101 · WEEK 15

Exodus 10:1-11:10

Locusts, darkness, and the warning of the firstborn

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 39 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 10:1-11:10. These chapters contain the plagues of locusts and darkness, and the announcement of the last plague. Read them as the climax of the confrontation, and notice how Pharaoh's bargaining shows what his heart is really protecting.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Seven plagues have passed. Egypt is ruined: the Nile is blood, the land is covered in frogs, flies, and dead animals, and its crops have been shattered by hail. Pharaoh's own officials say, "Do you not yet understand that Egypt is destroyed?" (10:7). Still he refuses. The last three plagues are the most terrible, and they lead up to the event that will define Israel's identity for the rest of its history.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Moses to go to Pharaoh, "that I may show these signs of mine among them, and that you may tell in the hearing of your son and of your grandson how I have dealt harshly with the Egyptians" (10:1-2).
2. Pharaoh's servants beg, "How long shall this man be a snare to us? Let the men go, that they may serve the LORD their God" (10:7).
3. Pharaoh bargains: only the men may go (10:11). The locusts eat everything that is left after the hail (10:12-15).
4. After the locusts, Pharaoh says, "I have sinned against the LORD your God, and against you" (10:16), and then hardens his heart again.
5. The ninth plague is "a darkness to be felt" that lasts three days, but "all the people of Israel had light where they lived" (10:21-23).

6. Pharaoh offers another bargain: the people may go, but their flocks and herds must stay. Moses answers, "Not a hoof shall be left behind" (10:24-26).
7. Pharaoh says, "Get away from me; take care never to see my face again" (10:28). Moses replies, "You have spoken rightly. I will not see your face again" (10:29).
8. God announces the last plague: "About midnight I will go out in the midst of Egypt, and every firstborn in the land of Egypt shall die" (11:4-5).
9. "Not a dog shall growl against any of the people of Israel...that you may know that the LORD makes a distinction between Egypt and Israel" (11:7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Pharaoh's bargains are worth studying, because people still bargain with God in the same ways. First he says, "Go and sacrifice here in the land." That is, serve God, but on my terms and in my territory. Then he says, "Only the men may go." That is, serve God, but leave your children and keep your families under my control. Then, "Go, but leave your flocks." That is, serve God, but keep what you own under my power. Each time Moses refuses. "Not a hoof shall be left behind." Everything belongs to God, and nothing can be held back.

The pattern is not about distant history. Many people want a version of faith that costs them nothing: Christianity at church but not at home, in the heart but not in the wallet, for the individual but not for the family. Moses' answer is that God asks for the whole thing.

The plague of darkness is the strangest. It is described as a "darkness to be felt." It was so thick that people did not see one another or rise from their places for three days. This is a reversal of the first day of creation, when God said, "Let there be light." The land of Egypt is un-created. It is also a picture of what it means to live without God: a darkness that you can feel. And in Goshen, the people of God had light. That is a vivid image of the difference God makes.

Pharaoh's final words to Moses are chilling. "Take care never to see my face again." He sends away the one who has brought him warnings and a way out. The man who says no to God's messenger has sealed his own fate. Moses' answer, "You have spoken rightly," is calm. The time for negotiation is over.

The last plague is announced in 11:4-8, and the tone is grave. Moses speaks "in hot anger" (11:8), but the message is clear and sorrowful: there will be a great cry throughout Egypt such as never was before. God is not delighting in this. It is a judgment on a nation that has killed Israel's sons (Exodus 1:22) and refused to repent. And in the middle of the announcement is a promise: "The LORD makes a distinction between Egypt and Israel." You will see tomorrow how.

STEP 5

Connection

The darkness of the ninth plague has parallels in the darkness at the cross (Matthew 27:45), when Jesus, the light of the world, bore God's judgment. Paul writes in Colossians 1:13 that God "has delivered us from the domain of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of his beloved Son." John 1:5 says, "The light shines in the darkness, and the darkness has not overcome it." Luke 14:33 says, "Any one of you who does not renounce all that he has cannot be my disciple."

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself where you are bargaining with God. Which parts of your life are you trying to keep out of his reach? It may be your time, your money, your family, or a relationship. Bring that area to him this week.

Thank God that you have light. If you know someone who is in darkness, pray for them, and look for a chance to speak of Christ.

Pray for those who do not know God and who are hardening themselves against him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have bargained with God or held something back.
- Ask him to take your whole self, your family, and your possessions.
- Thank him for bringing you out of darkness into his light.

EXODUS 12:13

DAY 102 · WEEK 15

Exodus 12:1-13:16

The Passover instituted, the lamb and the blood

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 67 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 12:1-13:16. This is the central chapter of the Old Testament's story of redemption. Read it slowly and with great care. Mark each instruction about the lamb, and notice what saves the people.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Everything in the book of Exodus has been leading to this night. God is about to strike Egypt with the last plague, and he gives Israel a way to be protected: the Passover. It is the foundational event of Israel's national life, and the Jewish people have kept the feast ever since. For Christians, it is the great shadow of the cross. Jesus died at Passover time, and he is called "our Passover lamb" (1 Corinthians 5:7). Understanding the Passover is the key to understanding what Jesus did.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "This month shall be for you the beginning of months. It shall be the first month of the year for you" (12:2).
2. Each household is to take a lamb "without blemish, a male a year old" (12:5).
3. The lamb is kept until the fourteenth day, and then "the whole assembly of the congregation of Israel shall kill their lambs at twilight" (12:6).
4. They are to take some of the blood "and put it on the two doorposts and the lintel of the houses" (12:7).
5. They are to eat the meat roasted, with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, "with your belt fastened, your sandals on your feet, and your staff in your hand" (12:8-11).

6. “It is the LORD’s Passover” (12:11).
7. God says, “The blood shall be a sign for you, on the houses where you are. And when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and no plague will befall you to destroy you” (12:13).
8. The feast of unleavened bread is to be kept as a memorial, and children are to be taught what it means (12:14-20, 26-27).
9. At midnight, the LORD struck down all the firstborn in Egypt, and “there was a great cry in Egypt, for there was not a house where someone was not dead” (12:29-30).
10. Pharaoh calls for Moses and says, “Up, go out from among my people” (12:31). A “mixed multitude” goes up with Israel (12:38).
11. God commands that every firstborn male be consecrated to him, and that every firstborn son be redeemed (13:1-2, 13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Passover is a story about substitution. In every house in Egypt, the firstborn was under a sentence of death. The difference between Israel and Egypt was not that Israel was more righteous. The difference was that, in Israel’s homes, a lamb had died in place of the firstborn son. The blood on the doorpost was the sign that the death had already occurred. When God saw it, he passed over.

Look at the details. The lamb is “without blemish.” It is chosen on the tenth day and kept in the house for four days, long enough for the family to become attached to it. It is killed by the whole community. Its blood is applied to the door. The meat is eaten. Every part of the ritual teaches something. The lamb is innocent. The death is public. The blood is a visible sign. And the family has to take it in.

Notice how little the people do. They do not fight, or earn their freedom. They do not even go out of the house. They shelter under the blood. This is why the New Testament uses the Passover to teach grace. We are saved not by what we do but by the blood of the Lamb applied to us.

The tone of the ritual is also important. They are to eat in haste, ready to leave. It is a night of judgment and of rescue. Salvation is not a calm event. But it is secure.

The Passover is also designed to be remembered. Three times in these chapters God tells the people to teach their children: “What do you mean by this service?” (12:26). The parents are to say, “It is the sacrifice of the LORD’s Passover, for he passed over the houses of the people of Israel in Egypt” (12:27). Redemption has to be told, again and again, to every generation.

Chapter 13 adds a second teaching: the firstborn belongs to God. Every firstborn son had to be redeemed, bought back, with the sacrifice of a lamb (13:13). A father would answer his son's question by saying, "By a strong hand the LORD brought us out of Egypt" (13:14). Redemption creates ownership. Those who have been bought belong to the one who bought them.

STEP 5

Connection

John the Baptist said of Jesus, "Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world!" (John 1:29). Jesus was crucified at Passover time, and John notes that "not one of his bones will be broken" (John 19:36, quoting Exodus 12:46). At the Last Supper, he took the Passover meal and gave it new meaning (Luke 22:14-20). Peter says we were ransomed "with the precious blood of Christ, like that of a lamb without blemish or spot" (1 Peter 1:18-19). Hebrews 11:28 says Moses kept the Passover "by faith."

STEP 6

Application

When you take the Lord's Supper, think of the Passover. You are not earning anything. You are receiving the benefits of a Lamb who died in your place.

Ask yourself if you are relying on the blood of Christ or on your own record. Say aloud, "When he sees the blood, he will pass over me."

Think about how you can tell the story of your redemption to a child or a friend this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for the blood of the Lamb, and say in your own words what it means that he passes over you.
- Ask him to help you tell the story to someone younger.
- Tell him you trust Christ and not yourself.

EXODUS 12:13

DAY 103 · WEEK 15

Exodus 13:17-14:31

The Red Sea crossing, redemption through water

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 53 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 13:17-14:31. This is the crossing of the Red Sea, the climax of the exodus. Read the story as a drama in three parts: Israel's fear, God's promise through Moses, and the crossing itself.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has left Egypt, with the bones of Joseph carried along as a sign of the promise (13:19). But the journey is not easy. God leads them by a longer route, and then into what looks like a trap, with the sea in front and Pharaoh's army behind. It is a test of whether they will trust the God who has just rescued them. Everything that follows in Israel's history, in the Psalms, and in the New Testament, looks back to this moment.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God did not lead them by the road through the land of the Philistines, "for God said, Lest the people change their minds when they see war and return to Egypt" (13:17).
2. "The LORD went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them along the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light" (13:21).
3. God tells Moses to camp by the sea, so that Pharaoh will think they are wandering confused. "And I will get glory over Pharaoh and all his host" (14:4).
4. Pharaoh changes his mind and pursues with six hundred chariots (14:5-9).
5. The people cry out in fear and say to Moses, "Is it because there were no graves in Egypt that you have taken us away to die in the wilderness?" (14:11).

6. Moses answers, “Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the LORD, which he will work for you today...The LORD will fight for you, and you have only to be silent” (14:13-14).
7. The angel of God and the pillar of cloud move between Israel and the Egyptians, bringing darkness to one side and light to the other (14:19-20).
8. Moses stretches out his hand, a strong east wind drives the sea back, and “the people of Israel went into the midst of the sea on dry ground, the waters being a wall to them on their right hand and on their left” (14:21-22).
9. The waters return and cover the Egyptians. “Not one of them remained” (14:28).
10. “Thus the LORD saved Israel that day from the hand of the Egyptians...And the people feared the LORD, and they believed in the LORD and in his servant Moses” (14:30-31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to see is that God led them into the trap on purpose. This is not a case of bad navigation. God said, “I will get glory over Pharaoh.” The danger was real, and the people were right to be afraid. But the danger was part of God’s plan to show his power. This is a theme throughout Scripture: God sometimes brings his people to the end of their own resources so that his salvation will be clearly his.

Moses’ answer is the center of the passage, and one of the great statements of faith in the Bible. “Fear not, stand firm, and see the salvation of the LORD.” There are three commands: do not be afraid, stand still, and watch. This is not a call to passivity in everything, but in this moment there was nothing Israel could do. They were not going to fight their way out. The next line is the promise: “The LORD will fight for you, and you have only to be silent.” The deliverance would be entirely God’s work.

Then notice how God works. He did not remove the sea. He divided it. Israel walked through on dry ground with water on each side. The very thing that seemed to be their death, the sea, became their path. And the same sea became the Egyptians’ grave. The same event is salvation for one people and judgment for another.

The last verses tell you what the miracle accomplished in the hearts of the people. They “feared the LORD, and they believed in the LORD and in his servant Moses.” Redemption produced faith. We saw in Psalm 106 that the faith did not last, but at that moment it was real.

For the New Testament writers, the crossing of the sea is a picture of baptism. Paul says that "all were baptized into Moses in the cloud and in the sea" (1 Corinthians 10:2). Passing through the water means leaving the old master behind and belonging to a new leader. It also looks to the cross, where Christ, the greater Moses, passes through the waters of judgment so that his people can walk through on dry ground.

STEP 5

Connection

Isaiah 43:2 says, "When you pass through the waters, I will be with you." Paul compares the crossing to baptism in 1 Corinthians 10:1-2. Peter says that "baptism…now saves you" as an appeal to God for a good conscience (1 Peter 3:21), after speaking of the flood. Revelation 15:3 describes the saints singing "the song of Moses, the servant of God."

STEP 6

Application

Think of a place where you feel hemmed in, with the sea in front and an enemy behind. Say aloud, "The LORD will fight for you, and you have only to be silent."

Take a few minutes of true silence in prayer this week. Resist the urge to fix the situation, and watch for God's salvation.

Remember your baptism, if you have been baptized. If you have not, ask what it would mean to take that step.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you fear when you face a sea you cannot cross.
- Ask him to fight for you and to teach you to be still.
- Thank him for the salvation he worked in Christ.

EXODUS 12:13

DAY 104 · WEEK 15

Psalm 106:24-48

Israel's rebellion in the wilderness; God's mercy endures

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Psalm · 25 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 106:24-48. This is the second half of the confession psalm you began on Day 97. Read it as a story that moves from rebellion to rescue, and look for the verses that describe what God does when his people forget him.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

On Day 97, you read the first half of this psalm, which described Israel's failures at the Red Sea and at Horeb. Today you read the rest, which takes you through the wilderness, the entrance to the land, and the long years in Canaan. Because you have just read the crossing of the sea and the Passover, this psalm shows you what happens to a redeemed people who do not stay close to their Redeemer. It is a sober picture, and it ends with a plea.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Then they despised the pleasant land, having no faith in his promise" (v. 24). They "murmured in their tents" (v. 25).
2. God swore that he would cast them down in the wilderness (v. 26).
3. They yoked themselves to the Baal of Peor and ate sacrifices offered to the dead (v. 28).
4. Phinehas stood up and intervened, "and that was counted to him as righteousness from generation to generation forever" (vv. 30-31).
5. At the waters of Meribah, "it went ill with Moses on their account, for they made his spirit bitter, and he spoke rashly with his lips" (vv. 32-33).
6. They did not destroy the peoples as the LORD commanded, but "mingled with the nations and learned to do as they did" (vv. 34-35).

7. They sacrificed their sons and daughters to the demons (v. 37).
8. The LORD "was angry with his people, and he abhorred his heritage" (v. 40), and gave them into the hand of the nations.
9. "Nevertheless, he looked upon their distress, when he heard their cry. For their sake he remembered his covenant, and relented according to the abundance of his steadfast love" (vv. 44-45).
10. "Save us, O LORD our God, and gather us from among the nations, that we may give thanks to your holy name and glory in your praise" (v. 47).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The second half of this psalm is harder than the first. It spans many generations, and the failure is repeated. Each generation seems to start again. The sins are the same: unbelief, idolatry, and compromise. They do not trust God's promise of the land. They give themselves to other gods. They stop short of obedience and imitate the nations around them.

One phrase stands out: "They made his spirit bitter, and he spoke rashly with his lips." Even Moses, the faithful servant, is brought down by the people's sin. At Meribah, he struck the rock in anger, and because of it, was not allowed into the land (Numbers 20:1-13). This is a sad reminder that no human leader is perfect. Even the best of them fails. You need a greater Moses.

The story of Phinehas is one of those rare bright spots. His zeal turned away God's anger, and the psalm says that it was "counted to him as righteousness." The same phrase is used of Abraham in Genesis 15:6, and Paul uses it for the believer in Romans 4. The psalm presents righteousness as something credited. It is a theme that will return throughout the Bible.

The darkest verse is verse 37: they sacrificed their sons and daughters to demons. The people who had been rescued from Egypt, where Pharaoh murdered baby boys, now did the same thing to their own children. This shows how deep sin goes. Rescue from slavery does not remove the heart's tendency to evil.

And yet the psalm does not end in despair. In verse 44, "Nevertheless." It is one of the great words in the Bible. "He looked upon their distress, when he heard their cry. For their sake he remembered his covenant." This is exactly what you read in Exodus 2:24. God hears, and remembers, and relents. The foundation is "the abundance of his steadfast love." The psalm ends with a prayer for a future rescue: "Save us, O LORD our God." This is the prayer that Israel will pray in exile, and the prayer that the church prays as we wait for the final salvation.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that “these things happened to them as an example, but they were written down for our instruction” (1 Corinthians 10:11). Hebrews 3 and 4 call believers not to fall as Israel did. Romans 4:3-5 quotes Genesis 15:6 on righteousness being credited. Jesus is the greater Moses, who is faithful over God’s house as a Son (Hebrews 3:5-6). The “Nevertheless” of verse 44 finds its fullest expression in Ephesians 2:4: “But God, being rich in mercy.”

STEP 6

Application

Be honest about where you tend to compromise. Is there a pattern of imitating the world around you? Bring it to God and ask for help.

Read Psalm 106:44-45 as a promise to yourself in your weakness. Write the word “Nevertheless” on a card.

Pray the last verse for the church, asking God to gather his scattered and discouraged people.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess the ways you see yourself in Israel’s drifting.
- Thank God for hearing and remembering his covenant.
- Ask him to gather his people and make them glad.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Exodus 12:13 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone you trust.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The blood shall be a sign for you, on the houses where you are. And when I see the blood, I will pass over you, and no plague will befall you to destroy you."

EXODUS 12:13

REST

Meditation

Exodus 12:13 is the gospel in one sentence. It was spoken on the night before the exodus, and it says everything about how God saves.

"The blood shall be a sign for you." The blood was a sign for the people inside the house, not for God. It was the thing that gave them confidence that the judgment would not touch them. They did not have to feel safe. They had a sign. When you are afraid, the promise is not that you will feel better, but that there is a sign: the blood.

"When I see the blood." It is God who sees the blood, and the sight of it is what determines what he does. Notice what is not said. God does not say, "When I see your goodness" or "When I see your repentance." He says, "When I see the blood." The ground of your safety is not what is in you but what is on the door. A lamb has died in your place.

“I will pass over you.” This is the great promise. Judgment is real, and it falls on Egypt. But those under the blood are safe. The word “pass over” is related to a Hebrew verb that means to hover protectively, like a bird over its nest (Isaiah 31:5). God does not just skip the house. He guards it.

“And no plague will befall you to destroy you.” The protection is complete.

For the Christian, the blood is the blood of Christ. “Since, therefore, we have now been justified by his blood, much more shall we be saved by him from the wrath of God” (Romans 5:9). There is no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus (Romans 8:1). Every time you doubt whether you are safe, return to this verse.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the story of the plagues and the exodus. You watched Moses go to Pharaoh and make things worse, and you heard God answer his complaint with the promise to bring out, deliver, redeem, and take. You read the plagues of frogs, gnats, flies, livestock, boils, and hail, and saw how Pharaoh gave way and hardened his heart again and again. You watched Pharaoh bargain, and Moses refuse to leave a hoof behind. You read the instructions for the Passover and heard God say, “When I see the blood, I will pass over you.” Then you walked through the Red Sea on dry ground and saw the waters close over Pharaoh’s army. In Psalm 106, you read a confession of Israel’s later unfaithfulness, and the one word that rescues the story: “Nevertheless.” The week taught that salvation is God’s work, secured by the blood of a substitute.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Pharaoh bargained with God, offering part but not all. What part of your life do you tend to hold back from God? What would it look like to say, “Not a hoof shall be left behind”?

How does the Passover lamb help you understand what Jesus did on the cross? Think about the details: without blemish, its blood applied, protection from judgment. What does it mean for you personally that Christ is your Passover lamb?

Moses told Israel at the sea, “The LORD will fight for you, and you have only to be silent.” What battle are you trying to fight on your own? What would it look like to be silent and let God fight?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that when he sees the blood, he passes over you.

Ask him to fight for you, and rest in him.

Tell him what you are tempted to trust apart from Christ.

DAY 106 · WEEK 16

Exodus 15:1-27

The song of Moses, redemption celebrated in worship

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 27 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 15:1-27. This is the first song in the Bible sung by the whole people of God. Read the first half aloud as a song of praise, and then read the second half as the first test after the song. Notice how quickly the singing is followed by complaining.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Red Sea is behind them, and the Egyptians are dead on the shore. For the first time in four hundred years, Israel is free. What does a free people do? They sing. Exodus 15 is the oldest extended poem in the Bible, and it is the model for the way that redemption is celebrated in worship. Moses and the people sing it, and Miriam leads the women in another song. It looks back at what God has done, and forward to what he will do. After the song comes the wilderness, and the first lesson in how fragile their praise can be.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I will sing to the LORD, for he has triumphed gloriously; the horse and his rider he has thrown into the sea" (v. 1).
2. "The LORD is my strength and my song, and he has become my salvation; this is my God, and I will praise him, my father's God, and I will exalt him" (v. 2).
3. "The LORD is a man of war; the LORD is his name" (v. 3).
4. "Who is like you, O LORD, among the gods? Who is like you, majestic in holiness, awesome in glorious deeds, doing wonders?" (v. 11).
5. "You have led in your steadfast love the people whom you have redeemed; you have guided them by your strength to your holy abode" (v. 13).

6. The nations will tremble (vv. 14-16), and God will plant his people "on your own mountain, the place, O LORD, which you have made for your abode" (v. 17).
7. "The LORD will reign forever and ever" (v. 18).
8. Miriam the prophetess takes a tambourine, and the women follow her with dancing, singing, "Sing to the LORD, for he has triumphed gloriously" (vv. 20-21).
9. After three days in the wilderness without water, they come to Marah, where the water is bitter, and the people grumble (vv. 22-24).
10. The LORD shows Moses a tree, which makes the water sweet. He tells Israel, "I am the LORD, your healer" (vv. 25-26). At Elim they find twelve springs and seventy palm trees (v. 27).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The song is organized in three movements. The first (vv. 1-5) is a retelling of the victory at the sea. The second (vv. 6-12) praises God's power and holiness. The third (vv. 13-18) looks forward to the journey to the land and God's eternal reign. It is a poem of memory and hope.

The central line is in verse 2: "The LORD is my strength and my song, and he has become my salvation." This verse will be quoted by Isaiah (12:2) and the Psalms (118:14). The word for "salvation" is yeshuah, the root of the name Jesus. The song is already pointing toward a greater salvation. Note too that the song is personal. "My strength...my God." The people have moved from asking Moses what he has done to them, to saying, "This is my God."

Verse 11 asks a rhetorical question that has an obvious answer: "Who is like you, O LORD, among the gods?" No one. The exodus is the demonstration that the God of Israel is not just a tribal deity but the Lord of the whole world. And he is "majestic in holiness." The song does not separate his power from his holiness. The God who defeats Pharaoh is the God whose character is pure.

The third movement is the one that people sometimes overlook. The song looks ahead: "You have led in your steadfast love the people whom you have redeemed." The tense is past, but the sentence is about the future, because the poet is so certain that God will finish what he has started that he speaks as though it is done. "You will bring them in and plant them." God's purpose is a place where he dwells with his people. The final line is a confession that carries the whole Bible forward: "The LORD will reign forever and ever."

Then comes the cold shower. In three days, the people are grumbling. The song has hardly died away. Marah, the bitter water, is the first test, and the people fail. God does not rebuke them but provides the tree. It is a lesson that he is the one who heals. The promise of verse 26 sets up the whole covenant: if they will listen to the LORD, they will not suffer as Egypt did. God's grace comes first, and then his commands.

STEP 5

Connection

Revelation 15:3 describes the redeemed standing by the sea of glass "and singing the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb." Isaiah 12:2 quotes verse 2. Paul sings the theme in Ephesians 5:19: "singing and making melody to the Lord with your heart." The tree that made the water sweet has been compared by many to the cross, which turns the bitterness of death into life.

STEP 6

Application

Sing this week. Even if you do not consider yourself a singer, find a hymn or song about what God has done for you, and sing it aloud.

Look at your own wilderness. Where is there a Marah, a place of bitterness? Ask God to show you the tree.

Notice the speed with which gratitude fades. Write down three things God has done for you recently, and thank him for them before the end of the day.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Sing or speak to God of what he has done for you, in your own words.

Ask him to heal what is bitter in your life.

Confess how quickly you forget, and ask him to teach you to sing.

EXODUS 15:2

DAY 107 · WEEK 16

Psalm 77

I cry aloud to God; I remember your wonders of old

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 77. It begins in distress and ends with a picture of the exodus. Read it aloud, and notice the exact moment when the psalmist turns from his own trouble to God's past deeds.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 77 was written by Asaph, who also wrote Psalm 73. Like that one, it is the prayer of a person whose faith is shaken. But where Psalm 73 turned on the sanctuary, this psalm turns on memory. The psalmist faces a time of such trouble that he cannot sleep. And then he remembers the exodus, which you have just read. The psalm shows how the story of redemption is meant to be used: as a resource for hard days.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I cry aloud to God, aloud to God, and he will hear me" (v. 1).
2. "In the day of my trouble I seek the Lord; in the night my hand is stretched out without wearying; my soul refuses to be comforted" (v. 2).
3. "When I remember God, I am distressed; when I meditate, my spirit faints" (v. 3).
4. "You hold my eyelids open; I am so troubled that I cannot speak" (v. 4).
5. He asks a series of questions: "Will the Lord spurn forever…? Has his steadfast love forever ceased? Has God forgotten to be gracious?" (vv. 7-9).
6. Then, "I will appeal to this, to the years of the right hand of the Most High" (v. 10).
7. "I will remember the deeds of the LORD; yes, I will remember your wonders of old" (v. 11).

8. “Your way, O God, is holy. What god is great like our God? You are the God who works wonders” (vv. 13-14).

9. “With your arm you redeemed your people, the children of Jacob and Joseph” (v. 15).

10. “Your way was through the sea, your path through the great waters; yet your footprints were unseen” (v. 19). “You led your people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron” (v. 20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first nine verses of this psalm are a portrait of spiritual distress, and it is worth noticing what is unusual about it. “When I remember God, I am distressed.” You might expect that remembering God would be comforting. Here it is painful, because the psalmist remembers what God has been, and compares it to what he feels now. It is the distress of someone who believes in a good God and cannot reconcile that with his experience.

The questions of verses 7 to 9 are the real question at the heart of the psalm. Will the Lord reject forever? Has his steadfast love ceased? Has he forgotten? Each question is a way of asking whether the covenant is still good. And the psalmist does not answer them right away.

The turn comes in verse 10. “Then I said, I will appeal to this.” The Hebrew of this verse is difficult, and translations vary, but the sense is that the psalmist makes a decision. He will stop focusing on his feelings, and he will recall what God has done. “I will remember the deeds of the LORD.” This is a deliberate act of the will. He does not wait to feel like remembering.

What does he remember? The exodus. Verses 16 to 20 are a lyrical retelling of the crossing of the sea. The waters trembled. The depths shook. The clouds poured out water. God’s arrows and thunder flashed. The picture is of a storm, and God is at the center of it. And then the line that is the most striking of all: “Your way was through the sea…yet your footprints were unseen.” God’s way was through the sea, but you could not see his tracks. This is a profound description of providence. God was at work, with absolute power, but invisibly. There were no footprints.

That is the answer to the psalmist’s problem. His circumstances do not show God’s footprints, but that does not mean that God is not at work. The exodus proved that God can lead his people through impossible places without leaving a visible trace. And the psalm ends with the quiet image of a shepherd: “You led your people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron.” He leads through human hands, and he leads like a shepherd.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul writes in Romans 11:33 about God's "paths beyond tracing out." Jesus asked his disciples to remember the feeding of the five thousand when they worried about bread (Mark 8:17-21). At the Lord's Supper, Jesus told his followers, "Do this in remembrance of me" (Luke 22:19). Psalm 77's pattern, of distress, then deliberate remembering, then worship, is also the pattern in Psalm 42 and Lamentations 3.

STEP 6

Application

When your feelings are overwhelming, remember on purpose. Write out a list of the deeds of the LORD in your life, and in the Bible. Read it aloud.

Think about a time you could not see God's footprints, and later saw that he had been working. Tell someone about it.

Take the Lord's Supper as an act of remembering, not only as a ritual.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Cry out to God, and tell him where your soul refuses to be comforted.
- Remember aloud a deed of God that you can hold on to.
- Thank him that he leads you even when you cannot see his footprints.

EXODUS 15:2

DAY 108 · WEEK 16

Psalm 114

When Israel went out of Egypt, the sea fled

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 114. It has only eight verses, and it is one of the most compressed poems in the Psalter. Read it twice, once as a celebration of the exodus and once as a call to tremble before God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the third psalm in a row that looks back at the exodus. Psalm 106 was a confession, Psalm 77 was a memory in distress, and Psalm 114 is a burst of joy. It is part of the "Egyptian Hallel," Psalms 113 to 118, which Jewish families have sung at the Passover meal for centuries. It was probably among the songs that Jesus and his disciples sang after the Last Supper (Mark 14:26). In just a few lines, it tells the whole story of redemption through the language of nature responding to God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "When Israel went out from Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of strange language" (v. 1).
2. "Judah became his sanctuary, Israel his dominion" (v. 2).
3. "The sea looked and fled; Jordan turned back" (v. 3).
4. "The mountains skipped like rams, the hills like lambs" (v. 4).
5. The psalmist asks the sea, the Jordan, and the mountains what is wrong with them (vv. 5-6).
6. "Tremble, O earth, at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob" (v. 7).

7. “Who turns the rock into a pool of water, the flint into a spring of water” (v. 8).

8. The psalm has two halves: verses 1 to 4 describe what happened, and verses 5 to 8 call the earth to respond.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm does something unusual. It tells the story of the exodus without ever naming God until verse 7. The whole description is of Israel and the world’s reaction. The sea flees. The river turns back. The mountains leap. The poet leaves God offstage in order to make you feel his presence, like seeing the effect of a hurricane without the storm.

Verse 2 contains the heart of the exodus: “Judah became his sanctuary, Israel his dominion.” God did not just free Israel. He claimed them. They were redeemed to be his dwelling place and his kingdom. This is the purpose of the exodus: not just freedom from but freedom for. It is the same as the promise in Exodus 6:7: “I will take you to be my people, and I will be your God.”

The questions of verses 5 and 6 are a bit of poetic humor. The poet asks the sea, “What is wrong with you?” The answer is not stated, but it is obvious: the Lord is here. Creation is not a neutral stage. It is a servant of God, and when he moves, it responds. The sea and the river, which seemed so powerful to ancient people, flee at his command.

The last verse is the most wonderful. After the earth trembles, the God who made it “turns the rock into a pool of water.” He is not only the one who shakes mountains. He is also the one who turns hard stone into fresh water for thirsty people. The God of power is also the God of provision, and you will see this very story in tomorrow’s reading at Massah and Meribah. The same hand does both.

The progression of the psalm is worth noticing. It begins with a historic event. It moves to the response of nature. And it ends with a command to the whole earth to tremble before the presence of the Lord. This is what the exodus is meant to do. It is not just a story about the past. It is a call to every creature to recognize who God is.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul writes that Christ is “the rock” that followed Israel (1 Corinthians 10:4). Jesus said that he is the source of “living water” (John 4:14; 7:37-38). At Jesus’ death, the earth shook and the rocks were split (Matthew 27:51), and creation responded again to its Lord. Isaiah 44:3 and 48:21 also describe God providing water from the rock.

STEP 6

Application

Spend a few minutes outside this week, and notice the creation around you as a servant of God. Thank him for the rain, the rivers, and the hills.

Ask yourself if you tremble before the Lord, or if you have grown casual. Ask him to restore a healthy sense of awe.

Thank Jesus for being the rock from which living water flows.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tremble and rejoice before God, as the earth does.

Thank him for Jesus, who gives living water.

Tell him what you want to bring out of "Egypt" in your own life.

EXODUS 15:2

DAY 109 · WEEK 16

Exodus 16:1-18:27

Manna, quail, water from the rock, God provides

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 16:1-18:27. These chapters take Israel from the Red Sea toward Sinai. Read them as three tests: hunger in chapter 16, thirst and war in chapter 17, and leadership in chapter 18. Watch for the way God provides each time.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel is now six weeks out of Egypt, and the food they carried is gone. The wilderness is not a good place to feed millions of people. The next three chapters show what the first stages of life with God are like, and they are not easy. The people grumble. God answers with generosity. This is a school of dependence, and the lesson is that the God who redeemed them is the God who will provide for them every day.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The people complain: “Would that we had died by the hand of the LORD in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the meat pots and ate bread to the full” (16:3).
2. God says, “Behold, I am about to rain bread from heaven for you” (16:4), and it is to test whether they will walk in his law.
3. In the morning, there is a fine, flake-like thing on the ground. They say, “What is it?” and Moses answers, “It is the bread that the LORD has given you to eat” (16:14-15). They call it manna.
4. Each person gathers as much as they need, “and whoever gathered much had nothing left over, and whoever gathered little had no lack” (16:18).
5. Those who keep it overnight find it full of worms and foul, except on the sixth day, when a double portion is given for the Sabbath (16:19-26).

6. At Massah and Meribah, the people quarrel with Moses for water. They ask, "Is the LORD among us or not?" (17:7).
7. God tells Moses to strike the rock at Horeb, and water comes out (17:5-6).
8. Amalek attacks. Joshua fights, and as long as Moses holds up his hands, Israel prevails, with Aaron and Hur holding them up (17:8-13).
9. Moses builds an altar and calls it "The LORD Is My Banner" (17:15).
10. Moses' father-in-law, Jethro, visits, and says, "Now I know that the LORD is greater than all gods" (18:11). He advises Moses to appoint judges to share the work (18:13-27).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to see is how quickly the people go from song to complaint. It has been less than two months since they sang at the Red Sea. Now they say they wish they had died in Egypt. It is a ridiculous and also very human response. When life is hard, we tend to remember the past through rose-colored glasses. They forget the slavery and remember the meat pots.

God's response is gracious. He does not strike them down. He gives them bread from heaven. But he adds an important detail: it is a test. "That I may test them, whether they will walk in my law or not." The test is about daily dependence. They are to gather only what they need for the day. If they try to store it up, it spoils. The only exception is the sixth day, when they receive a double portion. This teaches them two lessons at once: trust God for tomorrow, and rest on the Sabbath. It also shows the connection between provision and rest, a link between the gift of food and the gift of the Sabbath that anticipates the commandments to come.

Moses later explains the purpose: "Man does not live by bread alone, but man lives by every word that comes from the mouth of the LORD" (Deuteronomy 8:3). The manna was a daily reminder that life comes from God's mouth.

At Massah and Meribah, the question is sharper: "Is the LORD among us or not?" It is the question that haunts the whole wilderness, and God answers it by giving water from the rock. The rock is struck once, and life flows from it.

The battle with Amalek is the first attack on Israel after the exodus, and the posture of Moses is the point. He stands with his hands raised, and when they fall, Israel loses. He needs help. Aaron and Hur support him. It is a picture of intercession, and the picture of a community that holds up its leaders. The victory is the LORD's, not Joshua's. That is why Moses names the altar, "The LORD is my banner."

Jethro's advice shows that God also works through ordinary wisdom. Moses is wearing himself out, and a foreign priest points out that the work must be shared. It is a reminder that good leadership means delegation and that humility is willing to receive counsel.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus says, "I am the bread of life" (John 6:35), and he contrasts himself with the manna: "Your fathers ate the manna in the wilderness, and they died. This is the bread that comes down from heaven, so that one may eat of it and not die" (John 6:49-50). Paul says the rock was Christ (1 Corinthians 10:4). Jesus teaches us to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread" (Matthew 6:11). Hebrews 7:25 says Christ "always lives to make intercession" for his people.

STEP 6

Application

Pray for daily bread, and practice depending on God for each day. Resist the urge to store up anxiety about the future.

When you find yourself asking, "Is the LORD among us or not?", answer with what you know of him.

Ask who is holding up your hands, and whose hands you could hold up. Make a plan to encourage a pastor or a leader this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God for your daily bread, and tell him what worries you about tomorrow.
- Thank him for Jesus, the bread of life.
- Ask him to teach you to depend on him.

EXODUS 15:2

DAY 110 · WEEK 16

Exodus 19:1-20:26

Sinai; the Ten Commandments, law after redemption

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 43 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 19:1-20:26. This is Mount Sinai, the giving of the Ten Commandments. Pay close attention to the order: first God describes what he has done, then he describes who they are, and only then does he give the commandments.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Three months after leaving Egypt, Israel arrives at Mount Sinai. It is the turning point of the whole book. Everything before this point was rescue. Everything after is covenant, the formal relationship between God and Israel. The next several chapters are among the most important in the Old Testament, because they set out the terms of the Mosaic covenant. At the center is the Decalogue, the Ten Commandments. This is the day to remember that God redeems before he commands.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God says through Moses, “You yourselves have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I bore you on eagles” wings and brought you to myself’ (19:4).
2. “Now therefore, if you will indeed obey my voice and keep my covenant, you shall be my treasured possession among all peoples, for all the earth is mine” (19:5).
3. “And you shall be to me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation” (19:6).
4. The people answer together, “All that the LORD has spoken we will do” (19:8).
5. The people are consecrated, and boundaries are set around the mountain (19:10-13).
6. On the third day, there is thunder and lightning, a thick cloud, and a loud trumpet blast. “Mount Sinai was wrapped in smoke because the LORD had descended on it in fire”

(19:16-18).

7. God speaks: "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery" (20:2).

8. The commandments: no other gods; no carved images; do not take the LORD's name in vain; remember the Sabbath; honor your father and mother; do not murder, commit adultery, steal, bear false witness, or covet (20:3-17).

9. The people tremble and say to Moses, "You speak to us, and we will hear; but do not let God speak to us, lest we die" (20:19).

10. Moses says, "Do not fear, for God has come to test you, that the fear of him may be before you, that you may not sin" (20:20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Look at the order. In chapter 19, before a single commandment is given, God reminds Israel of what he has done: "You have seen…how I bore you on eagles' wings and brought you to myself.' The same pattern is in 20:2. The commandments begin with a statement of redemption, "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery." This is the key to the entire law. It is not a ladder by which slaves climb to freedom. It is the way of life for people who have already been freed. This is the pattern of grace establishing law, and it is the theme of the unit.

God's description of Israel in 19:5-6 is breathtaking. "My treasured possession." "A kingdom of priests and a holy nation." They are chosen out of all the peoples, set apart, and given a mission. They are to be priests, mediating between God and the nations. The New Testament will apply this same language to the church (1 Peter 2:9).

The people respond with eagerness: "All that the LORD has spoken we will do." It is a sincere answer, and it is a disastrously overconfident one. They have not yet understood what they promised. Within forty days they will be dancing around a golden calf. It is one of the key tragedies of the Old Testament: the people said yes without understanding the cost.

The scene at the mountain is meant to communicate holiness. The boundaries, the fire, the smoke, the thunder, and the trumpet all say the same thing: God is not safe. The people are frightened, and rightly so. Their request that Moses speak for them is a request for a mediator. God approves it in Deuteronomy 18:17. A mediator will stand between them and the holy God. This points forward to Christ.

The Ten Commandments themselves are a summary of what it means to love God and love your neighbor. The first four concern God: his exclusive worship, his image, his name, and his day. The last six concern people: family, life, marriage, property, truth, and the heart's desire. The tenth, "You shall not covet," is the one that goes deepest, because it is about what the heart wants, and no human court can enforce it.

Moses' last word at the end of the chapter is a paradox. "Do not fear...that the fear of him may be before you." There is a fear that is terror, and a fear that is reverence. God does not want his people to cower. He wants them to stand in awe.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus summarized the law as love for God and love for neighbor (Matthew 22:37-40). Hebrews 12:18-24 contrasts Mount Sinai, the mountain of fear, with Mount Zion, where we come to "Jesus, the mediator of a new covenant." Peter calls the church "a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for his own possession" (1 Peter 2:9). Paul says that the law was "added because of transgressions" (Galatians 3:19), pointing to Christ.

STEP 6

Application

Say the Ten Commandments aloud, or read them slowly, and ask which one most clearly shows your need of grace. Do not rush through this step.

Notice that the first words are not "You shall" but "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out." Receive that sentence as a statement about you if you are in Christ.

Think about how you tend to say "all that the LORD has spoken we will do" without counting the cost. Ask God for a humble and honest heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he redeems before he commands.

Tell him where you find his commands hard.

Thank Jesus for keeping the law you could not.

DAY 111 · WEEK 16

Exodus 20:1-17; Matthew 5:17-48; Romans 13:8-10

The Moral Law and the Christian

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 20:1-17, Matthew 5:17-48, and Romans 13:8-10. The first is the Ten Commandments, the second is Jesus' teaching about the law in the Sermon on the Mount, and the third is Paul's summary of the law as love. Read them in order, and ask how each one relates to the others.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the second doctrinal pause in Unit 5, and it raises one of the most important questions in the Christian life: what is the place of the law for someone who is saved by grace? Christians have debated this for two thousand years. Some say that Christ has abolished the law. Others say that it applies to us just as it did to Israel. The answer, as usual, is in between, and it takes careful reading. You are not under the law as a way of earning salvation, and yet the law still matters. This day will help you see how.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The Ten Commandments begin with grace: "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt" (Exodus 20:2).
2. Jesus says, "Do not think that I have come to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I have not come to abolish them but to fulfill them" (Matthew 5:17).
3. "Until heaven and earth pass away, not an iota or a dot will pass from the Law until all is accomplished" (5:18).
4. Jesus teaches six times, "You have heard that it was said…But I say to you" (5:21, 27, 31, 33, 38, 43).

5. On murder: “Everyone who is angry with his brother will be liable to judgment” (5:22). On adultery: “Everyone who looks at a woman with lustful intent has already committed adultery with her in his heart” (5:28).
6. He ends: “You therefore must be perfect, as your heavenly Father is perfect” (5:48).
7. Paul writes, “Owe no one anything, except to love each other, for the one who loves another has fulfilled the law” (Romans 13:8).
8. The commandments “are summed up in this word: You shall love your neighbor as yourself” (13:9). “Love is the fulfilling of the law” (13:10).

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

Christians have long spoken of three uses of the law, a framework that goes back to the Reformation. The first use is civil or political. The law restrains evil in society by setting boundaries and threatening punishment. Paul says that the law is “not laid down for the just but for the lawless and disobedient” (1 Timothy 1:9). The second use is pedagogical, or evangelical. The law shows us our sin and drives us to Christ. Paul writes, “Through the law comes knowledge of sin” (Romans 3:20), and “the law was our guardian until Christ came, in order that we might be justified by faith” (Galatians 3:24). The third use is for believers: the law shows what a life that pleases God looks like. It guides the redeemed to live as the redeemed.

You can see all three at work in Exodus 19 and 20. The commandments restrain a violent and idolatrous people. They also expose sin, as the people’s quick fall into idolatry proves. And they tell a freed people how to live as God’s people. All three uses are present.

How does this fit with the New Testament? Here the Bible’s own storyline matters. The law given at Sinai was a covenant with Israel, with its own sanctions, rituals, and civil laws. The New Testament teaches that Christians are no longer “under the law” in that sense (Romans 6:14; Galatians 3:25). The Mosaic covenant, as a covenant, has been fulfilled and replaced by the new covenant (Hebrews 8:13). This means that we do not keep the sacrificial system, the food laws, or the civil code of ancient Israel. They pointed to Christ, and he has accomplished what they signified.

But this does not mean that the moral will of God has changed. Jesus says that he came to fulfill the law, not to abolish it. He fulfilled it in several ways: by obeying it perfectly, by bearing its penalty, by fulfilling what it pointed to, and by revealing its deepest meaning. In the Sermon on the Mount, he shows that the commandments reach the heart: not just murder but anger, not just adultery but lust. The moral core of the Ten Commandments is reaffirmed in the New Testament, though now seen in the light of Christ, and nine of the ten are repeated explicitly (the fourth, about the Sabbath, is applied in a distinctive way through the rest we have in Christ, as in Hebrews 4:9-10 and Colossians 2:16-17).

The new covenant also gives something the old could not: a new heart. Jeremiah promised, "I will put my law within them, and I will write it on their hearts" (Jeremiah 31:33). This is the power of the Spirit. The law still shows us what God desires, but now the Spirit enables us to love it. Paul calls this "the law of Christ" (Galatians 6:2), the law of love as lived and taught by Jesus.

That is why Paul can say in Romans 13 that love fulfills the law. He does not mean that love replaces the commandments. He means that love is what the commandments were pointing to all along. If you love your neighbor, you will not murder, steal, or covet. The law is not a list of rules to be checked. It is a description of what love does.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Pay attention to what Jesus does in Matthew 5. He does not loosen the law. He tightens it. Anger is a kind of murder. Lust is a kind of adultery. This is not meant to crush his hearers into despair, though it does that for anyone honest. It is meant to show that the standard is perfection, "as your heavenly Father is perfect." No one can meet that standard. The law is a mirror that shows us what we are.

But this is where the good news comes in. If you cannot keep the law, you need someone who has. Jesus lived a life of perfect obedience, and he gives it to those who trust in him. In 2 Corinthians 5:21, Paul says, "For our sake he made him to be sin who knew no sin, so that in him we might become the righteousness of God." Our standing before God is based on his obedience, not ours.

And once you are in Christ, the law takes on a new character. It is no longer a threat. It is a guide. It describes the kind of life that the Spirit is producing in you. This is why Paul can say both that we are not under the law and that we fulfill its requirement (Romans 8:4). The one who is saved by grace wants to obey.

The structure of Exodus 20 should be remembered. Grace comes first: "I brought you out." Then law: "You shall." This is the order of the gospel. We obey because we have been saved, not in order to be saved.

STEP 5

Connection

Romans 8:3-4 says that “God has done what the law, weakened by the flesh, could not do…in order that the righteous requirement of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not according to the flesh but according to the Spirit.” Galatians 5:14 says, “For the whole law is fulfilled in one word: You shall love your neighbor as yourself.” James 2:8-12 calls it “the royal law” and “the law of liberty.” Hebrews 8:10 quotes Jeremiah 31 about the law written on the heart.

STEP 6

Application

Read the Sermon on the Mount slowly this week. Ask the Spirit to show you where your heart does not match the standard, and bring that to Christ.

Choose one commandment to meditate on, and ask how a person who loves God and neighbor would keep it in your situation this week.

Thank God for the new heart he has given you, and ask him to increase your delight in his commands.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that the law shows your need and drives you to Christ.
- Ask the Spirit to write his law on your heart.
- Ask for a love for God and neighbor that comes from the heart.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Exodus 15:2 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD is my strength and my song, and he has become my salvation; this is my God, and I will praise him, my father's God, and I will exalt him."

EXODUS 15:2

REST

Meditation

Exodus 15:2 is the first personal confession of faith in the Bible's story of redemption. It comes from the lips of a freed people standing on the shore of the sea, and it is as true today as it was then.

"The LORD is my strength." They have just seen what happened when they tried to rely on their own strength in Egypt: nothing. Now they have seen what he can do. Notice the possessive: not "the LORD is strong" but "the LORD is my strength." The strength of God becomes the strength of his people. When you are weak, as you often are, this is your resource.

"And my song." This is one of the loveliest phrases in Scripture. God is not only the source of strength but the reason for singing. A person who has been rescued does not just survive. They sing. If you find yourself without a song, one remedy is to remember what he has done.

“And he has become my salvation.” This is the center. The word is yeshuah, the root of the name Jesus. God himself is the salvation. He is not just the one who gives a rescue. He is the rescue. The same is true of Jesus: he does not merely point to a way of salvation. He is the way.

“This is my God, and I will praise him.” Faith is personal. It is not enough to know about God. The goal is to say “my God.” “My father’s God, and I will exalt him.” And faith is generational. The God of the fathers has become the God of the children.

For the Christian, the verse is a daily prayer. In Christ, the LORD is your strength, your song, and your salvation.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you saw the exodus completed and the journey to Sinai begun. You read Moses’ song, the first song of redemption, and then watched the people turn to complaining at Marah. You prayed three psalms about the exodus: Psalm 77, where the psalmist remembered the deeds of God in his distress, and Psalm 114, where the earth trembled before the God who brought Israel out. You followed Israel through hunger and the gift of manna, through thirst and water from the rock, and through the battle with Amalek, where Moses’ hands were held up by Aaron and Hur. Then you came to Sinai. You heard God describe Israel as a kingdom of priests and a holy nation, and you read the Ten Commandments, which begin with the words, “I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt.” On the doctrinal day, you considered the three uses of the law and how the law relates to the Christian. The week taught that God redeems before he commands, and that the law shows us our need for grace.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Moses sang, “The LORD is my strength and my song.” What is the song you are singing right now? If you are in a season without a song, what would it take to remember what God has done?

How does it change your reading of the Ten Commandments to know that they begin with “I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt”? How does Christ’s fulfillment of the law affect the way you obey it?

Think of a time when you asked, “Is the LORD among us or not?” How did God answer? Write about how he has shown himself to be present with you, and thank him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he redeems before he commands.

Thank Christ for fulfilling the law for you.

Rest in him, and ask him to teach you to love his commandments.

DAY 113 · WEEK 17

Exodus 21:1-22:31

The Book of the Covenant, case laws

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 55 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 21:1-22:31. These two chapters contain the first set of laws that follow the Ten Commandments. They can feel foreign and sometimes hard. Read them slowly, and ask what each law shows about God's concern for justice, for the vulnerable, and for human life.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the Ten Commandments, God gives Moses a long set of specific rulings called the Book of the Covenant (Exodus 20:22-23:33). They are case laws, applications of the broad principles of the Ten Commandments to the daily life of an agricultural society in the ancient Near East. This is not the part of the Bible that most new readers enjoy. But it is worth reading carefully, because it shows how God cares about the details of everyday justice. The laws also come to us in a particular covenant with Israel at a particular time, and reading them well means knowing how they fit the whole story.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The first law concerns Hebrew servants: "When you buy a Hebrew slave, he shall serve six years, and in the seventh he shall go out free, for nothing" (21:2).
2. Kidnapping is a capital crime: "Whoever steals a man and sells him, and anyone found in possession of him, shall be put to death" (21:16).
3. Laws on injury include the principle, "You shall pay life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot" (21:23-24).
4. If a slave is injured by a master, the slave is to go free (21:26-27).

5. If an ox gores someone, the owner is held responsible if he knew it was dangerous (21:28-36).
6. Laws on theft and restitution require thieves to repay several times over (22:1-4).
7. "You shall not wrong a sojourner or oppress him, for you were sojourners in the land of Egypt" (22:21).
8. "You shall not afflict any widow or fatherless child. If you do afflict them…my wrath will burn" (22:22-24).
9. "If you lend money to my people, to the poor among you, you shall not be to him as a moneylender, and you shall not exact interest from him" (22:25).
10. "If ever you take your neighbor's cloak in pledge, you shall return it to him before the sun goes down…for when he cries to me, I will hear, for I am compassionate" (22:26-27).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to understand is the way these laws are written. They are case laws: "If a man does this, then this is the consequence." They are not an exhaustive legal code. They are examples that train judges to think about justice. The laws are also specific to the setting of ancient Israel. Modern readers sometimes want to treat every verse as a rule for today, or else dismiss the whole thing as irrelevant. Neither is right. The better approach is to ask what each law reveals about God's character, and how the principle is fulfilled in Christ.

Take the opening law about servants. It may trouble modern readers, and the questions are fair. Slavery is a hard subject, and the Bible does not hide from it. But look at what the law actually does. The servitude it describes is a form of debt labor, limited to six years, with release in the seventh. Kidnapping and selling a person is punished by death. Injury to a slave sets the slave free. In a world where slaves were property without rights, the law gives human beings dignity and protection. It does not describe the ideal. It restrains the worst. The deeper message, "You were sojourners in Egypt," appeals to the exodus. Israel is to remember that they were slaves once, and that the LORD set them free.

The "eye for eye" principle is easy to misread. In its original setting, it is a limit, not a license for revenge. The punishment must fit the crime and go no further. This protects against escalating retaliation. Jesus will take the principle deeper in Matthew 5:38-39, telling his followers to renounce personal revenge: "If anyone slaps you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also." He is not abolishing the court's duty to do justice. He is calling individuals to a higher way of living.

The most striking pattern in these chapters is the care for the weak. The sojourner, the widow, the orphan, and the poor borrower are all named. God says that when they cry out, "I will surely hear their cry" (22:23). The God who heard the cry of Israel in Egypt now commands Israel to hear the cry of the vulnerable. His justice is shaped by his own experience of redeeming slaves. The cloak law is a gem: a poor man's coat, taken as a pledge, must be returned by nightfall, because he needs it to sleep in. And the reason given is simply: "for I am compassionate."

Paul shows how to read these laws in light of Christ in 1 Corinthians 9:9-10. He quotes the law, "You shall not muzzle an ox when it treads out the grain," and applies it to paying ministers. He sees in the law a principle of fairness that goes beyond the particular case. We are to read the case laws as windows into the heart of God.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said that the greatest in the kingdom would be the servant of all (Mark 10:43-45). Paul's letter to Philemon asks a master to receive his runaway slave "no longer as a bondservant but more than a bondservant, as a beloved brother" (Philemon 16). James 1:27 says that "religion that is pure and undefiled before God" is "to visit orphans and widows in their affliction." Leviticus 19:33-34 repeats the command to love the sojourner.

STEP 6

Application

Read the laws on the vulnerable in 22:21-27 again. Who are the sojourners, widows, orphans, and poor borrowers in your community? Choose one action this week to help one of them.

Practice reading hard passages by asking what they reveal about God's character. Write down one thing you learn about God from today's reading.

Thank God that he is compassionate, and let that shape the way you treat people who owe you something.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to give you his heart for the stranger, the widow, and the orphan.

Ask him for humility as you read his law.

Tell him where you are asking Christ to show you more.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 17

EXODUS 25:8

DAY 114 · WEEK 17

Exodus 23:1-24:18

Covenant concluded; the Sabbath; ratification with blood

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Reading · 44 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 23:1-24:18. The first part finishes the Book of the Covenant with laws on justice, the Sabbath, and the feasts. The second part, chapter 24, describes the ratification of the covenant with blood. Read chapter 24 slowly. It is one of the most important chapters in the Old Testament.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The laws of the Book of the Covenant are almost finished. Now Moses goes down to the people, and the covenant between God and Israel is formally sealed. This is like a wedding ceremony or a treaty ratification. There is a reading of the terms, a public promise by the people, a sacrifice, and a meal. Then Moses is called back up the mountain for forty days to receive instructions for the tabernacle. This is the end of the first half of Exodus, and the unit's closing scene.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "You shall not fall in with the many to do wrong, nor shall you bear witness in a lawsuit, siding with the many, so as to pervert justice" (23:2).
2. "If you meet your enemy's ox or his donkey going astray, you shall bring it back to him" (23:4).
3. "You shall not oppress a sojourner. You know the heart of a sojourner, for you were sojourners in the land of Egypt" (23:9).
4. "Six days you shall do your work, but on the seventh day you shall rest" (23:12). The land too is to rest every seventh year (23:10-11).

5. Three times a year, all males are to appear before the LORD at the feasts of unleavened bread, harvest, and ingathering (23:14-17).
6. God promises to send an angel before them, "for my name is in him" (23:20-21).
7. Moses writes down all the words of the LORD and builds an altar with twelve pillars. The people say, "All that the LORD has spoken we will do, and we will be obedient" (24:3-7).
8. Moses takes half the blood and throws it against the altar, and the other half he sprinkles on the people, saying, "Behold the blood of the covenant that the LORD has made with you in accordance with all these words" (24:6-8).
9. Moses, Aaron, Nadab, Abihu, and seventy elders go up and "saw the God of Israel…they beheld God, and ate and drank" (24:9-11).
10. Moses goes up the mountain with Joshua, and the glory of the LORD rests on it like "a devouring fire" for forty days and forty nights (24:13-18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The laws at the start of chapter 23 are some of the most practical in the Bible. They tell the truth in court, even when the crowd is against you. They tell you to help an enemy's animal in trouble. They forbid taking bribes. The standards are high and they touch real life. The line "You shall not fall in with the many to do wrong" is a good motto for a believer in any age. The right thing and the popular thing are not always the same.

Most striking is the repeated appeal to Israel's own experience. "You know the heart of a sojourner." The law is built on empathy: you have been where they are, so treat them as God treated you. This is the way the Bible teaches ethics. It asks people to remember grace and then to act like people who have received it.

Now to chapter 24, which is the most significant. The covenant is sealed with blood. This is the second great blood ritual in the book, after the Passover. At the Passover, the blood protected Israel from judgment. Here, the blood binds Israel to God in covenant. Half is thrown on the altar, which represents God, and half is sprinkled on the people. Both parties are bound together by the blood. "Behold the blood of the covenant." These are words that Jesus will echo at the Last Supper.

The promise of the people, "All that the LORD has spoken we will do, and we will be obedient," is sincere. But as you saw earlier, they will break it within weeks. The covenant is real, and the people are weak. This tension, between God's holy demands and human inability, runs through the whole Old Testament and creates the longing for a better covenant.

The scene on the mountain in verses 9 to 11 is one of the most mysterious in the Bible. Leaders of Israel see the God of Israel. They see "under his feet as it were a pavement of sapphire stone, like the very heaven for clearness." It is a glimpse of the throne room of God. And, astonishingly, "God did not lay his hand on them. They beheld God, and ate and drank." They share a meal in his presence. This is a preview of the fellowship that is the goal of the covenant, and it will be fulfilled when God's people eat and drink with him in the kingdom.

The unit ends with Moses entering the cloud. The glory looks like a devouring fire. God is both near and dangerous, and Moses will be gone for forty days.

STEP 5

Connection

At the Last Supper, Jesus took the cup and said, "This is my blood of the covenant, which is poured out for many for the forgiveness of sins" (Matthew 26:28), echoing Exodus 24:8. Hebrews 9:18-22 explains that the first covenant was inaugurated with blood and that Christ's blood inaugurates a better one. The meal on the mountain points to the marriage supper of the Lamb (Revelation 19:9). Peter says that believers are "sprinkled with his blood" (1 Peter 1:2).

STEP 6

Application

When you take the Lord's Supper, hear the words of Exodus 24:8 behind the words of Jesus. You are being brought into a covenant sealed with blood.

Think about where you tend to "fall in with the many." Ask God for courage to stand for what is right.

Remember what it was like to be a stranger or an outsider in a new church, a new job, or a new town. Reach out to someone who is new this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Jesus for the blood that sealed the covenant for you.

Ask for courage to do right when the crowd does wrong.

Ask him to teach you kindness to strangers.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 17

"And let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell in their midst."

EXODUS 25:8

DAY 115 · WEEK 17

Psalm 105:26-45

Moses and Aaron sent; the plagues recounted

Year 1 · Unit 5 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 105:26-45. This is the exodus story told as praise. Compare it in your mind to Psalm 106, which you read earlier in the unit. The two psalms tell the same history from opposite sides.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 105 and Psalm 106 are a pair. Psalm 106 tells the story of Israel's failures. Psalm 105 tells the story of God's faithfulness. This psalm begins by calling Israel to thank the LORD and make his deeds known among the peoples, and then it traces the history from Abraham to the conquest. Today you read the section about the exodus, and it is a fitting way to end Unit 5, since it summarizes everything you have just read and gives the reason for it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "He sent Moses his servant, and Aaron, whom he had chosen" (v. 26).
2. "They performed his signs among them and miracles in the land of Ham" (v. 27).
3. The plagues are recounted: darkness, blood, frogs, flies, gnats, hail, locusts, and the death of the firstborn (vv. 28-36).
4. "Then he brought out Israel with silver and gold, and there was none among his tribes who stumbled" (v. 37).
5. "Egypt was glad when they departed, for dread of them had fallen upon it" (v. 38).
6. "He spread a cloud for a covering, and fire to give light by night" (v. 39).
7. "They asked, and he brought quail, and gave them bread from heaven in abundance" (v. 40).

8. “He opened the rock, and water gushed out; it flowed through the desert like a river” (v. 41).
9. “For he remembered his holy promise, and Abraham, his servant” (v. 42).
10. “So he brought his people out with joy, his chosen ones with singing” (v. 43).
11. He gave them the lands of the nations “that they might keep his statutes and observe his laws. Praise the LORD!” (vv. 44-45).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 105 is a retelling of the exodus with all the failures left out. This is not dishonest. It is a different purpose. Psalm 106 is a confession. Psalm 105 is a thanksgiving. Both are true. The Bible does not hide Israel’s sin, and it does not let sin have the last word.

Notice first who the main actor is. “He sent Moses.” “He brought out Israel.” “He spread a cloud.” “He brought quail.” “He opened the rock.” In the whole passage, God is the subject of almost every verb. Israel is the object. The psalmist is retelling the exodus as a story of what God did. That is the right way to read it. The story is not primarily about Moses’ courage or Israel’s faith. It is about God’s power and faithfulness.

The reason is given in verse 42: “For he remembered his holy promise, and Abraham, his servant.” This verse is the key to the whole book of Exodus. In 2:24, God heard their groaning and remembered his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Here, centuries later, the psalmist says the same: he remembered. The exodus was not a rescue of convenience. It was the fulfillment of a promise made generations before.

Verse 37 is a nice detail. “There was none among his tribes who stumbled.” The whole company of Israel, old, young, sick, and weak, walked out of Egypt without anyone falling behind. God’s redemption is complete. No one is lost.

The ending sets out the purpose of the entire exodus. God gave them the land “that they might keep his statutes and observe his laws.” This brings you back to Sinai. The goal of redemption is a people who obey. This is not to earn the redemption but to live as the redeemed. And the response to all of it is the one word that closes the psalm: “Praise the LORD!”

Placed here, at the end of the unit, the psalm looks forward as well. The God who remembered Abraham and kept his word to Israel will remember his covenant again and send a greater redeemer.

STEP 5

Connection

Luke 1:72-73 sings the same note at the birth of Jesus: God "has remembered his holy covenant, the oath that he swore to our father Abraham." Peter says that Christ's death was foreknown and planned (1 Peter 1:18-20). Hebrews 2:15 says Christ came "to deliver all those who through fear of death were subject to lifelong slavery." Revelation 15 and 16 echo the plagues and the song of Moses.

STEP 6

Application

Make a list of ways God has been faithful to a promise in your life or in the life of your church. Praise him for each one.

Notice how the psalm ends with obedience. Ask what a response of gratitude would look like in your daily choices.

Say the last word of the psalm out loud: "Praise the LORD!" Do it at least once today, on purpose.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for being faithful to every word he has spoken.
- Thank him for the greater exodus in Jesus.
- Ask him to help you keep his statutes out of gratitude.

Unit Verse

> "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of slavery."
>
> EXODUS 20:2

REST

Meditation

Exodus 20:2 is the opening line of the Ten Commandments, and it is the unit's anchor verse. It is easy to skip over it on the way to the commands, but it is the most important sentence in the chapter. Read it aloud once more before you continue.

"I am the LORD your God." The sentence begins with a name and a relationship. God is the LORD, the covenant God who revealed himself at the burning bush. And he is "your God." Before there is any command, there is a claim: I belong to you, and you belong to me.

"Who brought you out of the land of Egypt." This is the basis of the claim. God has already acted. He rescued them when they could not rescue themselves. The authority of the commandments rests on his grace.

"Out of the house of slavery." It is a wonderful phrase. Egypt was a house, a place of confinement and hard labor, and God brought them out. The rest of the commandments describe what life looks like for people who have been freed. They are no longer slaves, so they do not need to act like slaves, and they are no longer under Pharaoh, so they do not serve other gods.

For the Christian, the verse is a statement about Christ. He is the one who has brought us out of the house of slavery, the slavery to sin and death. "For freedom Christ has set us free" (Galatians 5:1). Obedience is the grateful response of those who have been rescued.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 5 you have read the first half of the book of Exodus, from the birth of Moses to the ratification of the covenant at Sinai. You began with Israel in slavery and with Pharaoh's attempt to destroy the Hebrew sons, and you watched God preserve a baby in a basket. At the burning bush, God revealed his name, I AM WHO I AM, and sent a reluctant Moses to bring his people out. On your first doctrinal day, you studied the existence and attributes of God, from his self-existence to the character of mercy and justice that he proclaimed in Exodus 34.

You followed the confrontation with Pharaoh. The plagues, one after another, were judgments on the gods of Egypt and demonstrations of who the LORD is. You watched Pharaoh bargain and harden his heart. Then came the Passover: a lamb without blemish, its blood on the doorposts, and the promise, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you." You walked through the Red Sea on dry ground and heard Moses say, "The LORD will fight for you." You sang the song of Moses and watched the song give way to grumbling at Marah. You prayed through three psalms of the exodus, and saw how the Psalms use the story as a resource for confession, for memory in distress, and for praise.

In the wilderness, God gave manna, water from the rock, and victory over Amalek. At Sinai, God described Israel as a kingdom of priests and a holy nation, and he gave the Ten Commandments, beginning with the words, "I am the LORD your God, who brought you out." On your second doctrinal day, you studied the three uses of the law and how the moral law relates to the Christian. You read the case laws of the Book of the Covenant and saw God's care for the sojourner, the widow, and the orphan. Finally, you watched the covenant sealed with blood, and the elders eat and drink in the presence of God.

The unit taught that God redeems before he commands, that the blood of the substitute is the ground of safety, and that the exodus is a pattern for all of God's saving work.

REFLECT

Review Questions

Why does it matter that God redeems Israel before giving them the law at Sinai?

Look back at Exodus 19:4 and 20:2. God reminded Israel of what he had done before he told them what to do. How does this order protect us from thinking that we earn salvation by obedience? Write a few sentences about how it changes the way you think about the commands of God in your own life.

What does the Passover reveal about the nature of atonement?

Think about the lamb without blemish, the blood on the doorposts, and the promise, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you." What does this teach about substitution and about how God's judgment and mercy meet? How does it help you understand the death of Jesus?

What are the three uses of the law, and can you find each one in Exodus?

Recall the civil, the pedagogical, and the normative uses. Where do you see the law restraining a violent people, exposing sin, and guiding the redeemed? Which use do you find most helpful for your own growth, and which do you tend to forget?

How does the Exodus function as a pattern for all of God's saving work?

Consider the slavery, the rescue by a mediator, the blood, the passage through water, the covenant, and the journey toward a promised land. Where do you see these themes fulfilled in Christ? Write a short prayer of thanks to Jesus for the greater exodus he has accomplished.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the exodus and for the greater exodus in Christ.

Ask him to teach you to obey out of gratitude.

Ask him to keep the unit verse near you.

DAY 117 · WEEK 17

Exodus 25:1-26:37

The Tabernacle design begins, ark, table, lampstand

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 76 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 25:1-26:37. These chapters are a set of building instructions, so read them slowly and let your imagination build the structure as you go. Notice that the first piece of furniture described is the ark, not the courtyard or the outer tent. God starts from the center and works outward.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses is on Mount Sinai with God, and the covenant has just been sealed (Exodus 24). Now God gives him a pattern for a tent that Israel is to build, so that the God who met them on the mountain can live in their midst. The tabernacle is a portable sanctuary, and it will travel with Israel through the wilderness. The instructions run from Exodus 25 to 31, and the building itself is told in Exodus 35 to 40. The whole project answers one question: how can a holy God live among a sinful people?

STEP 3

Observation

1. The offering for the tabernacle is voluntary, from “every man whose heart moves him” (25:2).
2. The purpose is stated: “And let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell in their midst” (25:8).
3. Moses is told to make everything “according to the pattern” he was shown on the mountain (25:9, 40).
4. The ark of the covenant is a gold-covered chest with a lid called the mercy seat, and two cherubim face each other over it (25:10-22).
5. God says, “There I will meet with you” above the mercy seat (25:22).

6. The ark holds “the testimony,” the tablets of the law (25:16, 21).
7. The table of the bread of the Presence (25:23-30) and the lampstand shaped like a flowering almond tree (25:31-40) fill the holy place.
8. The tabernacle is made of curtains of blue, purple, and scarlet with cherubim woven into them, and a veil separates the Holy Place from the Most Holy Place (26:31-33).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to notice is the purpose. God does not ask for a building because he needs a house. He asks for it because he wants to be near his people. “That I may dwell in their midst” is the whole point. The tabernacle is a statement that the God who thundered from the mountain intends to live in a tent among them.

The second thing to notice is the order. The ark comes first, and it holds the tablets of the law. Over it is the mercy seat, the lid, and between the cherubim God says he will speak. The law is under the throne, and mercy is on top of the law. When the high priest later sprinkles blood on the mercy seat on the Day of Atonement, the picture will be complete: the demands of the law are met by a sacrifice, and the way is open for God to meet with sinners.

The third thing is the language of Eden. The tabernacle is full of garden imagery. The lampstand is a tree with branches, buds, and almond blossoms. The cherubim recall the guardians placed at the east of Eden (Genesis 3:24). The fabric of the tabernacle has pictures of cherubim on it. The entrance to the sanctuary faces east, just like Eden. The tabernacle is a small Eden, a place where God and people may meet again. What was lost in Genesis 3 is being slowly restored.

The fourth thing is the layers of holiness. Gold, blue, and purple become richer the closer you get to the center. The veil marks a boundary that only one man can cross, once a year. The building teaches that God is near, and that his nearness is dangerous to sinners unless a way is made. The next few weeks of reading will explain what that way is.

Finally, notice the phrase “according to the pattern.” Moses is not free to design the tabernacle however he likes. This is the first clue that the earthly tabernacle is a copy of something heavenly, a point the letter to the Hebrews will make.

STEP 5

Connection

John says that the Word became flesh and “dwelt among us” (John 1:14). The Greek word means “tabernacled.” Jesus is the true dwelling place of God with man. Hebrews 8:5 says that the priests serve “a copy and shadow of the heavenly things,” quoting the instruction to make everything according to the pattern. Revelation 21:3 promises, “Behold, the dwelling place of God is with man.”

STEP 6

Application

Think about the first purpose of the tabernacle: God wanted to be near his people. Spend a few minutes thanking God that he wants to be with you, and not just to rule you.

Notice that the offering was voluntary and from the heart. Ask yourself whether your giving to God, of time and money, comes from a willing heart.

Remember that in Christ your body is a temple of the Holy Spirit (1 Corinthians 6:19). Ask God to help you live as someone in whom he dwells.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he chose to live among his people.
- Ask him to make you a willing giver.
- Thank him that in Christ he has come even closer.

EXODUS 25:8

DAY 118 · WEEK 17

Exodus 27:1-28:43

The altar, the court, the priestly garments

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 64 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 27:1-28:43. Yesterday took you inside the tent. Today takes you to the courtyard and to the clothes of the priests. As you read the description of the altar and the garments, ask what each one says about how a sinner can come near to God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The instructions for the tabernacle continue. Chapter 27 describes the bronze altar of burnt offering, which stands at the entrance, and the surrounding courtyard. Chapter 28 turns from the building to the people who will serve in it. Aaron and his sons are chosen as priests, and God gives detailed instructions for their garments. These are not ordinary clothes. They are "for glory and for beauty" (28:2), and each piece carries meaning.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The altar of burnt offering is made of acacia wood covered with bronze, with horns at its four corners (27:1-8).
2. The courtyard is enclosed by linen curtains, so that the people see the altar before they see the tent (27:9-19).
3. The lamp is to burn "from evening to morning before the LORD" as a perpetual statute (27:20-21).
4. Aaron and his sons are "brought near" from among the people of Israel to serve as priests (28:1).
5. The high priest wears an ephod with two onyx stones, each engraved with the names of six tribes (28:9-12).

6. The breastpiece has twelve stones with the names of the twelve tribes, and Aaron is to bear them "on his heart" when he enters the Holy Place (28:15-21, 29).
7. On the turban is a plate of pure gold engraved "Holy to the LORD" (28:36).
8. Aaron bears "any guilt from the holy things that the people of Israel consecrate" (28:38).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The order of the building teaches something. To approach the tabernacle, a worshiper had to pass through the gate and meet the bronze altar first. Before anyone could draw near to God, a sacrifice had to be made. The altar stood directly in the way. There was no path around it. The first lesson of the tabernacle is that sinners come to God by way of a substitute.

The second lesson is the role of the priest. Notice that Aaron is "brought near" (28:1), which means he was chosen, not self-appointed. No one can walk into God's presence on his own. A mediator is needed, and God provides one. Every piece of the priest's clothing speaks of his task. The ephod and breastpiece carry the names of the twelve tribes, on his shoulders and on his heart. He represents the people before God, with their weight on his shoulders and their names near his heart.

The gold plate on the turban says "Holy to the LORD." It is a remarkable detail. The priest is himself a sinner, and the people's offerings are imperfect. Yet verse 38 says that Aaron bears "any guilt" connected with their gifts. The plate on his forehead is a sign that even the best worship of sinners needs to be covered. This is humbling. Even our worship is not good enough without a mediator.

Finally, notice the "glory and beauty" of the clothing. The gold, blue, purple, and scarlet threads are the same colors as the tabernacle curtains. The priest is dressed like the building. This shows that the priest belongs to the sanctuary. It also shows that God's holiness is beautiful and not only fearsome. He is not a harsh master but a God of glory, and he wants his people to see it.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews tells you that Jesus is the great high priest who has passed through the heavens (Hebrews 4:14), who "always lives to make intercession" for us (Hebrews 7:25). Unlike Aaron, he has no sin of his own to cover (Hebrews 7:27). Peter says that all believers are now "a royal priesthood" (1 Peter 2:9). The altar finds its fulfillment at the cross, where Jesus offered himself once for all (Hebrews 10:10).

STEP 6

Application

Praise God for your mediator. Picture Jesus carrying your name on his shoulders and over his heart, as Aaron did for Israel.

If you tend to think that your prayers and worship need to be perfect before God will receive them, remember the gold plate. He receives them because of the priest, not because of you.

Ask God to help you serve others as a priest, by praying for them and bringing their needs before him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for carrying you on his shoulders and on his heart.
- Ask him to teach you to pray for others as he prays for you.
- Thank him that your worship is received because of him.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell in their midst."

EXODUS 25:8

REST

Meditation

Exodus 25:8 is the heart of the tabernacle instructions. It is easy to lose it among the details of cubits and curtains, so give it a day to rest in your mind.

"Let them make me a sanctuary." The word "sanctuary" means a holy place, a place set apart. God is not asking for an ordinary building. He is asking for a place where the holy can meet the human.

"That I may dwell." This is the purpose clause. The God who made heaven and earth wants to live among his creatures. The verb is the root of the word "tabernacle" and of the Hebrew term shekinah, which later Jewish writers used for the presence of God. The whole Bible will keep returning to this theme: God wants to be with us.

"In their midst." The tabernacle was placed at the very center of the camp, with the tribes arranged around it on every side. God did not set himself apart on the edge. He lived in the middle of his people.

For the Christian, the verse points forward to Jesus, who “dwelt among us” (John 1:14), and to the church, which is “a holy temple in the Lord” and “a dwelling place for God by the Spirit” (Ephesians 2:21-22). It points forward as well to the day when “the dwelling place of God is with man” forever (Revelation 21:3).

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you left the covenant at Sinai and began to read the instructions for the tabernacle. You saw the ark and the mercy seat, the table, the lampstand, and the curtains and veil of the tent. You saw the bronze altar and the courtyard, and you read about the garments of the priests, including the breastpiece with the names of the twelve tribes. The pattern is clear: God wants to dwell among his people, and he provides both a place and a mediator to make it possible. The week taught that approach to God is always by way of a sacrifice and a priest.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The tabernacle had a gate, an altar, a veil, and a priest between God and the people. What does this teach you about the way to approach a holy God?

How is Jesus the true tabernacle and the true high priest? What difference does it make that the veil is torn and you can come near through him?

Where in your daily life do you most need to remember that God is near and wants to be with you? Write a short prayer asking him to make his presence real to you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for making his home with his people.

Rest in his nearness today.

Ask him to help you carry that nearness into the week.

DAY 120 · WEEK 18

Exodus 29:1-46

Ordination of the priests, mediation established

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 46 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 29:1-46. This chapter describes the ceremony that sets Aaron and his sons apart as priests. It involves blood, ashes, and many animals, so read it slowly and ask what it says about how a person is made fit to serve a holy God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 28 described the priests' clothing. Chapter 29 describes their ordination. It is a seven-day ceremony, and Leviticus 8 will tell how it was carried out. The rite involves washing, clothing, anointing, sacrifices, and the application of blood to the priests' bodies. The point is that no one, not even Aaron, can serve in God's presence simply because he wants to. He must be cleansed and consecrated by God's own provision.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The priests are washed with water at the entrance of the tent and then dressed in their garments (29:4-9).
2. Aaron and his sons lay their hands on the head of a bull, which is killed as a sin offering (29:10-14).
3. They lay their hands on a ram for a burnt offering, "a pleasing aroma, a food offering to the LORD" (29:15-18).
4. Blood from the second ram is put on the right ear, right thumb, and right big toe of Aaron and his sons (29:19-21).
5. The priests are sprinkled with anointing oil mixed with blood (29:21).

6. The ordination lasts for seven days, with a sin offering each day for atonement (29:35-37).
7. The daily offering of a lamb each morning and evening is described (29:38-42).
8. God promises, "I will dwell among the people of Israel and will be their God" (29:45).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The ordination ceremony shows that the priests' fitness for service is entirely a matter of God's provision. Aaron does not earn the right. First he is washed. Then he is clothed. Then he is anointed. Then sacrifices are offered on his behalf, and he places his hands on the animals to identify himself with them. The priest is cleansed before he is allowed to cleanse others.

The laying on of hands is worth noticing. It is a sign of identification. When Aaron places his hands on the bull, the animal stands in his place. It is not a magic act. It is a picture of substitution: the animal's life is given instead of the sinner's. This is the first time you see this in detail, and you will see it again in Leviticus.

The blood on the ear, thumb, and toe is a striking detail. The priest's hearing, his working hand, and his walking foot are all marked. It is a picture of a whole person given to God, set apart from head to toe for God's service. The priest hears God's word, does God's work, and walks in God's ways because blood has been applied to him.

The chapter ends with the promise that is the true goal of the whole system: "I will dwell among the people of Israel and will be their God. And they shall know that I am the LORD their God, who brought them out of the land of Egypt that I might dwell among them" (29:45-46). The exodus was for this. God did not just release Israel from slavery. He brought them out so that he could live with them. The sacrifices, the clothes, and the priests are the means. His presence is the end.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews contrasts the priests of the old covenant with Jesus. They were appointed "without an oath," and they were prevented by death from continuing, but Jesus is a priest forever (Hebrews 7:20-24). Peter says that believers are "a holy priesthood" (1 Peter 2:5), and the cleansing that makes this possible is Jesus' blood (Hebrews 9:13-14). John writes that Jesus "made us a kingdom, priests to his God and Father" (Revelation 1:6).

STEP 6

Application

Remember that you do not serve God because you are fit. You serve because you have been washed and clothed. Take that as encouragement if you feel unworthy.

Notice the ear, hand, and foot. Ask God to set apart what you listen to, what you do, and where you go for his glory.

Pray for pastors and ministry leaders you know, that they would serve out of grace and not out of pride.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for washing you and making you fit to serve.
- Offer him your ears, hands, and feet, and tell him what you mean by it.
- Ask him to make your whole life an offering.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 18

PSALM 24:3-4

DAY 121 · WEEK 18

Exodus 30:1-31:18

The altar of incense, anointing oil, bronze basin, the Sabbath

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 52 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 30:1-31:18. Today's reading finishes the instructions for the tabernacle with several smaller items and ends with a reminder about the Sabbath. Watch for the repeated theme of consecration, and notice how the Sabbath fits into the story.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

God has described the ark, the table, the lampstand, the tent, the altar, and the priests. Chapter 30 adds a few more items: the altar of incense, a half-shekel census tax for atonement, the bronze basin for washing, the anointing oil, and the incense. Chapter 31 names the craftsmen, Bezalel and Oholiab, who are filled with God's Spirit to do the work. It closes with the Sabbath command and with God giving Moses the two tablets. The next chapter will show how fast things can go wrong.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The altar of incense stands before the veil, and incense is burned on it every morning and evening (30:1-10).
2. Each person aged twenty and over pays a half shekel as a ransom for his life, "that there be no plague among them" (30:11-16). The rich do not pay more and the poor do not pay less.
3. Aaron and his sons must wash their hands and feet at the bronze basin "so that they may not die" (30:17-21).
4. The anointing oil is a special recipe, and it is not to be used for ordinary purposes (30:22-33).
5. The incense is "holy," and no one may make it for himself (30:34-38).

6. Bezalel is "filled with the Spirit of God, with ability and intelligence, with knowledge and all craftsmanship" (31:1-5).
7. The Sabbath is a sign between God and Israel "throughout your generations, that you may know that I, the LORD, sanctify you" (31:13).
8. "He gave to Moses, when he had finished speaking with him on Mount Sinai, the two tablets of the testimony, tablets of stone, written with the finger of God" (31:18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Several themes run through these chapters. The first is atonement. The half-shekel ransom is the first time the word appears in the context of money. Everyone pays the same, because every life is equally in need of covering. No one can say that he is better than his neighbor, and no one can say that he is too poor to be included. The ransom is a quiet equalizer.

The second is the pattern of washing before service. The priests have to wash their hands and feet "so that they may not die." The language is stark. God's holiness is not something to take lightly. The bronze basin is placed between the altar and the tent, so a priest passes it on the way in. The point is cleanliness. A sinner does not approach a holy God casually.

The third is the Spirit-filled craftsman. It is a remarkable detail. Bezalel is the first person in the Bible described as filled with the Spirit of God, and the gift is for craftsmanship: woodworking, metalwork, and cutting stones. The Spirit is not only for prophets and priests. He equips people for skilled work in the service of God. If you have a skill, whether in teaching, building, cooking, or counting, it is a gift from the Spirit of God.

The fourth is the Sabbath. After all the instructions for building a sanctuary, God ends with the Sabbath. It is a deliberate order. The people are about to build a holy place, and God reminds them that holiness is also a matter of time. The Sabbath is a sign of the covenant, a reminder that Israel does not hold itself together by work. God is the one who sanctifies them. Even the project of building the tabernacle has to stop on the seventh day.

The final verse looks ahead. God writes on the tablets with his own finger. Moses will come down in the next chapter to a camp that has already broken the covenant.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that believers are not our own: we were "bought with a price" (1 Corinthians 6:20). Peter says it was "not with perishable things such as silver or gold" but with the precious blood of Christ (1 Peter 1:18-19). The Spirit who filled Bezalel fills every believer (Acts 2:4; Ephesians 1:13), and Paul lists the gifts he gives for the common good (1 Corinthians 12:4-11). Hebrews 4:9-10 says that a Sabbath rest remains for the people of God.

STEP 6

Application

Thank God that the price of your redemption is the same for everyone, and that you cannot buy your way into his favor.

Think of the abilities God has given you. Ask the Spirit to help you use one of them this week in service to his people.

Treat the Sabbath as a gift. Ask yourself whether you are truly resting on the one day in seven set apart for it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that you are not your own.

Ask him to fill you with his Spirit and use your skills for his glory.

Ask him to teach you to rest in him.

DAY 122 · WEEK 18

Exodus 32:1-33:23

The golden calf; Moses intercedes; God's glory and grace

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 57 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 32:1-33:23. This is one of the most dramatic passages in the Bible. The people break the covenant within weeks of making it, and Moses pleads for them on the mountain. Read it slowly and notice who speaks, who changes, and who is revealed.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses has been on the mountain for forty days, and the people below have grown restless. They believe he will not come back. While God is giving instructions for a house where he will live, Israel is building an idol at the foot of the mountain. The golden calf is the most serious sin of Israel in the wilderness, and its effects run through the rest of the Old Testament. It is also the occasion for one of the most powerful scenes of intercession in all of Scripture.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The people say, "Up, make us gods who shall go before us. As for this Moses, the man who brought us up out of the land of Egypt, we do not know what has become of him" (32:1).
2. Aaron collects gold, forms a calf, and declares a feast to the LORD (32:2-6). They say, "These are your gods, O Israel, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt" (32:4).
3. God tells Moses, "Your people, whom you brought up out of the land of Egypt, have corrupted themselves" (32:7).
4. Moses pleads with God, appealing to his reputation and to his promises to Abraham, Isaac, and Israel (32:11-13). "And the LORD relented from the disaster that he had spoken of bringing on his people" (32:14).

5. Moses breaks the tablets, grinds up the calf, and makes the people drink it (32:19-20).
6. The Levites rally to Moses, and about three thousand die (32:26-28).
7. Moses says, "Now, if you will forgive their sin, but if not, please blot me out of your book that you have written" (32:32).
8. God promises, "My presence will go with you, and I will give you rest" (33:14). Moses asks, "Please show me your glory" (33:18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The golden calf is a lesson in how quickly people fall. Israel has just heard God speak, and they have promised, "All that the LORD has spoken we will do" (24:7). Within weeks, they are worshiping an idol. The sin is not that they stopped worshiping the LORD. They called the calf their deliverer from Egypt and held a feast "to the LORD." Their sin was to make God into what they wanted him to be, a visible and manageable image. The second commandment was broken before the ink was dry.

Notice what God says to Moses. "Your people, whom you brought up." God speaks as if Israel were no longer his. Moses answers by saying, "Your people, whom you have brought out." It is a quiet but important exchange. Moses will not let go of the relationship. He argues from God's own words and God's own name. It is a model of prayer: Moses holds God to his promises, and God relents.

Moses' offer in 32:32 is stunning. He asks to be blotted out of God's book if the people cannot be forgiven. He is willing to bear their punishment. God does not accept the offer. No ordinary man can pay for another man's sin. But the offer points ahead to someone who can.

Chapter 33 is the heart of the passage. God says that he will send an angel but will not go with them, because they are a "stiff-necked people." Moses will not move without the presence of God. "If your presence will not go with me, do not bring us up from here" (33:15). The whole point of the exodus was to bring God's presence among them. Without it, the land would mean nothing. God agrees. Then Moses asks for the most daring thing: "Please show me your glory." God answers by showing his goodness and proclaiming his name, and he covers Moses in the cleft of the rock, so that Moses sees only God's back. No sinner can see God's face and live.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that Christ has done what Moses offered but could not do: he became a curse for us (Galatians 3:13), and he was "made sin" on our behalf (2 Corinthians 5:21). Paul also wished himself accursed for his people (Romans 9:3), echoing Moses. Jesus, the "one mediator between God and men" (1 Timothy 2:5), intercedes for us (Hebrews 7:25). John says that no one has ever seen God, but the Son "has made him known" (John 1:18). Paul says that we see the glory of God "in the face of Jesus Christ" (2 Corinthians 4:6).

STEP 6

Application

Ask what idol you are tempted to build when God seems to be slow. Name it honestly in prayer.

Learn from Moses' example. Use God's own promises when you pray. Find one promise in this week's reading and pray it back to him.

Echo Moses' words: "If your presence will not go with me, do not bring us up from here." Ask God to make his presence the thing you want most.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess the idols you make when you are impatient.

Thank Jesus for doing what Moses could not.

Ask him to go with you, and to make his presence more precious than anything else.

DAY 123 · WEEK 18

Exodus 34:1-35:35

Covenant renewed; the law rewritten; Moses' face shines

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 64 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 34:1-35:35. After the golden calf, the covenant is renewed. This is the other side of the story, and one of the most important statements of God's character in the Old Testament. Read the proclamation of his name in 34:6-7 slowly, and notice how often the rest of the Bible returns to it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses has interceded, and God has agreed to go with Israel. Now Moses is called back up the mountain with two new stone tablets. This time God does not simply give the commands. He proclaims his own name and character first. Then he renews the covenant, and Moses comes down with a face that shines. Chapter 35 begins the account of building the tabernacle, after the long set of instructions. The people respond with overflowing generosity.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Moses to cut two tablets "like the first," and he will write on them himself (34:1).
2. "The LORD passed before him and proclaimed, The LORD, the LORD, a God merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love and faithfulness" (34:6).
3. God continues: "keeping steadfast love for thousands, forgiving iniquity and transgression and sin, but who will by no means clear the guilty" (34:7).
4. Moses bows and worships at once, and asks God to go with them and pardon their iniquity (34:8-9).
5. God warns against making covenants with the people of the land and against idolatry (34:11-17).

6. Moses stays on the mountain forty days and nights, and writes "the words of the covenant, the Ten Commandments" (34:28).

7. Moses' face shines so brightly that the people are afraid, and he puts a veil over it when he is not speaking with God (34:29-35).

8. In chapter 35, the people bring gifts "every one whose heart stirred him, and everyone whose spirit moved him" (35:21), and the response is so great that Moses has to tell them to stop (36:5-7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Exodus 34:6-7 is the center of the passage and one of the most quoted verses in the Old Testament. It is the answer to Moses' prayer, "Show me your glory." God's glory, it turns out, is his character: mercy, grace, patience, love, and faithfulness. The list begins with mercy and ends with justice, and every word is deliberate. God forgives sin, and he does not ignore it.

The proclamation is repeated throughout the Bible. David uses it in Psalm 86:15 and 103:8. Joel quotes it in Joel 2:13, and Jonah complains about it: "I knew that you are a gracious God and merciful" (Jonah 4:2). It is a creed that Israel returned to again and again. When they sinned, they remembered who God is.

Look at what comes right after the proclamation. Moses bows down and prays. He does not argue. He worships and asks for pardon. The same man who was bold on behalf of the people is now humble in the presence of God's glory. The two postures belong together.

The renewed covenant shows grace at work. God could have ended things at the calf. Instead he cuts new tablets, with Moses doing the carving and God doing the writing. The broken covenant is mended, not because Israel has earned it, but because God is merciful.

The shining face is a sign that anyone who spends time in God's presence is changed. Moses does not know his face is shining (34:29). He has been with God, and it shows. The veil is for the sake of the people, who cannot bear to look. Paul will make much of this in 2 Corinthians 3.

Finally, the people's generosity in chapters 35 and 36 is the fitting response. They give so much that Moses has to tell them to stop. Forgiven people give freely.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul compares Moses' veiled face with the unveiled glory of Christ. "And we all, with unveiled face, beholding the glory of the Lord, are being transformed into the same image from one degree of glory to another" (2 Corinthians 3:18). John writes that the Word was "full of grace and truth" (John 1:14), using the words of Exodus 34:6. Jesus is the full revelation of God's glory (Hebrews 1:3), and the Father's steadfast love is shown in him.

STEP 6

Application

Memorize Exodus 34:6-7, or at least the first half. Return to it when you doubt God's goodness.

Ask what it would mean for you to spend time with God so that others notice a change in you.

If God has forgiven you something, ask how you can respond with generosity this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God as merciful and gracious, slow to anger and abounding in love.

Thank him for forgiving you in Christ.

Ask him to change you by your time with him and to make you generous.

PSALM 24:3-4

DAY 124 · WEEK 18

Psalm 15

Who may dwell on your holy hill?

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 5 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 15. It is short, with only five verses, and it asks a question that the tabernacle readings have raised again and again. Read it as a response to the instructions for the tent: who is fit to enter?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 15 is attributed to David. It begins with a question that fits the setting of worship at the sanctuary: "O LORD, who shall sojourn in your tent? Who shall dwell on your holy hill?" The "tent" and "holy hill" are the tabernacle and Jerusalem. After a week spent in the instructions for the tabernacle, this psalm answers from the point of view of a worshiper. It may have been used as an entrance liturgy, a set of questions asked at the gate by the priests.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The question: "O LORD, who shall sojourn in your tent? Who shall dwell on your holy hill?" (v. 1).
2. The answer begins: "He who walks blamelessly and does what is right and speaks truth in his heart" (v. 2).
3. The person "does not slander with his tongue and does no evil to his neighbor, nor takes up a reproach against his friend" (v. 3).
4. He despises "a vile person" and honors "those who fear the LORD" (v. 4).
5. He "swears to his own hurt and does not change" (v. 4).
6. He does not put out his money at interest or take a bribe against the innocent (v. 5).
7. The psalm ends with a promise: "He who does these things shall never be moved" (v. 5).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm asks the question every worshiper of the tabernacle had to ask: who is allowed in? The answer is not about ritual. It is about character, and most of it is about how a person treats other people. Truthfulness, honesty in speech, faithfulness to promises, and fairness in money are the marks of someone who belongs in God's presence. The list is surprisingly practical. It is a picture of integrity in daily life.

Notice that the list begins and ends with a general statement: someone who "walks blamelessly" will "never be moved." The portrait is of a person whose inner life and outer life match. "Speaks truth in his heart" means that his words are the same as his thoughts. He does not say one thing and mean another.

It is wise to read this psalm with the laws of Leviticus in view. The sacrifices did not replace the call to live rightly. God never wanted offerings from people who ignored their neighbors. The prophets will say the same thing later. A sacrifice offered by someone who lies, slanders, and cheats is an insult.

But we must be honest. If we read this psalm as a checklist, we all fail. None of us walks blamelessly. Taken seriously, the psalm brings us to the same place as the tabernacle: we need someone to qualify us. The question is still open, and the next psalm will make it sharper.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the only one who truly walked blamelessly, and who spoke truth in his heart. He is the one who can dwell on God's holy hill, and he brings his people with him. Isaiah 33:14-16 asks a similar question and gives a similar answer. Paul says that we have been made "holy and blameless before him" in Christ (Ephesians 1:4). Hebrews 12:22 says that we have come to "Mount Zion and to the city of the living God."

STEP 6

Application

Read the list in verses 2 to 5 slowly. Pick one item where you feel convicted, and confess it.

Ask whether your speech is honest. Is there something you have said recently that was not quite true?

Thank God that in Christ you are welcome in his tent, not because you pass the list, but because Jesus did.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask yourself honestly who may dwell on God's holy hill, and tell him what you find.

Thank Jesus for walking blamelessly and bringing you in.

Ask him to make you truthful, faithful, and fair.

PSALM 24:3-4

DAY 125 · WEEK 18

Psalm 24

Who shall ascend the hill of the LORD?

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 10 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 24. Yesterday's psalm asked who may stand in God's presence. Today's asks the same question again, and then celebrates the arrival of the King. Read the last section, verses 7 to 10, aloud as a procession.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 24 is a psalm of David and was probably sung when the ark was brought up to Jerusalem (2 Samuel 6). It has three parts: the earth belongs to the LORD (vv. 1-2), only the pure may come into his presence (vv. 3-6), and the gates must open for the King of glory (vv. 7-10). It joins together the tabernacle themes you have been reading about this week: God's holiness, the need for clean hands, and the ark of his presence.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The earth is the LORD's and the fullness thereof, the world and those who dwell in it" (v. 1).
2. He "has founded it upon the seas and established it upon the rivers" (v. 2).
3. "Who shall ascend the hill of the LORD? And who shall stand in his holy place?" (v. 3).
4. "He who has clean hands and a pure heart, who does not lift up his soul to what is false and does not swear deceitfully" (v. 4).
5. "He will receive blessing from the LORD and righteousness from the God of his salvation" (v. 5).
6. "Lift up your heads, O gates! And be lifted up, O ancient doors, that the King of glory may come in" (v. 7).

7. “Who is this King of glory? The LORD, strong and mighty, the LORD, mighty in battle!” (v. 8).

8. The question is asked again, and the answer changes: “The LORD of hosts, he is the King of glory!” (v. 10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with a broad claim: everything belongs to God. He founded the earth. It is not a neutral world that we are free to use as we like. The earth is his. That is the basis for all that follows. The God who owns the world has the right to say who may come to his house.

Then comes the question of verse 3, the same as Psalm 15. The answer is about hands and heart: outward and inward cleanness. Notice that the one who ascends “will receive blessing from the LORD and righteousness from the God of his salvation.” Righteousness here is something received. It is not only earned. The one who is fit to stand in God’s presence has been given a righteousness he did not make.

The last section is a drama. The procession arrives at the gates of Jerusalem with the ark, and the gates are told to open. A voice from inside asks, “Who is this King of glory?” The answer comes: the LORD, strong and mighty in battle. The same exchange is repeated, and the title grows: “the LORD of hosts.” The ark is the sign of God’s presence, and the God who comes is a conquering King.

Look at how the psalm moves. It begins with the earth belonging to God, then asks who can come near to him, and ends with the King coming to us. The answer to the problem of who may ascend the hill is that the King descends. He comes to the gates, and he asks to be let in. It is a picture of the God who draws near to his people.

STEP 5

Connection

The early church read this psalm as a picture of Christ’s ascension. He is the one with clean hands and a pure heart, who ascended the holy hill and now sits at the right hand of the Father (Ephesians 4:8-10; Hebrews 4:14). Paul says that “the earth is the Lord’s, and everything in it” (1 Corinthians 10:26). Revelation 19:11-16 shows the King of glory returning as a conqueror. Jesus also stands at the door of the church and knocks (Revelation 3:20).

STEP 6

Application

Think of one thing in your life you tend to treat as belonging to you: money, time, or plans. Say aloud, “This is the LORD’s.”

Pray verse 7 as an invitation. Ask the King of glory to come in to a part of your life you have kept closed.

Thank Jesus that he ascended on your behalf, and that you can follow him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Welcome the King of glory into the rooms of your life that you tend to keep closed.
- Thank Jesus for ascending with clean hands and a pure heart.
- Praise him as the owner of everything.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 24:3-4 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Who shall ascend the hill of the LORD? And who shall stand in his holy place? He who has clean hands and a pure heart."

PSALM 24:3-4

REST

Meditation

Psalm 24:3-4 asks a question that the whole week has been asking, and gives an answer that should humble and then comfort you.

"Who shall ascend the hill of the LORD?" The hill is Zion, the place of the sanctuary. To ascend is to approach God. It is the question of every religion: how can a person get close to the divine? The Bible's answer is honest. It is not for everyone.

"He who has clean hands and a pure heart." The answer has two parts, hands and heart. The hands stand for what we do, and the heart for what we are. God wants both. It is not enough to look clean. It is not enough to mean well. Both must be clean.

If you are honest, the verse is a problem. No one has clean hands and a pure heart. This is the very reason the tabernacle was built, with its altar, its priests, and its blood. A sinner cannot ascend on his own.

Then comes the gospel. Jesus is the one with clean hands and a pure heart. He ascended the hill. He did not do it for himself. He did it as your representative, and in him you are given "blessing from the LORD and righteousness from the God of his salvation" (Psalm 24:5). Because of Christ, you can draw near with confidence (Hebrews 10:19-22).

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished the instructions for the tabernacle and watched Israel break the covenant almost at once. You read about the altar and the priests' garments, the ordination of Aaron and his sons, and the extra items God commanded: the altar of incense, the basin, the oil, and the Spirit-filled craftsmen. You saw the golden calf, Moses' intercession, and his request to see God's glory. You heard God proclaim his name in Exodus 34:6-7 and saw the covenant renewed. You prayed through two psalms that ask who may enter God's presence, Psalm 15 and Psalm 24. The week taught that God desires to dwell with his people, that sinners need a mediator, and that his glory is his mercy.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

God described himself as "merciful and gracious, slow to anger, and abounding in steadfast love and faithfulness." Which of these words do you most need to hear today, and why?

Moses offered to be blotted out for the sake of the people, but God did not accept it. How does Jesus fulfill what Moses could only wish? What does that mean for how you pray?

Psalms 15 and 24 describe someone fit to enter God's presence. Where do you fall short of the picture, and how does it change your heart to know that Christ has qualified you?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that you are not left outside his tent.

Thank Jesus for bringing you in.

Rest in him today.

DAY 127 · WEEK 19

Exodus 36:1-38:31

The Tabernacle is built, every detail according to the pattern

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 84 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 36:1-38:31. After the long instructions, you now watch the work being done. Much of the text repeats what you read in chapters 25 to 31. As you read, notice what the repetition is meant to show.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The instructions are complete and the golden calf has been dealt with. Now the people build the tabernacle. Bezalel, Oholiab, and the skilled workers receive the offerings and do the work. The text slows down and tells again, almost word for word, what was commanded earlier, this time in the past tense. The point is not to tell you something new. It is to show you that the work was done exactly as God said.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The people bring so much that Moses has to restrain them: “The people bring much more than enough for doing the work” (36:5-6).
2. The craftsmen make the curtains, the frames, and the veil, using the same materials and dimensions as in chapters 25 and 26 (36:8-38).
3. Bezalel makes the ark, the table, the lampstand, the altar of incense, and the oil and incense (37:1-29).
4. The bronze basin is made from “the mirrors of the ministering women who ministered in the entrance of the tent of meeting” (38:8).
5. The bronze altar, the courtyard, and its pillars are made (38:1-20).
6. The total of the gold, silver, and bronze is carefully recorded (38:21-31).

7. The silver from the census, a half shekel per person, is used to make the bases for the frames and veil (38:25-28).

8. Bezalel does “all that the LORD commanded Moses” (38:22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

It is easy to skim a chapter that repeats itself. Do not. The repetition is the message. When Exodus 36 to 38 says that the craftsmen made it “as the LORD had commanded Moses,” it is saying that Israel, who failed so badly at the golden calf, now obeys. The pattern of rebellion, intercession, forgiveness, and renewed obedience is one of the most important in the book.

The second thing to note is the generosity. The people bring so much that Moses has to stop them. This is the opposite of the golden calf. At the calf, they gave their gold to make an idol. Now they give their gold, silver, and bronze for the worship of the true God. The same people, the same metals, a different heart.

The third thing is the humble detail of the bronze basin. It is made from the mirrors of the women who served at the entrance of the tent. Someone gave up a prized personal possession so that the priests could be washed. It is not a large gift, and yet it is recorded forever. God notices what we give, and he does not forget.

The fourth is the use of the census silver. The ransom money, paid equally by each person, forms the foundation of the sanctuary. The bases that hold the whole tent up are made of redemption money. It is a quiet picture of the way God’s dwelling place stands on atonement. The whole structure rests on the fact that each person has been ransomed.

Finally, the long accounts of metal remind you that the tabernacle was real, tangible, and costly. It was not a spiritual idea. It was built with real labor and real gifts, by people who gave their time and skill.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul calls the church God’s building and says that “Jesus Christ himself being the cornerstone” holds it together (Ephesians 2:20-22). Peter says we are “living stones” being built into a spiritual house (1 Peter 2:5). The foundation is the ransom paid by Christ, “a lamb without blemish or spot” (1 Peter 1:19). Paul praises generous giving as “a fragrant offering” (Philippians 4:18).

STEP 6

Application

Think about the difference between the golden calf and the tabernacle. Ask whether anything you give, in time, money, or talent, is going toward something that cannot give life.

Give something this week, anonymously if you can, and without being asked.

Thank God that the foundation of your life with him is a ransom already paid.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the people who give cheerfully, and ask him to make you one.

Thank him for the ransom that is the foundation of his house.

Ask him to make you a living stone in what he is building.

DAY 128 · WEEK 19

Exodus 39:1-40:38

Priestly garments made; the glory fills the Tabernacle

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 75 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Exodus 39:1-40:38. This reading ends the book of Exodus. The garments are completed, the tabernacle is set up, and the glory of God comes down. Read the last paragraph with particular attention, because it is the goal of the whole book.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The priestly clothing is finished, and Moses inspects the work. A year after leaving Egypt, on the first day of the first month, the tabernacle is set up (40:17). Each piece is put in its place, and then something happens that no one could have arranged: God's glory fills the tent. This is the climax of Exodus. The book that began with Israel in slavery ends with God living among his people.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The priestly garments, ephod, breastpiece, robe, and turban, are made "as the LORD had commanded Moses" (39:1, 5, 7, 21, 26, 29, 31).
2. The plate of the holy crown is engraved "Holy to the LORD" (39:30-31).
3. Moses inspects the work: "Behold, they had done it; as the LORD had commanded, so had they done it. Then Moses blessed them" (39:43).
4. The tabernacle is erected on the first day of the first month, in the second year (40:2, 17).
5. Moses puts the testimony in the ark, sets the mercy seat on top, and brings the ark into the tent (40:20-21).

6. He anoints the tabernacle and the furniture, and washes and clothes Aaron and his sons (40:9-15, 30-32).
7. "So Moses finished the work" (40:33).
8. "Then the cloud covered the tent of meeting, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle. And Moses was not able to enter the tent of meeting because the cloud settled on it, and the glory of the LORD filled the tabernacle" (40:34-35).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The last chapter of Exodus echoes the first chapter of Genesis. In Genesis, God makes the world in six days and sees that it is good, and then he blesses it. In Exodus, Moses finishes the tabernacle, looks at the work, and blesses it. The words "So Moses finished the work" (40:33) are almost the same as "Thus the heavens and the earth were finished" (Genesis 2:1). The tabernacle is a new creation, a small world in which God and people may meet.

The date is also significant. The tabernacle is erected on the first day of the first month. It is a new beginning. Israel left Egypt in the month of Passover, and now a year later they have a new center to their life: a sanctuary for the God who brought them out.

Then the glory comes. The same cloud that led them through the wilderness settles on the tent, and God's presence fills the space so completely that even Moses cannot go in. It is a double lesson. God has come near. And he is still holy. Moses, the friend of God who spoke to him face to face, cannot enter. The nearness of God does not remove his majesty.

The book closes with a description of how the cloud guided Israel. When it lifted, they moved. When it rested, they camped (40:36-38). Their journey was ruled by the presence of God. They did not decide where to go. They followed him. This is the answer to Moses' prayer in chapter 33, "If your presence will not go with me, do not bring us up from here." It will go with them, day and night, "in the sight of all the house of Israel throughout all their journeys."

Exodus began with a groaning people and a hidden God, and it ends with a people who have seen his glory. The book is a short version of the whole Bible: redemption leads to God's presence. But the story is not finished, because Moses cannot enter. Leviticus will explain how others can.

STEP 5

Connection

John says that Jesus "dwelt among us, and we have seen his glory" (John 1:14). At the dedication of Solomon's temple, the glory fills the house in the same way (1 Kings 8:10-11). Paul says that believers are God's temple (1 Corinthians 3:16), and Revelation shows the glory of God filling the new Jerusalem so that it has no need of the sun (Revelation 21:23).

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on the end of Exodus. God rescued his people so that he could live with them. Thank him that this is the goal of your salvation, and not only forgiveness.

Ask yourself how much of your life is guided by his presence, and how much by your own plans.

Spend a few quiet minutes asking God to fill your life with his glory.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that his glory fills his church.

Ask him to lead you day by day.

Ask him to let his presence rule your journey.

LEVITICUS 10:3

DAY 129 · WEEK 19

Leviticus 1:1-3:17

Burnt, grain, and peace offerings, substitution and fellowship

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 47 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 1:1-3:17. A new book begins, and it starts with sacrifice. These chapters can feel strange and bloody, so read them as a guide to the way God teaches. Each offering has its own meaning, and you can learn to see it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Leviticus picks up exactly where Exodus ends. God speaks to Moses "from the tent of meeting," since Moses could not enter it in Exodus 40. The book is mostly a manual for priests and people on how to live near a holy God. It is the central book of the Pentateuch, and its theme is holiness. It begins with the sacrifices, because without a way to deal with sin, no one could survive in God's presence. Today's reading covers three of the five main offerings: the burnt offering, the grain offering, and the peace offering.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The burnt offering is a male without blemish. The worshiper lays his hand on its head, "and it shall be accepted for him to make atonement for him" (1:3-4).
2. The whole animal is burned on the altar, "a pleasing aroma to the LORD" (1:9).
3. The offering can be a bull, a sheep or goat, or a bird, depending on what the worshiper can afford (1:3, 10, 14).
4. The grain offering is of fine flour with oil and frankincense, and it is to be seasoned with salt but not leaven or honey (2:1-13).
5. Part of the grain offering is burned as a "memorial portion," and the rest is for the priests (2:2-3).

6. The peace offering is shared. Part is burned, part goes to the priest, and the worshiper eats the rest (3:1-17; see 7:11-18).

7. Throughout, the fat and the blood belong to the LORD: "It is a statute forever throughout your generations, in all your dwelling places, that you eat neither fat nor blood" (3:17).

8. The phrase "a pleasing aroma to the LORD" appears repeatedly (1:9, 13, 17; 2:2, 9; 3:5, 16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The three offerings you read today teach three different things about the relationship between God and his people.

The burnt offering is about atonement and total dedication. The whole animal goes up in smoke. The worshiper lays his hand on its head, and the animal dies in his place. The word "atonement" means a covering or a ransom. The sinner has forfeited his life, and the animal's life is accepted instead. Because the whole animal is burned, it also pictures total surrender to God, a life given entirely to him.

The grain offering is a gift of thanks. It does not involve blood. It is an offering of the fruit of the worshiper's work, flour and oil, given back to the God who provided it. It is a reminder that atonement is not the only thing in the worship of Israel. There is also gratitude.

The peace offering is the happiest of the three, and it is about fellowship. The worshiper eats part of the sacrifice, in the presence of God, with the priest and often with family and friends. After atonement and thanks, here is a meal. It is a picture of what the whole system is for: peace between God and people, shared at a table.

Notice three details that run through the chapters. First, the offering is costly. Whatever you bring must be without blemish. Second, it is accessible. A poor person could bring a bird, a handful of flour, or a dove. No one was shut out for lack of means. Third, the blood and fat belong to God, because "the life of the flesh is in the blood" (17:11), a verse you will read soon and the anchor of this unit.

The repeated phrase "a pleasing aroma" is not about smell. It means that God accepts the offering. The sacrifice is not a bribe to a hungry god. It is a way for sinners to come to a holy God and be received.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that Christ "gave himself up for us, a fragrant offering and sacrifice to God" (Ephesians 5:2). He is the burnt offering, giving himself entirely. He is also our peace offering: he "is our peace" (Ephesians 2:14), and in the Lord's Supper we eat at his table. Paul says that Christians offer their bodies "as a living sacrifice" (Romans 12:1). Hebrews 13:15-16 speaks of a "sacrifice of praise" and sharing what we have.

STEP 6

Application

Spend a few minutes thanking God for the gift of Christ, the one who was the perfect, complete, and accepted offering.

Ask whether you have held anything back from God. Name it and offer it to him.

The next time you take part in the Lord's Supper, remember that it is a fellowship meal at the table of the one who made peace.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for the perfect sacrifice in Jesus.
- Give thanks for the atonement, the gratitude, and the peace it brings.
- Offer him your life in your own words.

LEVITICUS 10:3

DAY 130 · WEEK 19

Leviticus 4:1-5:19

Sin and guilt offerings, the cost of atonement

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 54 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 4:1-5:19. Yesterday's offerings were voluntary gifts of worship. Today's are required, because they deal with sin. Notice who sins, how, and what each offering costs.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The first three offerings in Leviticus were "sweet-smelling" ones, freely given in worship. Chapters 4 and 5 describe two offerings that are required when someone has sinned: the sin offering, or purification offering, and the guilt offering, or reparation offering. These deal with unintentional sin, wrongs done without the person realizing it at the time. They show that sin has consequences even when it is not deliberate, and they show that God provides a way for it to be cleansed.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The sin offering applies to anyone who sins "unintentionally" (4:2, 13, 22, 27).
2. The offering differs by rank: a bull for the anointed priest and for the whole congregation, a male goat for a leader, and a female goat or lamb for a common person (4:3, 14, 22-23, 27-28).
3. For the priest and congregation, blood is sprinkled before the veil and put on the horns of the altar of incense (4:6-7, 17-18).
4. The person lays a hand on the head of the animal and kills it (4:4, 24, 29).
5. "And the priest shall make atonement for him, and he shall be forgiven" (4:20, 26, 31, 35).

6. The remains of the bull for the priest or congregation are burned outside the camp (4:11-12, 21).
7. For those who cannot afford an animal, there are provisions for birds and even fine flour (5:7-13).
8. The guilt offering requires restitution plus a fifth of the value, along with a ram (5:14-6:7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first thing to notice is how seriously Leviticus takes sin. Even unintentional sin requires a sacrifice. This is surprising to modern readers. We often think that sin matters only when it is deliberate. Leviticus says that sin has an objective weight, and that it defiles. This is part of what it means that God is holy: he is so pure that even accidental contact with sin makes a person unclean. The text is teaching us that sin is not just about our intentions.

The second thing is the scale of the offerings. The cost rises with the person's position. A priest who sins brings a bull, just as the whole community does. Why? Because the sin of a leader affects everyone. The more influence a person has, the heavier the consequences of his sin. A common person brings a goat or lamb, and a poor person a bird. God's grace is flexible, but his standard of holiness is not.

The third is the blood on the altar of incense and before the veil. The blood goes closer to God's presence when the sin involves the priest or the whole people. It shows that sin does more than offend an individual. It pollutes the sanctuary itself. That is why the Day of Atonement, which you will read in a few days, includes cleansing the tabernacle.

The fourth is the repeated refrain: "and he shall be forgiven." It is the goal of the chapters. Sacrifice is not just a way of paying a price. It is a way of being forgiven. The sinner lays his hand on the animal's head, the animal dies in his place, the priest applies the blood, and the person is cleansed. The worshiper leaves forgiven.

The guilt offering adds a lesson. Sin against a neighbor requires more than a sacrifice. It requires restitution, repaying what was taken, with a fifth added. Forgiveness from God does not cancel the duty to make things right with people.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 13:11-12 says that the bodies of the animals for the sin offering were burned outside the camp, "so Jesus also suffered outside the gate in order to sanctify the people through his own blood." Paul says that God "made him to be sin who knew no sin, so that in him we might become the righteousness of God" (2 Corinthians 5:21). The word for "sin offering" in the Greek Old Testament is the same as the word for "sin" there. Isaiah 53:10 says the servant's life is made "an offering for guilt." Zacchaeus' restitution (Luke 19:8) shows the same principle.

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on whether you take unintentional sin seriously. Ask God to show you something you have not noticed.

Think of a wrong you have done to someone. Is there something you could do to make it right?

Thank God that the sin offering is finished in Christ, and that you can say "and he shall be forgiven" about yourself.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to forgive the sins you do not see.

Thank Jesus for being sacrificed outside the gate for you.

Ask him to show you what you need to make right.

LEVITICUS 10:3

DAY 131 · WEEK 19

Leviticus 6:1-7:38

Priestly instructions for the offerings

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 66 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 6:1-7:38. These chapters repeat the offerings and add instructions for the priests. They can feel technical, so look for what they tell you about the priests' role and about the way worshipers were fed and cared for.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapters 1 to 5 were addressed mainly to the people, telling them what to bring. Chapters 6 and 7 are addressed to Aaron and his sons, telling the priests what to do with the offerings. They go over the burnt offering, the grain offering, the sin offering, the guilt offering, and the peace offering again, this time from the priest's perspective. They show what happens to the meat, who may eat it, and how to guard its holiness.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The fire on the altar "shall not go out" (6:9, 12-13).
2. The priest wears linen garments to remove the ashes, and then changes clothes to carry them outside the camp (6:10-11).
3. The grain offering is eaten by the priests, "in a holy place" (6:16-18).
4. Anything that touches the sin offering becomes holy (6:27).
5. The guilt offering is "most holy," and the priest who offers it may eat it (7:1-7).
6. The priests receive a share of the offerings for their support (7:6-10, 31-36).
7. The peace offering must be eaten within one or two days, and anyone who eats it while unclean "shall be cut off from his people" (7:15-21).
8. The fat and blood are forbidden to eat (7:22-27).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The detailed instructions reveal several truths. The first is the unbroken fire. The burnt offering fire on the altar must never go out. It was lit by God himself (Leviticus 9:24), and it was to be kept burning day and night. The priest's job each morning was to add wood and keep it alive. It is a picture of constant readiness. The way to God is always open, and the place of sacrifice never goes cold.

The second is the care for holiness. The priests change clothes. The ashes are carried to a clean place outside the camp. The utensils that touch the sin offering have to be cleaned or destroyed. The details teach that holy things are not to be treated casually. God's holiness is not passive. It sanctifies what touches it, and it is dangerous to what is unclean.

The third is the provision for the priests. They receive a share of the offerings as their food. God does not ask them to serve without support. This is an early example of the principle that "those who proclaim the gospel should get their living by the gospel" (1 Corinthians 9:14). It is also a reminder that the people's offerings feed those who serve them in worship.

The fourth is the careful rules for the peace offering. It must be eaten promptly and in a state of cleanness. A feast with God is not to be taken lightly. To come to the table when unclean is to risk being "cut off." This will be echoed in the New Testament, where Paul warns about taking the Lord's Supper "in an unworthy manner" (1 Corinthians 11:27).

Finally, the prohibition on eating blood is repeated, because blood is the life and belongs to God. This is the reason that blood is used for atonement. You will read the explanation in Leviticus 17:11.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the priest who offered himself, and he is also the sacrifice that feeds his people. "Whoever feeds on my flesh and drinks my blood has eternal life" (John 6:54). The fire that never goes out points to the Spirit who has been given to us (Acts 2:3). Paul says that Christians should "present your bodies as a living sacrifice" (Romans 12:1), and Peter says that we are priests who offer "spiritual sacrifices" (1 Peter 2:5).

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether the fire of worship is still burning in your life, or whether it has gone cold.

Think about how you support those who serve you spiritually, such as a pastor, a teacher, or a missionary. Is there a way you could support them more?

Next time you take communion, prepare yourself with care, and approach the table with reverence and gratitude.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep the fire of love for him burning in you.
- Thank him for feeding his people with himself.
- Ask him to teach you to approach his table with reverence.

DAY 132 · WEEK 19

Leviticus 8:1-10:20

Priestly ordination; Nadab and Abihu, God's holiness is not safe

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 63 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 8:1-10:20. This reading includes the ordination of the priests, the first sacrifices, and a terrible event on the first day. Read the contrast between chapter 9 and chapter 10 carefully.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The instructions in Leviticus 1 to 7 were given at Sinai. Now the narrative moves forward. In chapter 8, Moses carries out the ordination ceremony that was described in Exodus 29. In chapter 9, on the eighth day, the priests begin their ministry. In chapter 10, two of Aaron's sons make an offering that God did not command, and they die. The sequence shows both the glory of God's provision and the danger of approaching him on our own terms.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Moses washes Aaron and his sons, dresses them, anoints them, and offers the sin offering, the burnt offering, and the ordination offering (8:1-30).
2. The priests must stay at the entrance of the tent for seven days, "so that you may not die" (8:33-35).
3. On the eighth day, Aaron offers the sacrifices for himself and for the people (9:1-21).
4. Aaron blesses the people, and "the glory of the LORD appeared to all the people" (9:22-23).
5. "Fire came out from before the LORD and consumed the burnt offering and the fat on the altar, and when all the people saw it, they shouted and fell on their faces" (9:24).

6. Nadab and Abihu "offered unauthorized fire before the LORD, which he had not commanded them" (10:1).

7. "Fire came out from before the LORD and consumed them, and they died before the LORD" (10:2).

8. Moses says, "This is what the LORD has said: Among those who are near me I will be sanctified, and before all the people I will be glorified" (10:3). "And Aaron held his peace."

STEP 4

Interpretation

This is one of the hardest passages in the Old Testament, so take it slowly. It shows two sides of God. In chapter 9, the glory of God appears and fire from heaven accepts the sacrifice. The people shout and fall on their faces. It is an overwhelming scene of acceptance. God has provided a way, the priests have done what he commanded, and he has come down to be with them.

In chapter 10, the same fire that consumed the sacrifice consumes two priests. The difference is that Nadab and Abihu offered "unauthorized fire." The text does not say exactly what was wrong with it. It says only that it was something God "had not commanded." The lesson is more important than the details. God is not to be approached in just any way we choose. He has told us how to worship, and worship that goes beyond his word is dangerous.

The event happens on the very day the priesthood begins. It is a warning at the start. The text is saying that God's holiness is not a matter of mood or ritual. It is who he is, and those who serve near him must take it seriously. Moses' explanation is the key: "Among those who are near me I will be sanctified." Those who are closest to God are held to the highest standard.

Aaron's silence in the face of the loss of his sons is a moment of great restraint. He does not argue, and he does not accuse God. He holds his peace. It is a hard, quiet response to a hard event.

We must also remember that the story is not meant to tell us that God is arbitrary. The sacrifices were provided for exactly this reason: so that sinners could approach safely. The danger was not in the system but in ignoring it. Those who came in the way God had commanded were welcome. Those who came another way were not.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 12:28-29 says, “Let us offer to God acceptable worship, with reverence and awe, for our God is a consuming fire.” Peter quotes the same theme, “Be holy, for I am holy” (1 Peter 1:16). The story of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5:1-11) echoes it, as the early church learned a similar lesson about deceit in worship. Jesus has made a new and living way open to us (Hebrews 10:19-20), and he is the way (John 14:6).

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself whether you come to God in the way he has taught, through Christ and in his Word, or in a way that suits you.

Take a few minutes to think about the seriousness of worship. Come to church this week with reverence.

If you are grieving a loss, ask God to give you the quiet courage that Aaron showed.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you think of when you hear that he is a consuming fire.
- Thank him for the new and living way in Jesus.
- Ask him to teach you to worship with reverence and awe.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Among those who are near me I will be sanctified, and before all the people I will be glorified."

LEVITICUS 10:3

REST

Meditation

Leviticus 10:3 is a sober verse to hold on a day of rest. It comes right after the deaths of Nadab and Abihu, and it is the explanation God gives for what happened. Do not rush past it.

"Among those who are near me." God speaks about his priests, and by extension all who draw near to him. Nearness is a privilege. It is also a responsibility. The closer you are to God, the more seriously he takes your obedience.

"I will be sanctified." To sanctify means to treat as holy. God will be treated as holy, either by willing worship or by his own action. It is not a request. It is a statement about how the world is. He will not be ignored.

"And before all the people I will be glorified." The worship of God is public. The conduct of those who lead worship is seen by everyone. His glory is at stake in how his people approach him.

For the Christian, the verse is a call to reverence. In Christ we are brought near, closer than Aaron ever was. We are not afraid, because the sacrifice has been made. But we are not casual either. Hebrews says, “let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith” (Hebrews 10:22), and “let us offer to God acceptable worship, with reverence and awe” (Hebrews 12:28).

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the end of Exodus and the beginning of Leviticus. You saw the tabernacle built exactly as God commanded and the glory of the LORD fill the tent. In Leviticus you studied the five main offerings: the burnt offering, the grain offering, the peace offering, the sin offering, and the guilt offering. You read the priests’ instructions for each, and you watched the ordination of Aaron and his sons. You saw the glory of God appear, and then you saw the death of Nadab and Abihu. The week taught that God makes a way for sinners to draw near, that he asks for obedience and reverence, and that the nearer we come, the more seriously he is to be honored.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The offerings in Leviticus 1 to 7 teach atonement, thanks, and fellowship. Which of these three do you most need to experience right now?

Jesus fulfills all of the offerings. How is he your burnt offering, your sin offering, and your peace offering? Write down one way each speaks to you.

God said, “Among those who are near me I will be sanctified.” What would it look like for you to approach God with both confidence and reverence this week?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

DAY 134 · WEEK 20

Leviticus 11:1-13:59

Clean and unclean; skin diseases, holiness as separation

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 82 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 11:1-13:59. These chapters are some of the strangest in the Bible. They describe clean and unclean animals, childbirth, and skin diseases. Read them with one question in mind: what is God teaching his people about holiness?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the ordination of the priests and the offerings, Leviticus turns to the question of what is clean and unclean. The Hebrew words are tameh and tahor. “Unclean” does not mean “sinful” or “dirty.” It means unfit for the sanctuary. The laws apply to food, to childbirth, to skin diseases, and to mildew in clothing. They govern daily life, and they remind Israel at every meal and every household event that they are a people set apart.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The land animals that may be eaten are those that chew the cud and have a split hoof (11:1-8).
2. Water creatures with fins and scales are allowed, and other sea creatures are not (11:9-12).
3. Many birds and insects are named as unclean (11:13-23).
4. “For I am the LORD who brought you up out of the land of Egypt to be your God. You shall therefore be holy, for I am holy” (11:45).
5. After childbirth, a mother is unclean for a period, and then brings a burnt offering and a sin offering (12:1-8).
6. The priest examines skin conditions and declares a person clean or unclean (13:1-46).

7. The one who is unclean must "live alone. His dwelling shall be outside the camp" (13:46).

8. The same rules apply to mildew in clothing (13:47-59).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Why does God give these laws? The Bible does not give one simple answer, but the text points to several truths.

The first is explicit: the laws teach holiness. Leviticus 11:44-45 says, "For I am the LORD your God. Consecrate yourselves, and be holy, for I am holy." The food laws are one way that Israel's daily life is shaped by the idea of separation. At every meal, an Israelite was reminded that he belonged to a God who had set his people apart from the nations. These laws marked the boundary between Israel and the world.

The second is that they teach us to distinguish. The categories of clean and unclean train the people to think about the difference between what belongs in God's presence and what does not. Many of the unclean things are associated with death, decay, or disorder. The uncleanness of skin disease and discharge points to the brokenness of a world under death. These conditions were not sins, but they were signs of a fallen creation, and so they kept a person out of the sanctuary.

Third, the exclusion of the unclean person from the camp is a sobering picture. The person with a serious skin disease had to live alone, tear his clothes, and cry, "Unclean, unclean." It is one of the loneliest images in the Bible. It shows what sin and death do: they separate us from the community and from God's presence.

But note the role of the priest. He does not cause the uncleanness. He examines and pronounces. And as chapter 14 will show, the priest is also the one who declares a cleansed person clean. The system points to a need that it cannot meet. It shows that people cannot cleanse themselves.

We should be careful about using these laws for health advice, or for ranking people. They belong to Israel's life under the old covenant, and the New Testament tells us that their purpose has been fulfilled. In Mark 7:19, Jesus declares all foods clean. In Acts 10, Peter is told, "What God has made clean, do not call common."

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus touched lepers and healed them (Mark 1:40-42), and instead of being made unclean, he made them clean. Paul says that "nothing is unclean in itself" (Romans 14:14), and that in Christ the dividing wall between Jew and Gentile has been broken down (Ephesians 2:14). Hebrews 13:12 says that Jesus suffered outside the gate, in the place of the unclean. Peter's vision in Acts 10 shows the end of the food distinction as a mark of God's people.

STEP 6

Application

Think about the call to be holy and set apart. What areas of life show that you belong to God?

Remember someone who is isolated by illness, shame, or circumstance. Ask how you could reach out to them in the way that Jesus reached out to the lepers.

Thank God that in Christ, what was unclean is made clean, and that the barrier is gone.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to make you holy in a way that draws people to him.
- Thank Jesus for touching the unclean and making them clean.
- Ask him to show you someone who is alone and how you might reach them.

LEVITICUS 19:2

DAY 135 · WEEK 20

Leviticus 14:1-15:33

Cleansing rituals; bodily discharges, wholeness restored

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 65 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 14:1-15:33. Yesterday ended with the isolation of the unclean person. Today you read the ritual that welcomes a healed person back into the community. As you read, notice how much happens before the person is restored.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 13 described how the priest examines someone with a skin disease. Chapter 14 describes what happens when the person is healed. The priest goes out to the person, who is outside the camp, and examines him. If he is healed, a ritual with two birds and a series of offerings brings him back. Chapter 15 describes bodily discharges and the rules for cleansing. These chapters are about restoration. Where chapters 11 to 13 describe the problem, chapters 14 and 15 describe the way back.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The priest “shall go out of the camp” to examine the healed person (14:3).
2. Two live birds are taken. One is killed over fresh water, and the other, dipped in the blood, is released into the open field (14:4-7).
3. The person washes, shaves, and bathes, and then may enter the camp, but must stay outside his tent for seven days (14:8-9).
4. On the eighth day he brings a guilt offering, a sin offering, a burnt offering, and a grain offering (14:10-20).
5. Blood and oil are put on his right ear, right thumb, and right big toe, as with the priests (14:14, 17).

6. Provision is made for the poor, who may bring birds in place of lambs (14:21-32).
7. Chapter 15 describes unclean discharges, and what a person must do to be cleansed: wash, wait, and offer a sacrifice (15:1-30).
8. The purpose is stated: "Thus you shall keep the people of Israel separate from their uncleanness, so that they may not die in their uncleanness by defiling my tabernacle that is in their midst" (15:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The ritual for cleansing is more elaborate than you might expect, and it contains a beautiful picture. The healed person is outside the camp, and the priest comes to him. The priest does not wait at the sanctuary. He goes out to the one who is unclean. It is a small detail with a large meaning.

The two birds are a picture of death and release. One bird is killed, and the other is dipped in its blood and let go. The bird flies away alive and free, covered in the blood of the one that died. This is a picture of substitution and freedom. The death of one gives life to the other.

The anointing of the healed person's ear, thumb, and toe is the same as in the ordination of the priests (Exodus 29:20). He is restored not only to the community but to something like priestly dignity. A person who was cast out of the camp is brought into the tabernacle courts, marked with blood and oil. The healed leper is treated almost as if he were a priest.

The eight days also repeat the pattern of ordination. A person who has been cleansed is given a new beginning. And the provision for the poor shows again that the way back is open to everyone. No one is permanently excluded because he cannot afford the offering.

Chapter 15 on discharges might seem the most embarrassing material in the Bible, but notice its tone. It treats the body matter-of-factly. Uncleanness is not shameful. It is something that happens in a mortal body, and it has a procedure. The principle in verse 31 is the key. The danger is not the condition itself. It is defiling the tabernacle where God lives. These rules protect the nearness of God.

STEP 5

Connection

The Gospels record that Jesus healed lepers and then told them to go and show themselves to the priest (Luke 5:12-14; 17:14). They are fulfilling these chapters. Jesus went outside the camp to reach the unclean, just as the priest did. Hebrews 9:13-14 says, "If the blood of goats and bulls... sanctify for the purification of the flesh, how much more will the blood of Christ... purify our conscience." Paul says that we are "washed" and "sanctified" in the name of the Lord Jesus (1 Corinthians 6:11).

STEP 6

Application

Think about the picture of the priest going out of the camp. Thank Jesus for coming to find you when you were far from God.

If you know someone who feels excluded, pray for a way to welcome them.

Recall the moment you were brought into God's family. Give thanks for the new beginning he gave you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for coming outside the camp to find you.
- Ask him to help you welcome others as he welcomed you.
- Tell him what it cost him to bring you home.

LEVITICUS 19:2

DAY 136 · WEEK 20

Leviticus 16:1-34

The Day of Atonement, the center of the entire system

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 34 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 16:1-34. This is the most important chapter in the book. Read it slowly, and picture the high priest going through the veil with blood. Then notice the two goats and what happens to each.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, is the one day of the year when the high priest enters the Most Holy Place. The chapter begins with a reminder of the death of Nadab and Abihu (16:1), because the sanctuary is dangerous. Over the year, the tabernacle has been defiled by the sins of the people, and on this one day it is cleansed, and the sins of the nation are dealt with. It is the center of the whole system, and everything else in Leviticus is built around it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Aaron may not come “at any time into the Holy Place inside the veil” or he will die (16:2).
2. He bathes, puts on holy linen garments, and offers a bull for his own sin first (16:3-4, 11).
3. He takes a censer of burning coals and incense into the Most Holy Place, “so that the cloud of the incense may cover the mercy seat” (16:12-13).
4. He sprinkles the blood of the bull and the goat on the mercy seat and before it (16:14-15).
5. “Thus he shall make atonement for the Holy Place, because of the uncleannesses of the people of Israel and because of their transgressions, all their sins” (16:16).

6. Two goats are chosen. One is the LORD's, killed as a sin offering. The other is the scapegoat (16:7-10).

7. Aaron lays both hands on the live goat, confesses "all the iniquities of the people of Israel," and sends it into the wilderness (16:21-22).

8. "For on this day shall atonement be made for you to cleanse you. You shall be clean before the LORD from all your sins" (16:30). The day is to be a Sabbath of solemn rest, and a day of fasting, for all time (16:29-31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This chapter gathers up everything you have read in Leviticus so far. There are four parts, and each has a lesson.

First, there is the high priest's preparation. He cannot simply walk into God's presence. He must bathe, change his clothes, and offer a bull for his own sin. Even the mediator needs a mediator. The priest is a sinner, and his own sin has to be covered before he can cover anyone else's. There is a built-in sense that this system is incomplete.

Second, there is the entry into the Most Holy Place. Once a year, one man goes behind the veil, with a cloud of incense to shield him, and sprinkles blood on the mercy seat. This is the place where the tablets of the law lay, the testimony against Israel's sin. The blood goes between the law and the presence of God. The place that would condemn is covered by blood. This is atonement at its most vivid.

Third, there is the cleansing of the sanctuary. The tabernacle itself is purified because of the people's sin. Sin pollutes even the place where God lives, and it must be cleansed or God's presence cannot remain. This is an important idea. Sin has real effects on the world.

Fourth, there are the two goats. One dies, and its blood is used to cover sin. The other lives, and the sins of the people are placed on its head. It is sent away into the wilderness, to a remote and uninhabited place (16:22). Together, the two goats show two sides of atonement: sin is paid for, and sin is carried away. The people see their sin removed, and they know that it is gone.

Yet the sacrifice has to be repeated every year. Hebrews will say that this repetition is itself the proof that the blood of animals cannot finally take away sin. The Day of Atonement points beyond itself to a greater sacrifice, one that does not need to be offered again.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 9 and 10 interpret this chapter in detail. Christ entered "once for all into the holy places, not by means of the blood of goats and calves but by means of his own blood, thus securing an eternal redemption" (Hebrews 9:12). The veil was torn in two at his death (Matthew 27:51). He is the sacrifice and the high priest. Romans 3:25 says that God put him forward "as a propitiation by his blood." John the Baptist says, "Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sin of the world!" (John 1:29), and Isaiah 53:6 says that "the LORD has laid on him the iniquity of us all."

STEP 6

Application

Read Hebrews 9:11-14 and 10:19-22 today. Notice the contrast with Leviticus 16, and thank God for the finished work of Christ.

Picture the scapegoat going into the wilderness with your sins. Ask God to help you believe that they are truly gone.

Because the sacrifice is finished, you can come near with confidence. Spend a few minutes in unhurried prayer.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for fulfilling the Day of Atonement once for all.
- Ask for a true heart and full assurance as you draw near.
- Tell God what it means to you that your sins have been carried away.

LEVITICUS 19:2

DAY 137 · WEEK 20

Psalm 51

True repentance, the heart beneath the sacrifice

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 19 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 51. After the Day of Atonement, this psalm shows the heart that stands behind the sacrifice. Read it as a prayer you could pray yourself, and notice how David asks for what the sacrifices could not give.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title of the psalm says it is "A Psalm of David, when Nathan the prophet went to him, after he had gone in to Bathsheba." It is David's prayer after his sin with Bathsheba and his murder of Uriah (2 Samuel 11 and 12). It is the greatest of the penitential psalms. The situation is particularly striking against the background of Leviticus. David's sin was deliberate, and the sacrifices of Leviticus 4 covered only unintentional sin. He has no sacrifice to bring. All he can do is throw himself on God's mercy.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Have mercy on me, O God, according to your steadfast love; according to your abundant mercy blot out my transgressions" (v. 1).
2. "Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin!" (v. 2).
3. "Against you, you only, have I sinned and done what is evil in your sight" (v. 4).
4. "Behold, I was brought forth in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me" (v. 5).
5. "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow" (v. 7).
6. "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me" (v. 10).
7. "Cast me not away from your presence, and take not your Holy Spirit from me" (v. 11).

8 “For you will not delight in sacrifice, or I would give it; you will not be pleased with a burnt offering. The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God, you will not despise” (vv. 16-17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 51 is the honest prayer of someone who has sinned deeply and knows it. David uses the vocabulary of Leviticus: “wash,” “cleanse,” “purge with hyssop” (the plant used in the cleansing rituals of Leviticus 14). But he cannot use the sacrifices, because there was no sacrifice for what he did. He is thrown back entirely on God’s mercy. His first word is “mercy,” and the basis of his appeal is not his own repentance but God’s “steadfast love,” the same word you read in Exodus 34:6.

The famous line, “Against you, you only, have I sinned,” does not mean that David’s sin did not hurt Bathsheba or Uriah. It means that all sin is ultimately against God. The wrong to people is real, but the deepest wrong is to the one who made them in his image. A person who truly sees his sin sees that it is first of all an offense against God.

Notice that David says his problem goes deeper than his actions. “I was brought forth in iniquity.” He is not excusing himself. He is saying that sin is not just something he did. It is something he is. This is why he prays, “Create in me a clean heart.” He does not ask for help to do better. He asks for a new creation. The word “create” is the same one used in Genesis 1:1. Only God can make a clean heart, as only God can make the world.

The ending is the center of the psalm. “You will not delight in sacrifice… the sacrifices of God are a broken spirit.” David is not rejecting the sacrificial system. In verse 19 he looks forward to right sacrifices being offered again. He is saying that sacrifices without a broken heart are empty. The system always depended on the heart of the worshiper, and God has always looked for it.

Psalm 51 is not a way to get around the Day of Atonement. It is the prayer of the person who knows what it means.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus told a parable of a tax collector who beat his chest and prayed, “God, be merciful to me, a sinner!” and went home justified (Luke 18:13-14). Paul quotes Psalm 51:4 in Romans 3:4. The “clean heart” and “right spirit” echo God’s promise in Ezekiel 36:25-27. John says, “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness” (1 John 1:9). In Christ, the broken heart finds the sacrifice it needs.

STEP 6

Application

Make this psalm your own prayer today. Read it aloud slowly, and let it lead you to confess whatever is on your heart.

If you carry guilt over something you have already confessed, remember the promise that God does not despise a broken and contrite heart.

Ask God to create in you the clean heart you cannot make yourself.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray the words of Psalm 51 in your own words, telling God what you need cleansed.
- Ask him to create a clean heart in you.
- Thank him for Jesus, in whom your confession is answered.

LEVITICUS 19:2

DAY 138 · WEEK 20

Leviticus 17:1-19:37

Blood; sexual purity; love your neighbor

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 81 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 17:1-19:37. This reading includes the unit's anchor verse in chapter 17 and the well-known command to love your neighbor in chapter 19. Look for the connection between the sacrificial laws and the everyday ethical commands.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

With the Day of Atonement behind them, the book of Leviticus turns from how a holy God is approached to how a holy people live. Chapters 17 to 26 are often called the Holiness Code, because the refrain "You shall be holy, for I the LORD your God am holy" (19:2) runs through them. Chapter 17 gives the reason for the prohibition on eating blood. Chapter 18 sets out sexual boundaries in contrast to Egypt and Canaan. Chapter 19 gathers a wide variety of commands for ordinary life.

STEP 3

Observation

1. All sacrifices must be brought to the tent of meeting, and not offered in the open field (17:1-9).
2. "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it for you on the altar to make atonement for your souls, for it is the blood that makes atonement by the life" (17:11).
3. The prohibition of eating blood applies to sojourners too (17:10-14).
4. Israel is not to live as Egypt or Canaan do (18:3).
5. The laws of sexual conduct in chapter 18 are given because the nations around them "defiled" the land (18:24-30).
6. "You shall be holy, for I the LORD your God am holy" (19:2).

7. The commands in chapter 19 include leaving the edges of the field for the poor (19:9-10), not stealing or lying (19:11), not withholding wages (19:13), and showing impartiality (19:15).

8. "You shall love your neighbor as yourself: I am the LORD" (19:18). "The stranger who sojourns with you shall be to you as the native among you, and you shall love him as yourself" (19:34).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Leviticus 17:11 is the key to the whole sacrificial system, and it is the anchor verse of this unit. It tells you why blood is used. It is not because blood is magical. It is because "the life of the flesh is in the blood." Blood represents life, and life is given on the altar in the place of the sinner's life. "I have given it for you." The sacrifice is not a human invention to placate an angry God. It is something God himself provided. He gave the blood on the altar for your atonement. The system is a gift.

It also teaches that atonement is costly. A life is given. Sin is not forgiven cheaply. This is not a cruel principle. It reflects how seriously God takes sin, and how seriously he takes the value of life.

The chapters that follow show what holy people look like. Notice that the same chapter that commands "You shall be holy" also commands leaving the edge of your field for the poor and paying a worker his wages at the end of each day. Holiness is not only about worship. It is about how you treat your neighbor, your employee, the deaf person, the blind person, and the foreigner. "You shall not curse the deaf or put a stumbling block before the blind" (19:14) is one of the sharpest examples. The vulnerable are protected because God is watching, and "I am the LORD" is repeated like a signature on each command.

The great command in verse 18, "You shall love your neighbor as yourself," is in the middle of this chapter. It is not a new idea in the New Testament. It is the center of the law. The love is practical: it shows itself in honesty, fairness, and generosity. And verse 34 extends it to the foreigner, with a reminder: "for you were strangers in the land of Egypt." The memory of their own redemption is the basis for how they treat others.

The chapters also remind us that the call to holiness comes after atonement. The people can be holy because their sins have been covered. Grace comes first, and the life of holiness follows.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus calls the command to love your neighbor the second greatest in the law (Matthew 22:39), and he explains it in the parable of the Good Samaritan (Luke 10:25-37). Paul says that "the whole law is fulfilled in one word: You shall love your neighbor as yourself" (Galatians 5:14). Peter quotes Leviticus 19:2 in 1 Peter 1:15-16. And Hebrews 9:22 says, "Without the shedding of blood there is no forgiveness of sins," based on Leviticus 17:11. Christ is the one whose blood was given for us.

STEP 6

Application

Read Leviticus 17:11 several times. Consider what it means that God gave the blood for you.

Choose one command from chapter 19 that speaks to your life. Where could you practice it this week?

Think of someone in your community who is a stranger or an outsider. How could you show love to them?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for the life given for you.
- Ask him to make you holy as he is holy.
- Ask him to teach you to love your neighbor and the stranger.

LEVITICUS 19:2

DAY 139 · WEEK 20

Leviticus 20:1-22:33

Holiness for priests and people; sacred things

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 79 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 20:1-22:33. These chapters continue the Holiness Code with penalties for serious sin, and with strict rules for the priests. Watch for the repeated reasons God gives for his commands.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 20 lists punishments for the offenses named in chapters 18 and 19, including child sacrifice, occult practices, and various sexual sins. Chapters 21 and 22 return to the priests and the sacred offerings, setting a higher standard for those who serve at the altar. The reading is demanding, and some of it is hard to take in. It is important to remember that these were laws for Israel as a nation under the old covenant, in a time and a place very different from ours.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The laws of chapter 20 are tied to the command, “Consecrate yourselves, and be holy, for I am the LORD your God” (20:7-8).
2. God says, “You shall be holy to me, for I the LORD am holy and have separated you from the peoples, that you should be mine” (20:26).
3. The punishments are severe, including death for some offenses, because the land itself will “vomit you out” if it is defiled (20:22).
4. The priests must avoid contact with the dead, except for close family, and are to be careful about marriage (21:1-15).
5. A priest with a physical defect may eat the holy food, but may not approach the altar (21:16-23).

6. Unclean priests may not eat the holy things until they are cleansed (22:1-9).
7. Offerings must be without blemish (22:17-25).
8. "You shall not profane my holy name, that I may be sanctified among the people of Israel. I am the LORD who sanctifies you" (22:32).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The refrain of this section is the double statement of God's character and God's work: "I am the LORD who sanctifies you." In chapter 20, the people are told to consecrate themselves and be holy. In 20:8 God says he is the one who makes them holy. In 21:8 and 22:32 he says it again. The call to holiness is not a demand to make yourself holy by effort. It is a call to live in line with what God has already done by choosing and setting apart his people.

The severity of the penalties is meant to be understood in context. In a nation where God lived among the people in the tabernacle, serious sin was not just a private matter. It threatened the whole community, because it defiled the land and the sanctuary. The penalties show how serious these sins were in God's eyes. They also show that Israel, as a theocracy, had a unique role. We should not read these laws as a model for modern governments. The New Testament shows that the church does not carry the sword, and that discipline in the church takes the form of rebuke and exclusion (1 Corinthians 5).

The restrictions on the priests are another picture of the holiness of God. A priest must be physically whole and ritually clean. He serves a God of perfect holiness, and the priest's own body is meant to reflect it. These regulations may seem harsh, especially the rule about physical defects. But they were not a judgment of a person's worth. A priest with a defect still ate the holy food and shared in the priestly benefits. The point was to picture the perfection of the one who would come to be the true priest.

And note again that offerings had to be without blemish. God deserves the best. It is a theme that runs from Cain and Abel to Malachi, where God rebukes the people for bringing blind and lame animals (Malachi 1:8). What we give to God shows what we think of him.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the priest without defect, "holy, innocent, unstained, separated from sinners" (Hebrews 7:26), and the lamb "without blemish or spot" (1 Peter 1:19). Paul says that Christ "gave himself up for her, that he might sanctify her" (Ephesians 5:25-26), and that "God has called us not for impurity, but in holiness" (1 Thessalonians 4:7). Peter calls believers "a chosen race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation" (1 Peter 2:9).

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on the statement, “I am the LORD who sanctifies you.” Thank God that your holiness depends on his work.

Ask whether you are giving God your best, or what is left over.

Pray for the leaders of your church, that they would be examples of holiness.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for setting you apart as his own.

Ask him to help you give him your best.

Thank him for Jesus, the perfect priest and spotless lamb.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Leviticus 19:2 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"You shall be holy, for I the LORD your God am holy."

LEVITICUS 19:2

REST

Meditation

Leviticus 19:2 is the call that sums up the whole book. It is spoken to "all the congregation of the people of Israel," not just to the priests. Holiness is the vocation of every member of God's people.

"You shall be holy." The word means set apart, belonging to God. It has two sides. It means separation from what is sinful and common, and it means dedication to God. A holy person is not simply someone who avoids certain things. He is someone who belongs to God.

"For I the LORD your God am holy." This is the reason, and it is the whole reason. The command is not based on a rule but on a person. Israel is to be holy because their God is holy. The people of a holy God are to resemble him, as children resemble a father.

Notice the next verses in chapter 19. Holiness is not only about worship. It is about respect for parents, care for the poor, honesty in business, and love for your neighbor. To be holy is to reflect God's character in ordinary life.

For the Christian, Peter quotes the verse: “As he who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, since it is written, You shall be holy, for I am holy” (1 Peter 1:15-16). The call is the same, but the power is greater. In Christ you have been made holy, and the Holy Spirit lives in you to make you so.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you studied the heart of the book of Leviticus. You read about clean and unclean animals and the laws of skin disease, and you saw how the priest goes outside the camp to welcome a healed person back. You read the Day of Atonement, with the high priest entering the Most Holy Place and the two goats, one sacrificed and one sent away. You prayed Psalm 51, the prayer of a broken and contrite heart. You read the unit’s anchor verse, Leviticus 17:11, about the life in the blood. You read the Holiness Code, with the great command to love your neighbor as yourself, and the laws for priests and offerings. The week taught that atonement is costly and given by God, and that a forgiven people are called to be holy.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The Day of Atonement showed sin being paid for and carried away. Which of these two pictures, the sacrificed goat or the scapegoat, speaks to you most today? Why?

Hebrews says that Jesus is both the high priest who enters the Most Holy Place and the sacrifice whose blood is offered. How does it change your sense of security to know that your priest and your sacrifice are the same person?

Leviticus 19 ties holiness to ordinary things like honest scales and care for the poor. Where in your daily life is God calling you to reflect his holiness more clearly?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that in Christ you have been set apart.

Ask him to help you love your neighbor as yourself this week.

Rest in his finished work today.

DAY 141 · WEEK 21

Leviticus 23:1-24:23

The feasts of the LORD; the lampstand and bread

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 53 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 23:1-24:23. Chapter 23 lays out the yearly calendar of Israel's festivals. Read it as a map of the year, and watch how often the word "rest" and the word "holy" appear.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The festivals of Israel mark the rhythm of the year around the agricultural seasons and, more importantly, around the great acts of God. They begin with the weekly Sabbath and run through Passover, Unleavened Bread, First Fruits, Weeks, Trumpets, the Day of Atonement, and Booths. Chapter 24 returns to the tabernacle with the lamp and the bread, and then describes an incident of blasphemy that leads to a ruling about justice. The chapters show that holiness extends to time as well as to space.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "These are the appointed feasts of the LORD, the holy convocations, which you shall proclaim at their appointed times" (23:2).
2. The weekly Sabbath comes first in the list (23:3).
3. The Passover is on the fourteenth day of the first month, followed by the seven days of Unleavened Bread (23:4-8).
4. The first sheaf of the harvest is waved before the LORD as First Fruits (23:9-14).
5. The Feast of Weeks comes fifty days after First Fruits, with a new grain offering (23:15-22).
6. The Feast of Trumpets and the Day of Atonement are in the seventh month (23:23-32).

7. The Feast of Booths lasts a week, and the people live in booths "that your generations may know that I made the people of Israel dwell in booths when I brought them out of the land of Egypt" (23:33-43).

8. A man who blasphemes the name is stoned, and the principle is stated: "You shall have the same rule for the sojourner and for the native" (24:10-23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The calendar in Leviticus 23 makes a point that is easy to miss: time itself belongs to God. Israel's year was not a series of random days. It was a story told in seasons. Passover recalled the night of the exodus. First Fruits recognized that the harvest belonged to the LORD. Weeks gave thanks for the grain. Trumpets and the Day of Atonement called the people to repentance. Booths celebrated God's provision in the wilderness. Every year, the people were reminded of who God is and what he has done.

The list begins with the Sabbath. Before the great festivals, there is the weekly rhythm of rest. The seventh day, each week, is a "holy convocation." It was the oldest feast, established at creation, and the foundation of the others. The point is that Israel's whole life is a pattern of work and rest, of effort and gratitude.

Notice how each festival is a response to something God did. They are not mainly about human achievement. Passover remembers rescue. Booths remembers the wilderness. First Fruits acknowledges that the harvest is a gift. The festivals teach the people to remember, and remembering is one of the main commands of the Old Testament. They are a form of teaching, put into the shape of a year.

The festivals also look forward. The harvest festivals point to a greater ingathering. The Day of Atonement points to a final cleansing. The feast of Booths, with its joy and its prospect of rest in the land, points to the day when God will live with his people forever.

The last part of chapter 24 includes the case of a man who cursed God's name. The point is that the name of the LORD is not to be treated lightly, and that the same law applies to everyone, native or sojourner. Justice does not play favorites.

STEP 5

Connection

The New Testament sees the festivals fulfilled in Christ. He is the Passover lamb (1 Corinthians 5:7). He is the "firstfruits" of those who have died (1 Corinthians 15:20). The Spirit came at Pentecost, the Feast of Weeks (Acts 2:1-4). Jesus stood in the temple at the Feast of Booths and said, “If anyone thirsts, let him come to me and drink” (John 7:37). Colossians 2:16-17 calls the festivals “a shadow of the things to come, but the substance belongs to Christ.” The church celebrates the Lord’s Day as a weekly remembrance of the resurrection.

STEP 6

Application

Think about your own calendar. Does it reflect what God has done, or does it only reflect your work?

Choose one rhythm this year, such as a weekly day of rest, or an annual time to remember God’s faithfulness, and plan for it.

Thank God for the way each of the festivals points to Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to teach you to number your days.
- Thank him for Jesus, the Passover lamb and the firstfruits.
- Ask him to let the rhythm of your life be shaped by his goodness.

DAY 142 · WEEK 21

Leviticus 25:1-26:46

Sabbath year, Jubilee, blessings and curses

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 101 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 25:1-26:46. The first chapter describes a Sabbath year and a Jubilee, which are among the most radical ideas in the law. The second sets out the blessings and curses of the covenant. Read them together and notice how the second grows out of the first.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel was about to enter a land that God was giving them. Leviticus 25 and 26 explain how they were to live in it. The land belongs to God, and the people are his tenants. Every seventh year, the land was to rest. Every fiftieth year, the Jubilee, property returned to its original family and slaves went free. Chapter 26 then sets out what will happen if Israel obeys and if it does not. It is the close of the Holiness Code and the covenant section of Leviticus.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "When you come into the land that I give you, the land shall keep a Sabbath to the LORD" (25:2).
2. In the seventh year, the land is not to be sown or harvested, and God promises to provide enough in the sixth year (25:3-22).
3. The Jubilee is announced on the Day of Atonement: "And you shall consecrate the fiftieth year, and proclaim liberty throughout the land to all its inhabitants" (25:9-10).
4. "The land shall not be sold in perpetuity, for the land is mine. For you are strangers and sojourners with me" (25:23).
5. A relative may "redeem" land or a person who has been sold because of poverty (25:25-28, 47-49).

6. Israelites are not to be treated as slaves, because "they are my servants, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt" (25:42).
7. Obedience will bring rain, harvest, peace, and God's presence: "I will walk among you and will be your God, and you shall be my people" (26:3-13).
8. Disobedience will lead to escalating discipline, ending in exile, and yet "I will remember my covenant with Jacob" (26:14-45).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Sabbath year and Jubilee are a vision of a society shaped by grace. The central claim is in 25:23: "The land is mine." Because God owns the land, no one can own it permanently. The Jubilee resets everything. Debts are cleared, land returns to the families who first received it, and slaves go free. It is a built-in safeguard against the growth of permanent poverty and inequality. No family could be locked out forever.

The reason behind this is the exodus. "They are my servants, whom I brought out of the land of Egypt." Because God redeemed Israel from slavery, Israelites are not to enslave each other. The memory of redemption shapes the economy.

The idea of a redeemer is also introduced here. A relative could buy back land or free a family member who had fallen into debt. This is the background for the story of Ruth and Boaz, and for the later use of the word redeemer for God himself. The redeemer is the one who pays the price to bring back what was lost.

Chapter 26 is the covenant's summary. It is a promise of blessing for faithfulness and a warning of discipline for rebellion. The blessing is rich: rain, harvest, safety, and God walking among them. But the curses are sobering: disease, defeat, famine, and finally exile. The warnings come in stages, with the repeated phrase "if you will not listen to me." God does not strike quickly. He disciplines and warns again, and gives space to turn.

The ending of chapter 26 is the most hopeful part. Even in exile, "I will remember my covenant." God says that he will not "break my covenant with them" (26:44). The covenant ends not with judgment but with a promise. This is the hope the prophets will cling to when the curses fall.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus began his ministry by reading from Isaiah 61, "to proclaim liberty to the captives… to proclaim the year of the LORD's favor" (Luke 4:18-19), which echoes the Jubilee. He is the true Redeemer, who bought us back from slavery to sin (Galatians 3:13; 1 Peter 1:18-19). Paul says that the whole creation “will be set free from its bondage to corruption” (Romans 8:21). Hebrews 4:9 says that a Sabbath rest remains for the people of God.

STEP 6

Application

Consider the claim that everything you have belongs to God. Does that change how you hold your money, your home, or your plans?

Think about people who are trapped in debt or poverty. Is there a way you can act as a redeemer for someone in your life?

Rest in the promise that God remembers his covenant, even when you have failed.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you are holding too tightly, and ask him to teach you to hold it loosely.
- Thank him for the Jubilee Christ has brought.
- Thank him for remembering his covenant with you.

PSALM 91:1

DAY 143 · WEEK 21

Leviticus 27:1-34

Vows and devoted things, the conclusion

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Reading · 34 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Leviticus 27:1-34. This is the last chapter of Leviticus, and it deals with vows and gifts to the sanctuary. It may seem like an odd ending, so read it as a final lesson about what it means to belong to God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the great statements of covenant blessing and curse in chapter 26, the book ends with an appendix about vows. A person might promise himself, his family members, his animals, his house, or his land to the LORD. This chapter explains how to value those promises and how to redeem them. It closes the book with a practical reminder that gifts to God are real, and should be taken seriously.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The chapter begins with “When a man makes a special vow to the LORD involving the valuation of persons” (27:2).
2. A person’s value is set in shekels according to age and sex (27:3-7).
3. The poor could be valued according to what they were able to pay (27:8).
4. A person who dedicates an animal cannot substitute a better or worse one (27:10).
5. Someone who wants to redeem a house or field must add a fifth to its value (27:13, 15, 19).
6. The firstborn of animals already belongs to the LORD and cannot be vowed (27:26).
7. “Every devoted thing is most holy to the LORD” (27:28).

8 “All the tithe of the land, whether of the seed of the land or of the fruit of the trees, is the LORD’s; it is holy to the LORD” (27:30). The book ends: “These are the commandments that the LORD commanded Moses for the people of Israel on Mount Sinai” (27:34).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The last chapter of Leviticus may seem like an anticlimax, but it ties a few themes together.

The first is the seriousness of promises to God. A vow was voluntary, but once made, it was binding. The chapter provides a way to redeem what was promised, but at a cost. The lesson is that words matter. When you make a promise to God, it is not a casual matter. Ecclesiastes 5:4-5 will say the same: “It is better that you should not vow than that you should vow and not pay.”

The second is that everything belongs to God. The firstborn animals are the LORD’s already. The tithe is the LORD’s. The land is the LORD’s, as chapter 25 said. Even the idea of giving something to God is a recognition that he owns it all. When you give, you are not paying God. You are acknowledging what is already his.

The third is the matter of valuation. The chapter assigns a price to persons, and that sounds strange to modern ears. It is not a statement of a person’s worth. It is the amount required to redeem a person who was dedicated to the sanctuary. Without it, someone dedicated to the LORD would have no way back to normal life.

Look at the larger shape of the book. Leviticus begins with the call from the tent of meeting, and the first words are, “If anyone of you brings an offering to the LORD.” It ends with the tithe and the devoted things. The book began with the offering and ends with the offerer. It shows what a holy people look like: they have been redeemed, they have been cleansed, and they give themselves to God.

The final verse is a reminder of where all this began. These commandments came on Mount Sinai. The book is not a collection of legal puzzles. It is the voice of the God who rescued Israel, speaking to the people he lives among.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus praised the widow who gave two small coins, because she gave “all she had to live on” (Mark 12:41-44). Paul urges Christians to give “not reluctantly or under compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver” (2 Corinthians 9:7). Peter says that you were redeemed “not with perishable things such as silver or gold” but with the precious blood of Christ (1 Peter 1:18-19). The price that redeems you is not a figure on a chart. It is the life of the Son.

STEP 6

Application

Think about any promise you have made to God that you have not kept. Bring it to him honestly.

Ask whether you treat what you have as yours or as his. Choose one concrete act of giving this week.

Thank God that the cost of your redemption has been paid by Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give God what is already his, and tell him what you want to give.

Confess promises you have not kept.

Thank him for the price paid for you in Jesus' blood.

PSALM 91:1

DAY 144 · WEEK 21

Psalm 50

I do not rebuke you for sacrifices, what God truly desires

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 50. After weeks of reading about sacrifices, this psalm puts a question to them. Read it as God's own voice, speaking in court, about what he truly wants from his people.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 50 is a psalm of Asaph, one of the leaders of music in David's time. It is set in a courtroom. God summons the earth as a witness and speaks against his people. But the psalm does not say that the sacrifices were wrong. It says that Israel had begun to treat them as a way of handling God, as if he needed them. In the setting of the book of Leviticus, the psalm is a needed correction. It asks what the sacrifices were meant to do.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The Mighty One, God the LORD, speaks and summons the earth from the rising of the sun to its setting" (v. 1).
2. "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God shines forth" (v. 2).
3. God says he will speak to his people: "Gather to me my faithful ones, who made a covenant with me by sacrifice!" (v. 5).
4. "I do not rebuke you for your sacrifices; your burnt offerings are continually before me" (v. 8).
5. "If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for the world and its fullness are mine" (v. 12).
6. "Offer to God a sacrifice of thanksgiving, and perform your vows to the Most High" (v. 14).

7. “Call upon me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you, and you shall glorify me” (v. 15).
8. To the wicked God says, “What right have you to recite my statutes or take my covenant on your lips?” (vv. 16-21). The psalm ends: “The one who offers thanksgiving as his sacrifice glorifies me” (v. 23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm does not criticize the sacrifices themselves. God says, “I do not rebuke you for your sacrifices.” What he corrects is a wrong idea about them. Some in Israel had come to think that the sacrifices fed God, or that they put him in their debt. God answers with a bit of humor: “If I were hungry, I would not tell you.” The cattle on a thousand hills are his. He does not need anything from us.

This is a necessary lesson for any religion. It is easy to think that our worship is a favor to God. The truth is the opposite. We need him, and he does not need us. Sacrifice does not make God our debtor. It is a way for us to receive from him.

What God wants, in place of a misunderstanding of sacrifice, is thanksgiving. “Offer to God a sacrifice of thanksgiving.” The word is todah, and it also names a kind of peace offering, the thanksgiving offering of Leviticus 7:12. God wants his people to come with gratitude, to keep their vows, and to call on him in trouble. The relationship is one of dependence and thanks.

The second half of the psalm turns to people who go through the motions but live wickedly. They recite God’s laws, but they steal, commit adultery, and slander. God’s response is sharp. He has been silent, and they have assumed that he was like them, but now he will confront them. The warning is that formal religion without a changed life is dangerous.

The last verse puts the two halves together: “The one who offers thanksgiving as his sacrifice glorifies me; to one who orders his way rightly I will show the salvation of God.” Thanksgiving and a right way of life belong together. This is the heart behind the sacrifice.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul told the Athenians that God is not “served by human hands, as though he needed anything” (Acts 17:25). Hebrews 13:15 says, “Through him then let us continually offer up a sacrifice of praise to God, that is, the fruit of lips that acknowledge his name.” Jesus said that the people honored him with their lips but their hearts were far away (Mark 7:6). Paul says that we are to “give thanks in all circumstances” (1 Thessalonians 5:18).

STEP 6

Application

Thank God today for five specific things, aloud. Treat it as an offering.

Ask whether your religion has become a way of handling God, rather than receiving from him.

Consider whether your life matches the words you say in worship.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he needs nothing from you yet receives your thanks.

Ask him to keep you from empty religion.

Ask him to let your life match your words.

PSALM 91:1

DAY 145 · WEEK 21

Psalm 40:1-10

I delight to do your will, obedience better than sacrifice

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 10 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 40:1-10. Yesterday's psalm said that God wants thanksgiving more than sacrifices. Today's goes further, with a line that the New Testament applies to Christ. Read verses 6 to 8 slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 40 is a psalm of David. The first ten verses are a song of thanksgiving for being rescued, and the rest of the psalm is a prayer for help. In the first part, David describes how God brought him out of a pit and put a new song in his mouth. Then, in the middle of the thanksgiving, he says something that seems surprising in a week spent reading about sacrifices: God has not desired sacrifice and offering.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I waited patiently for the LORD; he inclined to me and heard my cry" (v. 1).
2. "He drew me up from the pit of destruction, out of the miry bog, and set my feet upon a rock, making my steps secure" (v. 2).
3. "He put a new song in my mouth, a song of praise to our God. Many will see and fear, and put their trust in the LORD" (v. 3).
4. "Blessed is the man who makes the LORD his trust" (v. 4).
5. "Sacrifice and offering you have not desired, but you have given me an open ear. Burnt offering and sin offering you have not required" (v. 6).
6. "Then I said, Behold, I have come; in the scroll of the book it is written of me" (v. 7).
7. "I delight to do your will, O my God; your law is within my heart" (v. 8).

8 “I have told the glad news of deliverance in the great congregation; behold, I have not restrained my lips, O LORD” (v. 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a rescue story. David was in a pit, a bog, and he could not get out. He waited, and God lifted him up and put him on solid ground. The result is a new song. A person who has been rescued cannot help singing. And the song is for others, too: “Many will see and fear, and put their trust in the LORD.”

In verses 6 to 8, David reflects on what God wants in return. His answer echoes Psalm 50, Psalm 51, and the prophets. It is not mainly sacrifice. What God wants is an open ear and a willing heart. “You have given me an open ear.” The Hebrew phrase is literally “ears you have dug for me,” the picture of a God who opens the ears of his servant so he can hear and obey. “I delight to do your will, O my God; your law is within my heart.” It sounds like the promise of the new covenant in Jeremiah 31:33, where the law is written on the heart.

David does not say that the sacrifices are worthless. He says that they are not what God ultimately desires. The sacrifices were always meant to be accompanied by obedience, and obedience is what they were pointing to. “In the scroll of the book it is written of me” may mean that David sees his own kingship described in the law (Deuteronomy 17:18-20). But the language is larger than David could fill. He is a king who delights in God’s will, but not perfectly. His words reach beyond him to the perfect obedient servant.

The psalm ends the section with public witness. David does not keep his rescue to himself. He tells the “glad news” in the great congregation. A rescued person speaks. He declares God’s faithfulness and steadfast love, and does not hide it.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 10:5-10 quotes Psalm 40:6-8 and puts the words on the lips of Christ as he comes into the world: “Sacrifices and offerings you have not desired, but a body have you prepared for me.” Jesus is the one who fully delights to do God’s will. He says, “I have come to do your will, O God.” And by that will, “we have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all.” The sacrifices were always pointing to someone who would offer himself with a willing heart.

STEP 6

Application

Think back to a time when God lifted you out of a pit. Tell someone the story this week.

Ask the Lord for an open ear and a heart that delights in his will, not just one that obeys.

Read Hebrews 10:5-10 and thank Jesus for coming to do the Father's will on your behalf.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for drawing you out of the pit and setting your feet on a rock.

Ask him for an open ear and a heart that delights in his will.

Thank Jesus for coming to do the Father's will for you.

PSALM 91:1

DAY 146 · WEEK 21

Psalm 91

He who dwells in the shelter of the Most High, under God's wings

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 16 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 91. It is one of the best-loved psalms in the Bible, and it fits the end of a long study of the tabernacle. Read it as a description of what it means to live in God's presence.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 91 has no title in the Hebrew, and its author is not named. Jewish tradition connects it with Moses, because the previous psalm, Psalm 90, is "A Prayer of Moses." The psalm is a song of trust. It speaks first about dwelling in the shelter of the Most High, then switches to a promise spoken to the believer, and ends with the voice of God himself. After the reading of the tabernacle, with the glory-cloud, the wings of the cherubim on the ark, and the presence of God among his people, this psalm applies those images to the believer's life.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "He who dwells in the shelter of the Most High will abide in the shadow of the Almighty" (v. 1).
2. "I will say to the LORD, My refuge and my fortress, my God, in whom I trust" (v. 2).
3. "He will cover you with his pinions, and under his wings you will find refuge; his faithfulness is a shield and buckler" (v. 4).
4. The believer need not fear "the terror of the night," "the arrow that flies by day," "the pestilence," or "the destruction that wastes at noonday" (vv. 5-6).
5. "A thousand may fall at your side, ten thousand at your right hand, but it will not come near you" (v. 7).

6. “For he will command his angels concerning you to guard you in all your ways” (v. 11).
7. “Because he holds fast to me in love, I will deliver him; I will protect him, because he knows my name” (v. 14).
8. “With long life I will satisfy him and show him my salvation” (v. 16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The images of the psalm come from the tabernacle. “Shelter” and “shadow” recall the tent. “Under his wings” recalls the cherubim whose wings covered the mercy seat. The one who “dwells” in the shelter of the Most High is a person who lives in his presence. It is a picture of the believer as someone who has taken up residence in God’s house.

The promises that follow are bold. God will protect from plague, from enemies, and from danger. It is important to read them correctly. The Bible does not teach that believers will never suffer, and the psalm itself acknowledges that thousands may fall. The Bible also shows faithful people suffering, including Job, the prophets, and the apostles. The promise is not that nothing will touch you. It is that nothing will touch you apart from God. His presence is with you in the fire and the flood.

This is the lesson Satan missed when he quoted verses 11 and 12 to Jesus in the wilderness (Matthew 4:6). He took the promise of protection and tried to turn it into a license to test God. Jesus answered by quoting Deuteronomy: “You shall not put the LORD your God to the test.” The psalm is a promise to be trusted, not a tool for demanding proof.

The last three verses are spoken by God himself. “Because he holds fast to me in love, I will deliver him.” Notice the reason: not that the person is perfect, but that he holds fast. God’s love and the believer’s trust come together. “I will be with him in trouble; I will rescue him and honor him.” The deepest promise is the presence of God in trouble.

At the end, he says, “I will show him my salvation.” The word is yeshuah, the root of the name of Jesus. The psalm ends with the promise of salvation, which is finally a person.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus used the image of a hen gathering her chicks under her wings (Matthew 23:37). Paul says, “If God is for us, who can be against us?” and that nothing can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus (Romans 8:31-39). Hebrews 1:14 says that angels are “ministering spirits sent out to serve for the sake of those who are to inherit salvation.” Jesus, the one who knew the Father’s name perfectly, is our refuge, and in him we dwell.

STEP 6

Application

Say aloud verses 1 and 2 as a personal declaration. Consider what it means to “dwell” in God’s shelter, not just visit it.

Think of a fear you have. Place it before the Lord and ask him to be your refuge in it.

Do not use this psalm to demand something from God. Use it to trust him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you want to hold on to him in.
- Thank him for his presence in every trouble.
- Ask him to show you his salvation in Jesus.

Memory Verse for the Week

PSALM 91:1

REST

Meditation

Psalm 91:1 is the opening of a song of trust, and a fitting summary of the whole unit. After weeks of reading about the tabernacle, the sacrifices, and the priests, this verse takes the images and puts them into the life of a believer.

"He who dwells." The verb means to sit, to stay, to make a home. It is not a short visit. The Old Testament tabernacle was a place where God dwelt among his people, and now the believer is invited to dwell in God.

"In the shelter of the Most High." The word "shelter" means a hiding place or a covering. "Most High" is a title that speaks of God's supreme power over all things. The one who hides in him hides in the greatest of all places.

"Will abide in the shadow of the Almighty." A shadow is the place of protection from the heat of the sun. "Almighty" is the name Shaddai, the name by which God was known to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The one who lives in God's shelter is under the care of the God who keeps his promises.

For the Christian, this verse is fulfilled in Jesus. We are "in Christ." We dwell in him, and he dwells in us (John 15:4-5). The shelter that the tabernacle pictured has been opened to all who believe.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished the book of Leviticus. You read the calendar of Israel's festivals, and the Sabbath year and Jubilee with their promise of liberty. You saw the covenant's blessings and curses and the promise that God remembers his covenant even in exile. You read the last chapter on vows and the tithe. In the Psalms, you prayed Psalm 50, where God says he wants thanksgiving and not empty sacrifice, Psalm 40, where David speaks of an open ear and a heart that delights in God's will, and Psalm 91, a song of trust in the shelter of the Most High. The week taught that the festivals point to Christ, that God owns everything, and that the heart behind the sacrifice is what he wants.

Questions for Reflection

Israel's calendar was filled with feasts that taught the people to remember what God had done. What practices help you remember God's work in your life?

Hebrews 10 places the words of Psalm 40:6-8 on the lips of Jesus. What does it mean to you that he delighted to do the Father's will on your behalf?

Psalm 91 describes a life lived in the shelter of the Most High. What is one fear you want to bring into that shelter today? Write a short prayer about it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he is your shelter and shadow.

Thank him for the festivals and psalms that point to Christ.

Rest in him today.

DAY 148 · WEEK 22

Psalm 92

It is good to give thanks to the LORD, the Sabbath psalm

Year 1 · Unit 6 · Psalm · 15 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 92. It is the only psalm in the Psalter that is labeled "A Song for the Sabbath Day," and it ends this unit with praise. Read it slowly, and let it be a song of gratitude for everything you have read.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 92 is a song for the Sabbath. It was sung in the worship of Israel on the weekly day of rest. It is a psalm of thanksgiving that celebrates God's works and contrasts the end of the wicked with the flourishing of the righteous. It is a fitting close to a unit about God's dwelling with his people, because the picture at the end is of the righteous planted in the house of the LORD.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "It is good to give thanks to the LORD, to sing praises to your name, O Most High" (v. 1).
2. The praise is "to declare your steadfast love in the morning, and your faithfulness by night" (v. 2).
3. "For you, O LORD, have made me glad by your work; at the works of your hands I sing for joy" (v. 4).
4. "How great are your works, O LORD! Your thoughts are very deep!" (v. 5).
5. "The stupid man cannot know; the fool cannot understand this: that though the wicked sprout like grass and all evildoers flourish, they are doomed to destruction forever" (vv. 6-7).
6. "But you, O LORD, are on high forever" (v. 8).

7. “The righteous flourish like the palm tree and grow like a cedar in Lebanon” (v. 12).
8. “They are planted in the house of the LORD; they flourish in the courts of our God. They still bear fruit in old age; they are ever full of sap and green, to declare that the LORD is upright” (vv. 13-15).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a simple statement, “It is good to give thanks to the LORD.” Giving thanks is not a duty to be endured. It is good, a pleasure and a benefit. The psalm describes a day of rest filled with song and gratitude, with the harp and the lyre, morning and night.

The Sabbath is a day for remembering that God is the maker and doer. “You, O LORD, have made me glad by your work.” It is the work of God that makes the psalmist glad, not his own. The Sabbath is a day of rest because Israel’s life depends on what God has done. It is a weekly declaration that salvation is grace.

The middle of the psalm looks at the wicked. They may flourish for a time, “like grass,” but the grass withers. The psalmist wants us to see that apparent success is short-lived, and that God’s reign endures. “You, O LORD, are on high forever.” This is the steady center of the song.

The final image is one of the most beautiful in the Psalms. The righteous are like trees, a palm and a cedar, planted in the house of the LORD. A tree planted in a temple courtyard is sheltered, watered, and fed. And it keeps bearing fruit, even in old age. The picture is of a long, fruitful life lived near God.

This connects to the tabernacle. The tabernacle was filled with garden images, a lampstand shaped like a tree and curtains woven with fruit, because God’s dwelling place is the place where life flourishes. The psalm shows what happens to someone who is planted there. He grows. He does not dry up. And he lives to declare that the LORD is upright.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “The Sabbath was made for man” (Mark 2:27), and that he is “lord of the Sabbath.” He is also the vine in whom believers abide and bear much fruit (John 15:5). Psalm 1 describes the same flourishing tree. Paul says that believers are “filled with the fruit of righteousness that comes through Jesus Christ” (Philippians 1:11). Hebrews 4 promises a Sabbath rest for the people of God. And Revelation 22:2 describes the tree of life in the new Jerusalem, whose leaves are “for the healing of the nations.”

STEP 6

Application

Give thanks aloud for three works of God you have seen this week. Name them specifically.

Think about where you are planted. Are you connected to a local church, so that you can grow in the courts of the LORD?

Ask God to make you a person who keeps bearing fruit, even into old age.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give thanks to God for his work in you, in your own words.

Ask him to plant you in his house and keep you fruitful.

Tell him that he is upright and faithful.

MEMORY

Unit Verse

> "For the life of the flesh is in the blood, and I have given it for you on the altar to make atonement for your souls, for it is the blood that makes atonement by the life."
> LEVITICUS 17:11

REST

Meditation

Leviticus 17:11 is the unit's anchor verse, and it is the clearest explanation in the Old Testament of why sacrifice works the way it does. Read it aloud once more before you continue.

"For the life of the flesh is in the blood." Blood is not a symbol of death only. It is the sign of life. When an animal's blood is shed, a life is given up. This is why the sacrifices were solemn. They were not a ritual meal but a taking of life.

"And I have given it for you on the altar." This is the surprise of the verse. The blood is something God has given. The sacrifice is not the people's attempt to reach God. It is God's gift to them. He gives the means by which they may be forgiven. The whole system rests on his initiative.

"To make atonement for your souls." Atonement is a covering or a ransom. The animal's life is accepted in place of the worshiper's. It is the substitute.

"For it is the blood that makes atonement by the life." The reason it works is that life is given for life. This verse answers the question of why anyone should approach God by blood. It is because the life of the substitute stands in the place of the sinner.

For the Christian, this verse finds its meaning in Jesus. He gave his life, and God gave him for us. "In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses" (Ephesians 1:7). "The blood of Jesus his Son cleanses us from all sin" (1 John 1:7).

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 6 you have read the second half of the book of Exodus and the whole of Leviticus. You began on Mount Sinai with God's instructions for the tabernacle. You saw the ark and the mercy seat, the table and the lampstand, the altar and the courtyard, and the clothing of the priests. You learned that the purpose of the whole project was stated in a single sentence: "Let them make me a sanctuary, that I may dwell in their midst."

You saw how quickly the people fell. While Moses was on the mountain, they made a golden calf, and he interceded for them. You heard him ask to see God's glory, and you heard God proclaim his name: merciful and gracious, slow to anger, abounding in steadfast love and faithfulness. You watched the covenant renewed, the tabernacle built, and the glory of the LORD fill the tent. You prayed through Psalm 15 and Psalm 24, which ask who may stand in God's presence.

In Leviticus, you studied the five main offerings and what each one teaches about atonement, thanksgiving, and peace. You read how the priests were ordained, and how Nadab and Abihu died when they offered unauthorized fire. You studied the laws of clean and unclean, and you saw how the priest goes outside the camp to welcome the healed person back. The center of the unit was the Day of Atonement, with its blood on the mercy seat and its two goats, and you prayed Psalm 51 as the cry of a broken heart.

You read the Holiness Code and its great command to love your neighbor as yourself. You read the calendar of Israel's festivals, the Sabbath year, and the Jubilee, and the covenant's blessings and curses. You ended with the psalms: Psalm 50, which says that God wants thanksgiving more than empty sacrifice, Psalm 40, which speaks of an open ear and a delight in God's will, Psalm 91, a song of trust in God's shelter, and Psalm 92, a song for the Sabbath.

The unit taught that God is holy, that sin is costly, that atonement is God's gift, and that a forgiven people are called to be holy as he is holy.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What is the Tabernacle teaching us about how sinners can approach a holy God?

Think about the layout of the tent, from the gate to the Most Holy Place. Consider the altar, the basin, the veil, and the priest. Look back at Exodus 25:8 and Hebrews 9:11-12.

What does the sacrificial system reveal about the nature of atonement?

Review the five offerings in Leviticus 1 to 7. Look at the laying on of hands and the role of blood. Consider Leviticus 17:11 and what it means that God gave the blood.

What happens on the Day of Atonement, and how does it point to Christ?

Recall the high priest, the mercy seat, and the two goats from Leviticus 16. Read Hebrews 9:24-28 and 10:11-14. Ask what is different about Christ's sacrifice.

What does "be holy as I am holy" mean for the people of God?

Look back at Leviticus 19, where holiness includes love for neighbor, honest dealing, and care for the poor. Read 1 Peter 1:13-16. Ask how holiness is both a gift and a calling.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for teaching his people how to come near.

Thank him for Jesus, the blood on the altar for your atonement.

Ask him to keep the unit verse in front of you.

DAY 150 · WEEK 22

Numbers 1:1-2:34

The census, God's ordered people prepared for the journey

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 89 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 1:1-2:34. A new book begins, and it opens with a census and a camp plan. The text is full of numbers, so read it for the pattern and not for the arithmetic. Ask what it says about how God organizes and cares for his people.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has been at Mount Sinai for almost a year. The covenant has been made, the tabernacle built, and the laws of Leviticus given. Now, on the first day of the second month of the second year, God tells Moses to count the fighting men and to arrange the camp. Numbers takes its English name from these censuses, though the Hebrew title is "In the wilderness." The book tells how a redeemed people travel from Sinai toward the land God promised, and how a whole generation fails to enter it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God commands Moses to number "all the congregation of the people of Israel, by clans, by fathers" houses' (1:2).
2. Each tribe has a named leader who helps with the count (1:5-16).
3. The total of men twenty years old and up, able to go to war, is 603,550 (1:46).
4. The Levites are not counted with the rest, because they are to care for the tabernacle (1:47-53).
5. The tribes camp around the tabernacle, three on each side, "each by his own banner" (2:2).
6. Judah camps on the east, the side of the entrance, and leads out first (2:3, 9).

7. The tabernacle and the Levites are at the center of the camp (2:17).
8. “Thus did the people of Israel. According to all that the LORD commanded Moses, so they camped by their standards, and so they set out” (2:34).

STEP 4

Interpretation

A census may seem a dull way to begin a book, but it says something important. God knows his people by name and by family. Each tribe has a leader. Each man is counted. In a world where slaves were nameless, Israel is a people whose members are known. The counting recalls the promise to Abraham of descendants like the stars, now visibly coming true in a host of hundreds of thousands.

The census is also a military preparation. Israel is about to march toward a land that other nations hold. The numbers are meant to give confidence, and they also bring responsibility, since each man counted is accountable to serve. But this army is not led by generals. It follows the tabernacle, and the cloud.

The camp plan is a picture in space. The tabernacle sits in the center, and twelve tribes surround it in four groups of three. God does not dwell at the edge. He is the center, and all of life is arranged around him. The Levites camp between the tabernacle and the people, a protective ring that reflects the holiness you read about in Leviticus. Everyone has a place, and no one is left out.

Notice the repeated phrase, “as the LORD commanded Moses.” The book begins with obedience. It is the high point before the failure that follows. For a moment, Israel is exactly what God designed: a people in order, near their God, ready to move. The tragedy of the rest of Numbers is that this orderly people will not trust the God who has arranged them.

For us, the lesson is simple. God does not scatter his people. He gathers them around himself and gives each a place and a task.

STEP 5

Connection

The church is described in the same terms. Paul says that God arranged the members of the body “as he chose” (1 Corinthians 12:18), and Ephesians 4:16 speaks of the whole body “joined and held together.” Hebrews 12:23 speaks of “the assembly of the firstborn who are enrolled in heaven,” and Jesus told his disciples to rejoice that their names are written in heaven (Luke 10:20). Revelation 21:12-14 pictures the twelve tribes and the twelve apostles around the new Jerusalem.

STEP 6

Application

Thank God that he knows you by name, and that you are counted among his people.

Ask where your place is in the body of Christ, and whether you are filling it.

Notice the centrality of the tabernacle in Israel's camp, and ask what is at the center of your life.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he knows his people by name and that you are counted among them.

Ask him to put you where he wants you in his body.

Ask him to keep himself at the center of your life.

NUMBERS 6:24-26

DAY 151 · WEEK 22

Numbers 3:1-4:49

The Levites and their duties, sacred service

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 97 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 3:1-4:49. Yesterday you saw the camp of the tribes. Today you read about the tribe of Levi, who were set apart to serve in the tabernacle. Notice the contrast between the Levites and the firstborn of Israel.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Numbers 3 and 4 describe the Levites, the tribe of Moses and Aaron. They are not counted with the army, because their work is different: they guard and carry the tabernacle. The chapters list the three clans of Levi, Gershon, Kohath, and Merari, and assign each a duty. They also explain why the Levites belong to God. When the firstborn of Egypt died at the Passover, the firstborn of Israel were spared, and so they belonged to the LORD. God takes the Levites as a substitute for them.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The sons of Aaron are named, and the death of Nadab and Abihu is recalled (3:1-4).
2. The Levites are given to Aaron “as a gift” to assist him (3:5-10).
3. “I have taken the Levites from among the people of Israel instead of every firstborn” (3:12).
4. The three clans of Levi camp on three sides of the tabernacle, with Moses and Aaron at the east (3:21-39).
5. The firstborn of Israel outnumber the Levites by 273, and each of the extra is redeemed for five shekels (3:40-51).

6. The Kohathites carry the holy things, but must not touch or look at them, “lest they die” (4:15, 20).
7. Aaron and his sons must first cover the furniture before the Kohathites come to carry it (4:5-15).
8. The Levites serve from age thirty to fifty (4:3, 23, 30).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This section teaches one of the Bible’s basic ideas: substitution. The firstborn of Israel were saved at the Passover, and they belonged to God because of it. Instead of requiring every firstborn son to serve at the sanctuary, God takes the Levites in their place. The Levites stand in for the firstborn, and when there are extra firstborn, a ransom price is paid. The principle is that a life spared must be given back to the one who spared it.

The Levites’ work is a lesson in reverence. The Kohathites carry the most holy things, but they are never allowed to touch them or look at them directly. The priests have to cover the furniture first. It is a vivid warning that God’s holiness is not casual. Even people set apart to serve him can only approach him in the way he has provided.

The text also shows the dignity of ordinary service. Much of the Levites’ work was carrying poles and curtains. It was heavy and repetitive. But Numbers describes it carefully, with each task named, because in God’s household no task is small. The people who carried the tent poles are as precisely recorded as the priests who burned the incense.

And the redemption of the extra firstborn shows how seriously God takes the ransom principle. Five shekels each is a price, a reminder that the people did not belong to themselves.

All of this prepares the reader for the greater substitution. God spared Israel’s firstborn, and then God gave his own firstborn, the only Son, as a ransom for many.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is called “the firstborn of all creation” and “the firstborn from the dead” (Colossians 1:15, 18). Believers are called “the assembly of the firstborn” (Hebrews 12:23). Peter says that you were “ransomed from the futile ways inherited from your forefathers, not with perishable things such as silver or gold, but with the precious blood of Christ” (1 Peter 1:18-19). Paul says that you are not your own, because you were bought with a price (1 Corinthians 6:19-20).

STEP 6

Application

Think about what it means to belong to God because of what he has done for you. Ask how that shapes your daily choices.

Honor those who do humble service in your church, such as people who set up, clean, or carry.

Receive the ransom with gratitude, and offer your service back to the one who redeemed you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the ransom of his Son, and tell him what it means that you are not your own.

Offer him your hands and your days, naming one thing specific.

Ask him to teach you to honor his holiness.

NUMBERS 6:24-26

DAY 152 · WEEK 22

Numbers 5:1-6:27

Purity laws; the Nazirite vow; the Aaronic blessing

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 51 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 5:1-6:27. This reading includes some unusual laws about purity and suspicion, the Nazirite vow, and the best-known blessing in the Old Testament. Read the blessing at the end aloud.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The camp is arranged, and now it has to be kept clean, because God lives in it. Chapter 5 deals with people who are unclean, with wrongs that need restitution, and with a ritual for a suspected case of unfaithfulness in marriage. Chapter 6 describes the Nazirite vow, a special period of consecration that anyone could take. The chapter ends with the words Aaron and his sons were to speak over Israel.

STEP 3

Observation

1. People with skin diseases or discharges, or who have touched the dead, are sent out of the camp, “that they may not defile their camp, in the midst of which I dwell” (5:1-4).
2. A person who wrongs another must confess, make restitution, and add a fifth (5:5-10).
3. The ritual for a suspected wife is described in detail (5:11-31).
4. A Nazirite vows to abstain from wine and grape products, to let the hair grow, and to avoid contact with the dead (6:1-8).
5. If the vow is broken by accident, the Nazirite shaves and brings offerings (6:9-12).
6. At the end of the vow, offerings are made, and the hair is burned (6:13-21).
7. “The LORD bless you and keep you; the LORD make his face to shine upon you and be gracious to you; the LORD lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace” (6:24-26).

8 “So shall they put my name upon the people of Israel, and I will bless them” (6:27).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The laws in chapter 5 continue the theme of God’s presence in the camp. Since the LORD dwells among them, anything that spoils the community’s purity is a serious matter. It is not just about private cleanliness. The people are one body, and the sin or uncleanness of one affects all.

The law about restitution is worth noting. Confession is not enough. A person who has wronged someone must pay back what was taken, plus a fifth, and the payment goes to the wronged person. True repentance has practical shape.

The suspected-adultery ritual is unusual and hard to understand today. It was designed to protect an accused woman from a husband’s jealousy by placing the matter in God’s hands. It was a way of keeping a suspicion from turning into violence, and it put the verdict in the hands of the God who sees all things.

The Nazirite vow is a different kind of consecration. Priests were born to their roles, but a Nazirite chose his. Any man or woman could set themselves apart for a time. The three signs of the vow, no grapes, uncut hair, and no contact with the dead, marked a life given wholly to God. It reminds us that holiness is available to everyone.

The blessing at the end is a gem. It has three lines, each longer than the one before, and each is a prayer for God’s favor: his protection, his face turned toward us, and his peace. The key phrase is “put my name upon the people.” The blessing is not Aaron’s. It is the LORD’s. The people are marked with his name, and the blessing is his gift to them.

STEP 5

Connection

Samson, Samuel, and John the Baptist were set apart as Nazirites or in a similar way. Paul took a vow of this kind (Acts 18:18). Jesus is the greater one who was wholly consecrated to the Father. Paul prays a version of the blessing in his letters (2 Corinthians 13:14; Philippians 4:7). Hebrews 7:1 says that Melchizedek blessed Abraham, and Jesus lifted his hands and blessed his disciples as he ascended (Luke 24:50-51).

STEP 6

Application

Read the blessing aloud, and receive it as a word spoken over you personally. Then speak it over someone you love.

Think about whether there is something you need to confess and repay.

Consider what it would mean to set aside something for a season so that you could give more to God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray the Aaronic blessing over yourself, slowly, in your own words.
- Ask him to put his name on you and make you a blessing.
- Pray the same blessing over someone you love.

NUMBERS 6:24-26

DAY 153 · WEEK 22

Psalm 90

Moses' psalm, God's eternity against human frailty

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 17 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 90. It is the only psalm attributed to Moses. Read it as a reflection by a man who has led a rebellious people for forty years and knows both God's eternity and human weakness.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 90 opens the fourth book of the Psalms. The title is "A Prayer of Moses, the man of God." If Moses wrote it, it comes from the wilderness years, when a whole generation died without entering the promised land. The sense of time passing, of lives cut short, and of God's anger against sin runs through it. It is placed here as a companion to the book of Numbers.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Lord, you have been our dwelling place in all generations" (v. 1).
2. "Before the mountains were brought forth, or ever you had formed the earth and the world, from everlasting to everlasting you are God" (v. 2).
3. "You return man to dust and say, Return, O children of man!" (v. 3).
4. "For a thousand years in your sight are but as yesterday when it is past, or as a watch in the night" (v. 4).
5. "The years of our life are seventy, or even by reason of strength eighty" (v. 10).
6. "So teach us to number our days that we may get a heart of wisdom" (v. 12).
7. "Satisfy us in the morning with your steadfast love, that we may rejoice and be glad all our days" (v. 14).

8 “Let the favor of the Lord our God be upon us, and establish the work of our hands upon us; yes, establish the work of our hands!” (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a surprising claim for a people with no home: “You have been our dwelling place.” Israel had no land and lived in tents. But Moses says that their true home was never a place. It was God. This is the first sentence of the psalm, and everything else depends on it.

Then comes a contrast between God’s eternity and human frailty. God is from everlasting to everlasting. We are like grass that sprouts in the morning and withers by evening. Moses does not say this to make us feel hopeless. He says it so that we see how much we depend on God.

The cause of our frailty is not only that we are creatures. It is that we are sinners. Verses 7 to 11 connect human mortality to God’s anger. “We are brought to an end by your anger.” Moses had watched a generation die in the wilderness because of unbelief, and he knows that death is not natural. It is a sign of judgment. Our secret sins are “in the light of your presence.”

But the psalm does not end with despair. It turns in verse 12, with a prayer: “Teach us to number our days.” The right response to our short lives is wisdom, living each day with an awareness of its limits. Then it asks for compassion: “Have pity on your servants.” It asks for joy in the morning, joy to match the years of affliction. And it ends with a request that the work of our hands might be established. God’s favor is what makes small and brief work last.

It is a good psalm to read at the start of a long book about the wilderness. It reminds us that the journey is brief, that God is our home, and that his steadfast love is the only thing that satisfies.

STEP 5

Connection

Peter quotes verse 4 when he says that “with the Lord one day is as a thousand years” (2 Peter 3:8). James says that life is “a mist that appears for a little time and then vanishes” (James 4:14). Paul teaches that death entered through sin and that Christ has defeated it (Romans 5:12; 1 Corinthians 15:54-57). Jesus said that in his Father’s house there are many rooms (John 14:2), and he is our dwelling place now.

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself how many days you may have left, and what you most want to do with them. Pray verse 12 for yourself.

Think about the work you are doing right now. Ask God to establish it, and to make it last for his purposes.

Thank God that he is your dwelling place, even when you feel like a wanderer.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for being your dwelling place in every season of life.
- Ask him to teach you to number your days and gain a heart of wisdom.
- Ask him to establish the work of your hands for his glory.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Numbers 6:24-26 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD bless you and keep you; the LORD make his face to shine upon you and be gracious to you; the LORD lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace."

NUMBERS 6:24-26

REST

Meditation

The Aaronic blessing is one of the oldest pieces of Scripture still used in worship. It has been said over God's people for three thousand years. Receive it as if it is spoken to you today.

"The LORD bless you and keep you." The blessing begins with God's goodness and protection. To keep means to guard and watch over, as a shepherd keeps his flock. It does not promise a life without trouble. It promises the one who keeps us in trouble.

"The LORD make his face to shine upon you and be gracious to you." The face of God shining is a picture of his favor and delight. A father's smile gives a child confidence. God's face, turned toward you in grace, is the deepest blessing there is.

“The LORD lift up his countenance upon you and give you peace.” The picture is of God looking at you, lifting his face, and giving shalom. Peace here is not only calm. It means wholeness, the well-being of every part of life.

Notice that the name of the LORD stands at the start of each line. He is the one who blesses, and he does it by putting his name on his people. For Christians, this is fulfilled in Christ. In him, God’s face has shone on us (2 Corinthians 4:6), and he has made peace through the blood of his cross (Colossians 1:20).

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began the book of Numbers. You read about the census of Israel and the arrangement of the camp around the tabernacle, and you saw that God knows his people by name. You read about the Levites, who were given to God in place of the firstborn, and who carried the tabernacle with reverence. You read laws of purity and restitution, the Nazirite vow, and the blessing that God commanded Aaron to speak over his people. In Psalm 90, you heard Moses pray about the brevity of life and the eternity of God. The week taught that God orders and protects his people, that he claims them by substitution, and that he blesses them with his own name.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The camp was arranged around the tabernacle. What is at the center of your life, and how would your daily schedule change if God’s presence were at the center?

The Levites were taken in place of the firstborn. How does the idea of substitution deepen your understanding of what Christ did for you?

Psalm 90 asks, “Teach us to number our days.” What is one thing you would do differently if you took the shortness of life seriously?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for blessing and keeping you this week, naming one way.

Thank him for putting his name on his people.

Rest in his presence today.

DAY 155 · WEEK 23

Numbers 7:1-89

The offerings of the leaders, devotion in detail

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 89 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 7:1-89. This is the longest chapter in the book, and it records the same offering twelve times. Read it with patience, and ask why the Holy Spirit would give so much space to repetition.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The tabernacle has been set up and anointed. Now the twelve tribal leaders bring gifts for its dedication: carts and oxen for the Levites, and then, one leader per day for twelve days, an identical offering of silver and gold vessels, animals, and grain. It is the last event in the book before the departure from Sinai, and it is the longest chapter of Numbers. It ends with a short note about Moses hearing the voice of God from the mercy seat.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The leaders bring six covered wagons and twelve oxen as an offering (7:1-3).
2. God tells Moses to give the wagons to the Levites, according to their needs (7:4-9).
3. Each leader brings an offering on his own day: “Nahshon the son of Amminadab of the tribe of Judah” first (7:12).
4. Each offering is the same: a silver plate, a silver basin, a golden dish of incense, animals for burnt, sin, and peace offerings (7:13-17).
5. The text repeats the list for each of the twelve tribes (7:18-83).
6. The total is added up at the end (7:84-88).
7. The Kohathites receive no wagons, because their duty is to carry the holy things on their shoulders (7:9).

8 “And when Moses went into the tent of meeting to speak with the LORD, he heard the voice speaking to him from above the mercy seat that was on the ark of the testimony” (7:89).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The repetition in this chapter is the point. Each tribe brings exactly the same gift, even though some were large and some small, and some were wealthy and some poor. No one tries to outdo the others. No one is left out. The identical gifts say that every tribe has an equal share in the worship of God. Judah, the leading tribe, and Naphtali, one of the smallest, are written down with the same lines.

The chapter also shows that God notices every gift. Twelve times the same words are written out in full. A modern editor would have said “the other tribes did likewise.” But God gives each leader his own paragraph, because each gift is individually received and individually remembered. Nothing given to God is lost in a crowd.

The detail about the wagons is easy to miss. The leaders give the Levites what they need to do their work. The Levites in the families of Gershon and Merari get wagons and oxen, in proportion to their burden. The Kohathites, whose task is the holiest, get none, because the holy things must be carried on the shoulder. The offerings of the people serve the needs of the ministry, and every task has its own tools.

The chapter ends quietly with a verse that is easy to pass over: Moses enters the tent of meeting and hears the voice of God. This is the answer to the whole purpose of the tabernacle. All the gifts, the carts, the silver, and the animals lead to a place where God speaks to his servant. The worship and generosity of the people make room for God’s voice.

It may feel strange to read the same list twelve times. But treat it as a reminder that no act of devotion is trivial to God.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus praised the widow who gave two small coins, because she gave more than the rich (Mark 12:41-44). Paul wrote that “each of you should give what you have decided in your heart to give” (2 Corinthians 9:7), and that the church is a body in which every member matters (1 Corinthians 12). Hebrews 4:16 says that we can approach “the throne of grace” with confidence. Jesus speaks to us from heaven by his word.

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on whether you compare your giving to others. Ask God to make you content to give what he has put in your hand.

Remember that God notices what you do in secret. Offer something to him today that no one else will see.

Ask the Lord to speak to you through his Word, as he did to Moses.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to help you give without comparing yourself to others.
- Thank him that he remembers each gift.
- Thank him that he speaks to you through his Word.

PSALM 95:7-8

DAY 156 · WEEK 23

Numbers 8:1-10:36

The Levites consecrated; the cloud; the silver trumpets

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 85 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 8:1-10:36. This reading covers the lampstand, the consecration of the Levites, a second Passover, and the departure from Sinai. Notice the role of the cloud and the trumpets in guiding the people.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the end of Israel's year at Sinai. In these chapters, God completes the preparations for the march. The lamps are lit, the Levites are set apart for service, and a second Passover is kept, with a provision for those who were unclean. The cloud and the silver trumpets give the signals to move. Then, on the twentieth day of the second month of the second year, the cloud lifts from the tabernacle and Israel leaves Sinai.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Aaron sets up the lamps to give light "in front of the lampstand" (8:1-4).
2. The Levites are cleansed with water, shaved, and presented, and the people lay their hands on them (8:5-13).
3. The Levites are "wholly given to me from among the people of Israel" (8:16).
4. The Passover is observed in the second year, and a second chance is given to those who were unclean or traveling (9:1-14).
5. The cloud covers the tabernacle by day and has the appearance of fire by night (9:15-16).
6. "At the command of the LORD they camped, and at the command of the LORD they set out" (9:23).
7. Two silver trumpets are made to call the congregation and to signal the march (10:1-10).

8 The ark leads the way, and Moses says, “Rise up, O LORD, and let your enemies be scattered” and “Return, O LORD, to the ten thousands of thousands of Israel” (10:33-36).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Levites’ consecration echoes the laying on of hands in the sacrifices. The people lay their hands on the Levites, as if to say, “These stand for us.” Then the Levites lay their hands on the bulls for the sin offering and burnt offering. The pattern is a chain of substitution: the people give the Levites, and the Levites give the animals. It shows how the gift of a servant leads back to the sacrifice that makes service possible.

The second Passover is a small, kind detail. Some men were unclean and could not keep the first Passover, and they ask Moses what to do. God answers by creating a make-up date, a second Passover a month later. The law shows a flexible grace. God does not want anyone to be left out of the meal because of circumstances they could not help.

The cloud is the centerpiece of this section. Israel does not set its own schedule. When the cloud lifts, they move, and when it stays, they stay, whether for two days, a month, or a year. The text says it three times, so we cannot miss it. It is hard to be led like this. It requires trust, patience, and a readiness to leave a comfortable place. But the people are guided by the presence of God himself.

The silver trumpets add voice to this guidance. They call the people together and signal war and feasts. Even the sound of the camp is arranged by God. And Moses’ words at the ark are a prayer: “Rise up, O LORD.” It is a battle prayer, but it is also a statement of faith. The LORD goes before his people, and they follow.

You are looking at the high point of Israel’s obedience. They have left Sinai in order, with the ark in front and the cloud above. The next chapter will show how quickly it goes wrong.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus told his disciples, “Follow me” (Matthew 4:19), and he said that his sheep “hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me” (John 10:27). Paul writes that “all who are led by the Spirit of God are sons of God” (Romans 8:14). The ascension of Christ was accompanied by a cloud (Acts 1:9), and the Lord will return “with a cry of command, with the voice of an archangel, and with the sound of the trumpet of God” (1 Thessalonians 4:16).

STEP 6

Application

Think about a place where you are waiting for God to move. Ask him to give you patience and trust.

If you are in a season of change, pray that God would show you whether to stay or go.

Pray Moses' words from 10:35-36 as a prayer for your church and your family.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to lead you by his Spirit and Word.
- Tell him where you need patience to wait or courage to move.
- Pray "Rise up, O LORD" over the road ahead.

PSALM 95:7-8

DAY 157 · WEEK 23

Numbers 11:1-12:16

Complaining; quail and plague; Miriam's leprosy

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 51 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 11:1-12:16. The march begins, and within days the people are complaining. Read these two chapters as a portrait of grumbling, and notice who says it, and what God does in response.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has left Sinai with the ark in front and the cloud above. Three days later, the complaining starts. Chapter 11 describes three crises: general grumbling that leads to fire, a craving for meat that leads to quail and a plague, and Moses' own exhaustion. Chapter 12 describes an attack on Moses from within his own family. The chapters show that the greatest danger to Israel is not Egypt behind them or Canaan ahead, but the hearts of the people themselves.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "And the people complained in the hearing of the LORD about their misfortunes, and when the LORD heard it, his anger was kindled" (11:1).
2. Fire from the LORD burns at the edge of the camp, until Moses prays and it dies down (11:1-3).
3. The "rabble" among them crave meat, and the Israelites say, "Oh that we had meat to eat! We remember the fish we ate in Egypt that cost nothing" (11:4-5).
4. Moses says to God, "Why have you dealt ill with your servant?... I am not able to carry all this people alone" (11:11-14).
5. God has Moses gather seventy elders, and he puts some of the Spirit that was on Moses on them, and they prophesy (11:16-25).

6. Eldad and Medad prophesy in the camp, and Moses says, “Would that all the LORD’s people were prophets” (11:26-29).
7. Quail come in, and the people gorge, and a plague breaks out (11:31-35).
8. Miriam and Aaron speak against Moses. “Now the man Moses was very meek, more than all people who were on the face of the earth” (12:1-3). Miriam becomes leprous, and Moses prays for her (12:10-15).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The pattern of Israel’s grumbling is a mirror for our own hearts. The people forget the slavery and remember only the food. They say that Egypt’s fish was free. It was not. It cost them their freedom. This is one of the most common human mistakes: remembering the pleasures of an old life and forgetting its chains. Nostalgia is a form of unbelief.

The craving for meat is not wrong because meat is wrong. It is wrong because the people had the manna, God’s daily provision, and called it worthless. They were despising the gift, and they were despising the giver. When God gives them what they want, in excess, it becomes a judgment. “He gave them what they asked, but sent a wasting disease among them,” as Psalm 106:15 says. Sometimes the worst thing God can do is give us what we demand.

Moses’ own complaint is notable. He is not rebuked as the people are, but his prayer shows how heavy leadership is. God’s answer is to share the load: he puts the Spirit on seventy elders. The burden is not removed. It is shared. And Moses’ response to Eldad and Medad is one of the great statements of the Old Testament: “Would that all the LORD’s people were prophets, that the LORD would put his Spirit on them!” It is a prayer that waits for the new covenant.

Chapter 12 shows how even those closest to Moses can fall. Miriam and Aaron criticize Moses’ wife and claim that they should share his authority. The text says that Moses was very meek, and he does not defend himself. God defends him. God speaks to Moses “face to face,” unlike other prophets, and Miriam is struck. The chapter shows how seriously God takes the authority of the one he appoints. And Moses prays for her healing, a beautiful example of a meek man who returns good for evil.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that these things “took place as examples for us, that we might not desire evil as they did” (1 Corinthians 10:6, 10), and he specifically warns against grumbling. Peter echoes Moses’ wish at Pentecost, when the Spirit is poured out on all flesh (Acts 2:17-18). Hebrews

3:1-6 compares Moses' faithfulness "as a servant" with Christ's faithfulness "as a son." Jesus is the meek one who prayed for those who wronged him (Luke 23:34).

STEP 6

Application

Notice your own grumbling this week. What are you remembering from the past that you have forgotten the cost of?

Thank God for a specific gift that you have taken for granted, the manna in your own life.

Pray for a leader you know, and ask God to share the burden of leadership with others.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have grumbled about what God has given.
- Ask him to teach you gratitude for your daily bread.
- Thank him for Jesus, who gives the Spirit to all his people.

PSALM 95:7-8

DAY 158 · WEEK 23

Numbers 13:1-14:45

The twelve spies; the faithless report; forty years

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 65 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 13:1-14:45. This is the turning point of the book and one of the saddest chapters in the Old Testament. Read it as the story of a failure of faith, and note carefully what the people say, and what God says in reply.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has come to the edge of Canaan, at Kadesh in the wilderness of Paran. God tells Moses to send twelve men, one from each tribe, to explore the land. They go for forty days and return with a report. Ten say the land is good but its people are too strong. Two, Joshua and Caleb, say that God will give it to them. The people believe the ten. What follows is the decisive failure of the exodus generation.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God says, “Send men to spy out the land of Canaan, which I am giving to the people of Israel” (13:2).
2. The spies bring back a cluster of grapes so large that it is carried on a pole by two men (13:23).
3. All twelve agree: “It flows with milk and honey” (13:27).
4. Ten report: “We are not able to go up against the people, for they are stronger than we… we seemed to ourselves like grasshoppers” (13:31-33).
5. Caleb says, “Let us go up at once and occupy it, for we are well able to overcome it” (13:30).

6. The people weep and say, “Would that we had died in the land of Egypt!” and propose to choose a leader and go back (14:1-4).

7. Moses pleads for the people, appealing to God’s name: “The LORD is slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love” (14:13-19).

8. God pardons them, but says that none of the men who saw his signs and yet tested him ten times shall see the land. Their children will enter, after forty years of wandering (14:20-35).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The sin here is not caution. It is unbelief. God had already said that he was giving them the land. The spies were not sent to decide whether to go, but to see what God was giving. When ten of them look at the land and then look at themselves, they forget God. Their report shifts from “the land flows with milk and honey” to “the land devours its inhabitants.” And their self-image shrinks: “we seemed to ourselves like grasshoppers.” Fear distorts how we see ourselves and how we see God.

Joshua and Caleb saw the same land and the same giants. The difference was not in what they saw, but in what they believed about God. Caleb says, “we are well able,” and Joshua says, “the LORD is with us; do not fear them.” Faith does not deny the giants. It remembers who is bigger.

The people’s reaction is a tragedy. They weep all night. They say they wish they had died in Egypt, and they even say that God brought them out because he hates them (Deuteronomy 1:27). They call good evil. In a few hours, they undo the whole exodus in their minds.

Moses’ intercession is a high point. He does not argue that Israel deserves mercy. He argues from God’s own character, quoting the words of Exodus 34:6-7. And God does pardon the people, but he does not remove the consequences. The generation that refused to enter will not enter. Forgiveness and discipline are both real.

The last scene shows how unbelief hardens into presumption. When told they will not enter, the people suddenly decide to attack on their own. Without God, they are defeated. Obedience delayed is not the same as obedience. They had refused to go when God said go, and now they went when God said no.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 3 and 4 use this story as a warning to the church. “Take care, brothers, lest there be in any of you an evil, unbelieving heart, leading you to fall away from the living God” (Hebrews 3:12). The generation “were unable to enter because of unbelief” (Hebrews 3:19). The promise of rest still stands, and Jesus, whose name is the same as Joshua’s, leads us in. Paul says that these events were written down for our instruction (1 Corinthians 10:11).

STEP 6

Application

Ask what giant you are facing, and whether you are seeing it through your own eyes or God’s promise.

Is there something God has told you to do that you are delaying? Obey today, not later.

Pray for the courage of Joshua and Caleb, to speak the truth even when the crowd is afraid.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God where you have been looking at giants instead of promises.
- Confess your unbelief and ask for a spirit like Caleb’s.
- Thank Jesus for leading his people into rest.

PSALM 95:7-8

DAY 159 · WEEK 23

Psalm 95

Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 95. Yesterday's chapter described a generation that hardened its heart. Today's psalm reads that story as a warning to us. Read it aloud, and notice the sudden change of tone in verse 7.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 95 is a psalm of worship that has been sung in the church's morning prayer for centuries. It starts with a joyful call to come and sing, and then shifts at the end into an urgent warning drawn from Numbers 14. The psalm does not name its author, but Hebrews 4:7 attributes it to David. The setting is the worship of the gathered congregation, who are reminded that praise must go with obedience.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Oh come, let us sing to the LORD; let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation!" (v. 1).
2. "Let us come into his presence with thanksgiving; let us make a joyful noise to him with songs of praise!" (v. 2).
3. "For the LORD is a great God, and a great King above all gods" (v. 3).
4. "In his hand are the depths of the earth; the heights of the mountains are his also" (v. 4).
5. "Oh come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the LORD, our Maker!" (v. 6).
6. "For he is our God, and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand" (v. 7).

7. “Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts, as at Meribah, as on the day at Massah in the wilderness” (vv. 7-8).

8. “Therefore I swore in my wrath, They shall not enter my rest” (v. 11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm has two halves, and the contrast is meant to startle us. The first half, verses 1 to 7a, is full of praise: singing, shouting, thanksgiving, bowing down. The second half is a warning. The same God who is a great king and a good shepherd is also the God who swore that a generation would not enter his rest. The psalmist places the two side by side because true worship includes both.

Worship, in this psalm, has an inward and an outward side. It is noisy and joyful, and it is also quiet and obedient. “Let us kneel before the LORD” and “if you hear his voice.” It is not enough to sing loudly. The test of worship is whether we listen.

The word “today” is the key. It is a present-tense word. “Today, if you hear his voice” does not refer to the past or the future. The wilderness generation heard his voice at Sinai and then refused. The psalmist says that the same opportunity is offered to every generation. It is as urgent now as then.

The phrase “do not harden your hearts” implies that hearts can be hardened or softened by our own choices. It is a process, not an event. Each time we ignore God’s voice, it becomes easier to ignore the next time. Each time we obey, our hearts become more sensitive. We are always moving in one direction or the other.

And “my rest” is the goal of the whole journey. The land was a picture of that rest, but the real thing is deeper: to be at home with God. The sad truth is that people can sing about it, and still miss it.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 3:7-4:13 is an extended meditation on this psalm. The writer applies it to Christians: “Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts.” He says that a Sabbath rest remains for the people of God, and “let us therefore strive to enter that rest” (Hebrews 4:9-11). Jesus invites, “Come to me, all who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest” (Matthew 11:28).

STEP 6

Application

Read Psalm 95 aloud as an act of worship. Include the warning.

Ask whether there is a place where you have been ignoring God's voice. Today is the day to listen.

Thank God that the rest he promises is found in Christ, and ask him to soften any hardness in your heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God you want to hear his voice today.
- Ask him to keep your heart soft and keep you from unbelief.
- Thank him for the rest that is yours in Jesus.

PSALM 95:7-8

DAY 160 · WEEK 23

Psalm 96

Sing to the LORD a new song

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 13 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 96. Where yesterday's psalm warned, today's celebrates. Read it as a missionary song, and notice how many times it speaks of "all the earth," "the nations," and "the peoples."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 96 is closely related to a song of David recorded in 1 Chronicles 16, sung when the ark was brought to Jerusalem. It begins with the call to "sing to the LORD a new song," and it widens quickly to include the whole world. In the context of Numbers, with its story of a people who failed in unbelief, the psalm lifts the eyes toward a future in which every nation praises the LORD.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Oh sing to the LORD a new song; sing to the LORD, all the earth!" (v. 1).
2. "Sing to the LORD, bless his name; tell of his salvation from day to day" (v. 2).
3. "Declare his glory among the nations, his marvelous works among all the peoples!" (v. 3).
4. "For great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised; he is to be feared above all gods" (v. 4).
5. "For all the gods of the peoples are worthless idols, but the LORD made the heavens" (v. 5).
6. "Ascribe to the LORD, O families of the peoples, ascribe to the LORD glory and strength!" (v. 7).
7. "Worship the LORD in the splendor of holiness; tremble before him, all the earth!" (v. 9).

8 “Say among the nations, The LORD reigns!... He will judge the peoples with equity” (vv. 10-13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This psalm is a call to worship that is also a call to mission. The singing is not meant to stay in Israel. It is to be declared “among the nations.” The salvation of the LORD is to be told “from day to day.” The God of Israel is not a tribal god. He made the heavens, and he is the only true God.

The “new song” is the response to a new act of salvation. Each generation has to sing for itself what God has done. It is not enough to repeat the old songs only as history. We need to make them new by remembering and applying them to our own situation.

The contrast between the LORD and the gods of the peoples is sharp. Verse 5 uses a Hebrew pun: the word for “idols” sounds like the word for “nothings.” The gods of the nations are worthless things, and the LORD made the heavens. This is the same contrast Israel had just ignored in the wilderness. The psalm urges the nations to turn from nothing to everything.

The psalm ends with creation joining in. The heavens, the earth, the sea, the fields, and the trees of the forest all rejoice, because the LORD is coming to judge the earth. The coming of God is good news for the world. He will judge with equity and truth. In a world full of injustice, this is a hope worth singing about.

After reading about Israel’s complaining, the psalm is a rebuke and an invitation. Israel’s calling was to sing, to witness, and to bring the nations in. The failure of the wilderness is not the end of the story. God will still be praised in all the earth.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus sent his disciples to “make disciples of all nations” (Matthew 28:19). Revelation 5:9 and 7:9 show a multitude from every nation praising the Lamb, singing a “new song.” Paul says that creation “will be set free from its bondage to corruption” (Romans 8:21). The coming of the Lord to judge the earth is the Christian’s hope (Acts 17:31; Revelation 19).

STEP 6

Application

Sing or read this psalm aloud. Ask God to give you a new song for something he has done recently.

Pray for a missionary or a nation that has not heard the gospel.

Tell someone this week about something God has done for you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Sing or speak to the LORD a new song, in your own words.
- Ask him to make you bold to tell of his salvation.
- Pray “Come, Lord Jesus” to judge the earth in righteousness.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 95:7-8 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts, as at Meribah, as on the day at Massah in the wilderness."

PSALM 95:7-8

REST

Meditation

This verse is a warning and an invitation in one breath. It was written to people who had a long history of hearing God's voice and refusing it, and it is quoted three times in the book of Hebrews to address Christians.

"Today." The word is the center of the verse. God does not speak only to those who lived long ago. He speaks today. There is a sense of urgency in the word, and also of mercy. As long as it is called "today," there is still time to respond.

"If you hear his voice." Hearing is more than sound. It is the attention that leads to obedience. Israel heard God's voice at Sinai, and they trembled, and still they refused at Kadesh. The question is not whether God speaks. It is whether we will listen.

“Do not harden your hearts.” The picture is of something soft being made hard, as clay left in the sun. It is a gradual process, and it happens through small refusals. Each time we say no to what we know God is asking, the next no comes easier.

“As at Meribah, as on the day at Massah.” Meribah means “quarreling” and Massah means “testing.” These places became names for Israel’s failure. The warning is that we can give our own lives names like these if we are not careful.

For the Christian, the verse is a call to stay close to Christ. “Exhort one another every day, as long as it is called ‘today,’ that none of you may be hardened by the deceitfulness of sin” (Hebrews 3:13).

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed Israel’s departure from Sinai. You read about the offerings of the tribal leaders, the consecration of the Levites, the second Passover, and the cloud that led the people by day and night. You watched the march begin with order and then break down in complaining, as the people longed for the food of Egypt and Miriam and Aaron challenged Moses. You read the story of the twelve spies, the unbelief of the people, and the judgment that a whole generation would die in the wilderness. In the Psalms, you read the warning of Psalm 95 and the missionary song of Psalm 96. The week taught that unbelief is the root of rebellion, that God’s patience is real but not endless, and that the answer is to listen today.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The ten spies saw the same land as Joshua and Caleb. What shaped the difference between their reports, and what shapes how you see your own challenges?

Hebrews says that Christ is the one who leads his people into God’s rest. How does Jesus succeed where Joshua and Moses could not?

Where might you be hardening your heart today? Write down one thing God has asked of you and what it would look like to obey today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you want to hear his voice today, and ask him to soften any hard place in you.

Ask him for the faith of Caleb and Joshua.

Thank Jesus for leading you into his rest.

DAY 162 · WEEK 24

Numbers 15:1-16:50

Offerings; Korah's rebellion against God's appointed

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 90 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 15:1-16:50. Chapter 15 gives laws that look ahead to the land. Chapter 16 tells the story of Korah's rebellion. Read the first chapter as a reassurance, and the second as a warning.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the disaster at Kadesh, the story slows. Chapter 15 is a surprising pause: God gives laws for offerings "when you come into the land," which is a promise that his plan has not been cancelled. Chapter 16 then shows a new challenge to Moses and Aaron, led by Korah, a Levite, with Dathan and Abiram of Reuben, and 250 leaders. They object that Moses and Aaron have taken too much to themselves.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "When you come into the land you are to inhabit, which I am giving you" (15:2) introduces laws about offerings.
2. The same law applies to the native and to the sojourner (15:14-16).
3. Unintentional sins can be forgiven with a sacrifice, but "the person who does anything with a high hand… reviles the LORD" (15:22-31).
4. A man is put to death for gathering sticks on the Sabbath (15:32-36).
5. The people are told to put tassels on their garments, "that you may remember all the commandments of the LORD" (15:37-41).
6. Korah says, "You have gone too far! For all in the congregation are holy, every one of them" (16:3).

7. Moses says that the LORD will show who is his, and the ground opens and swallows Korah's household (16:28-33).

8. The next day, the people grumble again and a plague strikes. Aaron stands with the censer "between the dead and the living," and the plague stops (16:41-50).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 15 is a quiet promise in the midst of judgment. Just after God says that a generation will die in the wilderness, he gives laws that begin "when you come into the land." The children will enter. God's purposes are not defeated by the unbelief of the parents. It is a lesson to hold on to when we fail: God's plan outlasts our failures.

The distinction between unintentional sin and the sin "with a high hand" is important. A person who sins in ignorance can find forgiveness through a sacrifice. But someone who knowingly defies God is despising his word. The story of the Sabbath-breaker, who deliberately and openly broke the commandment, illustrates it. The tassels on the garments are a counterweight: a simple, visible reminder to obey. God knows we forget, and he gives us ways to remember.

Korah's rebellion is a different kind of sin. His claim sounds democratic: "All the congregation are holy." And it is true that all Israel was called to be holy. But Korah is using that truth to attack the order God had established. He does not want holiness. He wants the priesthood. Moses' response is telling. He falls on his face. He does not defend himself, but leaves the matter to the LORD. And the test is a matter of approach: who may come near to God? God himself must choose.

The earth opens, and the rebels fall into Sheol alive. It is a terrifying judgment, and it shows how seriously God takes the offices he has set up. But the very next morning, the whole congregation complains again, accusing Moses and Aaron of killing the people of the LORD. They have learned nothing. Then comes the beautiful image of Aaron, the priest they had just rejected, running into the midst of the plague with a censer of incense and standing between the dead and the living. The plague stops. The mediator they scorned saves them.

STEP 5

Connection

Jude 11 warns against the "rebellion of Korah." Hebrews 5:4 says that no one takes the honor of the priesthood for himself, but only when called by God, as Aaron was. Jesus is the greater priest who stands between the living and the dead, not with a censer but with his own blood (Hebrews 9:12). Paul says that "there is one mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus" (1 Timothy 2:5).

STEP 6

Application

Think about the tassels. What is one simple reminder you can put in your daily life to help you remember God's commands?

Examine whether any grumbling about leaders in your life has a root of pride.

Thank God for the mediator who stands between you and judgment.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Jesus for being the mediator who stands between the living and the dead.

Ask him to keep you from the pride of Korah.

Ask him to help you remember his commands in all that you do.

DAY 163 · WEEK 24

Numbers 17:1-19:22

Aaron's rod buds; priestly dues; the red heifer

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 78 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 17:1-19:22. These chapters finish the story of the challenge to Aaron, describe the duties of the priests and Levites, and give the strange law of the red heifer. Read the middle chapter for its theme of provision, and the last for its theme of cleansing.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the rebellion of Korah, the question of who may approach God has to be settled for good. Chapter 17 does this with a sign: twelve staffs are placed before the ark overnight, and only Aaron's blossoms. Chapter 18 describes what the priests and Levites receive for their support, and chapter 19 describes a ritual for cleansing from contact with the dead, using the ashes of a red heifer.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Twelve staffs, one for each tribe, are laid before the LORD in the tent of meeting (17:1-7).
2. "Behold, the staff of Aaron for the house of Levi had sprouted and put forth buds and produced blossoms, and it bore ripe almonds" (17:8).
3. The staff is put back before the testimony as a sign to the rebels (17:10).
4. The people cry, "Behold, we perish, we are lost, we are all lost!" (17:12).
5. The priests and Levites have no inheritance in the land: "I am your portion and your inheritance among the people of Israel" (18:20).
6. The Levites receive the tithe, and they give a tithe of the tithe to the priests (18:21-32).

7. A red heifer without blemish is slaughtered outside the camp, and burned with cedar, hyssop, and scarlet yarn (19:1-10).
8. The ashes are mixed with water to cleanse anyone who has touched a dead body (19:11-22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Aaron's staff is a picture of life from death. A dry stick, cut from a tree, put in a dark tent overnight, bursts into buds, flowers, and ripe almonds. It is a miracle that shows the choice of God, and it also gives a symbol of resurrection. The staff was dead wood, and it lived. The one God has chosen is the one who brings life.

The sign settles the question, and it also shows the people's fear. They had been grumbling that Moses and Aaron were killing them, and now they say, "We are lost!" The proper answer to that fear is in the next chapter, where God sets out the provision for the priesthood. The priests will bear the iniquity of the sanctuary. They stand between God's holiness and the people's sin, so that the people do not die by coming too near.

The statement in 18:20 is one of the loveliest in the book. The priests and Levites will have no land. "I am your portion and your inheritance." It sounds like a loss, but it is the greatest gift. The ones closest to God have God himself. The psalmist later says, "The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup" (Psalm 16:5).

The red heifer is the most puzzling ritual in the law. It involves a spotless animal sacrificed outside the camp, burned, and its ashes used for cleansing. It is a rite for dealing with death, the great defilement. A priest who prepares the ashes becomes unclean himself, a paradox that the rabbis later noted. The one who cleanses others is made unclean by the work.

The common thread through these chapters is that God provides what is needed to live in his presence. He provides a priest who is chosen and living, a portion that is himself, and a cleansing for the effects of death. Each of these looks ahead to Christ.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the one who rose from the dead, the true budding rod. Hebrews 9:13-14 says, "If the blood of goats and bulls, and the sprinkling of defiled persons with the ashes of a heifer, sanctify for the purification of the flesh, how much more will the blood of Christ... purify our conscience from dead works." Hebrews 13:12 says that Jesus suffered outside the gate. Paul says that Christ is "the firstfruits of those who have fallen asleep" (1 Corinthians 15:20).

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on the statement, “I am your portion.” Ask whether God himself is enough for you.

Thank God for the life that comes out of death, in Christ and in your own story.

Read Hebrews 9:13-14 and pray for the cleansing of your conscience from dead works.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what it means that he is your portion and inheritance.
- Thank him for the life that comes out of death in Jesus.
- Ask him to cleanse your conscience and let you live without fear.

DAY 164 · WEEK 24

Numbers 20:1-21:35

Miriam dies; the rock; the bronze serpent, look and live

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 72 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 20:1-21:35. This reading includes Moses' great failure at Meribah, the death of Miriam and Aaron, and the story of the bronze serpent. Read slowly, and notice how one story leads into the next.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Thirty-eight years have passed, and a new generation stands at Kadesh again. The first generation has largely died. Miriam dies, the people complain about water, and Moses and Aaron sin at the rock. Edom refuses passage. Aaron dies on Mount Hor. Then Israel complains again, and God sends fiery serpents, and then provides a way of healing. The chapters end with the first victories in Transjordan.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Miriam dies and is buried at Kadesh (20:1).
2. The people quarrel with Moses about water, saying, "Why have you brought the assembly of the LORD into this wilderness, that we should die here?" (20:3-5).
3. God says, "Take the staff... and tell the rock before their eyes to yield its water" (20:8).
4. Moses says, "Hear now, you rebels: shall we bring water for you out of this rock?" and strikes the rock twice (20:10-11).
5. God says, "Because you did not believe in me, to uphold me as holy in the eyes of the people of Israel, therefore you shall not bring this assembly into the land" (20:12).
6. Aaron dies on Mount Hor, and his garments are put on Eleazar (20:22-29).

7. The people speak against God and Moses: “We loathe this worthless food.” The LORD sends fiery serpents (21:4-6).

8. God says, “Make a fiery serpent and set it on a pole, and everyone who is bitten, when he sees it, shall live” (21:8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The sin of Moses at the rock is subtle, and it is easy to underestimate. God told him to speak to the rock. Instead, Moses struck it twice, and he said, “Shall we bring water for you out of this rock?” He took the credit that belonged to God. He struck instead of speaking, repeating an earlier command from Exodus 17. And he spoke in anger. The punishment seems severe, but leaders are held to a higher standard, and Moses had misrepresented God to the people. God had described himself as gracious, and Moses showed him as harsh.

The point is a sobering one: even Moses, the meekest man on earth, could fail. No human leader can bring the people into the promised land. The law cannot do it. Only another Joshua, only a greater leader, can.

The bronze serpent is among the strangest and most important stories in the Bible. The people have been bitten by snakes because of their sin. God does not remove the snakes. Instead, he gives a remedy that requires only a look. The cure is a serpent on a pole, the image of the very thing that is killing them. The ones who look live. There is no medicine, no effort, no payment. The simplest act of faith saves.

It is a story about how salvation works. The people had to believe that looking at a bronze snake would heal them. It is foolish by any natural reasoning. But God’s cure is often a matter of faith in his word, not an act of strength. “Everyone who is bitten, when he sees it, shall live.”

The progress from the death of Aaron to the lifting of the serpent to the first victories shows that God’s work continues even when leaders fail and die. The people move on toward the land, led by a God who does not die.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, so must the Son of Man be lifted up, that whoever believes in him may have eternal life” (John 3:14-15). The cross is the pole, and looking is believing. Paul says, “Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us” (Galatians 3:13). 1 Corinthians 10:4 says that the rock was Christ, who was struck once and now gives living water freely (John 7:37-38).

STEP 6

Application

Think about what it means to “look and live.” Spend a few minutes looking to Christ on the cross.

Ask whether you have ever taken credit for something God did. Give it back.

Pray for leaders who have failed, and thank God that his work does not depend on any one person.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Look to Jesus lifted up, and tell him what you need healed.
- Confess where you have taken credit that belongs to God.
- Thank him that his work goes on despite our failure.

PSALM 100:3

DAY 165 · WEEK 24

Numbers 22:1-24:25

Balaam, God's sovereignty over a false prophet

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 88 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 22:1-24:25. This is the story of Balaam, the prophet hired to curse Israel who can only bless them. It is full of irony and humor, and also one of the most important prophecies of the Messiah in the Old Testament. Notice who sees what.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has camped on the plains of Moab, east of the Jordan, opposite Jericho. Balak, the king of Moab, is afraid of them. He hires Balaam, a diviner from Mesopotamia, to curse Israel. God will not let him. Balaam goes, and three times he tries to curse, and three times he blesses. The story is told from a distance. Israel never hears of it, but God is fighting for them without their knowledge.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Balak says, "He whom you bless is blessed, and he whom you curse is cursed" (22:6).
2. God tells Balaam, "You shall not go with them. You shall not curse the people, for they are blessed" (22:12).
3. Balaam goes with Balak's men, and the donkey sees the angel of the LORD three times before Balaam does (22:21-35).
4. The donkey speaks: "What have I done to you, that you have struck me these three times?" (22:28).
5. Balaam says, "I cannot go beyond the command of the LORD my God to do less or more" (22:18).

6. “God is not man, that he should lie, or a son of man, that he should change his mind” (23:19).
7. “He has not beheld misfortune in Jacob, nor has he seen trouble in Israel. The LORD their God is with them” (23:21).
8. “I see him, but not now; I behold him, but not near: a star shall come out of Jacob, and a scepter shall rise out of Israel” (24:17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The story of Balaam is comic and serious at the same time. A prophet-for-hire, who is hoping for a large payment, is outwitted by his own donkey. The animal sees the angel of the LORD, and the professional seer does not. He is more eager for money than for truth. The irony is complete when the donkey speaks and Balaam answers it as though it were normal to argue with a donkey.

The deeper point is that no one can curse those whom God has blessed. Balak thinks that the right words, from the right person, in the right place, can turn God’s favor away. But God’s blessing is not a thing to be manipulated. “How can I curse whom God has not cursed?” (23:8). The blessing was given in the covenant with Abraham, and it will not be undone by any spell.

The oracle in 23:19 is among the clearest statements of God’s faithfulness: “God is not man, that he should lie.” He does not change his mind the way people do. When he promises, he does it. The people do not know any of this is happening, which is the beauty of it. While Israel sleeps in their tents, God defends them.

The last oracle, in 24:17, is the high point. Balaam, who came to curse, ends by announcing a coming king: “a star shall come out of Jacob, and a scepter shall rise out of Israel.” It looks ahead to David, who crushed Moab, and beyond David to the final King. The oracle is spoken by a pagan prophet, whose own heart is not changed. God can use anyone to speak his word, even one who does not love him.

The tragedy of Balaam is that he knew all this and still ended badly. In the next chapter, you will see how Balaam’s counsel led Israel into sin.

STEP 5

Connection

The magi who followed a star to Bethlehem (Matthew 2:2) probably knew this prophecy. Jesus is called “the bright morning star” in Revelation 22:16. Paul says that “if God is for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31), and “nothing… will be able to separate us from the love of God" (Romans 8:38-39). Peter and Jude warn about the way of Balaam, which loves gain from wrongdoing (2 Peter 2:15; Jude 11).

STEP 6

Application

Remember that no curse can undo what God has blessed in Christ. Take comfort in that if you are afraid.

Ask whether you are ever more concerned with reward than with truth, like Balaam.

Thank God that he fights for you even when you are unaware of it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that those he has blessed cannot be cursed.
- Thank him for the Star who came out of Jacob.
- Ask him to keep you from loving gain more than truth.

PSALM 100:3

DAY 166 · WEEK 24

Psalm 99

The LORD reigns; holy is he

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 9 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 99. This is the last of a short series of psalms that proclaim "the LORD reigns." Read it for its repeated refrain, "Holy is he," and notice how Moses, Aaron, and Samuel appear.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 99 is a psalm of praise to the LORD as king. It has three sections, each ending with a refrain about God's holiness. Unlike the more joyful psalms, this one stresses awe and reverence. It appears here because the story of Numbers has shown what happens when people forget that the God who lives among them is holy. It also mentions Moses and Aaron, the leaders of the wilderness generation.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The LORD reigns; let the peoples tremble! He sits enthroned upon the cherubim; let the earth quake!" (v. 1).
2. "The LORD is great in Zion; he is exalted over all the peoples" (v. 2).
3. "Let them praise your great and awesome name! Holy is he!" (v. 3).
4. "The King in his might loves justice. You have established equity; you have executed justice and righteousness in Jacob" (v. 4).
5. "Exalt the LORD our God; worship at his footstool! Holy is he!" (v. 5).
6. "Moses and Aaron were among his priests, Samuel also was among those who called upon his name" (v. 6).
7. "You were a forgiving God to them, but an avenger of their wrongdoings" (v. 8).

8 “Exalt the LORD our God, and worship at his holy mountain; for the LORD our God is holy!” (v. 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The refrain, “Holy is he,” gives the psalm its shape. The first section celebrates God’s rule over the nations, the second his love of justice, and the third his dealings with his people in history. Each ends with the same note. Holiness is not one attribute among many. It is the character that sets God apart from everything else, the quality that makes his power safe and his justice trustworthy.

It is notable that holiness and justice go together here. The “King in his might loves justice.” A holy God is not just distant and awesome. He cares about equity. His holiness shows itself in how he rules, which is fairly and truly.

The third section is the most important for this unit. It remembers Moses, Aaron, and Samuel, who called on the LORD, and says that he answered them. He spoke to them in the pillar of cloud. This is a reference to the wilderness generation. The psalm then says something that holds together the whole book of Numbers: “You were a forgiving God to them, but an avenger of their wrongdoings.” Both are true. God forgave Israel at Kadesh, and God also let a generation die in the wilderness. He is merciful, and he is holy. Neither cancels the other.

This is a difficult balance to keep. We tend to emphasize one side and neglect the other. The psalm holds both. It encourages us to approach God as forgiving and to remember that he is holy. This is exactly what Moses prayed in Exodus 34. The same pairing appears in the apostles: grace and truth, kindness and severity.

After a week of reading about people who tested God, it is good to end with a psalm that tells us to worship him at his footstool.

STEP 5

Connection

In Isaiah 6, the seraphim cry, “Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of hosts,” and John says that Isaiah saw Christ’s glory (John 12:41). Revelation 4:8 repeats the cry before the throne. Paul says, “Note then the kindness and the severity of God” (Romans 11:22). Peter writes, “You shall be holy, for I am holy” (1 Peter 1:16). Hebrews 12:28-29 calls us to worship with reverence and awe.

STEP 6

Application

Read the psalm aloud, and pause at each “Holy is he.” Think about what holiness means to you.

Ask whether you have emphasized God’s mercy at the expense of his holiness, or the other way around.

Thank God for his forgiveness, and ask him to make you holy.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Worship the LORD as holy, in your own words.
- Thank him that he forgives and is also just.
- Ask him to teach you reverence and awe.

THE READING

Read the passage

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 100 is titled "A Psalm for giving thanks." It was probably sung when worshipers entered the temple courts with their thank offerings, like the thanksgiving offerings of Leviticus 7. It is brief, with only five verses. It has been sung by Christians for centuries, often as a call to worship at the start of a service. It ends the series of "the LORD reigns" psalms with an invitation for the whole earth to join in.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Make a joyful noise to the LORD, all the earth!" (v. 1).
2. "Serve the LORD with gladness! Come into his presence with singing!" (v. 2).
3. "Know that the LORD, he is God! It is he who made us, and we are his; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture" (v. 3).
4. "Enter his gates with thanksgiving, and his courts with praise! Give thanks to him; bless his name!" (v. 4).
5. "For the LORD is good; his steadfast love endures forever, and his faithfulness to all generations" (v. 5).
6. There are seven commands: make a joyful noise, serve, come, know, enter, give thanks, bless.

7. There are three reasons: he is God and our maker, he is our shepherd, and he is good, loving, and faithful.

8. The psalm begins with “all the earth” and ends with “all generations.”

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm is a lesson in worship. It tells us what to do, and why. The commands are about joy, gladness, singing, thanksgiving, and praise. Worship is not meant to be a grim duty. It is meant to be glad service. The word “serve” in verse 2 is the same word used for the Levites’ work. All of life can be service, and the right attitude for it is gladness.

The reasons come in verse 3 and verse 5. First, “Know that the LORD, he is God.” Everything starts with who he is. Then, “It is he who made us, and we are his.” We did not make ourselves, and we do not belong to ourselves. This is a freeing thought. It means that we are not responsible for creating our own meaning. We were made, and we are his.

The image of sheep is especially fitting after reading Numbers. Israel were a flock, led by the cloud and the shepherd’s staff of Moses. Like sheep, they wandered, complained, and got into trouble. But they had a shepherd, and the psalm reminds us that we do, too. The one who leads is good.

The last verse gives three words that sum up God’s character: good, loving, and faithful. “His steadfast love endures forever” is the refrain of the whole Old Testament. It is the word used in Exodus 34:6, the name of God in the wilderness. The people failed again and again, but his love did not.

And the psalm is for everyone: “all the earth.” The church has always taken this seriously. The God of Israel is the God of the nations, and all are invited into his gates.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “I am the good shepherd” (John 10:11), and “I will build my church” (Matthew 16:18). Peter says that believers “were straying like sheep, but have now returned to the Shepherd and Overseer of your souls” (1 Peter 2:25). Paul says that all things were created through Christ and for him (Colossians 1:16). Revelation 7:9-10 shows people from every nation joining the worship around the throne.

STEP 6

Application

Say this psalm aloud as a prayer of thanks. Name three specific things for which you are thankful.

Remember that you were made by God and belong to him. Let that settle your restlessness.

Invite someone to church or to a conversation about Christ this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Enter God's gates with thanksgiving, naming specific things you are thankful for.

Thank him that you are the sheep of his pasture.

Praise him that his faithfulness reaches to every generation.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 100:3 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Know that the LORD, he is God! It is he who made us, and we are his; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture."

PSALM 100:3

REST

Meditation

After a week of reading about rebellion, judgment, and the long wandering of the wilderness generation, Psalm 100:3 is a place to rest. It tells you who God is, and who you are.

"Know that the LORD, he is God." The verse begins with an instruction to know. Knowledge here is more than information. It is acknowledgment, the settled recognition of who is God and who is not. Much of Israel's trouble in the wilderness came from forgetting this.

"It is he who made us, and we are his." Two ideas come together: creation and belonging. God made us, so we depend on him for life. And we are his, so we are cared for. We do not have to prove ourselves or earn a place. Our identity rests on his making and his claim.

"We are his people." The phrase comes from the covenant: "I will take you to be my people, and I will be your God" (Exodus 6:7). It is a corporate identity, not only a private one. We belong to a people.

“And the sheep of his pasture.” Sheep are helpless and prone to wander. A shepherd leads them to food and water, protects them from wolves, and finds them when they are lost. The image describes how God treated Israel in the wilderness, even when they did not deserve it.

For the Christian, the verse finds its full meaning in Jesus, the good shepherd who lays down his life for the sheep (John 10:11). He knows his own and calls them by name, and no one can snatch them out of his hand (John 10:28).

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed Israel through more of the wilderness. You read the laws that look ahead to the land, and the rebellion of Korah, which was answered by the earth opening and by Aaron standing between the living and the dead. You saw Aaron’s staff bud, learned that the priests have God himself as their inheritance, and read the puzzling law of the red heifer. You read of Moses’ failure at the rock, the death of Miriam and Aaron, and the bronze serpent that healed all who looked. You heard the story of Balaam, the prophet who could only bless, and the prophecy of the star out of Jacob. In the Psalms, you read Psalm 99, which holds God’s forgiveness and holiness together, and Psalm 100, a song of thanks. The week taught that God preserves his plan despite human failure, and that his chosen mediator saves.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Aaron stood between the living and the dead with a censer of incense, and the plague stopped. How does this picture help you understand what Jesus does for you?

The people were healed by looking at the bronze serpent. What does this story teach you about how faith works, and what do you need to look at today?

Psalm 100 says, “It is he who made us, and we are his.” How would it change your week to remember that you belong to God?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he made you and that you are his.

Thank Jesus, the good shepherd who lays down his life.

Rest in him today.

DAY 169 · WEEK 25

Numbers 25:1-27:23

Baal of Peor; Phinehas; the second census; Joshua commissioned

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 77 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 25:1-27:23. This reading includes a terrible sin at Baal of Peor, the zeal of Phinehas, a new census, the daughters of Zelophehad, and the commissioning of Joshua. Notice the way the story turns from failure to a new beginning.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel is still on the plains of Moab. After Balaam's oracles, you might expect everything to be well, but chapter 25 tells how the people joined in the worship of Baal of Peor and with Moabite women. A plague breaks out. Chapter 26 then begins a new census of the next generation, which is a way of marking that the old generation has gone. Chapter 27 deals with the inheritance rights of women and the appointment of Moses' successor.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "While Israel lived in Shittim, the people began to whore with the daughters of Moab" (25:1).
2. They join in the worship of Baal of Peor, and the LORD's anger is kindled (25:2-3).
3. Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, takes a spear and kills an Israelite man and a Midianite woman (25:6-8).
4. The plague stops, with 24,000 dead, and God makes a covenant of peace with Phinehas and his descendants (25:9-13).
5. A new census is taken, and "among these there was not one of those listed by Moses and Aaron… except Caleb… and Joshua" (26:64-65).

6. The five daughters of Zelophehad ask for their father's inheritance, since he had no sons (27:1-4).
7. God says, "The daughters of Zelophehad are right" and makes a law for the inheritance of daughters (27:5-11).
8. Moses asks God to appoint a leader, and God says, "Take Joshua the son of Nun, a man in whom is the Spirit" (27:15-23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The sin of Baal of Peor shows how Israel's most dangerous enemy is not the army of a neighboring king but the attraction of other gods. Balaam, who could not curse Israel, found another way: he advised Balak to send women to seduce the Israelite men into idolatry (31:16). What a hired curse could not do, temptation did. The people fall into sexual immorality and the worship of a false god, the two sins that regularly appear together in the Bible. The plague that follows shows the seriousness of the offense.

Phinehas' action is hard to read. His zeal for God's honor stops the plague, and God commends him. But it is a violent act, in a setting where the nation was under the covenant penalties of the theocracy. It is not a model for private revenge. It shows the principle that when the community is polluted by sin, someone must stand in the gap. The promise of a "covenant of peace" to Phinehas is a reminder that even in judgment, God works through faithful servants.

The new census marks the end of the old generation. "Not one" was left except Caleb and Joshua. It is a quiet but powerful way of confirming God's word: what he said at Kadesh has come true. The people who feared the giants are gone, and their children are numbered. God keeps his word, both in judgment and in promise.

The story of the daughters of Zelophehad is a bright spot. The five sisters speak up in faith, believing that the land will be given and wanting a share in it. They come forward at a time when the old generation has just been shown to have lost its vision. Moses brings their case to God, and God says, "They are right." The inheritance laws are changed to include them. It is a case of faith being rewarded and the justice of God extending to those who might be overlooked.

The chapter ends with the commissioning of Joshua. Moses will not lead Israel into the land, and so a successor is appointed. He is a man "in whom is the Spirit," and he is publicly ordained with the laying on of hands.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul warns the Corinthians about the sin at Peor (1 Corinthians 10:8). Revelation 2:14 refers to the teaching of Balaam. Psalm 106:30-31 says that Phinehas' action was "counted to him as righteousness." Jesus, whose name is the Greek form of Joshua's, is the greater leader who brings his people into the true rest (Hebrews 4:8-9). The daughters of Zelophehad point forward to the truth that in Christ, there is "neither male nor female" in the inheritance (Galatians 3:28-29).

STEP 6

Application

Think about where you are most vulnerable to temptation, and take a concrete step to guard it.

Take heart from the daughters of Zelophehad. Ask God for something in faith, believing that he will keep his promises.

Pray for the next generation of leaders in your church, that they would be filled with the Spirit.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to guard your heart against rival loves.
- Thank him for keeping his word across generations.
- Pray for leaders filled with his Spirit.

DEUTERONOMY 1:31

DAY 170 · WEEK 25

Numbers 28:1-30:16

The appointed offerings; the feasts; vows

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 76 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 28:1-30:16. These chapters give a calendar of offerings and the laws of vows. They may seem repetitive after the earlier readings in Leviticus, so read them with this question: why would God repeat this to a new generation?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The first generation has died, and a new generation stands on the edge of the land. Moses restates the regular offerings and festivals to them. The daily offering, the Sabbath, the monthly new moon, and the annual feasts are all laid out, with their required sacrifices. Chapter 30 then deals with vows: who can make them, and who can annul them. The point is to prepare the people for life in the land, where worship will be part of daily rhythm.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Command the people of Israel and say to them, My food offering, my pleasing aroma, you shall be careful to offer to me at its appointed time" (28:2).
2. The daily offering is two lambs, one in the morning and one at twilight (28:3-8).
3. The Sabbath offering doubles the daily offering (28:9-10).
4. A monthly offering is made at the new moon (28:11-15).
5. Passover and Unleavened Bread are in the first month (28:16-25), the Feast of Weeks follows (28:26-31).
6. The seventh month has the Feast of Trumpets, the Day of Atonement, and the Feast of Booths (29:1-40).

7. “If a man vows a vow to the LORD, or swears an oath to bind himself by a pledge, he shall not break his word. He shall do according to all that proceeds out of his mouth” (30:2).

8. A father or husband may annul the vow of a daughter or wife under certain conditions (30:3-16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The repeated calendar of offerings is for a new generation. The people who stood at Sinai are gone, and their children need to hear the law again. It is a lesson in how faith is passed on. Every generation must be taught. The things God has commanded do not become unimportant because they were said once.

The daily offering is the foundation of the schedule. Every morning and every evening, a lamb was offered. Everything else, the Sabbath, the new moons, the feasts, was added on top of this daily rhythm. The sense is that the whole of life is lived under the sign of sacrifice. At the beginning and end of each day, God is acknowledged and sin is covered.

The calendar also builds toward the seventh month. The feasts cluster there, the Trumpets, the Day of Atonement, and Booths. The seventh month is the climax of the year, and it moves from the trumpet of awakening, through the cleansing of atonement, to the joy of the harvest. It is a movement that the church has always seen as a picture of the whole story of salvation.

The laws about vows come next. The principle in 30:2 is clear: a person must keep his word. Because a vow is made to the LORD, it is not something to be taken lightly. This is a hard word in an age when promises are cheap. The details about fathers and husbands annulling vows reflect the family structure of ancient Israel, and they show that vows were taken seriously enough to need regulation.

Behind all of it is the idea that worship is meant to be ordered. God does not leave it to our moods. He gives times, and he calls us to be faithful to them. This is not legalism. It is the discipline that keeps love alive.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the Lamb who was slain once for all, ending the need for daily sacrifices (Hebrews 10:11-14). Paul tells believers to “present your bodies as a living sacrifice” (Romans 12:1), and Hebrews 13:15 calls for a continual sacrifice of praise. Jesus taught, “Let what you say be simply Yes or No" (Matthew 5:37), echoing the importance of keeping one's word. Colossians 2:17 says that the festivals are "a shadow of the things to come."

STEP 6

Application

Consider the daily rhythm of your own life. Do you begin and end the day with God?

Think about any promise you have made and not kept. Bring it to God and make it right.

Thank God that the daily sacrifice has been fulfilled in Christ, and offer him your praise today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he is worthy of worship at every time.
- Ask him to make you faithful to your word and to time with him.
- Thank Jesus, the Lamb who took away your sin once for all.

DAY 171 · WEEK 25

Numbers 31:1-32:42

War with Midian; Reuben and Gad settle east of the Jordan

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 81 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 31:1-32:42. These chapters describe the war against Midian and the request of two and a half tribes to settle east of the Jordan. The first is difficult material. Read it with care and with the context of the whole book in mind.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

God had told Moses that after the matter of Peor, he would take vengeance on the Midianites, and then he would be gathered to his people. Chapter 31 describes the campaign. Chapter 32 then turns to the tribes of Reuben and Gad, and half of Manasseh, who have large herds and see that the land east of the Jordan is good for livestock. They ask to settle there. Moses is alarmed, because it sounds like the sin of the spies all over again.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Moses, “Avenge the people of Israel on the Midianites. Afterward you shall be gathered to your people” (31:2).
2. Twelve thousand men, a thousand from each tribe, go out with Phinehas and the holy vessels (31:3-6).
3. They kill every male, including the five kings and Balaam son of Beor (31:7-8).
4. Moses is angry that the women who caused Israel to sin at Peor were spared (31:14-16).
5. The soldiers and anything that touched death must be purified (31:19-24).
6. The plunder is divided between the soldiers and the congregation, with a tribute to the LORD and to the Levites (31:25-47).
7. The tribes of Reuben and Gad ask to settle east of the Jordan (32:1-5).

8. Moses says, “Shall your brothers go to the war while you sit here?” and then agrees on the condition that they fight with the others until the land is taken (32:6-33). He warns, “Be sure your sin will find you out” (32:23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The war with Midian is one of the more troubling stories in Scripture, and it deserves to be read honestly. It is presented as a judgment on a people who had deliberately tried to destroy Israel’s faith, and it is carried out as a holy war under God’s explicit command, under the leadership of the priest, and with the sacred vessels. It was not a general permission for violence. It was a specific judgment, in a specific time, on a specific people who had led Israel into idolatry.

Notice the attention to purity. The soldiers must be cleansed after the battle, and the plunder is purified. The text is clear that war is a defiling thing, even when commanded. The gold given to the LORD, 16,750 shekels, is accompanied by the confession that none of the men has been lost. These are the marks of a people who understand that they are not simply conquerors but servants.

The story of the eastern tribes is an important lesson about community responsibility. Reuben and Gad do not want to cross over. Moses’ first response is sharp, because he sees in it the same fear that destroyed their fathers. But the tribes explain that they will go before their brothers, armed, until the whole land is settled. Moses accepts, and he warns them that their word is binding before the LORD.

The sentence, “Be sure your sin will find you out,” is a proverb of its own. It is about the certainty that hidden or neglected obligations eventually come to light. Obligation to the community, kept or broken, is a matter of faithfulness to God.

The shape of the chapters is a warning against comfort. The tribes had found a good place and were tempted to stop short of the promise. We, too, can settle for good things this side of the Jordan. The call is to join our brothers in the greater work until it is done.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 4:11 says, “Let us therefore strive to enter that rest.” Paul tells believers to carry each other’s burdens (Galatians 6:2) and compares the church to a body (1 Corinthians 12). The warning to the eastern tribes echoes Jesus’ words about those who put their hand to the plow and look back (Luke 9:62). The war of Midian points to the ultimate battle against evil, which Christ has won (Colossians 2:15).

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether you have settled for something good that is short of God's best for you.

Think about your obligations to your community. Are you carrying your share?

Consider the seriousness of sin. "Be sure your sin will find you out." Confess anything hidden.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep you from settling short of his best.
- Pray for those you walk beside, that you would be faithful to them.
- Thank Christ for winning the final victory over evil.

DEUTERONOMY 1:31

DAY 172 · WEEK 25

Numbers 33:1-34:29

Stages of the journey; boundaries of the land

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 65 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 33:1-34:29. The first chapter is a travel diary of the entire journey from Egypt. The second sets out the boundaries of the land. Read the first as a testimony to God's faithfulness, and the second as a promise coming close.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel is about to cross the Jordan. Before they do, Moses records every stage of the journey from Egypt to the plains of Moab. There are forty-two stops. The record is written "by command of the LORD." Then God defines the borders of the land, names the leaders who will divide it, and gives instructions for the conquest.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Moses wrote down their starting places, stage by stage, by command of the LORD" (33:2).
2. The list begins with Rameses and ends with the plains of Moab by the Jordan (33:3-49).
3. Some of the stops are well known: the sea, Marah, Elim, Rephidim, Sinai, Kibroth-hattaavah, Kadesh (33:8-37).
4. Aaron died on Mount Hor at the age of 123 (33:38-39).
5. "When you pass over the Jordan into the land of Canaan, then you shall drive out all the inhabitants of the land from before you" (33:51-52).
6. Failure to drive them out will make them "as barbs in your eyes and thorns in your sides" (33:55).
7. The borders of the land are described on the south, west, north, and east (34:1-12).

8 Eleazar and Joshua, with one leader from each tribe, will divide the land (34:16-29).

STEP 4

Interpretation

A list of travel stops is not what we would choose to read for inspiration, but it says something important. Forty-two stages. Each name is a place where God's people camped, and where something happened. Some were places of failure, some of provision, and some of grief. The list shows that the whole journey, even the part that felt like wasted time, was part of God's plan. "By command of the LORD," Moses wrote it down.

The record is also a way of remembering. In the Psalms, the people are repeatedly told to recall the journey. This list gives a map for memory. If we want to understand God's faithfulness, we need to look back over the stages of our own lives and see how he led us. Few of us remember every stage. But God does.

The shift to the land of Canaan marks the end of the wilderness. For the first time since leaving Egypt, the people are given a goal with edges. The borders are described in detail, because the land is a gift with specific limits. It is real, and it is theirs.

The warning in 33:55 is sobering. If they do not drive out the inhabitants, those left will become "barbs in your eyes and thorns in your sides." The danger was not military but spiritual. Peoples who worshiped other gods would be a constant temptation. The book of Judges will show how it came true.

The assignment of leaders to divide the land is a final note of order. Eleazar the priest and Joshua the leader will work with one chief from each tribe. The land is not seized by individuals but received by the community, under the guidance of God's chosen leaders.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 11:13-16 describes the patriarchs as people who "confessed that they were strangers and exiles on the earth" and who longed for a heavenly country. Paul says that "all things work together for good for those who love God" (Romans 8:28), including the wanderings. Peter describes believers as "sojourners and exiles" (1 Peter 2:11). The new Jerusalem has boundaries too, and its dimensions are given in Revelation 21:15-17.

STEP 6

Application

Take a few minutes to list the stages of your own journey with God. Where have you seen his faithfulness?

Ask whether there is a “thorn in your side,” something you have left unresolved. Take a step to deal with it.

Thank God that your journey has a destination, and that he is leading you there.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for leading you stage by stage, remembering a step you can name.

Ask him to help you deal with the “thorns” you have left behind.

Look forward with him to the land he has promised.

DEUTERONOMY 1:31

DAY 173 · WEEK 25

Numbers 35:1-36:13

Levitical cities, cities of refuge; inheritance laws

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 47 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Numbers 35:1-36:13. The book ends with cities for the Levites, cities of refuge for those who kill accidentally, and a final ruling about inheritance. Read the cities of refuge slowly, as they are rich in meaning.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The tribes are about to receive their land. The Levites, who have no tribal territory, are to be given forty-eight cities scattered among the others. Six of these are designated as cities of refuge, places where a person who has killed someone accidentally can flee and be safe. The book concludes with a follow-up to the case of the daughters of Zelophehad, since the tribes were concerned that their inheritance might pass from tribe to tribe.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The Levites receive forty-eight cities with pasturelands (35:1-8).
2. Six are cities of refuge: three east of the Jordan, three west (35:9-15).
3. The one who kills by accident may flee to a city of refuge and be safe from “the avenger of blood” (35:11-12).
4. A murderer, however, may not take refuge, and must be put to death on the testimony of two or more witnesses (35:16-34).
5. The manslayer must stay in the city of refuge “until the death of the high priest” (35:25, 28).
6. “You shall not pollute the land in which you live, for blood pollutes the land, and no atonement can be made for the land for the blood that is shed in it, except by the blood of the one who shed it" (35:33).

7. "You shall not defile the land in which you live, in the midst of which I dwell, for I the LORD dwell in the midst of the people of Israel" (35:34).

8. The tribes are to keep their inheritance, and women who inherit must marry within their tribe (36:1-12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The cities of refuge are one of the most beautiful provisions in the law. In the ancient world, if someone was killed, a relative was expected to take revenge. This cycle could consume whole families. God provides an alternative: places where a person who killed by accident could run and be safe until a fair trial. The law distinguishes between murder and manslaughter, and it protects the innocent while still taking life seriously.

The cities were spread out so that no one would be too far from one. The roads to them were kept in good repair, according to later tradition. They were open to everyone, Israelite or foreigner. The point is accessibility. A person in flight, with an avenger at his heels, could reach safety without delay.

The detail about the high priest is surprising. The manslayer must stay in the city until the high priest dies, and then he may go home. It seems arbitrary at first, but it contains a profound idea. The death of the high priest atones. His death is the end of the exile. It makes a way home for those who were under restraint.

The reason for the law is given in the last verses of chapter 35. Bloodshed pollutes the land, and the land cannot be cleansed except by the shedding of the murderer's blood. God dwells in the land, so its purity is a matter of life and death. The same principle runs through the whole of Leviticus: where God dwells, sin must be dealt with.

The final chapter returns to a practical matter and ends on a note of order and obedience. The daughters of Zelophehad do as they were told. The book that began with a census ends with an inheritance. After forty years, the people are ready, at least in terms of structure, to enter the land.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 6:18 speaks of those "who have fled for refuge" to lay hold of the hope set before them, and Jesus is the one in whom we find refuge. He is also the high priest whose death sets the captives free (Hebrews 9:15). Paul says, "There is therefore now no condemnation for those who are in Christ Jesus" (Romans 8:1). Jesus prayed on the cross, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do" (Luke 23:34).

STEP 6

Application

Think of Christ as your city of refuge, and run to him with whatever guilt you carry.

Consider whether you hold a grudge against someone, and whether you could extend mercy.

Thank God that the death of the great high priest has opened the way home.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Flee to Christ as your refuge, and tell him what you are running from.

Ask him to keep you from the cycle of vengeance.

Ask him to make you quick to show mercy.

"And in the wilderness, where you saw how the LORD your God carried you, as a man carries his son, all the way that you went until you came to this place."

DEUTERONOMY 1:31

DAY 174 · WEEK 25

Deuteronomy 1:1-3:29

Moses recounts the journey, covenant history

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 81 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 1:1-3:29. A new book begins, and it is a series of sermons by Moses. Notice how he looks backward to the journey from Sinai, and what he says to the new generation about what their parents did.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Deuteronomy means "second law." It takes place on the plains of Moab, in the last weeks of Moses' life. Forty years have passed since the exodus. A new generation, most of whom were children or unborn at Sinai, stands ready to cross the Jordan. Moses preaches to them in a series of speeches. The first section, which you read today, is a historical review: it recalls how God led Israel from Horeb to this place, and why they are here and not in the land already.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "It is eleven days" journey from Horeb by the way of Mount Seir to Kadesh-barnea' (1:2).
2. "The LORD our God said to us in Horeb, You have stayed long enough at this mountain" (1:6).
3. Moses recounts how he appointed leaders to share the burden of judging (1:9-18).
4. The people refused to enter the land: "Because the LORD hated us he has brought us out of the land of Egypt" (1:27).
5. "The LORD your God... carried you, as a man carries his son, all the way that you went" (1:31).

6. Because of their unbelief, the LORD swore that none of that generation would see the land, except Caleb (1:34-36).
7. Moses was also barred from entering because of the people (1:37; 3:23-27).
8. God gives victories over Sihon and Og, and Moses sees the land from Mount Pisgah (2:26-3:29).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Moses begins by looking back, and what he says is a lesson in the right use of memory. He remembers the failures honestly, including his own burden and the people's refusal. But he also remembers God's care. The most beautiful line is 1:31: "in the wilderness, where you saw how the LORD your God carried you, as a man carries his son." Behind the story of rebellion and judgment, there was a father carrying his child.

The review has a purpose. The new generation needs to understand why they are standing east of the Jordan, and why the land is a gift and not an achievement. If they think the land is theirs by right, they will repeat their fathers' mistake. Moses tells the story so that they will learn to trust.

It also reveals the heart of the old generation's sin. They said, "Because the LORD hated us he has brought us out of Egypt." This is a shocking accusation. The very act of rescue became evidence of hatred in their minds. It is a picture of what unbelief does. It takes God's love and turns it inside out.

Moses' mention of his own exclusion from the land shows an honesty in leadership. He does not hide his failure or pretend that it was unjust. He says that God was angry with him "on your account," and that he pleaded for mercy and was refused. The leader shares the consequences of the people's sin, and in that sense he points beyond himself to one who would bear them fully.

The chapters end with Moses on the mountain, looking over the land he will not enter, and with the command to charge and encourage Joshua. The torch is passed. The people will go in, and Moses will not. But God will be with Joshua.

STEP 5

Connection

Stephen's speech in Acts 7 retells this history, and Paul preaches a similar summary in Acts 13:18, citing Deuteronomy 1:31: "he put up with them in the wilderness." Isaiah 63:9 says, "In all their affliction he was afflicted… he lifted them up and carried them all the days of old."

Jesus said, “Come to me… and I will give you rest” (Matthew 11:28). Moses looks at the land from afar, as Hebrews 11:13 says of all the faithful.

STEP 6

Application

Take time to remember how God has carried you. Write down two or three instances.

Ask whether you have ever interpreted God’s care as hostility, and tell him about it.

Think about those you are leading or teaching. How might you pass on what God has done?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for carrying you as a father carries his son, naming a time you did not know it.

Confess where you mistook his love for hatred.

Ask him to teach you to remember his works and pass them on.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Deuteronomy 1:31 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And in the wilderness, where you saw how the LORD your God carried you, as a man carries his son, all the way that you went until you came to this place."

DEUTERONOMY 1:31

REST

Meditation

Deuteronomy 1:31 is a single sentence, spoken at the end of a forty-year journey, that changes how we look at the whole wilderness.

"In the wilderness." The wilderness is the place of testing and failure in the Bible. It is where Israel grumbled, rebelled, and wandered. Moses does not deny any of it. But he tells them to look again.

"Where you saw how the LORD your God carried you." The people had seen many things in the wilderness: manna, water from the rock, fire and cloud. Moses asks them to see the hidden side of the story. In all their complaining and unbelief, someone had been carrying them.

“As a man carries his son.” It is a tender picture of a father carrying a child too small or too tired to walk. It is not the image of a general leading an army. It is the image of a parent who picks up a child, who does not shame them for being weak, and who brings them all the way home.

“All the way that you went until you came to this place.” The carrying was not occasional but constant. Every step of the forty years was a step taken with God’s help. The place where they stood was the result of his faithfulness and not their strength.

For the Christian, the verse is an assurance. “He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ” (Philippians 1:6). The Father who carried Israel carries his children still, through the Son who bore our sins.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you came to the end of the book of Numbers and the beginning of Deuteronomy. You read about the sin at Baal of Peor and the zeal of Phinehas, the new census that confirmed God’s word about the old generation, and the daughters of Zelophehad, who asked for an inheritance by faith. You read of Joshua’s commissioning, the calendar of offerings, the war against Midian, and the request of the eastern tribes. You read the travel record of the forty-two stages and the boundaries of the land. You learned of the cities of refuge and the death of the high priest that sets the manslayer free. Then Moses began his sermons on the plains of Moab, looking back over the journey and reminding the new generation that God had carried them. The week taught that God keeps his word in judgment and in promise, and that he is the one who carries his people.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Moses says that God carried Israel “as a man carries his son.” Where have you seen God carry you in a time you were not aware of it, and what would it mean to thank him for it?

The manslayer was freed by the death of the high priest. How does this picture deepen your understanding of what Christ’s death accomplished?

Moses recalled the past honestly, including his own failure. What do you need to remember honestly about your own journey, and how might that help you trust God for the future?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for carrying you when you did not know it.

Ask him to help you remember his faithfulness.

Rest in him, trusting him for the road ahead.

DAY 176 · WEEK 26

Psalm 78:1-39

Teaching the next generation, remembering God's works

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 39 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 78:1-39. This is a long psalm that retells Israel's history as a lesson for the next generation. Today's section covers the exodus and the wilderness. Read it alongside what you have just finished in Numbers.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 78 is a psalm of Asaph, and it is the second longest psalm in the Psalter. It is called a "maskil," a teaching psalm. Its purpose is stated in the first verses: to tell the coming generation the glorious deeds of the LORD, so that they might set their hope in God and not be like their fathers, a stubborn and rebellious generation. Today's reading, verses 1 to 39, retells the events of Exodus and Numbers with a focus on Israel's repeated forgetfulness.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Give ear, O my people, to my teaching; incline your ears to the words of my mouth!" (v. 1).
2. "We will not hide them from their children, but tell to the coming generation the glorious deeds of the LORD" (v. 4).
3. The purpose: "that they should set their hope in God and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments" (v. 7).
4. "The Ephraimites, armed with the bow, turned back on the day of battle" (v. 9).
5. "They forgot what he had done and the wonders that he had shown them" (v. 11).
6. "He divided the sea and let them pass through it, and made the waters stand like a heap" (v. 13).

7. “Yet they sinned still more against him, rebelling against the Most High in the desert” (v. 17).

8. “But he, being compassionate, atoned for their iniquity and did not destroy them; he restrained his anger often and did not stir up all his wrath. He remembered that they were but flesh, a wind that passes and comes not again” (vv. 38-39).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm has a clear structure. It begins with the duty to teach the next generation. Then it gives the story, a long alternating pattern of God’s miracles and Israel’s rebellion. Five times in this section alone, the pattern repeats: God acts, the people forget, and God responds with both discipline and mercy. The psalm reads like a summary of Numbers.

The reason for telling the story is that memory is the cure for unbelief. The people turned back in battle, not because the enemy was strong, but because “they forgot what he had done.” When we forget God’s past faithfulness, we cannot trust his present promises. That is why Moses’ whole book of Deuteronomy is built around the word “remember.”

Look at the pattern in verses 17 to 22. The people ask for food, and they test God, saying, “Can God spread a table in the wilderness?” The question is not wrong in itself. It is that they ask it in unbelief, after seeing him divide the sea and bring water from the rock. They want to see if God can do one more thing. It is a picture of the way we treat God when we hold his past gifts at arm’s length.

The center of the section is verses 38 and 39: “He, being compassionate, atoned for their iniquity and did not destroy them.” The key word is “atoned.” God’s compassion is not just a feeling. It leads to action. He provides a covering for sin. And his reason is gentle: “He remembered that they were but flesh.” God knows our frailty. He does not forget it.

The psalm ends today’s section with a mixture of warning and comfort. We can be as stubborn as Israel, but God is more patient than we are stubborn. That is the hope we carry as we teach our children the story.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that the events of the wilderness “took place as examples for us” (1 Corinthians 10:6), and in Romans 15:4 that “whatever was written in former days was written for our instruction.” Jesus quoted this psalm’s words about manna when he said that he is the true bread from heaven (John 6:31). Psalm 103:14 echoes verses 38 and 39: “he knows our frame; he remembers that we are dust.” Hebrews 2:17 says that Christ is a merciful high priest who made propitiation for our sins.

STEP 6

Application

Make a list of the works of God that you want to remember, and share one with a child or younger believer this week.

Ask whether there is an area where you are testing God, doubting that he can provide.

Thank God that he remembers you are dust, and that his compassion made atonement.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to help you tell the next generation of his glorious deeds.

Confess where you forget what he has done.

Thank him for compassion that remembers you are dust.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 26

DEUTERONOMY 6:6-7

DAY 177 · WEEK 26

Deuteronomy 4:1-5:33

Obey the law; the Ten Commandments repeated

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 76 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 4:1-5:33. Moses turns from history to instruction. He urges Israel to obey, and he restates the Ten Commandments. Notice the reasons he gives for obedience.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Having reviewed the journey, Moses begins his second major address. The word "now" in 4:1 marks the turn: "And now, O Israel, listen to the statutes and the rules that I am teaching you." He wants the people to keep the law carefully, because it is their wisdom before the nations. Then, in chapter 5, he gathers the whole assembly and repeats the Ten Commandments given at Horeb, with some variations from the version in Exodus.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "You shall not add to the word that I command you, nor take from it" (4:2).
2. "Keep them and do them, for that will be your wisdom and your understanding in the sight of the peoples" (4:6).
3. "For what great nation is there that has a god so near to it as the LORD our God is to us, whenever we call upon him?" (4:7).
4. "You saw no form on the day that the LORD spoke to you at Horeb out of the midst of the fire" (4:15).
5. "The LORD your God is a merciful God. He will not leave you or destroy you or forget the covenant with your fathers" (4:31).
6. "Hear, O Israel, the statutes and the rules that I speak in your hearing today" (5:1).

7. The Ten Commandments are given again (5:6-21), with the Sabbath commandment grounded in the exodus: “You shall remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt” (5:15).

8. The people say, “Go near and hear all that the LORD our God will say… and we will hear and do it” (5:27).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Moses begins with a startling claim: the law is a gift that makes Israel the envy of the nations. The nations will hear these statutes and say, “Surely this great nation is a wise and understanding people.” Obedience is not a burden but a witness. The law shows what a people ruled by a just and loving God would look like.

The reason is not just the laws, but the God who gave them. “What great nation has a god so near to it?” The nearness of God is the glory of Israel. The other nations had gods to be placated from afar. Israel’s God spoke from the fire and called them to himself.

Moses warns against making images. At Horeb, the people heard a voice, but they saw no form. That was deliberate. A God who cannot be pictured cannot be controlled. Moses stresses that the temptation to make an image, to shape God into something we can handle, is real, and he warns of the consequences.

The restatement of the Ten Commandments in chapter 5 shows how the law was meant to be internalized. The same words that were spoken to the previous generation are now spoken to the next, in the present tense: “The LORD made this covenant not with our fathers but with us, who are all of us here alive today” (5:3). Each generation must receive the covenant as its own.

One difference from Exodus is that the Sabbath commandment gives a new reason. In Exodus, it is based on creation. Here, it is based on redemption: “You shall remember that you were a slave.” The Sabbath is a gift to those who were once denied rest, and it extends rest to servants and animals.

The people’s response sounds right. “We will hear and do it.” But God says that he wishes they had such a heart always. Hearing and doing are the key, and the whole book will keep returning to them.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Think not that I have come to abolish the Law or the Prophets; I have not come to abolish them but to fulfill them” (Matthew 5:17). He is the visible image of the invisible God (Colossians 1:15), the “form” that Israel did not see. Paul says that the law was a guardian until Christ came (Galatians 3:24). Jesus says, “If you love me, you will keep my commandments” (John 14:15).

STEP 6

Application

Read the Ten Commandments aloud slowly. Ask which one the Spirit is pressing on you this week.

Think about how your life displays the wisdom of God to those around you.

Thank God that he is near, and that you can call upon him at any time.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he has drawn near in Jesus.

Ask him to write his commandments on your heart.

Ask him to let your obedience be a witness to those around you.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 26

“And these words that I command you today shall be on your heart. You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise.”

DEUTERONOMY 6:6-7

DAY 178 · WEEK 26

Deuteronomy 6:1-8:20

The Shema; love and memory; do not forget God

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 77 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 6:1-8:20. This is the heart of the book. It contains the Shema, the greatest commandment, and Moses' warnings about forgetting God in prosperity. Read chapter 6 slowly, and think about verses 4 to 9 as the center.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses now moves from the Ten Commandments to their meaning. These chapters begin with the greatest commandment and then apply it to life in the land. They deal with passing faith to the next generation, the dangers of prosperity, and the testing in the wilderness. The Shema, the opening words of 6:4, are recited by Jewish people daily to this day.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God, the LORD is one" (6:4).
2. "You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might" (6:5).
3. "And these words that I command you today shall be on your heart" (6:6).
4. "You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise" (6:7).
5. "When your son asks you in time to come, What is the meaning of the testimonies… then you shall say to your son, We were Pharaoh's slaves in Egypt" (6:20-21).
6. The LORD did not set his love on Israel because they were more in number, but "because the LORD loves you and is keeping the oath that he swore to your fathers" (7:7-8).

7. “And you shall remember the whole way that the LORD your God has led you these forty years in the wilderness, that he might humble you, testing you” (8:2).

8. “Man does not live by bread alone, but man lives by every word that comes from the mouth of the LORD” (8:3).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Shema is the center of Israel’s faith, and of the Bible’s teaching about God. “The LORD our God, the LORD is one.” There is one God, and he is the covenant God. The statement is both theological and personal. He is “our God.” And the response to him is not just assent but love, with the whole person: heart, soul, and might.

Moses ties love to obedience, and obedience to teaching. The words are to be on the heart first, before they are taught to the children. A parent cannot pass on what he does not hold. And the teaching is to happen in all of ordinary life: at home, on the road, at bedtime, at waking. It is not a classroom subject. It is the atmosphere of the household. The signs on the hand and forehead and doorposts are reminders that faith belongs to every part of life.

Then comes a warning about success. “When the LORD your God brings you into the land… take care lest you forget the LORD.” The danger is not hardship but plenty. In good times, we easily imagine that we have earned what we have. Moses says, “You shall remember the LORD your God, for it is he who gives you power to get wealth” (8:18).

Chapter 7 gives a stunning reason for God’s choice of Israel. It was not their size or strength. “The LORD set his love on you” because he loved you. There is no explanation behind love except love itself. This is grace in the Old Testament.

The wilderness years, according to chapter 8, were not wasted. God humbled and tested them to teach one lesson: “Man does not live by bread alone.” Jesus quoted it when tempted in the desert. The manna was a lesson in daily dependence. The forty years were a school of trust.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus calls the Shema “the great and first commandment” (Matthew 22:36-38), and he quotes Deuteronomy 8:3 against Satan (Matthew 4:4). Paul says that “there is one God, the Father… and one Lord, Jesus Christ” (1 Corinthians 8:6), and John says that God’s love for us was shown when “he sent his Son” (1 John 4:10). Ephesians 6:4 tells fathers to bring up their children “in the discipline and instruction of the Lord.”

STEP 6

Application

Say the Shema aloud, slowly. Ask what it would mean to love God with every part of you.

Think of one concrete way you can bring God's word into the ordinary rhythms of your home this week.

Ask whether prosperity or comfort has dulled your dependence on God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you want to love him with all your heart, soul, and might, and where that is hard.

Ask him to keep you from forgetting him in good times.

Ask him to help you teach his words to someone else.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 26

"And these words that I command you today shall be on your heart. You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise."

DEUTERONOMY 6:6-7

DAY 179 · WEEK 26

Deuteronomy 9:1-11:32

Not by your righteousness; God's love for the patriarchs

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 85 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 9:1-11:32. Moses continues his warning about the danger of self-righteousness. He retells the story of the golden calf, and ends with a call to love and obey. Notice how often he says "not because of your righteousness."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel is about to cross the Jordan and to defeat nations stronger than themselves. Moses warns them not to think that this is because of their goodness. In fact, they have been "a stubborn people" from the day they left Egypt. He recalls the golden calf, Moses' intercession, and the second set of tablets. He closes with a call to fear and love the LORD, a promise of blessing, and the first mention of the blessing and curse to be pronounced at Gerizim and Ebal.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Know therefore that the LORD your God is not giving you this good land to possess because of your righteousness, for you are a stubborn people" (9:6).
2. "From the day you came out of the land of Egypt until you came to this place, you have been rebellious against the LORD" (9:7).
3. Moses recounts the forty days on the mountain and the golden calf, and how he fell down before the LORD for forty days and nights (9:9-29).
4. The LORD wrote the commandments again on two new tablets and put them in the ark (10:1-5).
5. "And now, Israel, what does the LORD your God require of you, but to fear the LORD your God, to walk in all his ways, to love him, to serve the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul" (10:12).

6. "Circumcise therefore the foreskin of your heart, and be no longer stubborn" (10:16).
7. "He executes justice for the fatherless and the widow, and loves the sojourner, giving him food and clothing. Love the sojourner, therefore" (10:18-19).
8. "Behold, I am setting before you today a blessing and a curse" (11:26).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The centerpiece of this section is the repeated phrase, "not because of your righteousness." Moses says it again and again. Israel's coming victory will not be a reward for their goodness. It will be an act of God's faithfulness to his promise and a judgment on the wickedness of the nations. The land is a gift, and it is an act of grace to a stubborn people.

The retelling of the golden calf is meant to humble. Moses recalls the very worst moment: that at the foot of the mountain where God had just spoken, the people turned to a calf. And he recalls his own intercession, forty days of prostration. Without it, God would have destroyed them. The point is not to shame, but to show that their standing before God depends on his mercy and on a mediator, and not on their record.

Then comes the great question of 10:12: "What does the LORD your God require of you?" The answer is a list, but it is all one thing: fear, walk, love, serve. The center is love. After a long section about rebellion, the call is not to a new set of rules, but to a heart. And God asks this because he has first loved them: "Yet the LORD set his heart in love on your fathers" (10:15).

The command to "circumcise your heart" in 10:16 is one of the most important phrases in the Old Testament. It shows that the real issue was never the outward mark, but the inner condition. Later, Deuteronomy 30:6 promises that God himself will do this, and Jeremiah and Ezekiel pick it up as the promise of the new covenant.

The portrait of God in 10:17-19 is striking. He is "God of gods and Lord of lords," great and awesome, who takes no bribe, and who loves the sojourner. The most powerful being in the universe is the protector of the powerless. Those who belong to him are to imitate that care.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says, "By grace you have been saved through faith. And this is not your own doing; it is the gift of God, not a result of works" (Ephesians 2:8-9). He writes that "circumcision is a matter of the heart, by the Spirit" (Romans 2:29). Jesus said that to love the LORD with all your heart is the great commandment, and that we are to love our neighbor, including the stranger. In Christ, God has given the new heart (Ezekiel 36:26).

STEP 6

Application

Ask where you are tempted to think that blessings come because you deserve them. Replace that thought with gratitude.

Pray 10:12 as a personal prayer. Which of the verbs, fear, walk, love, serve, do you most need this week?

Show practical love to a stranger or someone vulnerable.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that his love for you is not based on your righteousness.

Ask him to circumcise your heart.

Ask him to teach you to fear, walk with, love, and serve him.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 26

"And these words that I command you today shall be on your heart. You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise."

DEUTERONOMY 6:6-7

DAY 180 · WEEK 26

Psalm 78:40-72

God's patience with rebellion; David chosen as shepherd-king

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 33 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 78:40-72. This is the second half of the history psalm. It continues from the wilderness through the plagues of Egypt, the conquest, the failures in the land, and ends with the choice of David. Notice how the story ends.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 78 continues. Verses 40 to 72 go back over the exodus, with the plagues, and then move forward through the settlement in the land, Israel's idolatry, the capture of the ark, God's rejection of Shiloh, and his choice of Judah and David. It is a summary of the story from Exodus to 2 Samuel, and it ends with a hopeful note.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "How often they rebelled against him in the wilderness and grieved him in the desert!" (v. 40).
2. "They did not remember his power or the day when he redeemed them from the foe" (vv. 42-43).
3. The plagues of Egypt are named: blood, flies, frogs, locusts, hail, pestilence, and the death of the firstborn (vv. 44-51).
4. "Then he led out his people like sheep and guided them in the wilderness like a flock" (v. 52).
5. "Yet they tested and rebelled against the Most High God and did not keep his testimonies" (v. 56).

6. “They provoked him to anger with their high places; they moved him to jealousy with their idols” (v. 58).
7. “He forsook his dwelling at Shiloh, the tent where he dwelt among mankind, and delivered his power to captivity” (vv. 60-61).
8. “He chose David his servant and took him from the sheepfolds… to shepherd Jacob his people… With upright heart he shepherded them and guided them with his skillful hand” (vv. 70-72).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The second half of the psalm shows what happens in the land. The pattern from the wilderness continues. God brings them in, but they test him again and turn to idols. Judgment follows: the ark is captured and Shiloh falls. These are events from the period of Samuel that you will read about soon. The psalm sees all of it as a single pattern: grace, rebellion, judgment, and then, remarkably, grace again.

The surprise comes at the end. After a long account of failure, the psalm does not end with destruction. It ends with the choice of David. “He chose David his servant.” The LORD wakes up like a man who has been asleep and chooses a new shepherd for his people. The humble beginnings are important. David is taken “from the sheepfolds, from following the nursing ewes.” God’s way is to raise up the unlikely.

The picture of the king is a shepherd. “He shepherded them with upright heart and guided them with his skillful hand.” This is the model for leadership in Israel: a shepherd who cares for the flock. It is the same image that opens the wilderness section: “He led out his people like sheep.” The one who led Israel through the desert through Moses will now lead them through David.

For anyone who has read the whole story from Genesis to Deuteronomy, the psalm gives a long view. The failure is real, and God’s judgment is real, but his plan is not defeated. He is working toward the shepherd king, a descendant of David, who will lead his people perfectly.

The lesson for the next generation is that God’s faithfulness is the thread in the story. Our failures are not the point. His mercy is. That is what the children are to be taught.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the Son of David and the good shepherd (John 10:11). Matthew 9:36 says that when he saw the crowds, “he had compassion for them, because they were harassed and helpless, like sheep without a shepherd.” Ezekiel 34:23 promises that God will set one shepherd over them, his servant David. In 1 Peter 5:4, Jesus is called the “chief Shepherd.” Hebrews 13:20 calls him “the great shepherd of the sheep.”

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on the pattern in your own story: grace, failure, discipline, and grace again. Thank God for his steadiness.

Think about who has shepherded you spiritually. Thank them, and pray for them.

Ask how you might shepherd those entrusted to you, with a pure heart and skillful hands.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus, the good shepherd who laid down his life.
- Ask God to help you tell the story of his faithfulness to those near you.
- Thank him for choosing and leading shepherds for his people.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 26

DEUTERONOMY 6:6-7

DAY 181 · WEEK 26

Deuteronomy 12:1-14:29

Centralized worship; false prophets; clean and unclean foods

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 80 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 12:1-14:29. These chapters begin the long section of specific laws. They deal with worship in one place, warnings about false prophets, and rules about food and tithes. Read them with attention to why God gives each one.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

From chapter 12 to chapter 26, Moses applies the Ten Commandments to the life of Israel in the land. The first group of laws is about worship. Israel is to worship only in the place God chooses, to destroy the altars of the nations, and to resist the temptation to follow other gods, even when it comes from a prophet or a family member. Chapter 14 returns to the clean and unclean foods and the tithe.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "You shall surely destroy all the places where the nations whom you shall dispossess served their gods" (12:2).
2. "You shall seek the place that the LORD your God will choose out of all your tribes... and there you shall go" (12:5).
3. "You shall rejoice before the LORD your God, you and your sons and your daughters" (12:12).
4. A prophet who tells Israel to follow other gods is to be rejected, "for the LORD your God is testing you" (13:1-3).
5. Even a brother, a son, or a close friend who entices to idolatry must not be heeded (13:6-11).

6. “You are the sons of the LORD your God” (14:1).
7. The clean and unclean animals are listed again (14:3-21), with the reason, “For you are a people holy to the LORD your God” (14:2, 21).
8. The tithe is to be eaten before the LORD with rejoicing, and every third year given to the Levite, the sojourner, the fatherless, and the widow (14:22-29).

STEP 4

Interpretation

These chapters are about protecting the purity of worship. The command to centralize worship at one place might seem merely administrative, but it has a theological purpose. Dozens of local altars would invite syncretism, mixing the worship of the LORD with the practices of Canaan. One place, chosen by God, keeps the worship unified and under his direction.

The repeated call to rejoice is easy to miss. Worship is to be a feast. The people are told to eat and rejoice in God’s presence, with their families, their servants, and the Levites. This is a faith of celebration. The tithe is not only a tax. It is a meal, a feast shared with the poor and the stranger. Every third year, the tithe is stored locally to care for the vulnerable.

Chapter 13 contains a hard word. Even a prophet who performs signs is to be rejected if he leads people to other gods. The test is not power but doctrine. And God says that such a prophet is a test, “to know whether you love the LORD your God with all your heart.” Love for God is shown by loyalty to his word, even when someone with an impressive sign says otherwise. This applies to those closest to us as well: love for God must not be overridden by family ties.

The beginning of chapter 14 gives the reason for the food laws: “You are the sons of the LORD your God.” They are not arbitrary rules. They are marks of identity. The distinctive diet was a daily reminder that Israel was God’s family.

These chapters show that holiness is expressed in how we worship, whom we follow, what we eat, and how we care for the poor. It is a whole life. And at its center is gladness, not grim duty.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus told the woman at the well that “the hour is coming, and is now here, when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth” (John 4:23). The warning about false prophets is repeated by Jesus (Matthew 7:15) and by John (1 John 4:1). Peter was shown that no food is unclean (Acts 10:15), and Paul said that the kingdom of God is "righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit" (Romans 14:17). Hebrews 12:22-24 describes the joyful assembly of the church.

STEP 6

Application

Think about whether your worship has joy in it. Plan one way to celebrate God's goodness with others this week.

Test the voices you listen to by Scripture. Ask whether any are leading you away from Christ.

Give generously, and include someone in need.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you from loving anything more than him.

Thank him that you are his son or daughter.

Ask him to make you generous to the poor.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Deuteronomy 6:6-7 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And these words that I command you today shall be on your heart. You shall teach them diligently to your children, and shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise."

DEUTERONOMY 6:6-7

REST

Meditation

These two verses follow the Shema and describe how love for God is meant to be lived out. They are among the most practical verses in the Bible.

"These words that I command you today shall be on your heart." The order matters. Before anything is taught to anyone else, the words must be on your own heart. A parent, teacher, or leader cannot pass on what he does not possess. The heart is the starting point.

"You shall teach them diligently to your children." The word "diligently" means to sharpen, as one sharpens a blade. It suggests repetition and care. Faith is not passed on by accident. It requires intention and effort. Notice that the commandment is addressed to parents. God's design is for faith to be taught at home first.

“And shall talk of them when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way, and when you lie down, and when you rise.” This is the surprising part. The teaching is not limited to a scheduled lesson. It is woven into the whole day: sitting, walking, going to bed, getting up. Every part of life becomes a moment to speak of God.

For the Christian, the verses call us to make Scripture and prayer part of our household. It is a ministry for parents, but also for grandparents, aunts, uncles, church members, and friends. In Christ, the whole community of believers shares the task of passing on the faith to the next generation.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the opening sermons of Deuteronomy. You saw how Moses looked back at the wilderness, how he restated the Ten Commandments, and how he gave the Shema, the greatest commandment. You read about God’s choice of Israel, not because of their righteousness, and about Moses’ intercession after the golden calf. You prayed through Psalm 78, which tells the whole story from the exodus to David as a lesson for the next generation. You read the first laws about worship, false prophets, clean foods, and the tithe. The week taught that obedience flows from love, that faith must be passed on at home, and that God’s grace is not based on our merit.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The Shema says that God is one and calls for love with heart, soul, and might. Which of these three, heart, soul, or might, is the hardest for you to give, and why?

Moses told Israel three times that God’s gift was “not because of your righteousness.” How does Christ’s work on your behalf give you the same assurance?

Deuteronomy 6 says to teach faith “when you sit in your house, and when you walk by the way.” What is one practical step you could take this week to talk about God in the course of ordinary life?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to put his words on your heart and help you teach them to those near you.

Thank him that his love is not based on your merit.

Rest in him today.

DAY 183 · WEEK 27

Deuteronomy 15:1-16:22

Sabbath year; the feasts of remembrance

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 51 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 15:1-16:22. These chapters deal with the release of debts, the care of the poor, the freeing of slaves, and the three great pilgrim feasts. Notice how generosity is rooted in remembering.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses continues applying the law to life in the land. Chapter 15 describes the Sabbath year, in which debts are released every seventh year, and the freeing of Hebrew slaves. Chapter 16 sets out the three annual feasts: Passover, Weeks, and Booths. These laws shape a community in which no one is permanently poor and every family rejoices together.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "At the end of every seven years you shall grant a release" (15:1).
2. "But there will be no poor among you… if only you will strictly obey the voice of the LORD" (15:4-5).
3. "If among you, one of your brothers should become poor… you shall not harden your heart or shut your hand against your poor brother" (15:7).
4. "You shall open your hand to your brother, to the needy and to the poor, in your land" (15:11).
5. "For there will never cease to be poor in the land" (15:11).
6. Hebrew slaves are to be freed in the seventh year and sent out with gifts: "You shall not let him go empty-handed" (15:12-15).

7. “You shall remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the LORD your God redeemed you” (15:15).

8. The three feasts are Passover, Weeks, and Booths, and “they shall not appear before the LORD empty-handed” (16:16-17). Judges are to “follow justice, and only justice” (16:18-20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The laws in chapter 15 are among the most radical in the Bible. Every seven years, debts are cancelled. The point is to prevent a permanent underclass. In most societies, debt becomes a trap that passes from generation to generation. God’s law builds in a periodic reset.

There is a tension in the passage that is worth noticing. Verse 4 says that there will be no poor among you if you obey. Verse 11 says that the poor will never cease from the land. Both are true. The first is the goal of the law, a society so generous that poverty cannot take root. The second is the realistic observation that because of sin, the ideal will not be fully reached. The command that follows is to open your hand anyway.

The sentence that gives the law its power is 15:15: “You shall remember that you were a slave in the land of Egypt, and the LORD your God redeemed you.” Generosity is rooted in memory. The reason the Israelite should free a slave is that he was freed. The reason he gives is that he was given to. The gospel always works this way: we love because he first loved us.

The detail about sending a freed slave away with gifts shows the spirit of the law. He is not just released; he is given a start. “You shall furnish him liberally from your flock, your threshing floor, and your winepress.” Grace is not stingy.

Chapter 16 sets out the pilgrim feasts as occasions of joy. Everyone is to take part: sons, daughters, servants, Levites, strangers, orphans, and widows. And the instruction to judges to pursue justice, and only justice, completes the picture of a society in which God’s character is reflected.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus announced the “year of the LORD’s favor” (Luke 4:19) and taught, “Give to everyone who begs from you” (Luke 6:30). He said, “For you always have the poor with you” (Matthew 26:11), referring to Deuteronomy 15:11. Paul says, “You know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, that though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor” (2 Corinthians 8:9). The church in Acts shared its goods so that “there was not a needy person among them” (Acts 4:34).

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether your hand is open or closed toward someone in need. Make a concrete gift this week.

Forgive a debt or a wrong that someone owes you.

Remember your own redemption, and let it shape how you treat others.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for redeeming you and being generous beyond measure.

Ask him to open your hand to someone in need.

Ask him to teach you to forgive as you have been forgiven.

DAY 184 · WEEK 27

Deuteronomy 18:15-19; Psalm 110; Hebrews 1:1-4

The Three Offices of Christ, Prophet, Priest, King

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Doctrine

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 18:15-19, Psalm 110, and Hebrews 1:1-4. Take your time with these three short passages. They each speak of one of the three offices that God established in Israel, prophet, priest, and king, and the way that all three come together in Jesus.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Today's reading pauses in the middle of the laws of Deuteronomy, just before the chapter that sets out the roles of kings, priests, and prophets in Israel (Deuteronomy 17 and 18). It pauses to ask a question that will come up many times in the story ahead: how do the offices of Israel point to Christ? The three passages you read today are central. Moses promises a prophet like himself, David writes of a king who is also a priest forever, and the writer of Hebrews says that in Jesus, God has spoken his final word.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The LORD your God will raise up for you a prophet like me from among you, from your brothers; it is to him you shall listen" (Deuteronomy 18:15).
2. "I will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak to them all that I command him" (Deuteronomy 18:18).
3. "The LORD says to my Lord: Sit at my right hand, until I make your enemies your footstool" (Psalm 110:1).
4. "The LORD has sworn and will not change his mind: You are a priest forever after the order of Melchizedek" (Psalm 110:4).

5. “He will execute judgment among the nations, filling them with corpses” (Psalm 110:6).
6. “Long ago, at many times and in many ways, God spoke to our fathers by the prophets, but in these last days he has spoken to us by his Son” (Hebrews 1:1-2).
7. “He is the radiance of the glory of God and the exact imprint of his nature, and he upholds the universe by the word of his power” (Hebrews 1:3).
8. “After making purification for sins, he sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high” (Hebrews 1:3).

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

The three offices of Christ is a way of organizing what the Bible teaches about who Jesus is and what he does. It was developed by John Calvin and has been used by Reformed and many other Christian traditions ever since. It rests on a simple observation: in the Old Testament, three kinds of people were anointed to serve God’s people, the prophet, the priest, and the king. Each represents a way in which God relates to his people. Each was incomplete. And all three find their fulfillment in the one called Messiah, which means “Anointed One.”

Consider the prophet first. A prophet speaks for God to the people. Moses was the model prophet, to whom God spoke “mouth to mouth” (Numbers 12:8). In Deuteronomy 18, Moses promises that God would one day raise up another like him. Over the centuries, many prophets came, but the people kept waiting for the prophet. Jesus is that prophet, and more. The Gospel of John says, “No one has ever seen God; the only God, who is at the Father’s side, he has made him known” (John 1:18). Where prophets spoke the word of God, Jesus is the Word of God. Hebrews 1 says that God has now spoken by his Son. As prophet, Christ reveals the Father to us and teaches us the truth. He does this through his own teaching, through the Spirit who inspired the Scriptures, and through the Spirit who illumines our hearts.

Consider the priest next. A priest speaks to God on behalf of the people. He offers sacrifices, makes intercession, and blesses. The priests of Israel, from Aaron onward, did this imperfectly. They were sinners, and they died, so that new priests were always needed. Psalm 110:4 announces a priest of another kind, “after the order of Melchizedek,” a priest forever. Hebrews develops this at length. Jesus is the great high priest who has offered, once for all, the perfect sacrifice, namely himself (Hebrews 7:27). He continually intercedes for us at the right hand of God (Romans 8:34; Hebrews 7:25). As priest, Christ reconciles us to God by his death and keeps us in fellowship with him by his prayers.

Consider the king last. A king rules the people on behalf of God. David was the model king, and God promised him a son who would reign forever (2 Samuel 7). Psalm 110:1 says that David's Lord sits at God's right hand until his enemies are made a footstool. Jesus applied this psalm to himself (Matthew 22:41-45). He is the king who has been raised and exalted, who rules now over his church and the universe, and who will return to judge and to bring all things under his feet. As king, Christ governs us by his word and Spirit, defends us from our enemies, and will finally subdue all things.

Why do the three offices matter? Because they correct our one-sided views of Jesus. Some think of him only as a teacher, a moral guide who gave us a better way to live. That is the prophet without the priest or king. Others think of him only as a Savior who forgives sins, but they do not think of him as one who governs their lives. That is the priest without the king. Others think of him mostly as a ruler, but forget that he came to die. The full Jesus is prophet, priest, and king.

The three offices also show what it means to be a Christian. We are united to Christ, and so we share in his offices. Believers are taught by his word, so we listen as prophets who speak the truth. We are priests who offer spiritual sacrifices (1 Peter 2:5, 9). And we are kings who will reign with him, as we learn to rule our own hearts and serve others (Revelation 1:6; 5:10). The offices are not only a way to understand Jesus. They are a way to understand our calling in him.

STEP 4

Interpretation

The three passages you read today are linked by a single idea: God's final word to his people comes through a person, and that person holds the highest offices in Israel.

Start with Deuteronomy 18. Moses speaks to a people who are afraid of hearing God's voice directly. At Horeb they said, "Let me not hear again the voice of the LORD my God." God answered that he would send a prophet like Moses, one who would speak all that God commanded. The people are told, "It is to him you shall listen." Notice what is required: listening. The whole law of Moses was incomplete, and it pointed forward to a prophet who would complete it. The next verses of the chapter add a stern warning that anyone who does not listen to that prophet will answer for it.

Psalm 110 is the most quoted psalm in the New Testament. In it, David speaks of a figure he calls "my Lord," someone greater than David himself. This person sits at God's right hand, which is the place of supreme honor. He is a king, who rules in the midst of his enemies, and he is a priest forever. In Israel, the two roles were kept separate, and kings who tried to act as priests were judged (2 Chronicles 26:16-21). Yet here is one who holds both, and he is established not by descent but by the oath of God. The psalm asks the reader to think about who this could be.

Hebrews 1 gives the answer. The author opens his letter by contrasting the many partial words of the prophets with the one final Word of the Son. Then he describes the Son in three ways: heir of all things and creator of the world (a kingly role), the radiance of God's glory (a prophetic role, as the one who reveals God), and the one who made purification for sins (a priestly role). Then he says that the Son "sat down at the right hand of the Majesty on high," echoing Psalm 110:1. All three offices come together in a single verse.

Taken together, the passages give a picture of fullness. God spoke in the past in pieces. Now he has spoken in a person. The Son is not just one more messenger. He is the message.

STEP 5

Connection

The New Testament repeatedly applies these three offices to Jesus. The crowds said, "This is indeed the Prophet who is to come into the world" (John 6:14). Peter preached that Jesus is the prophet like Moses (Acts 3:22-23), and Stephen did the same (Acts 7:37). Jesus claimed Psalm 110 for himself in front of the Sanhedrin (Mark 14:62). Hebrews 4:14-5:10 and 7:1-28 expound his priesthood. Revelation 19:16 calls him "King of kings and Lord of lords."

STEP 6

Application

Listen to Jesus as your prophet. Choose a passage in the Gospels today and ask what he is saying to you.

Draw near to him as your priest. Bring a specific need or sin to him in prayer, trusting that he intercedes for you.

Submit to him as your king. Ask whether there is any area of your life that you have not yet put under his rule.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Jesus as your prophet, priest, and king, and tell him which of these you most need today.

Ask him to speak, and listen.

Ask him to rule you and help you obey.

DEUTERONOMY 18:15

DAY 185 · WEEK 27

Deuteronomy 17:1-18:22

Kings, priests, prophets, the offices typology

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 42 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 17:1-18:22. Having paused to see where the offices lead, return now to the text itself. This reading describes how judges, kings, priests, and prophets are to function in Israel. Look especially at the instructions for the king.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses sets out how Israel's offices are to work. Chapter 17 covers the administration of justice and, remarkably, a law for kings, though Israel has no king yet. Chapter 18 covers the Levitical priests and the prophets. Together they describe how God intended to govern his people under his law, with every office limited by the word of God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. A person accused of idolatry is to be convicted on "the evidence of two witnesses or of three witnesses" (17:2-7).
2. Hard cases are to be taken to the Levitical priests and the judge at the place the LORD chooses (17:8-13).
3. "When you come to the land… and you say, I will set a king over me, like all the nations that are around me, you may indeed set a king over you whom the LORD your God will choose" (17:14-15).
4. The king "must not acquire many horses for himself… neither shall he acquire many wives for himself… nor shall he acquire for himself excessive silver and gold" (17:16-17).
5. He is to write for himself a copy of the law and "read in it all the days of his life" (17:18-19).

6. This is so that "his heart may not be lifted up above his brothers" (17:20).
7. The Levites have no inheritance among their brothers: "The LORD is his inheritance" (18:1-8).
8. Israel is forbidden to practice divination, sorcery, or spiritism. The LORD will raise up a prophet like Moses, and false prophets are to be tested by whether their words come to pass (18:9-22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The law of the king is one of the most remarkable passages in the Old Testament. Written centuries before Israel's first king, it limits his power in advance. The king is to be chosen by God, he is to be one of the people, he must not accumulate horses, wives, or wealth, and he must read the law every day. The only checks on ancient kings were usually other kings. Here the check is the word of God.

Look at the three prohibitions. Horses represent military power, and especially a return to Egypt, the source of horses. Wives represent political alliances, and also divided loyalties. Silver and gold represent wealth and the temptation to trust in it. Each is a way of relying on something other than God. Solomon, the wisest of kings, violated all three, and his story shows what happens when the instructions are ignored.

The king's key duty is positive: he must write out a copy of the law with his own hand, keep it with him, and read it all his life. The result is humility, so that "his heart may not be lifted up above his brothers." A king who knows the law knows that he is under it. The best leaders are those who submit to a higher authority.

The prophet is the last office. Moses promises that God will raise up a prophet like him. In the immediate sense, this is a promise of a line of prophets who will speak for God. But the singular, "a prophet like me," and the later note in Deuteronomy 34:10 that no prophet had yet risen like Moses, led Israel to look for one greater prophet. The test of a true prophet is simple: his words must be God's words, and they must prove true.

The Levites' situation is described again: no inheritance, because the LORD is their inheritance. Those who serve at God's altar share in the offerings. They live by faith.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the king who does not seek his own glory, who humbled himself and became obedient to death (Philippians 2:6-8). He is the king who knew the law perfectly and answered temptation with the words of Deuteronomy. He is the prophet like Moses, and

Peter says so in Acts 3:22. He is also the one who calls false prophets to account (Matthew 7:15-20), and who is himself the standard by which they are measured (1 John 4:1-3).

STEP 6

Application

If you have any role of authority, read the law of the king as a mirror. Where are you tempted toward power, status, or wealth?

Commit to a daily reading of Scripture, as the king was to do.

Test what you hear from teachers against the word of God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep you from the pride of power.
- Ask him to make you a daily reader of his word.
- Thank Jesus, the true king and prophet who humbled himself for you.

DEUTERONOMY 18:15

DAY 186 · WEEK 27

Deuteronomy 19:1-21:23

Cities of refuge; warfare; difficult cases

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 76 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 19:1-21:23. These chapters deal with cities of refuge, witnesses, warfare, and a series of difficult cases. Read them slowly. Some are hard, and they should be understood in the context of ancient Israel as a nation under the old covenant.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Moses continues applying the law to civil life. He repeats the provision for cities of refuge, stresses the need for honest witnesses, sets out rules for warfare, and addresses a series of specific situations: an unsolved murder, a captive woman, the rights of the firstborn, a rebellious son, and the body of an executed criminal. These cases show how the law dealt with the real complications of community life.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Three cities of refuge are to be set apart, with roads prepared and room for three more if the territory expands (19:1-10).
2. “A single witness shall not suffice… only on the evidence of two witnesses or of three witnesses shall a charge be established” (19:15).
3. A false witness is to receive the punishment that he intended for the accused (19:16-21).
4. Before battle, the priest is to say, “Hear, O Israel, today you are drawing near for battle against your enemies: let not your heart faint. Do not fear” (20:1-4).
5. Those who are afraid, newly married, or have just built a house are excused from battle (20:5-9).

6. When a corpse is found in the field, the elders of the nearest city must wash their hands and say, “Our hands did not shed this blood” (21:1-9).
7. Firstborn sons have a right to a double portion, even if their father prefers another wife’s son (21:15-17).
8. “A hanged man is cursed by God,” and his body must not remain overnight on the tree (21:22-23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

These chapters show that Israel’s law was not a code of rigid rules but a system for taking human life, truth, and community seriously. The cities of refuge protect the innocent. The rule of two or three witnesses protects the accused. The penalty for false witnesses, to receive what they meant for others, is a strict deterrent. Together, they show a concern for justice that was remarkable in the ancient world.

Notice the tenderness of the rules of war. A priest tells the soldiers not to be afraid, because “the LORD your God is he who goes with you.” Men who have just married or built a house are sent home, so that they do not die before enjoying what they have started. Even the fearful are released, so that their fear does not spread. This is not the rhetoric of a war machine. It is a view of war as a grave and limited matter.

The case of the unsolved murder is a striking picture of communal responsibility. When someone is found dead and no one knows who killed him, the nearest town is responsible for making atonement. The elders wash their hands over a heifer whose neck is broken, and pray, “Forgive, O LORD, your people Israel.” It shows that bloodshed pollutes a community, and that someone must acknowledge it.

The rule about the firstborn protects a son from the favoritism of a father. Even the unloved wife’s son has his rights. God’s law is concerned with fairness inside the family.

The last verse, 21:23, is the most important for what comes later. A body hanged on a tree was cursed, and it was to be buried by sundown, so that the land would not be defiled. The person was cursed “by God.” It was a mark of the deepest shame. The New Testament sees this as a description of what Christ would bear.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Deuteronomy 21:23 in Galatians 3:13: “Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us.” Peter says that Jesus “bore our sins in his body on the tree” (1 Peter 2:24). The requirement of two or three witnesses is quoted by Jesus (Matthew 18:16) and Paul (2 Corinthians 13:1). The cities of refuge point to Christ as our refuge (Hebrews 6:18). Jesus told his disciples, “Do not be afraid,” as he sent them out.

STEP 6

Application

Think about how you treat people in disputes. Are you fair and honest in what you say about them?

Read Galatians 3:13 and thank Christ for taking the curse in your place.

If there is fear in your heart, hear the priest’s words from 20:4: “The LORD your God is he who goes with you.”

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for becoming a curse for you on the tree.
- Ask God to make you honest and fair in your dealings.
- Ask him to go with you into the battles you face.

DEUTERONOMY 18:15

DAY 187 · WEEK 27

Deuteronomy 22:1-25:19

Social and moral laws, justice in covenant community

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 92 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 22:1-25:19. This is the longest section of specific laws. It covers everyday matters of community life, from lost animals to marriage, to honest weights. Read it as a picture of how God cares about the details of ordinary life.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These chapters read like a collection of case laws. They touch on how to treat a neighbor's property, sexual morality, who may belong to the assembly of the LORD, hygiene in the camp, treatment of the poor and the foreigner, marriage and divorce, and business ethics. Some of the laws are hard to understand, as they come from a very different time and culture. But the principles behind them are clear.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "You shall not see your brother's ox or his sheep going astray, and hide yourselves from them. You shall take them back to your brother" (22:1).
2. "You shall make a parapet for your roof, that you may not bring the guilt of blood upon your house" (22:8).
3. "You shall not plow with an ox and a donkey together" (22:10).
4. A man who is newly married is to be free from military service for a year, "to be happy with his wife" (24:5).
5. "You shall not oppress a hired servant who is poor and needy" (24:14-15).
6. "Fathers shall not be put to death because of their children, nor shall children be put to death because of their fathers" (24:16).

7. “When you reap your harvest in your field and forget a sheaf… it shall be for the sojourner, the fatherless, and the widow” (24:19).

8. “You shall have a full and just weight, a full and just measure” (25:13-16). “You shall blot out the memory of Amalek” (25:17-19).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The laws of these chapters show the extent of God’s concern. He cares about a lost ox, a house roof, a pair of unlike animals, the wages of a day laborer, the way a person lends, and how fair a merchant’s scale is. Nothing is too small. This is a God who is holy in the market as well as in the temple.

The first law sets the tone: if you see your neighbor’s animal wandering, you must take it back. You cannot say, “It’s not my problem.” To love your neighbor means taking active responsibility for his welfare. The same principle shows up in the roof parapet. Because roofs were used as living space, a house owner has to make them safe. If you build a house, you take responsibility for the safety of anyone who enters it.

Several laws protect the vulnerable. The hired servant must be paid on the same day, because he is poor and depends on the wages. The gleaning laws leave behind some of the harvest for the poor. A creditor may not enter a debtor’s home to take a pledge, nor keep his cloak overnight. Foreigners, widows, and orphans are not to be denied justice. Each of these says, “Remember that you were a slave in Egypt.” Generosity is grounded in redemption.

A line in 24:16 is a landmark: each person is responsible for his own sin. In a world where families were often punished together, this was a significant principle. It shows that God’s justice is personal.

The call for honest weights and measures says that business ethics is a matter of worship. “For all who do such things, all who act dishonestly, are an abomination to the LORD your God.” The God of Israel cares what your scale says.

The section ends with a reminder of Amalek, the nation that attacked the weak and tired at the rear of Israel’s column when they came out of Egypt. This is the theme again: God is the defender of the weak.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said that the second great commandment is to love your neighbor as yourself, and in the parable of the Good Samaritan he extended “neighbor” to anyone in need (Luke 10:25-37). Paul quotes the law about the ox, “You shall not muzzle an ox when it treads out the grain,” to support paying those who preach (1 Corinthians 9:9). James 5:4 echoes the law about unpaid wages. Jesus' compassion for the weak, the hungry, and the foreigner is the fulfillment of these laws.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether there is a "lost ox" in your life, something of a neighbor's that you could help return.

Review your business and financial dealings. Are your weights and measures honest?

Think about how you treat workers, and whether there is someone you should pay or tip more fairly.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to make you honest, fair, and generous in practical ways.
- Tell him one way you want to love a neighbor this week.
- Thank Jesus for his compassion.

DEUTERONOMY 18:15

DAY 188 · WEEK 27

Deuteronomy 26:1-28:14

Firstfruits; the blessings of obedience

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 49 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 26:1-28:14. This reading covers the firstfruits offering, a covenant ceremony at Ebal and Gerizim, and the first part of the great blessings and curses. Read the confession in 26:5-10 aloud as a creed.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The long section of laws comes to an end with a ritual and a ceremony. In chapter 26, Moses describes the firstfruits offering that Israelites are to bring when they enter the land, including a short statement of faith to be recited. In chapter 27, he commands the people to set up large stones when they cross the Jordan and to pronounce blessings and curses at Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal. Chapter 28 begins the blessings and curses themselves, and you read the blessings first.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The Israelite is to bring the firstfruits to the place that the LORD chooses and say, “A wandering Aramean was my father” (26:1-5).
2. The creed tells the story: Egypt, affliction, the cry to the LORD, the exodus, the land, and the firstfruits (26:5-10).
3. “And you shall rejoice in all the good that the LORD your God has given to you” (26:11).
4. This day the LORD your God commands you to do these statutes… “You have declared today that the LORD is your God… and the LORD has declared today that you are a people for his treasured possession” (26:16-19).
5. The people are to set up stones on Mount Ebal, plaster them, and write on them all the words of the law (27:1-8).

6. Six tribes are to stand on Gerizim for the blessing and six on Ebal for the curse (27:11-14).
7. The Levites are to recite curses, and all the people say "Amen" (27:15-26).
8. "And all these blessings shall come upon you and overtake you, if you obey the voice of the LORD your God" (28:2). "The LORD will make you the head and not the tail" (28:13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The confession in chapter 26 is a brilliant piece of teaching. It tells the whole story of salvation in a few sentences. "A wandering Aramean was my father." It starts with the humility of Jacob. Then it recalls the slavery, the cry, the rescue, and the gift of the land. And then the worshiper says, "Behold, now I bring the firstfruits of the ground that you, O LORD, have given me." The offering is a response to the story.

This is how all Christian giving should work. We are not buying God's favor. We are returning a portion of what he has given because of what he has done. Worship rests on remembering.

The ceremony at Ebal and Gerizim is a dramatic act of covenant renewal. The people are divided on two mountains, with the Levites and the ark in the valley between. Curses are read from one side, blessings from the other. The curses listed in chapter 27 deal with secret sins: idolatry, dishonoring parents, moving boundary markers, taking bribes. After each one, the people say "Amen." They are agreeing to the consequences. It is a vivid way of saying that no one can say later that he did not know.

The blessings in chapter 28 are expansive. Blessing in the city and in the field, in the womb and the harvest, in coming in and going out. The pattern is of a life under God's favor that touches everything. Verse 13 says, "The LORD will make you the head and not the tail." Yet it is conditional: "if you obey." Everything depends on the heart's response.

It is important to read this in light of the whole book. Moses has said that Israel was stubborn and that the land was a gift of grace. The blessings are not wages. They are what happens in a life lived within God's goodness. The tragedy that follows is that Israel does not obey, and the curses fall.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that Christ has redeemed us from the curse of the law, so that in Christ Jesus the blessing of Abraham might come to the Gentiles (Galatians 3:13-14). Ephesians 1:3 says that God "has blessed us in Christ with every spiritual blessing in the heavenly places." The Amen of the people finds its echo in 2 Corinthians 1:20, where all the promises of God find their "Yes" in Christ, and "through him is our Amen." Revelation 5:14 shows the living creatures saying "Amen."

STEP 6

Application

Write out your own short account of God's work in your life, in the pattern of 26:5-10. Say it aloud as a prayer.

Make an offering of thanks, as a response and not as a payment.

Think about the "secret sins" of chapter 27. Is there one that you need to bring into the light?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Bring God a portion of what he has given you, and tell him what that is.
- Thank him for blessing you in Christ with every spiritual blessing.
- Ask him to let your "Amen" be true.

THE READING

No new reading today. Read Deuteronomy 18:15 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD your God will raise up for you a prophet like me from among you, from your brothers; it is to him you shall listen."

DEUTERONOMY 18:15

REST

Meditation

Deuteronomy 18:15 is a promise and a command in a single sentence. It was spoken by Moses near the end of his life, and it is quoted in the New Testament as a promise fulfilled in Jesus.

"The LORD your God will raise up for you." The prophet is a gift from God. He is not self-appointed. God takes the initiative to speak to his people, and he does it by raising up someone for them. The whole idea of revelation begins with God.

"A prophet like me." Moses was the greatest prophet of the Old Testament. God spoke with him face to face. He mediated the covenant, performed signs, led the people out of Egypt, and gave the law. To be "like Moses" is a high standard. Deuteronomy 34:10 says that no prophet had yet arisen like him. The promise looks beyond the line of ordinary prophets to someone who would be like Moses, and greater.

“From among you, from your brothers.” The prophet will be one of them. He is a true human being, a member of the covenant family. This points to the incarnation, in which God’s Son became a man.

“It is to him you shall listen.” The command is simple: listen. The Father said the same thing at the transfiguration, when Moses and Elijah appeared with Jesus: “This is my beloved Son; listen to him” (Mark 9:7). The prophet like Moses has come, and he is the Son.

To be a Christian is to be a listener of Jesus. Spend today in quiet listening. Read the Gospels slowly, and ask him to speak.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read more of Moses’ sermons in Deuteronomy. You saw that the Lord’s election of Israel was not based on their righteousness, and you read of the golden calf and Moses’ intercession again. You prayed through the second half of Psalm 78, which ends with the choice of David as shepherd. You read laws about worship, false prophets, the tithe, the release of debts, and the care of the poor, and you studied the three offices of Christ as prophet, priest, and king. You read the law of the king and the promise of a prophet like Moses, and a long series of laws about justice, warfare, and daily life. You read the firstfruits creed, the covenant ceremony at Ebal and Gerizim, and the first blessings of obedience. The week taught that God’s law shapes every part of life, and that all of Israel’s offices find their fulfillment in Christ.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Moses promised a prophet like himself, and Jesus is that prophet. What is the difference between knowing about Jesus and listening to him?

The three offices of prophet, priest, and king show different sides of Christ’s work. Which of the three do you most need to lean on at this stage of your life, and why?

The firstfruits creed ends with rejoicing in “all the good that the LORD your God has given.” What good things has God given you that you have not stopped to thank him for?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Jesus as your prophet, priest, and king.

Ask him to speak today and to help you listen.

Rest in him this Sabbath.

DAY 190 · WEEK 28

Psalm 119:1-48

The word of God as lamp, loving Scripture

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 48 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:1-48. This is the longest psalm and the longest chapter in the Bible, and it is a prayer in praise of God's word. You will read it in four sections over the next week. Today, read slowly, perhaps a few stanzas at a time, and notice the many words for God's word.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 119 is an acrostic. It has twenty-two sections of eight verses each, one for each letter of the Hebrew alphabet, and in each section every verse begins with that letter. The author is not named, though the psalmist speaks as a young man who has faced mockery and affliction. Nearly every verse uses one of eight or so words for God's revealed will: law, testimonies, precepts, statutes, commandments, rules, word, and promise. It follows Deuteronomy in the plan because the whole book of Deuteronomy is a sermon on loving and keeping God's word.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Blessed are those whose way is blameless, who walk in the law of the LORD!" (v. 1).
2. "How can a young man keep his way pure? By guarding it according to your word" (v. 9).
3. "I have stored up your word in my heart, that I might not sin against you" (v. 11).
4. "Open my eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of your law" (v. 18).
5. "I am a sojourner on the earth; hide not your commandments from me!" (v. 19).
6. "My soul clings to the dust; give me life according to your word!" (v. 25).
7. "I will run in the way of your commandments when you enlarge my heart!" (v. 32).

8 “Turn my eyes from looking at worthless things; and give me life in your ways” (v. 37). “And I shall walk in a wide place, for I have sought your precepts” (v. 45).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with blessing, and the word is the first word of the Psalter too (Psalm 1:1). The blessed are those who walk in the law of the LORD. This is not a grim path. It is the way of life. The psalmist loves God’s word, and he says so again and again. For him, the law is not an external burden. It is a delight.

Notice the psalmist’s honesty about his need. “My soul clings to the dust.” “Open my eyes.” “Enlarge my heart.” He cannot keep the word by his own strength. He asks God to help him understand it, to love it, and to keep it. The psalm is full of prayer. Reading the Bible is not an exercise in willpower. It is a conversation with God, who must give understanding and desire.

The verse about the young man is among the best-known. How can he keep his way pure? By living according to God’s word. The method is stated in verse 11: “I have stored up your word in my heart.” Memorization and meditation are the way that Scripture shapes behavior. We guard our way by filling our hearts with God’s word, so that when temptation comes, it is already there.

The psalmist also faces opposition. Proud people mock him and princes sit and plot against him. Yet he says that he will speak of God’s testimonies before kings and not be put to shame. His confidence is not in his own reputation, but in the promise. Faith in the word gives courage to speak.

The first section ends with a prayer for freedom: “I shall walk in a wide place.” The world sees obedience as narrow. The psalmist sees it as wide. God’s commands do not confine him. They take him out of the narrow place of sin and into spaciousness.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Blessed rather are those who hear the word of God and keep it” (Luke 11:28), and “If you abide in my word, you are truly my disciples” (John 8:31). He answered temptation with the word of God. Paul says that all Scripture is breathed out by God (2 Timothy 3:16). The psalmist’s prayer to open his eyes is answered when Jesus “opened their minds to understand the Scriptures” (Luke 24:45).

STEP 6

Application

Pick one verse from today's reading to store in your heart, and write it on a card.

Pray verse 18 before you open your Bible: "Open my eyes, that I may behold wondrous things."

Ask whether you see God's commands as narrow or wide.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God you want to walk in his word and love it.
- Ask him to open your eyes to wonderful things in it.
- Ask him to store his word in your heart so that you do not sin against him.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 28

DEUTERONOMY 29:29

DAY 191 · WEEK 28

Psalm 119:49-96

Comfort in affliction; the commandments as songs

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 48 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:49-96. Today's section moves from joy in the word to comfort in suffering. Notice how the psalmist speaks of affliction.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The second section of the great acrostic psalm continues the theme with a new emphasis. The psalmist is under pressure from the arrogant and wicked, and he turns to God's word for comfort. These verses include some of the most personal confessions in the psalm, as he describes his affliction and his dependence on God's promises.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Remember your word to your servant, in which you have made me hope" (v. 49).
2. "This is my comfort in my affliction, that your promise gives me life" (v. 50).
3. "Your statutes have been my songs in the house of my sojourning" (v. 54).
4. "I have considered my ways and turned my feet to your testimonies; I hasten and do not delay to keep your commandments" (vv. 59-60).
5. "It is good for me that I was afflicted, that I might learn your statutes" (v. 71).
6. "I know, O LORD, that your rules are righteous, and that in faithfulness you have afflicted me" (v. 75).
7. "If your law had not been my delight, I would have perished in my affliction" (v. 92).
8. "I have seen a limit to all perfection, but your commandment is exceedingly broad" (v. 96).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This section is a school of comfort. The psalmist is in distress, but he finds that God's word is a comfort. "This is my comfort in my affliction, that your promise gives me life." The promise is not a vague hope. It is a specific word that God has spoken, and it has the power to give life when everything else seems to be dying.

Verses 54 and 55 are striking. The psalmist calls God's statutes "songs" in the house of his sojourning. A traveler's house might be a poor place, but it is filled with song. The word can turn any dwelling into a place of worship. And at night, he remembers God's name and keeps his law.

The center of the section is verses 67, 71, and 75, where the psalmist reflects on his suffering. "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I keep your word." "It is good for me that I was afflicted." It is a hard thing to say, and he does not say it lightly. But he has learned that his troubles were God's way of teaching him. In faithfulness, God has afflicted him. Affliction was not a sign of God's absence. It was a form of his care.

This is not a general claim that all suffering is God's discipline. The psalmist is speaking from his own experience, and he is not claiming to be sinless. But he points to a truth that the whole Bible affirms: God uses hardship to draw us closer to himself. As Hebrews 12:10-11 says, he disciplines us "for our good, that we may share his holiness."

The section ends with a sweeping statement of the word's scope: "I have seen a limit to all perfection, but your commandment is exceedingly broad." Everything else in life has limits. The word of God does not. There is always more to learn, and more to love.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that "suffering produces endurance, and endurance produces character, and character produces hope" (Romans 5:3-4). Hebrews 12:5-11 quotes Proverbs about the Lord's discipline. Jesus is the one who "learned obedience through what he suffered" (Hebrews 5:8). Jesus said, "These things I have spoken to you, that in me you may have peace. In the world you will have tribulation. But take heart; I have overcome the world" (John 16:33).

STEP 6

Application

Think of a hard time that taught you something about God. Thank him for it.

Choose one promise from Scripture to hold on to in a current difficulty.

Sing or hum a psalm as you go about your day, as the psalmist did in the house of his sojourning.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God where you need his promise to give you life.
- Thank him for what he has taught you in affliction.
- Ask him to make his commands your songs.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 28

"The secret things belong to the LORD our God, but the things that are revealed belong to us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law."

DEUTERONOMY 29:29

DAY 192 · WEEK 28

Deuteronomy 28:15-68

The curses of disobedience, the weight of covenant

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 54 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 28:15-68. This is the longest and most sobering passage in the book. It describes the curses that will fall on Israel if they break the covenant. Read it carefully, and notice what is at the heart of the list.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The blessings of 28:1-14 take only fourteen verses. The curses take fifty-four. Moses is not trying to scare the people but to make sure they understand how serious the covenant is. The curses begin with general disaster and grow to include defeat, siege, famine, disease, and finally exile. The chapter is the most detailed warning in the Old Testament, and the prophets will return to it again and again.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “But if you will not obey the voice of the LORD your God or be careful to do all his commandments… then all these curses shall come upon you” (28:15).
2. “Cursed shall you be in the city, and cursed shall you be in the field” (28:16-19).
3. The LORD will send confusion and frustration in all that you undertake (28:20).
4. The LORD will strike with disease, drought, and defeat before enemies (28:21-26).
5. “You shall be driven mad by the sight that your eyes see” (28:34).
6. A foreign nation will devour the land, and a siege will cause such hunger that people eat their own children (28:49-57).
7. “The LORD will scatter you among all peoples, from one end of the earth to the other” (28:64).

8 “Because you did not serve the LORD your God with joyfulness and gladness of heart, because of the abundance of all things, therefore you shall serve your enemies” (28:47-48).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Read this passage slowly, and do not rush to explain it away. It is meant to be heavy. The curses mirror the blessings, point for point. Where the blessings spoke of rain, harvest, and victory, the curses speak of drought, blight, and defeat. The pattern says that the covenant is real, and that its terms are real. To live apart from God is to lose the goods that he gives.

The turning point is verse 47: “Because you did not serve the LORD your God with joyfulness and gladness of heart, because of the abundance of all things.” The root of the failure is not a dramatic act of rebellion. It is ingratitude. A people who have everything do not thank the giver. The loss of joy in God comes before the loss of everything else.

The curses also include a reversal of the exodus. “The LORD will bring you back in ships to Egypt… and there you shall offer yourselves for sale to your enemies as male and female slaves” (28:68). The people who were rescued from Egypt are sent back into slavery. The covenant that gave them freedom, if broken, takes it away. It is a chilling statement of what covenant unfaithfulness means.

The curses are fulfilled in Israel’s history. The northern kingdom fell to Assyria, and Judah fell to Babylon. The prophets saw the exile as the working out of these very words (see 2 Kings 17 and Daniel 9:11-13). The curses were not idle threats. They happened.

Yet this is not the end of the story. Deuteronomy 30 will promise that, after the curses, God will bring his people back if they return to him. The book of Deuteronomy is balanced between warning and hope, and the warning exists in order to bring people to repentance.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that “all who rely on works of the law are under a curse” (Galatians 3:10), quoting Deuteronomy 27:26, and then that “Christ redeemed us from the curse of the law by becoming a curse for us” (Galatians 3:13). Jesus took the covenant curses on himself at the cross: the darkness, the thirst, the abandonment, and the cry, “My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?” Romans 8:1 says there is no condemnation for those in Christ.

STEP 6

Application

Read the passage as a measure of what Christ endured on your behalf. Thank him.

Ask whether there is a lack of joy and gladness in your service of God. Pray for restoration.

Spend time in gratitude, naming the “abundance” that God has given you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

DAY 193 · WEEK 28

Deuteronomy 29:1-31:29

Covenant renewed; the secret things belong to God

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 79 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 29:1-31:29. In this reading, Moses calls Israel to renew the covenant, gives the famous "secret things" verse, and then hands over leadership to Joshua. Notice the call to choose life.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the blessings and curses, Moses gathers the people for a covenant renewal ceremony in the land of Moab. Chapter 29 describes the covenant, with a warning against secret idolatry and a prophecy of exile. Chapter 30 gives a promise of restoration, a call to choose life, and the statement that God's word is near. Chapter 31 deals with the transfer of leadership to Joshua, the writing of the law, and the foretelling of Israel's future rebellion.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "You have seen all that the LORD did before your eyes in the land of Egypt... But to this day the LORD has not given you a heart to understand or eyes to see or ears to hear" (29:2-4).
2. "It is not with you alone that I am making this sworn covenant, but with whoever is standing here with us today... and with whoever is not here with us today" (29:14-15).
3. "The secret things belong to the LORD our God, but the things that are revealed belong to us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law" (29:29).
4. "When all these things come upon you... and you return to the LORD your God... then the LORD your God will restore your fortunes and have compassion on you" (30:1-3).
5. "The LORD your God will circumcise your heart and the heart of your offspring, so that you will love the LORD your God with all your heart" (30:6).

6. “For this commandment that I command you today is not too hard for you, neither is it far off” (30:11).
7. “I have set before you life and death, blessing and curse. Therefore choose life, that you and your offspring may live” (30:19).
8. Moses commissions Joshua: “Be strong and courageous… It is the LORD who goes before you. He will be with you; he will not leave you or forsake you” (31:6-8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 29 begins with a startling observation: after all the miracles, Israel still lacks a heart to understand. Moses says that God had not given them “a heart to understand or eyes to see or ears to hear.” It is a surprising admission. Seeing miracles does not change the heart. Only God can do that. And this is exactly what chapter 30 promises: “The LORD your God will circumcise your heart.” The problem of the heart is solved by God’s own gift.

The “secret things” verse is a great statement about knowing and not knowing. There are things God has not told us, and we should not be anxious about them. And there are things he has revealed, which belong to us, so that we may obey. The secret things are God’s business. The revealed things are ours. It frees us from speculation and calls us to obedience.

Chapter 30 is the hope of the book. Even after the curses fall, even after exile, there is a way back. “When you return to the LORD your God… he will gather you.” Repentance is always possible. And the way is not impossible: “The word is very near you. It is in your mouth and in your heart, so that you can do it.” God’s call is not a distant puzzle. It is close at hand.

Then comes the choice. “I have set before you life and death, blessing and curse. Therefore choose life.” Moses puts the whole book into one sentence. The people are not forced. They are invited. And choosing life is described as “loving the LORD your God, obeying his voice, and holding fast to him.”

Chapter 31 turns to the future. Moses commissions Joshua and tells him not to be afraid. He writes the law down and places it beside the ark. And he tells the people that after his death they will become corrupt. The tone is realistic. God knows that they will fail. He gives a song, which you will read tomorrow, to be a witness against them.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Deuteronomy 30:11-14 in Romans 10:6-8 and applies it to the gospel: “The word is near you, in your mouth and in your heart (that is, the word of faith that we proclaim).” He says that Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to everyone who believes (Romans

10:4). Paul says that circumcision is of the heart (Romans 2:29), and Jesus said, “I came that they may have life and have it abundantly” (John 10:10). Hebrews 13:5 quotes 31:6: “I will never leave you nor forsake you.”

STEP 6

Application

Make a list of “secret things” that trouble you. Give them to God, and act on what is revealed.

Choose life today in one specific decision.

Take courage from God’s promise to Joshua. Receive it as spoken to you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give God the secret things you do not understand.

Ask him to circumcise your heart so that you love him.

Thank him that he goes before you and will not leave you.

DAY 194 · WEEK 28

Deuteronomy 31:30-32:52

The song of Moses, covenant lawsuit in poetry

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 67 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 31:30-32:52. This is the Song of Moses, a long poem that serves as a witness to Israel. Read it aloud if you can, and notice how it moves from praise to accusation to comfort.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

God has told Moses to write a song and teach it to Israel, so that it will be a witness against them when they turn away. The song is placed after the last of Moses' sermons. It is a poem in the form of a covenant lawsuit: it summons heaven and earth as witnesses, states God's faithfulness, charges Israel with unfaithfulness, announces judgment, and ends with a promise of vindication. After the song, God tells Moses to go up Mount Nebo and die.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Give ear, O heavens, and I will speak, and let the earth hear the words of my mouth" (32:1).
2. "The Rock, his work is perfect, for all his ways are justice. A God of faithfulness and without iniquity, just and upright is he" (32:4).
3. "They have dealt corruptly with him; they are no longer his children because they are blemished" (32:5).
4. "Is not he your father, who created you, who made you and established you?" (32:6).
5. "The LORD's portion is his people, Jacob his allotted heritage" (32:9). He found him in a desert land… "he encircled him, he cared for him, he kept him as the apple of his eye" (32:10).

6. “Like an eagle that stirs up its nest, that flutters over its young, spreading out its wings, catching them, bearing them on its pinions” (32:11).
7. “But Jeshurun grew fat, and kicked… He forsook God who made him and scoffed at the Rock of his salvation” (32:15).
8. “See now that I, even I, am he, and there is no god beside me; I kill and I make alive… and there is none that can deliver out of my hand” (32:39).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The song is a retelling of Israel’s story in miniature. God is the Rock, perfect and faithful. He found Israel in the wilderness, protected them like the apple of his eye, and carried them like an eagle carries its young. They grew fat in the land and forsook him. It is the same pattern you have seen throughout the wilderness story: grace, prosperity, rebellion, judgment.

The image of the eagle is beautiful. An eagle stirs up its nest so the young must fly, and then hovers beneath them, ready to catch them. It is a picture of God’s care that is both challenging and protective. He pushes his people out of comfort, and he does not let them fall.

The word “Rock” appears repeatedly. It is a name for God that stresses his stability and strength. Everything else in the song shifts, but the Rock does not. The nations’ gods are not rocks: “Their rock is not like our Rock” (32:31). In a world of change and disappointment, there is a foundation.

The accusation is heavy. Israel is called “a crooked and twisted generation” (32:5). The children have turned away from their father. This is a covenant lawsuit, with heaven and earth as the jury. But the sentence is not final. Verse 36 says, “The LORD will vindicate his people and have compassion on his servants.” The song moves from judgment to compassion. God’s last word is not wrath.

The final verses of the chapter return to Moses himself. He is told to go up Mount Nebo, look at the land, and die. He will not enter, “because you broke faith with me.” His own failure at Meribah has consequences. But the great leader receives a view of the land and a peaceful death, a last gift.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes the song in Romans 10:19 and 12:19, and 15:10, and in 1 Corinthians 10:22. Jesus compared himself to a hen gathering her chicks, and in the parable of the wicked tenants he spoke of the vineyard owner’s son, echoing Israel’s rejection. Revelation 15:3 says that the redeemed sing “the song of Moses, the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb.” The Rock is Christ (1 Corinthians 10:4), and the foundation on which we build (Matthew 7:24-25).

STEP 6

Application

Read the song aloud once through. Notice which phrase speaks to you.

Ask whether you have grown “fat and kicked” in a season of ease. Return to the Rock.

Thank God for the image of the eagle, and for the ways he has both pushed and caught you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God as the Rock whose work is perfect.
- Confess where you have forgotten the Rock of your salvation.
- Ask him to vindicate his people and have compassion on them.

DAY 195 · WEEK 28

Deuteronomy 33:1-34:12

Moses' final blessing; his death, the prophet yet to come

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Reading · 41 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Deuteronomy 33:1-34:12. This is the end of the Pentateuch. Moses blesses the tribes and then climbs Mount Nebo to die. Read the last chapter slowly, and notice the final description of Moses.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the last day in the five books of Moses. Before he dies, Moses speaks a blessing over each of the tribes, much as Jacob did at the end of Genesis. Then the narrator describes his death on Mount Nebo, his burial, and a verdict on his life. The close of the book sets up the transition to Joshua and the conquest, but also leaves a hopeful question hanging: where is the prophet like Moses who is yet to come?

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The LORD came from Sinai and dawned from Seir upon us; he shone forth from Mount Paran" (33:2).
2. "Yes, he loved his people… and they followed in your steps, receiving direction from you" (33:3).
3. Moses blesses the tribes, including Judah: "Hear, O LORD, the voice of Judah" (33:7), and Levi, who is to teach Jacob God's rules and offer incense (33:8-11).
4. "The eternal God is your dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms" (33:27).
5. "Happy are you, O Israel! Who is like you, a people saved by the LORD, the shield of your help, and the sword of your triumph?" (33:29).

6. Moses goes up from the plains of Moab to Mount Nebo, and the LORD shows him all the land (34:1-4).
7. "So Moses the servant of the LORD died there in the land of Moab, according to the word of the LORD" (34:5).
8. "And there has not arisen a prophet since in Israel like Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face" (34:10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The blessing of the tribes shows Moses as a father and a pastor to the end. His last words are not rebuke but blessing. After forty years of leading a difficult people, his final act is to bless them, one tribe after another. A good leader leaves the people with a benediction.

The most famous verse is 33:27: "The eternal God is your dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms." It is a fitting summary of Moses' message. God is the home of his people, as Psalm 90 said at the start of this unit. And underneath are the everlasting arms, a picture of unseen support. When we fall, we fall into the hands of God.

The death of Moses is told with beautiful restraint. He climbs the mountain, sees the land, and dies "according to the word of the LORD." The Hebrew can also mean "by the mouth of the LORD," and the rabbis said he died by a kiss. He is buried by God himself, and "no one knows the place of his burial to this day." There is no tomb to venerate. He was not worshiped, and God made sure that no one would turn his grave into a shrine.

The last paragraph is the verdict. Moses was 120 years old, with unimpaired eyesight and vigor. The people wept for thirty days. And then comes the line that looks forward: "There has not arisen a prophet since in Israel like Moses, whom the LORD knew face to face." It is a statement of Moses' greatness, and it also leaves a longing. God had promised another prophet like Moses (18:15). The Pentateuch ends by saying that he has not yet come.

This is why the end of Deuteronomy is not an ending. It is a pause in a larger story. The Law has done its work. It has described the covenant, shown Israel's need, and pointed forward. The rest of the Bible waits for someone greater than Moses.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 3:5-6 says that Moses was faithful "as a servant in all God's house," but Christ is faithful "as a son over God's house." Jude 9 mentions a dispute about the body of Moses. At the transfiguration, Moses appears with Jesus and talks with him about his departure (Luke 9:30-31). John 1:17 says, “The law was given through Moses; grace and truth came through Jesus Christ.” The everlasting arms are now the arms of Christ, who took the children in his arms and blessed them (Mark 10:16).

STEP 6

Application

Spend time with the verse “The eternal God is your dwelling place, and underneath are the everlasting arms.” Where do you need to feel them?

Think about how you want to finish your own life of service. Is there a blessing you want to leave?

Thank God for Moses, and for the one who is greater than Moses.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that underneath you are his everlasting arms.
- Thank him for Jesus, the greater prophet.
- Ask him to teach you to finish well and leave a legacy of faith.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The secret things belong to the LORD our God, but the things that are revealed belong to us and to our children forever, that we may do all the words of this law."

DEUTERONOMY 29:29

REST

Meditation

Deuteronomy 29:29 is a verse about the limits of knowledge and the shape of obedience. It comes at the end of a chapter of warning, and it sets out a balance that every believer needs.

"The secret things belong to the LORD our God." There are things we do not know and cannot know. Why a particular event happened, how God's sovereignty and human responsibility work together, what is hidden in the future. These belong to God. This is not a rebuke. It is a relief. We are not required to carry the weight of knowing everything.

"But the things that are revealed belong to us and to our children forever." God has spoken. He has made known his character, his promises, and his commands. These are not for specialists alone, but for us and our children. The word "forever" means that the revealed things are a permanent possession. Scripture is a gift to every generation.

“That we may do all the words of this law.” The purpose of revelation is obedience. God does not give us his word only to satisfy curiosity. He gives it so that we may live by it. The practical question is never “What does God know?” but “What has God told me to do?”

For the Christian, the verse is an invitation to humility and to action. Some questions will not be answered in this life. But the gospel has been revealed in Christ, and what we need for life and godliness has been given (2 Peter 1:3). Stop worrying about the secret things. Do what is revealed.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished the book of Deuteronomy. You read the long section of laws about justice, warfare, and daily life, and the ritual of the firstfruits with its creed. You read the covenant ceremony at Ebal and Gerizim, and the detailed curses of disobedience. You read Moses’ call to choose life and the promise that God would circumcise the heart. In the Psalms, you prayed through the first sections of Psalm 119, which praises the word of God as a source of purity and comfort. You read the Song of Moses, with its image of God as the Rock and the eagle, and then Moses’ last blessing and his death on Mount Nebo. The week taught that God’s word is near, that the heart needs his help to love it, and that even in judgment, he leaves a way back.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Moses said, “The word is very near you, in your mouth and in your heart.” What practical difference does it make to you that God’s word is near, and not far off?

The book of Deuteronomy ends with the statement that no prophet had arisen like Moses. How does the New Testament answer that longing, and why does it matter?

Psalm 119 is a long prayer of love for God’s word. How would you describe your own feelings about Scripture, and what would help you to love it more?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give God the things you do not understand and ask him for trust.

Tell him what you want to obey that he has shown you.

Rest in him today.

DAY 197 · WEEK 29

Psalm 119:97-144

The commandments as wisdom, sweeter than honey

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 48 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:97-144. Today's section includes one of the most famous verses in the psalm, verse 105. Read it as a prayer from someone who loves God's word and finds it a guide in the dark.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The third section of Psalm 119 begins with a cry of love: "Oh how I love your law!" It speaks of wisdom, guidance, and zeal. The psalmist is surrounded by wicked people who do not keep God's word, and he is grieved by their disobedience. Yet he finds in Scripture light, wisdom, and sweetness, and he holds to it with passion.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Oh how I love your law! It is my meditation all the day" (v. 97).
2. "Your commandment makes me wiser than my enemies, for it is ever with me" (v. 98).
3. "I have more understanding than all my teachers, for your testimonies are my meditation" (v. 99).
4. "How sweet are your words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" (v. 103).
5. "Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path" (v. 105).
6. "I have sworn an oath and confirmed it, to keep your righteous rules" (v. 106).
7. "The unfolding of your words gives light; it imparts understanding to the simple" (v. 130).
8. "My eyes shed streams of tears, because people do not keep your law" (v. 136).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This section opens with an outpouring of love. The psalmist says it is his meditation all day long. It is not a duty that he squeezes in. It is the way he thinks. And the result is wisdom. He is wiser than his enemies, has more insight than his teachers, and understands more than the elders. These are not boasts about his intellect. He attributes it all to the word. The person who meditates on Scripture gains a wisdom that cleverness cannot give.

Verse 103 is one of the best descriptions of what it is to love the word: "How sweet are your words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth." It is a picture of delight. God's word is not bitter medicine. It is food that we enjoy. In Ezekiel 3:3, the prophet eats a scroll and says it is as sweet as honey. In Revelation 10:9-10, John eats a scroll that is sweet in the mouth and bitter in the stomach. The word is sweet, but it can also be bitter, because it brings both joy and conviction.

Verse 105 is the best known: "Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path." It is a modest image. A lamp in the ancient world did not light a whole road. It showed the next few steps. This is how God usually guides us. We do not get a floodlight on the whole future. We get enough to take the next step. The word is for walking, not just for knowing.

Verse 130 says that the unfolding of God's words gives light to the simple. The word is not only for the educated. The humble and the simple can understand what is essential. God is not hiding his truth from them.

The last verses show the other side: the psalmist weeps because others do not keep the law. Love for God's word includes grief for those who reject it. A heart that is in tune with God will be broken by what breaks his.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the light of the world (John 8:12), and he said, "Whoever follows me will not walk in darkness." John says that the Word is the light that shines in the darkness (John 1:1-5). Paul says that the word of Christ should dwell in you richly (Colossians 3:16). Peter calls us to long for "the pure spiritual milk" of the word, "that by it you may grow up into salvation" (1 Peter 2:2). Jesus wept over Jerusalem (Luke 19:41).

STEP 6

Application

Memorize verse 105. Say it before you go out this week.

Ask what the "next step" is that the lamp is showing you now.

Let your heart be moved for those who do not know God's word. Pray for someone by name.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you love about his word, and what you find hard about it.
- Ask him for understanding as you meditate on it today.
- Ask him to give you a heart for those who do not know him.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 29

DAY 198 · WEEK 29

Psalm 119:145-176

With my whole heart I cry; your word is my hope

Year 1 · Unit 7 · Psalm · 32 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:145-176. This is the last section of the longest psalm. It is a series of cries for help, and it ends in a surprising way. Read the last verse carefully.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The final section of Psalm 119 is full of urgent prayer. The psalmist rises before dawn to cry out, and he prays at night. He is pursued by those who are far from God's law, and yet he finds that God is near. The psalm ends not with a triumphant note, but with a confession that he has gone astray like a lost sheep, and a plea for the shepherd to seek him.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "With my whole heart I cry; answer me, O LORD! I will keep your statutes" (v. 145).
2. "I rose before dawn and cried for help; I hoped in your words" (v. 147).
3. "You are near, O LORD, and all your commandments are true" (v. 151).
4. "The sum of your word is truth, and every one of your righteous rules endures forever" (v. 160).
5. "Great peace have those who love your law; nothing can make them stumble" (v. 165).
6. "I rejoice at your word like one who finds great spoil" (v. 162).
7. "Let my cry come before you, O LORD; give me understanding according to your word!" (v. 169).
8. "I have gone astray like a lost sheep; seek your servant, for I do not forget your commandments" (v. 176).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The closing section is a prayer of desperate faith. “With my whole heart I cry.” The psalmist prays early in the morning and late at night. He is not casual about prayer. He is urgent, and he bases his urgency on God’s word: “I hoped in your words.” The word is the ground of his hope. He prays what God has promised, and he trusts that God will do it.

Verse 151 is a short statement of great comfort: “You are near, O LORD.” Surrounded by those who persecute him, the psalmist holds on to the fact that God is near. He does not say that his circumstances have changed. He says that God is close, and that is enough.

Verse 160 is a profound statement about Scripture: “The sum of your word is truth.” The whole of it, taken together, is truth. Each part is true, and the whole is more than the parts. It is a good verse to remember as you read the Bible as a whole. Each passage is a piece of a single truth.

The great promise of verse 165 is peace: “Great peace have those who love your law; nothing can make them stumble.” This is not the peace of having no problems. It is the peace of those whose lives are rooted in God’s word. Though they may be shaken, they are not toppled.

Then the final verse. After 175 verses about loving, keeping, and delighting in God’s law, the psalmist ends with, “I have gone astray like a lost sheep; seek your servant.” It is a moving confession. The most devoted lover of the word still needs a shepherd. He cannot keep the law perfectly. He needs God to find him. And he says, “I do not forget your commandments.” Even a lost sheep remembers the shepherd’s voice.

This is where the law leads: not to self-righteousness, but to a cry for a shepherd.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus told the parable of the lost sheep, in which the shepherd leaves the ninety-nine to seek the one (Luke 15:3-7), and he said, “I am the good shepherd” (John 10:11). Isaiah 53:6 says, “All we like sheep have gone astray… and the LORD has laid on him the iniquity of us all.” Peter says, “You were straying like sheep, but have now returned to the Shepherd and Overseer of your souls” (1 Peter 2:25). The psalmist’s last prayer is answered in Christ.

STEP 6

Application

Pray verse 176 as your own. Admit where you have gone astray, and ask the shepherd to seek you.

Think about your morning and evening habits of prayer. Is there a small way to deepen them?

Spend time thanking God for the peace of those who love his law.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Cry out to God with your whole heart, telling him where you have gone astray.

Thank Jesus, the good shepherd who found you.

Ask him to keep his word near you.

MEMORY

Unit Verse

> "Hear, O Israel: The LORD our God, the LORD is one. You shall love the LORD your God with all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might."
> DEUTERONOMY 6:4-5

REST

Meditation

Deuteronomy 6:4-5 is the unit's anchor verse. It is the greatest commandment, and the center of the book that you have just finished reading. Read it aloud once more before you continue.

"Hear, O Israel." The word "hear" in Hebrew is shema, and it means to listen and obey. After forty years of failing to listen, Israel is told again to hear. This is the way that every part of the covenant begins. Faith comes by hearing.

"The LORD our God, the LORD is one." There is one God. There is no rival, no partner, and no competing power. He is the LORD, the covenant name given at the burning bush. And he is "our God," bound to his people in love. The oneness of God is the foundation of Israel's life, and of the Christian faith.

"You shall love the LORD your God." The commandment is to love. This is not a request for mere compliance. The whole law, the sacrifices, the festivals, the justice, is meant to be the expression of love for God. Moses told the people many times in this book that obedience should flow from love.

"With all your heart and with all your soul and with all your might." The love is to be total. Heart is the center of thought and will. Soul is the whole self, life itself. Might is strength, resources, energy. Nothing is held back. Jesus added "mind" when he quoted the verse (Mark 12:30), but the sense is the same: everything we are belongs to God.

For the Christian, the verse is both a command and a promise. We cannot keep it on our own. But God promised in Deuteronomy 30:6 that he would circumcise our hearts so that we would love him. In Christ, that promise is fulfilled. The Spirit pours God's love into our hearts (Romans 5:5), and we love because he first loved us (1 John 4:19).

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 7 you have read the books of Numbers and Deuteronomy, the forty years in the wilderness and the sermons of Moses that prepared Israel for the land. You began with the census at Sinai and saw the camp arranged around the tabernacle, with the Levites set apart as substitutes for the firstborn. You read the blessing that God told Aaron to speak over his people, and Psalm 90, Moses' prayer about the brevity of life and the eternity of God.

You followed Israel as it left Sinai with the cloud above and the ark in front, and you saw the march break down in complaining. You read the story of the twelve spies and the decision of the people not to enter the land, and the sentence of forty years. You prayed Psalm 95 and heard its warning, "Today, if you hear his voice, do not harden your hearts." You read of Korah's rebellion, Aaron's budding staff, and the red heifer, and of Moses' sin at the rock and the bronze serpent that healed those who looked. You heard the oracles of Balaam and the promise of a star from Jacob.

You read of the second generation. They fell at Baal of Peor, were numbered again, and received Joshua as their leader. You read the offerings and the vows, the war against Midian, the stages of the journey, the boundaries of the land, and the cities of refuge, whose manslayers were freed by the death of the high priest.

Then Moses began to preach. He looked back at the journey and told the people that God had carried them as a man carries his son. He restated the Ten Commandments and gave the Shema, the greatest commandment. He told Israel that God's choice was not because of their righteousness, and he retold the golden calf. You paused to study the three offices of Christ as prophet, priest, and king. You read the law of the king and the promise of a prophet like Moses. You read the many laws of justice and mercy, the creed of the firstfruits, the covenant at Ebal and Gerizim, and the blessings and curses. Moses called Israel to choose life, taught them the Song of the Rock, blessed the tribes, and died on Mount Nebo. All along, you prayed through Psalm 78, which told the story as a lesson for children, and Psalm 119, which praised the word of God.

The unit taught that unbelief is the root of rebellion, that God is patient and faithful, that the heart must be changed by God, and that the whole of the law is to be summed up in love.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What does Israel's wilderness rebellion reveal about the human heart?

Look back at the spies (Numbers 13 and 14), Korah (Numbers 16), and Psalm 95. Consider what Moses says in Deuteronomy 29:4 about the heart. Ask what Israel needed that miracles could not give.

What is the structure of Deuteronomy, and why does it matter that it resembles a covenant treaty?

Recall the pattern: a historical review (chapters 1 to 4), the commandments (5 to 26), the blessings and curses (27 to 30), and the arrangements for the future (31 to 34). Think about why God would bind his people with a covenant instead of only commanding.

What does Moses mean by the blessings and curses in Deuteronomy 27 and 28?

Review Deuteronomy 28:1-14 and 28:15-68, and the reason in 28:47. Read Galatians 3:10-14, and consider how the curses were fulfilled in Israel's history and in Christ.

How does Moses function as a type of Christ, and where does he fall short?

Think about Moses as prophet, mediator, intercessor, and leader. Consider Numbers 20, Deuteronomy 18:15, and Deuteronomy 34:10. Read Hebrews 3:1-6 and ask what the Son does that the servant could not.

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for carrying you through these years of wilderness and patience.

Thank him for Christ as prophet, priest, and king.

DAY 200 · WEEK 29

Joshua 1:1-2:24

Joshua commissioned; Rahab and the spies, faith and the scarlet cord

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 48 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 1:1-2:24. Moses is dead, and the people stand on the east bank of the Jordan. Read chapter 1 as a commissioning and chapter 2 as a story about two very different kinds of faith: the nation's leader gathering courage, and a pagan prostitute in Jericho staking her life on a God she has only heard about.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Last week you closed the wilderness books with Moses' death on Mount Nebo. The man who led Israel out of Egypt and received the law at Sinai will not enter the land. Now a new leader steps forward. Joshua has been Moses' assistant since the early days of the exodus, and he was one of the two spies who trusted God at Kadesh, forty years ago. Israel now stands where their parents stood, at the edge of the promised land. Will this generation believe God where the last one did not? The book of Joshua tells how God keeps the promise he swore to Abraham, and it begins with one command repeated again and again: be strong and courageous.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God speaks to Joshua directly after Moses' death: "Moses my servant is dead. Now therefore arise, go over this Jordan" (1:2).
2. The promise is stated in the widest terms, from the wilderness to Lebanon and from the Euphrates to the Great Sea (1:4).
3. God promises, "Just as I was with Moses, so I will be with you. I will not leave you or forsake you" (1:5).

4. The command to be “strong and courageous” appears three times in the opening verses (1:6, 7, 9).
5. Success is tied to meditating on the Book of the Law “day and night” and doing what is written in it (1:8).
6. Joshua sends two spies secretly from Shittim, and they lodge with Rahab the prostitute (2:1).
7. Rahab confesses, “The LORD your God, he is God in the heavens above and on the earth beneath” (2:11).
8. She asks for kindness, and the spies promise protection if she ties a scarlet cord in her window (2:12-21).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The book opens with God’s word to Joshua, and the first thing it does is link the future to the past. “Moses my servant is dead.” The leader has changed, but the promise has not. God does not say, “I will be with you if you prove yourself.” He says, “Just as I was with Moses, I will be with you.” Joshua’s strength will not come from his résumé but from the presence of God. This is why the command to be courageous keeps coming back. Courage in the Bible is never self-confidence. It is the confidence of someone who has been promised that God goes with him.

Notice what makes Joshua strong. It is not a battle plan. It is the book of the law. “This Book of the Law shall not depart from your mouth, but you shall meditate on it day and night.” Joshua is told that success, in the sense of walking wisely and faithfully, comes through Scripture. This is the same pattern as Psalm 1, which you will read soon. The leader of God’s people is first a man under God’s word. The people’s response in the rest of chapter 1 is also striking. They pledge to obey Joshua just as they obeyed Moses, but they add a condition that matters: “Only may the LORD your God be with you, as he was with Moses.” They know that the authority of the leader depends on the presence of God.

Chapter 2 shifts to a very different scene. Joshua sends spies, but the story is not about the spies. It is about a woman in Jericho. Rahab is a Canaanite, a prostitute, and a citizen of a city under God’s judgment. She has no place in the covenant, no history of worship, and no reason to expect mercy. But she has heard what God did at the Red Sea and to the kings east of the Jordan, and she draws a conclusion: “The LORD your God, he is God in the heavens above and on the earth beneath.” It is one of the great confessions of the Old Testament, and it comes from the mouth of someone the reader would never expect.

She acts on that confession at great risk. She hides the spies, misleads the king's men, and negotiates for the safety of her family. Whatever one concludes about her deception, the text's focus is her faith, and the New Testament will praise it directly. Hebrews 11:31 says, "By faith Rahab the prostitute did not perish with those who were disobedient." James 2:25 holds her up as an example of faith that shows itself in works. She is not saved by her works. She is saved because she believed, and her works show it.

The scarlet cord is a quiet image of rescue. Like the blood on the doorposts of the Passover, a visible sign marks the house that will be spared when judgment comes. Christians have long seen in it a picture of the blood of Christ, and even if the text does not say so explicitly, the pattern is clear: judgment will fall on Jericho, and those who take refuge in the way God has provided will be saved. Rahab will become part of Israel. Matthew 1:5 names her in the genealogy of Jesus. A Canaanite prostitute is an ancestor of the Messiah.

STEP 5

Connection

The commissioning of Joshua echoes the commissioning of Moses at the burning bush (Exodus 3) and the promise of presence in Deuteronomy 31:6-8. The call to meditate on the law anticipates Psalm 1. Rahab's confession is the Old Testament's counterpart to the Gentile faith of the centurion (Matthew 8) and the Canaanite woman (Matthew 15). The scarlet cord recalls the Passover blood in Exodus 12. Rahab is named in Matthew 1:5, Hebrews 11:31, and James 2:25.

STEP 6

Application

First, take courage from the grounds of Joshua's courage. God does not tell you to be brave because you are capable. He tells you to be brave because he is with you. Think of one situation this week where you feel inadequate, and pray Joshua 1:9 over it.

Second, notice the link between courage and Scripture. If you want to be steady in a shaky season, ask what place God's word has in your days. What is it shaping in you right now?

Third, let Rahab reshape your idea of who God saves. If you are tempted to think some people are too far gone, remember that God rescued a prostitute from Jericho and put her in the line of Christ. And if you are the one who feels too far gone, she is your encouragement.

Fourth, think about what you have heard of God's works and how you have responded. Rahab acted on what she heard. What does your life show you believe about him?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God about a situation where you feel inadequate, and pray Joshua 1:9 over it.
- Ask him to keep his word on your lips and in your mind.
- Thank him that he saves those who seem too far gone, as he did Rahab.

DAY 201 · WEEK 29

Joshua 3:1-5:15

Crossing the Jordan; circumcision renewed; the Passover kept

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 55 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 3:1-5:15. It is a long reading, but the three chapters tell one story: the nation crosses the Jordan, builds a memorial, is renewed in covenant signs, and meets the commander of the LORD's army. Notice how often the ark, the stones, and the Passover remind Israel what God has done.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The spies have returned from Jericho with good news: the inhabitants are melting in fear. But there is still a river between Israel and the land, and in the spring it is at flood stage. Forty years earlier, God parted the Red Sea for their parents. Now he will do something similar for the children, but it will happen in a different way. The priests carrying the ark will step into the water first. Once across, Israel will pause at Gilgal for three acts that prepare them for the conquest: they will set up a memorial, renew circumcision, and keep the Passover. Only then will the commander of the LORD's army appear. The order matters. Israel is not ready to fight until they are ready to worship.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The people are told to follow the ark at a distance of about two thousand cubits, so everyone can see where it goes (3:3-4).
2. Joshua tells them, "Consecrate yourselves, for tomorrow the LORD will do wonders among you" (3:5).
3. The waters stop only when the priests' feet touch the edge of the Jordan, even though it is overflowing its banks (3:13-15).

4. The priests stand firm in the middle of the dry riverbed until all Israel has crossed (3:17).
5. Twelve stones are taken from the Jordan to Gilgal, as a memorial "so that all the peoples of the earth may know that the hand of the LORD is mighty" (4:20-24).
6. The generation born in the wilderness had not been circumcised, so Joshua circumcises them at Gilgal (5:2-7).
7. The manna ceases the day after they eat the produce of the land (5:12).
8. Joshua meets a man with a drawn sword who says he is "commander of the army of the LORD" and tells Joshua to remove his sandals, because the place is holy (5:13-15).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The crossing of the Jordan deliberately echoes the crossing of the Red Sea. The author wants us to see that the God who brought Israel out of Egypt is the same God who now brings them in. But there are differences. At the Red Sea, Moses stretched out a staff and the waters parted, and Israel crossed while the enemy chased them. At the Jordan, no enemy pursues. The challenge is not escape but entry. And the miracle begins only when the priests step in. They have to walk into a flooded river before the water stops. Faith precedes sight. God does not part the waters in advance. He asks his people to take a step of trust, and then he acts.

The ark is the center of the story. It is the symbol of God's throne and presence, and it goes first. The people follow at a distance, which keeps the focus on the ark and not on the carriers. This is the pattern of the whole conquest: Israel does not win because of its army but because God goes before them. The lesson for every believer is simple. We do not go anywhere that God has not first gone.

Then the people build a memorial. Twelve stones, one for each tribe, are taken from the middle of the Jordan and piled up at Gilgal. The purpose is explained twice: so that future children will ask, "What do these stones mean?" and the parents will tell them the story. God's people are a remembering people. Spiritual memory does not happen automatically. It needs signs, stories, and rituals that pass faith from one generation to the next. This is the logic of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and it is the reason your own daily reading matters.

Chapter 5 is surprising. Israel has crossed the river, and the Canaanite kings are afraid, yet Joshua stops to circumcise every man. It seems like a terrible time to put the army out of action. But God is teaching a priority. The sign of the Abrahamic covenant had been neglected in the wilderness. Before the people take the land, they must renew the mark that says they belong to God. Then they celebrate Passover and eat the produce of the land. The manna stops. God has provided what they need in the wilderness, and now he provides from the inheritance he promised.

Finally, a mysterious figure appears. Joshua, a warrior, asks whether he is for Israel or for their enemies. The answer is "No." The commander of the LORD's army has not come to take sides. He has come to take command. Joshua falls on his face and removes his sandals, just as Moses did at the burning bush. The figure is likely a pre-incarnate appearance of the Son, the one who leads God's armies. Joshua is not the real captain of the host. The real captain has arrived.

STEP 5

Connection

The crossing of the Jordan echoes the crossing of the Red Sea (Exodus 14) and anticipates Elijah and Elisha crossing the same river (2 Kings 2) and the baptism of Jesus there (Matthew 3). The memorial stones recall Deuteronomy 6:20-25. Circumcision renews the sign of Genesis 17. The manna's end ties to Exodus 16. The commander's command to remove sandals repeats Exodus 3:5, and the same figure appears as the "angel of the LORD" throughout the Old Testament.

STEP 6

Application

First, think about what step of faith God may be asking you to take before he shows you the outcome. The priests had to get their feet wet. Ask the Lord for the courage to take one step this week.

Second, build your own memorial. Write down three things God has done for you in the last year, and put the list somewhere you will see it. Tell someone younger in the faith about one of them.

Third, ask yourself what must be set right before you can move forward. Israel could not conquer until the covenant sign was renewed. Is there something in your relationship with God that has been neglected?

Fourth, notice that the commander is not on your side. He is in charge. Bow to him in prayer this week and ask him what he wants, rather than asking him to bless your plans.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to teach you to follow where he leads.

Thank him for what he has done, and ask him to help you tell the story to someone else.

Tell him about a “Jordan” you are facing.

DAY 202 · WEEK 29

Psalm 114

When Israel went out of Egypt, the Jordan fled

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 114 aloud. It is only eight verses long, and it is one of the most compressed poems in the Psalter. It looks back at the exodus and the crossing of the Jordan and sees the whole creation reacting to the presence of God. Read it as a celebration of the two crossings you have been reading about.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 114 is one of the Hallel psalms, sung at Passover. It may have been sung in the temple long after the days of Joshua, as Israel remembered how God brought them out of Egypt and into the land. It pairs two events you have just read about: the splitting of the Red Sea and the stopping of the Jordan. The psalm treats them as one great act of deliverance. Its poetry is bold and playful. It does not explain how the miracles happened. It simply asks: what could make the sea flee, the river turn back, and the mountains skip like rams? The answer is the presence of God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm begins with the exodus: “When Israel went out from Egypt, the house of Jacob from a people of strange language” (v. 1).
2. Judah became God’s “sanctuary” and Israel his “dominion” (v. 2). The people are his dwelling place.
3. “The sea looked and fled; Jordan turned back” (v. 3). The two crossings are placed side by side.
4. The mountains “skipped like rams” and the hills “like lambs” (v. 4).

5. The psalm asks the sea and river, “What ails you?” (v. 5), as though they were nervous children.
6. The answer is direct: “Tremble, O earth, at the presence of the Lord” (v. 7).
7. The God of Jacob turns rock into “a pool of water” and flint into “a spring of water” (v. 8).
8. The name of God is withheld until verse 7, which heightens the effect.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 114 is a poem about reaction. The first four verses describe what happened in nature when God moved. The sea saw and ran away. The Jordan flowed backward. The mountains leaped. These are not scientific descriptions. They are the poet’s way of showing that creation itself recognizes its Lord. Water, which can drown an army, is no more than a servant. Mountains, which seem immovable, jump like frightened lambs. If the natural world responds this way to the presence of God, how should we?

Then the poet does something delightful. He turns and interrogates the sea and the river. “What ails you, O sea, that you flee?” It is almost comical. The mighty Red Sea and the flooding Jordan, scolded as though they had panicked for no reason. The answer comes in verse 7: “Tremble, O earth, at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob.” The poet has delayed the name of God until this point. For six verses we do not know who made the sea flee. When the name arrives, it carries weight: the Lord, the God of Jacob. This is the God who attached himself to a deceiver and made him Israel. The power that shakes the earth is the same power that is committed to a covenant family.

The last verse is the most surprising. After all the shaking and fleeing, the poem closes with a small, tender image: the God who turns rock into a pool of water. This points back to the water from the rock at Meribah, and to God’s care for his thirsty people in the wilderness. The God who makes mountains skip is also the God who provides a drink for his people. His power and his provision are the same.

For Christians, the psalm tells a bigger story. Israel’s exodus and entry are a pattern. Christ passes through the waters of death and brings his people to an inheritance. Paul says in 1 Corinthians 10:4 that the rock in the wilderness was Christ, and in Hebrews, the land is a shadow of the rest to come. Christian baptism is also described as a crossing: we pass through water out of slavery and into a new life.

STEP 5

Connection

The psalm draws on Exodus 14-15 (the sea), Joshua 3-4 (the Jordan), and Exodus 17 and Numbers 20 (the water from the rock). It belongs to the Hallel, Psalms 113-118, sung at Passover, and so Jesus and his disciples likely sang it at the Last Supper (Matthew 26:30). Paul interprets the rock as Christ in 1 Corinthians 10:1-4.

STEP 6

Application

Let this psalm reorder your sense of scale. The things that loom large in your life, such as deadlines, diagnoses, or conflicts, are like the Red Sea and the Jordan. They look immovable until God shows up. Name one thing you are facing, and tell it, in prayer, that it is small compared to the presence of the Lord.

Notice also the God of Jacob. If God attached himself to someone like Jacob, he can bind himself to you. His power is not set against your weakness. It is committed to your good.

Finally, take a drink. When you are thirsty spiritually, remember the rock and the pool. Christ is the source. Come to him and drink.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tremble before the God who turns back seas and rivers, in your own words.

Ask him to turn the hard places in your life into springs of water.

Thank him that he is bound to his people by covenant.

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Sabbath

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. This week you finished the wilderness books with the review of Unit 7, and you crossed the Jordan with Joshua. Take a quiet moment today to sit with the opening of Joshua. Read Joshua 1:1-9 again slowly if you can, and let the promise of God's presence settle in.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Have I not commanded you? Be strong and courageous. Do not be frightened, and do not be dismayed, for the LORD your God is with you wherever you go."

JOSHUA 1:9

REST

Meditation

Joshua 1:9 is a command wrapped around a promise, and the promise is what holds the command up.

"Have I not commanded you?" God begins with a reminder. He has already spoken. Joshua does not need a new word. He needs to believe the one he has.

"Be strong and courageous." This is the third time in nine verses that the words appear. Courage is not a feeling that arrives on its own. It is a choice made in response to what God has said. Joshua will be afraid. God does not deny it. He commands courage because fear is real.

“Do not be frightened, and do not be dismayed.” The two words describe fear that shakes you from the inside and discouragement that drains you from outside. Both are answered by the same thing.

“For the LORD your God is with you wherever you go.” This is the reason. Not “because you are strong,” not “because you are well prepared,” but because he is with you. Every step into unknown territory is accompanied.

Notice the last phrase: wherever you go. Joshua would go into the Jordan, into Jericho, into battle, and into long years of leadership. The promise follows him into all of it. And for the Christian, the promise is stronger still. Jesus said, “I am with you always, to the end of the age” (Matthew 28:20). Carry this verse into the places you dread this week.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished the wilderness books with the Unit 7 review, spending time in Psalm 119, the long song of delight in God’s word. Then you began Unit 8 and the book of Joshua. You heard God commission a new leader and promise his presence. You met Rahab, the Canaanite woman who confessed that the LORD is God in heaven above and on earth beneath, and who hung a scarlet cord in her window. You watched the priests step into a flooded Jordan and saw the waters stop, you saw twelve stones piled up at Gilgal, and you saw a new generation circumcised and the Passover kept. You met the commander of the LORD’s army, and you sang Psalm 114, in which the sea flees and the mountains skip.

The week taught one lesson in many forms: God keeps his promises, and he goes before his people.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where do you most need courage right now? Joshua was not told to feel brave. He was told to be strong because God was with him. Name one situation where fear or discouragement is pressing on you, and write down what it would look like to take one faithful step in it this week.

How does Rahab’s story point you to Christ? She was an outsider under judgment, who heard about God’s works, believed, and took refuge in the way of rescue he provided. A scarlet cord marked her house, and she was brought into God’s people and into the line of the Messiah. How does her story clarify what it means that Jesus saves, not on the basis of who we are, but on the basis of what he has done?

What “memorial stones” help you remember what God has done? Think about the practices, places, or people that keep your faith anchored. Is there one you have neglected? What could you do this week to retell God’s faithfulness to someone else?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Rest in God’s promise to be with you wherever you go.

Thank him for Rahab, and for mercy that reaches outsiders like you.

Tell him what you are leaving in his hands this Sabbath.

DAY 204 · WEEK 30

Psalm 66:1-12

Make a joyful noise; God tested us

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 66:1-12. You read the opening verses of this psalm in Unit 3. Today you read further, to the part where the psalmist remembers the times God tested his people. Notice how the praise turns from the whole earth to the experience of Israel, and how God's discipline is described as both fire and a spacious place.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This week begins with a psalm of praise that moves from the global to the personal. The psalmist first calls the whole earth to shout to God, and then recalls the exodus and the crossing of the sea, and finally speaks about the nation's hard experiences. It fits the story of Joshua well. Israel has crossed the Jordan and stands on the edge of a conquest that will test them. The psalm reminds us that God's tests are not meant to destroy but to refine, and that they lead to a place of abundance. It is a good psalm to read as you prepare for the walls of Jericho.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The psalm opens, "Shout for joy to God, all the earth" (v. 1), and calls people to sing the glory of his name.
2. "Say to God, How awesome are your deeds!" (v. 3). Even enemies cringe before his power.
3. "He turned the sea into dry land; they passed through the river on foot" (v. 6). Both crossings are recalled.
4. "He rules by his might forever, his eyes keep watch on the nations" (v. 7).
5. God "has kept us among the living and has not let our feet slip" (v. 9).

6. “For you, O God, have tested us; you have tried us as silver is tried” (v. 10).
7. The imagery of hardship is vivid: nets, burdens on the back, men riding over heads, fire and water (vv. 11-12).
8. The psalm ends this section with “yet you have brought us out to a place of abundance” (v. 12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 66 reminds us that praise and hardship belong together. The psalmist does not say that life has been easy. He says that God has tested his people the way a refiner tests silver, and that the testing was real. Israel went into the net. They felt a heavy weight on their backs. They felt men trample them, and they walked through fire and flood. The psalm does not shrink from describing the pain. And yet it begins with a shout of joy.

What allows the psalmist to praise God in the middle of hardship? The answer is in the sequence. Verses 5-7 remind the people of the God who turned the sea into dry land. Verse 8 says he “has kept us among the living.” The pain was real, but so was God’s presence in it. Every hardship has a boundary that God has set. The fire and water do not overwhelm. They are the way to a place of abundance.

The word “tested” is important. In the Bible, God does not test people to find out something he does not know. He tests to reveal and to refine. A silversmith heats the metal to burn off the dross and leave pure silver. In the same way, God allows pressure so that what is false in our faith will fall away and what is true will remain. This is the same logic you will see in Joshua. The conquest is not only a military campaign but a test of whether Israel will trust God’s word and keep his covenant. Some of the hardest tests will come after the greatest victories.

The final phrase, “a place of abundance,” lifts the eyes. Hardship is not the end of the story. It is a corridor. The God who brings his people through fire and water brings them out into a spacious place. For the Christian, this finds its fullest sense in Christ, who passed through the waters of death, the “fire” of God’s judgment, and rose to the abundance of new life. His people follow him through the same journey, and the end is not loss but fullness.

STEP 5

Connection

The first seven verses recall the exodus (Exodus 14-15) and the Jordan crossing (Joshua 3). The image of refining silver appears in Proverbs 17:3, Zechariah 13:9, and 1 Peter 1:6-7. Isaiah 43:2 promises that God will be with his people through water and fire. The “place of abundance” anticipates the land of promise and the new creation in Revelation 21.

STEP 6

Application

When you face hardship, avoid the two easy conclusions that God has abandoned you or that you have failed some test. Instead, ask what he might be refining. Take ten minutes today to name one area where you have felt pressure, and pray: “Lord, what do you want to burn away, and what do you want to keep?”

Also, practice praising God before the pressure lifts. The psalmist begins with a shout. Choose one song or psalm and sing or read it aloud today, even if your circumstances have not changed.

Finally, remind yourself of the place of abundance. Hardship in Christ is never wasted.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God for testing you and keeping you among the living.
- Tell him what pressure you are under and trust him in it.
- Ask him to burn away what does not belong in you.

DAY 205 · WEEK 30

Joshua 6:1-8:35

Jericho falls; Achan's sin; Ai taken

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 79 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 6:1-8:35. These chapters contain some of the best-known stories in the Old Testament and some of the most uncomfortable. Read slowly through the fall of Jericho, then through Achan's sin and Israel's humiliating defeat at Ai, and finally through the renewal of the covenant on Mount Ebal. Ask throughout: what does this show about God's holiness, and about the seriousness of sin?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has crossed the Jordan, and the first fortified city stands in the way. Jericho is the gateway to the land. God does not give Joshua a battle plan in the usual sense. He gives him a worship procession. For six days, the army will march around the walls with the ark and seven priests blowing rams' horns, and on the seventh day they will march seven times and shout. Victory is God's gift. But right after the high of Jericho comes the low of Ai. A single man's sin brings defeat on the whole community. These chapters teach that God's people are called to trust his power and to take his holiness seriously.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The LORD says to Joshua, "See, I have given Jericho into your hand" (6:2). The victory is announced before the battle.
2. The army marches around the city for six days in silence, and on the seventh day shouts as the walls fall (6:3-20).
3. Everything in Jericho is placed under the ban (herem) and devoted to the LORD, except Rahab and her family, who are spared (6:17-25).

4. Achan takes a robe from Shinar, silver, and a bar of gold from the devoted things and hides them in his tent (7:1, 21).
5. Israel is routed at Ai, and thirty-six men die. Joshua tears his clothes and falls on his face (7:4-6).
6. The LORD says, "Israel has sinned; they have transgressed my covenant" (7:11). The community is treated as a unit.
7. Achan is identified by lot, confesses, and is judged along with his family (7:16-26).
8. After the victory at Ai, Joshua builds an altar on Mount Ebal and reads the blessings and curses of the law to the whole assembly (8:30-35).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The fall of Jericho is a story about who wins battles. No siege equipment, no tactics, no armies are needed. God hands over the city to a people who march, worship, and shout. The point is made so clearly that nobody can miss it: the walls fall by faith. Hebrews 11:30 summarizes it, "By faith the walls of Jericho fell down after they had been encircled for seven days." The first victory in the land belongs entirely to God. It is also the first fruits of the conquest, and everything in the city is devoted to the LORD.

This is the difficult theme of herem, the ban. Everything in Jericho was to be destroyed. Modern readers rightly feel the weight of this. How can we read it? First, the Bible presents this as a specific, unrepeatable act of divine judgment on a people whose sin had reached its full measure. Genesis 15:16 says that the iniquity of the Amorites was not yet complete in Abraham's day, which means God waited four hundred years before bringing judgment. Deuteronomy 9:4 says it was "because of the wickedness of these nations" that God drove them out, and warns Israel not to think they are being given the land because of their own righteousness. Second, Jericho is judged and Rahab is saved. The conquest does not teach that Israel is better than its neighbors. It teaches that God is holy, that sin is judged, and that the only safety is to take refuge in him. Third, the command is narrowly bound to the original conquest. The New Testament never uses it as a model for the church. Our weapons are not carnal (2 Corinthians 10:4).

Then chapter 7 shows that this holiness cuts both ways. Achan, an Israelite, takes some of the devoted things. His sin is hidden, but not from God. Israel loses at Ai and thirty-six men die. God's explanation is frightening: "Israel has sinned." The community is bound together, and one man's secret disobedience damages everyone. The text carefully traces Achan's sin in the verbs of Genesis 3: "I saw... I coveted... I took... I hid" (7:21). He is a second Adam in a garden of promise, and his sin brings death.

Joshua's response is instructive. He falls on his face, and God tells him to stand up and deal with the sin. Prayer without repentance is not enough. Achan's judgment is severe, and the valley where it happens is named Achor, meaning "trouble." But the prophets will later turn the name around. Hosea 2:15 promises that God will make the Valley of Achor "a door of hope." God's holiness is not the last word.

The section ends not with a battle but with a covenant renewal. On Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim, Joshua reads the entire law, blessings and curses, to the people as Moses commanded. The conquest is a covenant event. Israel is not simply taking territory. They are living under the word of the LORD.

STEP 5

Connection

The collapse of Jericho is recalled in Hebrews 11:30. Rahab's rescue ties back to Joshua 2 and forward to Matthew 1:5. The ban's justification is in Genesis 15:16 and Deuteronomy 9:4-5 and 20:16-18. Achan's sin echoes Genesis 3:6 and anticipates Ananias and Sapphira in Acts 5. The Valley of Achor reappears in Isaiah 65:10 and Hosea 2:15. The covenant ceremony on Ebal fulfills Deuteronomy 11:29 and 27:1-26.

STEP 6

Application

First, ask what your "walls" might be. Where are you trying to win by effort when God asks you to trust and obey? Take one concrete step of worshipful obedience this week, and leave the outcome with him.

Second, take Achan's story as a warning about hidden sin. No sin is private. Is there something you are concealing, perhaps a habit, a debt, a relationship, or a resentment? Bring it into the light, first to God, and then to a trusted friend. Concealment is how small sins grow.

Third, remember that Christ is our Joshua. His name is the same in Hebrew. He defeats the powers we cannot overcome, and he is also the one who bore the curse of our sin. Hosea's "door of hope" is a picture of what he does with our trouble.

Finally, hold both God's holiness and mercy together. Rahab's rescue and Achan's judgment are on the same pages. Both teach us to fear and love him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to show you any hidden sin and to give you courage to confess it.

Thank him for the victory he gives.

Thank him for turning a valley of trouble into a door of hope.

DAY 206 · WEEK 30

Joshua 9:1-10:43

The Gibeonite deception; the southern campaign

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 70 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 9:1-10:43. The first chapter is a story about deception and a hasty oath. The second is a story about a great victory in which God fights from heaven. Notice how the two are connected: the treaty with Gibeon is what pulls Israel into the southern campaign.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After Ai, news of Israel's victories has spread across the land. The kings of the hill country gather in an alliance to fight Joshua. But one group has another plan. The Gibeonites, a Hivite people living only a few miles away, decide to trick Israel into a peace treaty by pretending to come from a distant country. They put on worn-out clothing and carry moldy bread. Joshua and the leaders fall for it, and make a covenant with them without asking the LORD. The consequences of that oath will shape Israel's history for centuries. Yet God uses even Israel's mistake to bring about a remarkable day.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The Gibeonites disguise themselves with old sacks, worn wineskins, patched sandals, and dry, moldy bread (9:4-5).
2. The Israelites "took some of their provisions, but did not ask counsel from the LORD" (9:14).
3. Joshua makes peace with them and the leaders swear an oath (9:15).
4. Three days later the deception is discovered, but the leaders refuse to break the oath: "We have sworn to them by the LORD, the God of Israel" (9:18-19).
5. The Gibeonites are made woodcutters and water carriers for the house of God (9:21-27).

6. Five Amorite kings attack Gibeon, and Joshua marches all night to rescue them (10:5-9).
7. The LORD threw large hailstones from heaven, and more died from the hailstones than the Israelites killed with the sword (10:11).
8. Joshua says, "Sun, stand still at Gibeon," and the text records, "There has been no day like it before or since, when the LORD heeded the voice of a man" (10:12-14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Gibeonite story is a lesson in discernment. Israel has just seen God defeat Jericho and Ai, and they might be tempted to feel that they can handle anything. But the text records a single sentence that explains the problem: "they did not ask counsel from the LORD." They looked at the bread, they sampled the supplies, and they trusted their own judgment. It was a reasonable-looking decision made without prayer. The lesson for believers is not that every decision needs a miracle, but that confidence in our own wisdom is dangerous. The people who were sure of themselves were fooled by a few moldy crusts.

The oath they swore becomes binding. Even when the leaders realize they have been deceived, they keep their word. This is a remarkable testimony to the seriousness of vows made in God's name. Psalm 15:4 describes the person who "swears to his own hurt and does not change." The Gibeonites are spared, but made servants at the sanctuary. Surprisingly, this turns out for their good. They are brought into the worship of Israel's God, just as Rahab was. Gibeon would later become a city of the Levites and the site of the tabernacle in Solomon's time. Out of a deception, God brought mercy.

Chapter 10 shows Israel's loyalty to a vow. When the five kings attack Gibeon, Joshua could have left the Gibeonites to their fate. They had lied to him. But the oath binds him, so he marches all night. And God honors the faithfulness. The LORD throws hailstones, and the sun and moon pause. Whatever one concludes about the exact nature of this event, the author's point is plain: this was the LORD fighting for Israel. "There has been no day like it before or since, when the LORD heeded the voice of a man." The statement is stunning. God listens to the prayer of a man. He is not a distant sovereign who ignores his people. He bends to the requests of those who walk in faithfulness.

The chapter also continues the theme of divine warfare. The five kings are brought out, and Joshua has his commanders put their feet on their necks. It is a symbolic act of total victory, and it is an acted parable. The enemies of God's people will be subdued, and the people share in the victory of their leader. This image will be used again in the New Testament. In Romans 16:20, Paul promises that "the God of peace will soon crush Satan under your feet." The conquest looks forward to a greater victory.

STEP 5

Connection

Joshua's failure to ask counsel echoes Numbers 27:21, where Joshua was to consult the LORD through Eleazar. The sanctity of oaths is addressed in Numbers 30 and Psalm 15:4. The Gibeonites' later history appears in 2 Samuel 21:1-9 and 1 Kings 3:4. The hailstones recall the plagues in Exodus 9, and the sun standing still is echoed in Habakkuk 3:11. The feet on the necks of the kings anticipates Psalm 110:1 and 1 Corinthians 15:25.

STEP 6

Application

Make a habit of asking God before you decide. Not only for the big choices, but for the ordinary ones: a commitment, a purchase, a relationship, a job offer. Pause and pray before you say yes. Ask a wise believer to help you see what you might be missing.

Second, take seriously the words you promise. When you give your word, keep it, even when it costs you. A reputation for faithfulness is a witness to the God who keeps his word.

Third, take encouragement from the day the sun stood still. God listens to the prayers of his people. Bring him something that seems too big to ask.

Fourth, see Christ in this story. He saves us when we come to him with nothing, and he brings the deceived and the outsiders near, as he did with Gibeon.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess where you trust your own judgment without asking God's.

Ask him to teach you to seek his counsel first and to be someone whose word can be trusted.

Thank him that he fights for his people.

DAY 207 · WEEK 30

Joshua 11:1-12:24

The northern campaign; the defeated kings

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 43 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 11:1-12:24. Chapter 11 tells of the northern campaign and the summary of Joshua's victories. Chapter 12 is a list of defeated kings, which may seem dry. Read it as a record of God's faithfulness. Pay attention to the repeated phrase "as the LORD had commanded Moses."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The southern campaign is complete. Now, in the north, a larger coalition gathers under Jabin, king of Hazor, with a massive army, "as many as the sand on the seashore," along with horses and chariots. For Israelite infantry, chariots were the most terrifying weapon of the age. The odds look impossible. Yet God speaks to Joshua with the same words he has used before: "Do not be afraid of them." The chapter then steps back and offers a summary of the war and a list of the kings defeated on both sides of the Jordan. It reads like a ledger, and in a sense it is: a record of what God did in fulfillment of what he promised.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Jabin of Hazor gathers a coalition of northern kings with a huge army, horses, and chariots (11:1-5).
2. The LORD tells Joshua, "Do not be afraid of them, for tomorrow at this time I will give over all of them" (11:6).
3. Joshua is told to hamstring the horses and burn the chariots with fire (11:6, 9).
4. Hazor, "formerly the head of all those kingdoms," is burned (11:10-11).
5. "Joshua did to them just as the LORD said to him" (11:9), and "as the LORD had commanded Moses his servant, so Moses commanded Joshua" (11:15).

6. “There was not a city that made peace with the people of Israel except the Hivites of Gibeon” (11:19).

7. “It was the LORD’s doing to harden their hearts that they should come against Israel in battle” (11:20).

8. Chapter 12 lists thirty-one defeated kings, beginning with the two east of the Jordan, Sihon and Og (12:1-24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The northern campaign shows the pattern of the conquest in miniature: a threat that looks impossible, a word from God, and a victory that comes through obedience. The command to hamstring the horses and burn the chariots is a notable detail. God is teaching Israel not to depend on the military technology of the nations. Psalm 20:7 will later put it this way: “Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the LORD our God.” The order is a test of dependence. If Israel keeps the horses, they might start to trust them.

The chapter also reveals something about the nature of the conquest. Verse 20 says it was “the LORD’s doing to harden their hearts.” This is the same language used of Pharaoh. The nations of Canaan were not innocent bystanders who were randomly attacked. They were in rebellion, and the war was an act of judgment. God allowed their resistance to run its course. Many readers struggle with this, and the Bible doesn’t hide it. But Scripture is consistent in how it frames the matter: God judges sin, and he does so with justice. Paul takes up the same theme in Romans 9-11, where hardening and mercy sit together in God’s plan.

The repeated phrase “as the LORD commanded Moses” also deserves attention. Joshua is not an innovator. He is a faithful follower of the word of God. The victories happen because he carries out what has been commanded. The author makes it a refrain, because he wants the reader to see that Israel’s success depends not on military genius but on obedience to a word.

Chapter 12 closes the first half of the book with a list. At first it seems like a dry ledger, but it carries a quiet testimony. God remembers each defeated king. The record is a monument. It tells every generation of Israel that these were real enemies, defeated at real places, by real power. When the people doubt, they can look at the list. The God who did all this will not abandon them. And Christians read the list with a larger horizon. The enemies Christ has defeated are far greater: sin, death, and the devil. The cross and resurrection are the real Jericho, and the church is called to live in light of a victory that is already won.

STEP 5

Connection

The “hardening” language connects to Exodus 4-14 and to Romans 9:17-18. Trust in horses versus the name of the LORD appears in Psalm 20:7, 33:16-17, and Isaiah 31:1. The commands to Moses are in Deuteronomy 7 and 20. Sihon and Og were defeated in Numbers 21, which you read earlier. The theme of enemy kings defeated looks forward to Colossians 2:15, where Christ “disarmed the rulers and authorities.”

STEP 6

Application

First, ask what your chariots are. What do you rely on that is not God: a plan, a savings account, a network of influence? None of these are evil in themselves, but they may be places where trust has quietly moved. Ask the Lord what to release.

Second, make obedience a habit. Joshua succeeded because he did what he was told, even when it did not make military sense. Choose one clear command of Scripture that you have been delaying, and do it this week.

Third, keep a record. Write down a short list of the ways God has defeated something in your life: a habit, a fear, a broken relationship. Read it when you are discouraged.

Fourth, remember that Christ has won the decisive battle. Live from his victory, not toward it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you from trusting in chariots and horses, whatever those are in your life.

Ask him to teach you to obey even when his word seems strange.

Thank Christ for disarming the powers that oppose you.

PSALM 16:5-6

DAY 208 · WEEK 30

Joshua 13:1-17:18

Tribal allotments begin, the inheritance [survey]

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 121 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 13:1-17:18. This is a long reading in the geographic style of the book, and it can feel like a list. Don't try to memorize the places. Read it for the shape: the land is being divided among the tribes, and God is distributing an inheritance. Keep your eye out for Caleb in chapter 14 and the daughters of Zelophehad in chapter 17.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The conquest is over, at least in principle, but there is still much land to be taken. Joshua is old, and God tells him to divide the territory among the tribes so that each can finish the work. The next several chapters read like a land registry. For many modern readers they are the most skippable part of the Bible. But for the first readers, they were among the most precious. This was proof that God had kept his promise to Abraham: he had given his people a place. Each border and town was a statement that this family belongs here. For us, the lists point toward a greater inheritance.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Joshua, "You are old and advanced in years, and there remains yet very much land to possess" (13:1).
2. Moses had already given the eastern territory to Reuben, Gad, and half of Manasseh (13:8-33).
3. "To the tribe of Levi alone Moses gave no inheritance. The LORD God of Israel is their inheritance" (13:33).
4. Caleb, at eighty-five, asks for the hill country of Hebron and says, "Give me this hill country of which the LORD spoke on that day" (14:6-12).

5. Hebron becomes Caleb's inheritance "because he wholly followed the LORD" (14:14).
6. Judah's allotment is the longest and is described first (15:1-63), though Judah could not drive out the Jebusites in Jerusalem (15:63).
7. Ephraim and Manasseh, the sons of Joseph, receive the central hill country, and Ephraim does not drive out the Canaanites in Gezer (16:10).
8. The daughters of Zelophehad ask for and receive an inheritance among their father's brothers (17:3-6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The land lists are not an interruption of the story but its fulfillment. From Genesis 12, God had promised Abraham a land. Four hundred years of waiting, a slavery in Egypt, and forty years in the wilderness had passed. Now, tribe by tribe and family by family, the promise is distributed. God keeps his word down to the details of boundary lines. The lists are the opposite of vague spirituality. They show that God's promises have addresses.

Several details shine out. First, the Levites receive no territory because "the LORD God of Israel is their inheritance." This is one of the great lines of the Old Testament. They have cities to live in, but their portion is God himself. It is a picture of what is true for every believer. Whatever else we may have or lack, our true inheritance is the Lord. Psalm 16, which you will read soon, will express the same idea: "The LORD is my chosen portion."

Second, Caleb's request is a remarkable story of long-term faithfulness. He is eighty-five years old, and he asks for the hardest land in the region, a hill country full of giants. He does not ask for retirement. Forty-five years earlier, he and Joshua had stood against the report of the other spies. He says, "I wholly followed the LORD my God." His strength is the same at eighty-five as at forty, and he is ready for the fight. The text marks him out as a model of perseverance. His faith did not fade with age. It deepened.

Third, the daughters of Zelophehad ask for what they are due. God had already promised in Numbers 27 that daughters could inherit when there were no sons, and now they remind Joshua. The story shows God's care for the vulnerable and the importance of claiming what has been promised.

But there are also shadows. Judah cannot drive out the Jebusites. Ephraim does not drive out the Canaanites at Gezer. These small notes of incomplete obedience foreshadow the book of Judges. The land is given, but Israel must take it. Many of God's gifts work this way: the inheritance is secure, but we must live into it. Paul says the same about our salvation, "work out your own salvation… for it is God who works in you" (Philippians 2:12-13).

STEP 5

Connection

The land promise is rooted in Genesis 12:7, 15:18-21, and 17:8. The Levites' inheritance appears in Numbers 18:20 and Deuteronomy 10:9. Caleb's story begins in Numbers 13-14. The daughters of Zelophehad first appear in Numbers 27 and 36. The "inheritance" language runs into the New Testament in Ephesians 1:11-14, Colossians 1:12, and 1 Peter 1:3-4, where believers have an imperishable inheritance kept in heaven.

STEP 6

Application

First, consider your inheritance. If you are in Christ, you have been given the Spirit as a guarantee of an inheritance that cannot fade. Let that anchor your view of what you do and do not have this week.

Second, learn from Caleb. Where might you be tempted to coast in your faith? Ask the Lord for the kind of faith that still asks for the hill country at eighty-five.

Third, notice that Israel's incomplete obedience begins in small places. Is there a "Gezer" in your life, an area of compromise you have chosen not to confront? Name it and ask for help.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for keeping his promises down to the last detail.

Ask for a wholehearted faith like Caleb's.

Ask him to show you where you have left territory unclaimed.

PSALM 16:5-6

DAY 209 · WEEK 30

Psalm 16

The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 16 slowly. It is a short psalm of trust, and it ties closely to the land inheritance you read about yesterday. David uses the language of boundary lines and allotments, but he applies it to God himself. Notice the shift in the last verses to the hope of life beyond death.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 16 is a "miktam" of David, a psalm of quiet confidence. It sits well with the reading in Joshua. After surveying tribal allotments and the Levites' inheritance in the LORD himself, we find David using the same language: "The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup." The psalm also has a surprising ending. Peter quotes it on the day of Pentecost as a prophecy of the resurrection of Christ (Acts 2:25-31), and Paul does the same in Acts 13. So it is a psalm of David's own trust in God, and also a psalm that points beyond David to the Messiah.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David prays, "Preserve me, O God, for in you I take refuge" (v. 1).
2. "I have no good apart from you" (v. 2).
3. He delights in the saints in the land, "the excellent ones" (v. 3).
4. Those who choose another god multiply their sorrows (v. 4).
5. "The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup; you hold my lot" (v. 5).
6. "The lines have fallen for me in pleasant places; indeed, I have a beautiful inheritance" (v. 6).

7. “I have set the LORD always before me; because he is at my right hand, I shall not be shaken” (v. 8).
8. “You will not abandon my soul to Sheol, or let your holy one see corruption” (v. 10).
9. “In your presence there is fullness of joy; at your right hand are pleasures forevermore” (v. 11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 16 is a profession of contentment. David has examined his life, and he discovers that everything good in it comes from God. “I have no good apart from you.” That is the first big claim. He then applies the language of the land to the Lord himself: “The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup; you hold my lot.” A “portion” is a share of an inheritance, a “cup” is what one is given to drink, and a “lot” is the allotment of land. David uses exactly the vocabulary of the chapters you just read in Joshua, and he applies it to God. God is not only the giver of the inheritance. He is the inheritance.

The effect is a settled gladness. “The lines have fallen for me in pleasant places.” It is the speech of someone who has stopped comparing his portion with others. He looks at what God has given, and he says it is beautiful. This is the opposite of covetousness. Those who run after other gods multiply their sorrows, because they chase a portion that cannot satisfy.

David also has a practice. “I have set the LORD always before me.” The posture is a conscious habit of living with God in view. And the result is stability: “Because he is at my right hand, I shall not be shaken.” A person who keeps God before his eyes finds that circumstances lose some of their power.

Then the psalm turns upward. “My flesh also dwells secure. For you will not abandon my soul to Sheol, or let your holy one see corruption.” David is confident that death will not have the last word. Peter explains in Acts 2 that David could not be speaking only of himself, for David died and his tomb is still known. He was speaking as a prophet of the resurrection of Christ, “the Holy One,” who did not see corruption. Jesus is the one for whom this psalm is perfectly true. His body was laid in a tomb, but it did not decay. And because he rose, those who are in him share the promise of verse 11: “You make known to me the path of life; in your presence there is fullness of joy; at your right hand are pleasures forevermore.”

STEP 5

Connection

The language of portion and lot draws on Numbers 18:20 and Joshua 13-19. Peter quotes verses 8-11 in Acts 2:25-28, and Paul quotes verse 10 in Acts 13:35. Psalm 73:25-26 expresses a similar delight in God as portion. The path of life recalls Proverbs 4 and Matthew 7:13-14, and the “fullness of joy” anticipates Revelation 21:3-4.

STEP 6

Application

Test your contentment. Where are you tempted to say, “If only I had…”? Pray through Psalm 16:5-6 and ask the Lord to make you glad in the portion he has given.

Practice setting the LORD before you. Choose one moment in each day, such as your commute or your lunch break, to pause and pray, “Lord, you are here.” See whether it changes how you handle that part of the day.

And give thanks for the resurrection. Because Christ was not abandoned to the grave, your own death will not be an abandonment either.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what it means that he is your chosen portion.
- Ask him to teach you contentment in him and to keep him always before you.
- Thank him for Christ’s resurrection and the hope it gives you.

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. This week you followed Israel through Jericho, Ai, Gibeon, and the northern campaign, and you read the long lists of tribal allotments. Today, rest in the one thing all these chapters point to: God himself is the inheritance of his people. If you have time, reread Psalm 16.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup; you hold my lot. The lines have fallen for me in pleasant places; indeed, I have a beautiful inheritance."

PSALM 16:5-6

REST

Meditation

Psalm 16:5-6 takes the dry geography of this week's reading and turns it into worship.

"The LORD is my chosen portion and my cup." The Levites received no land, and the text said, "the LORD is their inheritance." David says the same of himself, and the New Testament says it of every believer. If you are in Christ, you have been given God. Not just his gifts, or his help, but himself.

"You hold my lot." A lot is something cast, and what falls is out of your hands. But David says that God holds it. Your circumstances, your family, your calling, and your seasons are not random. They are in the hand of one who loves you.

“The lines have fallen for me in pleasant places.” The boundary lines in Joshua were measured with cords. David looks at the lines of his life and calls them pleasant. This does not mean everything is easy. It means that the gift of God himself outweighs any other loss.

“Indeed, I have a beautiful inheritance.” This is a statement of gratitude. Say the verse aloud. Notice what you are tempted to compare. Then let the verse reorient you toward the one who holds you. Christ is the heir of all things, and in him you are a co-heir.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you saw what a faithful God does with a faithful people. You listened to the music of Psalm 66, which called you to shout for joy and recalled God’s testing. You watched Jericho fall without a siege and Israel stumble at Ai because of Achan’s hidden sin. You watched Joshua make a hasty treaty with Gibeon and see the sun stand still. You followed the northern campaign and the list of defeated kings, and then read the first of the great land allotments, with Caleb asking for his mountain at eighty-five and the daughters of Zelophehad claiming their inheritance. And you sang Psalm 16, where David calls the LORD his portion and his cup.

The week held two truths together: God is holy and judges sin, and he is also faithful and gives his people an inheritance.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where is God calling you to trust his power instead of your own resources? Jericho fell by faith and obedience, and Ai fell after sin was dealt with. Think about a situation you are tempted to handle by effort alone. What would it look like to pray first, and then obey?

How does Jesus fulfill what Joshua only began? Joshua led Israel into a land, but the land was partial and was lost. Jesus, whose name means the same thing, leads his people into a better inheritance that cannot fade. How does Hebrews 4:8-9 or Psalm 16:10-11 help you see the difference? What does it mean to you that the inheritance is secured by Christ’s resurrection?

What are you tempted to count as your portion apart from God? Money, status, comfort, relationships, or reputation can all quietly become what we live for. Name one and ask the Lord to teach you to say, “You are my portion.”

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he is your portion and that your lines have fallen in pleasant places.

Thank Jesus, the true Joshua, for winning an inheritance you could never earn.

Rest in him today.

DAY 211 · WEEK 31

Psalm 23

The LORD is my shepherd, rest and restoration

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 6 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 23. It is probably the most familiar psalm in the Bible, so read it as if for the first time. Slow down at each line. Notice the change from third person ("he") to second person ("you") in the middle of verse 4, as the psalm moves from talking about the shepherd to talking to him.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 23 comes at the beginning of this week as a reflection on the rest God gives. Israel is settling into the land, and the shepherd imagery of this psalm captures what the land of promise is meant to be: a place of green pastures and still waters under the care of a good shepherd. David, who wrote this psalm, was himself a shepherd boy before he was a king, so he knew what a shepherd's work involved. He uses it to describe the LORD's care. This psalm is often read at funerals, but it is a psalm for the living as much as for the dying. It is about what it means to lack nothing because of who God is.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The LORD is my shepherd; I shall not want" (v. 1).
2. He makes me lie down in green pastures and leads me beside still waters (v. 2).
3. "He restores my soul. He leads me in paths of righteousness for his name's sake" (v. 3).
4. "Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for you are with me" (v. 4).
5. The shepherd's "rod and staff" comfort me (v. 4).

6. “You prepare a table before me in the presence of my enemies; you anoint my head with oil; my cup overflows” (v. 5).
7. “Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life” (v. 6).
8. “I shall dwell in the house of the LORD forever” (v. 6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The opening line carries the whole psalm. “The LORD is my shepherd.” Everything that follows is an unpacking of what it means. “I shall not want” does not mean “I will get everything I desire.” It means “I will lack nothing I truly need, because I belong to him.” A shepherd takes responsibility for his sheep. He finds food, water, rest, and safety. Sheep can do none of this for themselves. They are among the most dependent animals, and David says that is a good thing, because the one who looks after us is the LORD.

Verses 2-3 describe the shepherd’s gentle care: green pastures, still waters, a restored soul. These are images of rest, a theme that fits the week well. The shepherd leads. The sheep follow. Note that the paths are “paths of righteousness for his name’s sake.” The shepherd guides his flock in the right way, and his reputation is tied to it. He will not lose those he has promised to keep.

Then comes the valley. David does not claim that the good shepherd leads only through pleasant places. There is a valley of deep darkness, and it is on the path. But look at what changes there. The language shifts in the middle of verse 4 from “he” to “you.” In the dark, David stops talking about God and starts talking to him. “You are with me.” That is the heart of the psalm. The comfort is not an absence of danger but the presence of the shepherd. His rod defends against predators, and his staff guides and rescues. The same tools that protect also comfort.

Verse 5 changes the metaphor from a shepherd to a host. The table is set “in the presence of my enemies.” God’s hospitality is not hidden from those who oppose us. He anoints and fills. The cup overflows. This is the language of extravagant welcome.

The last verse promises that goodness and mercy will pursue David, not just follow. The Hebrew verb is “chase.” All his days, God’s kindness is on his heels. And the final destination is the house of the LORD forever.

For Christians, the shepherd has a name. Jesus said, “I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep” (John 10:11). The psalm takes on its fullest meaning in him. He walked through the valley of death himself, so that when we pass through it, we find him already there.

STEP 5

Connection

The shepherd image is used of God in Genesis 48:15 and 49:24, and of Israel's leaders in Ezekiel 34, where God promises to shepherd his people himself. Jesus claims the title in John 10:1-18, and Hebrews 13:20 calls him "the great shepherd of the sheep." The table before enemies recalls the covenant meals of Exodus 24 and anticipates the Lord's Supper. Revelation 7:17 says the Lamb "will be their shepherd."

STEP 6

Application

Read this psalm aloud once today, slowly. Then tell the Lord one area of your life where you have been behaving like a sheep who thinks it must provide for itself. Hand it over.

If you are in a valley right now, notice the pronoun change. Try praying the second half of verse 4 in your own words: "You are with me." Say it out loud.

If you are in a season of green pastures, receive them with thanks. Don't rush past rest. Ask the Lord what he might be restoring in you.

Finally, ask who you could shepherd this week. A friend, a child, or a younger believer may need your presence. We carry the shepherd's care to others.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell the Lord what you lack, and what you need him to shepherd.
- Ask him to restore your soul, and to remind you he is with you in the dark valley.
- Thank Jesus, the good shepherd.

DAY 212 · WEEK 31

Joshua 18:1-19:51

The remaining tribal allotments, every tribe has a place

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 79 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 18:1-19:51. These chapters finish the distribution of the land. They begin with a gentle rebuke from Joshua, then describe how the remaining seven tribes receive their portions. Read for the shape of the story: the tabernacle is set up at Shiloh, and every tribe gets a place. Notice the last allotment, Joshua's own.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has taken much of the land, but seven tribes have not yet received their inheritance. The tabernacle has been set up at Shiloh, and the people seem to have settled into a comfortable pause. Joshua asks a sharp question: "How long will you put off going in to take possession of the land?" The solution is a survey. Three men from each tribe are sent out to write a description of the land in seven parts, and Joshua casts lots before the LORD at Shiloh to divide it. The chapter is, in a way, about the danger of delay. God has given the land. The question is whether the people will go and take it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The whole congregation assembles at Shiloh and sets up the tent of meeting there (18:1).
2. "There remained among the people of Israel seven tribes whose inheritance had not yet been apportioned" (18:2).
3. Joshua asks, "How long will you put off going in to take possession of the land, which the LORD, the God of your fathers, has given you?" (18:3).
4. Men are sent to survey the land and write a description in a book (18:4-9).
5. Joshua casts lots for them "before the LORD" (18:10).

6. Benjamin's territory lies between Judah and Joseph and includes Jerusalem (called Jebus) and Gibeon (18:11-28).

7. Simeon's inheritance is taken from within Judah's allotment, "for the portion of the tribe of Judah was too large for them" (19:9).

8. Last of all, Joshua is given the city he asked for, Timnath-serah, "and he rebuilt the city and settled in it" (19:49-50).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The tone of chapter 18 is surprising. After the dramatic scenes of Jericho and Ai, the narrator pauses to describe a sluggishness. Seven tribes have not claimed their land, and Joshua asks them why. The question "How long will you put off?" hints at laziness and fear. Some of the territory remained uncleared, and it may have seemed easier to stay at Shiloh near the tabernacle than to go out and face the Canaanites.

This is a familiar spiritual pattern. After a high season of obedience, we can drift into passivity. We feel that God has done enough, and we hesitate to claim what he has given. The promise has been made, but possessing the promise requires effort. Joshua's answer is not a rousing speech. It is a practical plan. He asks the tribes to choose surveyors, write down what they see, and bring it back. The act of describing the land makes the abstract concrete. Sometimes the first step to obedience is simply to look clearly at what God has set before us and write it down.

Then lots are cast "before the LORD" at Shiloh. The use of lots in the Old Testament expressed trust that God, not human cleverness or favoritism, determined the outcome (Proverbs 16:33). The allotments fit each tribe's size and were set by the sovereign God. No tribe was forgotten, and none was able to claim a better deal by pulling strings. Each could say, "This is what the LORD gave me."

The details of Benjamin's land hold a hint of the future. It includes Jerusalem, which will be the city of David and the temple, and Gibeon, where the tabernacle will later rest. Simeon receives land inside Judah, which is a gentle fulfillment of Jacob's prophecy in Genesis 49:7, that Simeon would be scattered in Israel.

The chapter ends with Joshua. The leader of Israel is the last to receive his portion, and he asks for a modest town in the hill country of Ephraim. He has served everyone else first. It is a quiet picture of humble leadership, and it echoes the pattern of the one who came "not to be served but to serve." Joshua's rebuilt city is a small sign that, in Christ, the servant is rewarded with rest.

STEP 5

Connection

Shiloh becomes the center of Israel's worship in Judges and 1 Samuel. The use of lots recalls Numbers 26:55 and Proverbs 16:33. Jacob's words on Simeon are in Genesis 49:5-7. The delay in possessing the promise parallels the call in Hebrews 4:11 to "strive to enter that rest" and anticipates 2 Peter 1:5-10. Joshua's service as the last to receive anticipates Mark 10:45.

STEP 6

Application

Is there an area where God has already given you something and you are still waiting at "Shiloh"? It might be a calling, a gift, a relationship, or a spiritual discipline. Ask yourself, "How long will I put off taking it?" Choose one small first step this week.

Try Joshua's method: look at it clearly, write it down, and make a plan. If you feel a sense of calling but no action, write a one-page description of what it would look like to pursue it.

Remember also that you have been given a portion. You do not need to compare it with anyone else's. Thank God for the specific place and work he has given you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have delayed or been passive in taking what God has given.
- Ask him to show you what he has already given you.
- Ask him for the courage to take hold of it.

JOSHUA 21:45

DAY 213 · WEEK 31

Joshua 20:1-22:34

Cities of refuge; Levitical cities; the eastern tribes' altar

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 20:1-22:34. Three episodes fill these chapters: the cities of refuge, the cities given to the Levites, and the near-disaster of the altar built by the eastern tribes. Read the cities of refuge with Hebrews 6:18 in mind, and read the altar story as a lesson in how God's people handle misunderstanding.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The land has been divided, and there are some important administrative matters left. God had commanded Moses to set up cities of refuge, places where someone who had killed another person accidentally could flee for protection from the avenger of blood. The Levites, who received no tribal territory, are given towns and pasturelands. And then the eastern tribes, Reuben, Gad, and half of Manasseh, who had helped the others conquer the land, are sent home. On the way, they build a large altar by the Jordan, and the rest of Israel prepares for civil war. The chapters show a nation learning to live in the land under God's law, and the dangers of misunderstanding within the covenant family.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Joshua to "appoint the cities of refuge, of which I spoke to you through Moses" (20:2).
2. A person who killed "without intent" could flee to a city of refuge and stand before the elders at the gate (20:3-6).
3. The six cities are spread across the land, three on each side of the Jordan (20:7-9).
4. The man could stay there until the death of the high priest who was in office at the time (20:6).

5. Forty-eight cities with pasturelands are given to the Levites (21:1-42).
6. "Not one word of all the good promises that the LORD had made to the house of Israel had failed; all came to pass" (21:45).
7. The eastern tribes build "an altar of imposing size" by the Jordan, and the western tribes gather at Shiloh "to go up against them in war" (22:10-12).
8. Phinehas leads a delegation, and the eastern tribes explain that the altar is a witness, not a place for sacrifice (22:21-29, 34).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The cities of refuge are an expression of both justice and mercy. The law required that a murderer be put to death, but it also recognized that not every killing is murder. If someone killed another by accident, the avenger of blood could still pursue him, and the refuge was there to protect him. The elders of the city would hear his case, and he would be shielded until a proper trial. And the release came with the death of the high priest. This is one of the most interesting details in the whole system. The high priest's death brings freedom for those who are confined. The author of Hebrews uses this kind of reasoning, because the death of our great high priest gives freedom to all who have fled to him for refuge. The six cities were also placed so that no one was too far from one. In Christ, the refuge is always near.

The Levite cities show God's care for those who serve him. They do not hold a block of land, but they live among every tribe, as teachers and priests, so that the whole nation would be reached. The summary in 21:43-45 is among the most important statements in the book. "Not one word of all the good promises that the LORD had made to the house of Israel had failed; all came to pass." The narrator pauses to record God's faithfulness. It is a statement that is both historic and prophetic, since the story of Judges will immediately show the tragic ways Israel fails. But God does not fail.

Chapter 22 is a drama of near catastrophe. The eastern tribes erect an altar, and the western tribes assume it is rebellion. They are ready to go to war, and they cite Peor and Achan as precedents. But first they send a delegation, led by Phinehas, who is a priest and the zealous son of Eleazar. The meeting is a model of conflict resolution. The delegates come with questions and with a genuine concern for the covenant. The eastern tribes reply by explaining their motive. They had feared that future generations of western Israel would say, "You have no portion in the LORD." The altar was built as a witness that they too belong to Israel. Phinehas and the leaders are satisfied, and the potential war is replaced by a blessing. The altar is named "Witness."

The lesson is twofold. Zeal for God must be married to listening. And the unity of God's people depends on honest communication. Division is often the result of assumptions. Many church conflicts could be avoided if believers followed the pattern of Phinehas, who went and asked before acting.

STEP 5

Connection

The law of refuge appears in Numbers 35 and Deuteronomy 19. Hebrews 6:18 speaks of those who "have fled for refuge" to lay hold of the hope in Christ. The Levite cities fulfill Numbers 35:1-8. Joshua 21:45 is echoed in 23:14 and 1 Kings 8:56. The earlier eastern tribes' agreement is in Numbers 32. The reference to Peor and Achan recalls Numbers 25 and Joshua 7. Matthew 18:15-20 gives a New Testament pattern for dealing with conflict.

STEP 6

Application

First, take refuge. If you feel guilt or fear, remember that Christ is a city of refuge for those who run to him. Take a specific burden to him today and rest there.

Second, consider whom you might be misjudging. Is there a person or a group you have assumed the worst about? Before acting, follow Phinehas: go and ask. Choose one relationship where a direct and gracious conversation could clear the air.

Third, receive the testimony of verse 45. Write it on a card: "Not one word of all the good promises that the LORD had made… had failed." Read it when you are tempted to doubt.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Run to Christ with your guilt, and tell him what it is.
- Ask him to make you quick to ask before you accuse.
- Thank him for being your city of refuge.

DAY 214 · WEEK 31

Joshua 23:1-24:33

Joshua's farewell; covenant renewal, choose this day

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 48 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Joshua 23:1-24:33. The book closes with two farewell speeches and a covenant ceremony. Read chapter 23 as an old man's pastoral warning, and chapter 24 as one of the great covenant renewals in the Bible. Note the question at the center: "Choose this day whom you will serve."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Joshua is old, and he knows he will die soon. Like Moses before him, he gathers Israel to give them final instructions. The first speech, in chapter 23, is to the leaders. It is a mixture of reminder and warning. The second, in chapter 24, takes place at Shechem, the place where God first gave Abraham the promise of the land, and where Israel had pronounced the blessings and curses. Joshua retells the story from Abraham to the present and then calls the people to a decision. This is the book's climax, and it explains what everything has been for. God has kept his promises. Will his people keep faith with him?

STEP 3

Observation

1. Joshua says, "You have seen all that the LORD your God has done… for it is the LORD your God who has fought for you" (23:3).
2. "Be very strong to keep and to do all that is written in the Book of the Law of Moses" (23:6).
3. He warns against intermarrying with the nations and serving their gods, for "they shall be a snare and a trap for you" (23:12-13).
4. At Shechem, Joshua recounts the history from Terah and Abraham, who "served other gods" beyond the River, up to the conquest (24:2-13).

5. “Now therefore fear the LORD and serve him in sincerity and in faithfulness. Put away the gods that your fathers served” (24:14).
6. “Choose this day whom you will serve… But as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD” (24:15).
7. The people say, “Far be it from us that we should forsake the LORD,” and Joshua replies, “You are not able to serve the LORD, for he is a holy God” (24:16-19).
8. Joshua sets up a stone as a witness, and the book ends with the burials of Joshua, Joseph’s bones, and Eleazar (24:26-33).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Joshua’s farewell has the weight of a last testament. He reminds the leaders that the victories were God’s: “it is the LORD your God who has fought for you.” Then he issues a conditional warning. If they cling to the LORD, the nations will be driven out. If they turn aside and join the nations, they will be a snare and a trap, and they will perish from the good land. The word “if” is a reminder that enjoying the inheritance requires faithfulness. The relationship is a covenant, and covenants have promises and responsibilities.

The scene at Shechem is the great moment. Joshua recites the history of salvation: God took Abraham from idolatrous Mesopotamia, gave him a family, delivered them from Egypt, defeated the Amorites, and gave them a land they did not labor for and cities they did not build. It is a summary of grace. Everything the people have is a gift. Then the “therefore” comes. Because God has done all this, fear him and serve him. Obedience in the Bible is always a response to grace.

Then the famous verse. “Choose this day whom you will serve.” It is not a neutral invitation. Joshua presents the options bluntly: the gods beyond the river, the gods of the Amorites, or the LORD. There is no fourth option of serving no one. Everyone worships something. Then he gives his own testimony: “But as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD.” The decision is personal and also household-wide. A leader’s faith carries weight in his family.

The people respond confidently, but Joshua’s next statement is startling: “You are not able to serve the LORD, for he is a holy God.” This is not discouragement but realism. The people are overconfident. They think they can serve God by their own resolution. Joshua knows that a holy God demands more than good intentions. The law cannot make anyone holy. This is the very question the New Testament will answer. God provides in Christ what the law demanded, and by his Spirit he writes the law on our hearts. We are not able. He is.

The covenant is renewed with a stone as witness. The book ends with burials, a note of closure. Joseph's bones, carried from Egypt for four hundred years, are finally laid to rest at Shechem. The promise made to him in Genesis 50:25 has been kept. And Joshua dies, called "the servant of the LORD," a title previously given only to Moses. The next book will show what happens when the leader is gone.

STEP 5

Connection

Joshua 24 echoes the covenant formats of Deuteronomy and the ancient suzerainty treaties. The history from Abraham to the conquest summarizes Genesis through Joshua. The burial of Joseph's bones fulfills Genesis 50:24-25 and Exodus 13:19. The warning about intermarriage recalls Deuteronomy 7:1-4. The inability to serve a holy God anticipates Romans 8:3, Hebrews 10, and Jeremiah 31. Jesus quotes the spirit of this choice in Matthew 6:24, "You cannot serve God and money."

STEP 6

Application

Take Joshua's question seriously: whom are you serving? Not in theory, but in practice. Look at where your time, money, and attention flow. Is there a "god" that has quietly taken a throne in your heart? Name it, and renounce it.

Make the household decision. If you have a spouse, children, or roommates, ask what "as for me and my house" might look like in practice: a shared meal and a prayer, a habit of reading Scripture together, a commitment to a church.

Finally, receive the sober words of verse 19. You are not able to serve God in your own strength. Say that honestly to him, and then rely on the Spirit and on Christ's righteousness to be what you cannot be on your own.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you choose today, and who you want to serve with.
- Ask him to show you any idols you still keep and to give strength to put them away.
- Pray for your household or those closest to you.

Judges 1:1-3:31

Incomplete conquest; the cycle begins; the first judges

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 81 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 1:1-3:31. This is the longest reading of the week, and it introduces a new era. Notice how the book begins by mirroring Joshua, then slowly shows decline. Pay special attention to 2:6-3:6, which gives the key to the whole book, and to the stories of Othniel, Ehud, and Shamgar.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Joshua is dead, and a whole generation passes. The book of Judges tells what happens next. It covers roughly three hundred years, from the death of Joshua to just before the monarchy, and it is a dark and honest account. Israel has the land but not the faithfulness to keep it. The opening chapter reports tribe-by-tribe incomplete conquest. The next chapters explain why: Israel's failure to drive out the nations and its habit of worshiping their gods. The book then introduces a repeating pattern that will shape every story to come. This is the most important thing to grasp as you start Judges. The stories are not about heroes. They are about a people who keep forgetting, and a God who keeps saving.

STEP 3

Observation

1. After Joshua's death, Israel asks the LORD, "Who shall go up first for us against the Canaanites?" and the LORD says Judah (1:1-2).
2. The first chapter lists repeated failures: "did not drive out" appears again and again (1:19, 21, 27-33).
3. The angel of the LORD at Bochim rebukes Israel for making covenants with the inhabitants and not breaking down their altars (2:1-5).

4. “There arose another generation after them who did not know the LORD or the work that he had done for Israel” (2:10).
5. Israel “did what was evil in the sight of the LORD and served the Baals” (2:11).
6. The pattern: sin, oppression, cry for help, deliverance by a judge, rest, then relapse (2:11-19).
7. Othniel, Caleb’s nephew, delivers Israel and the land has rest forty years (3:7-11).
8. Ehud, a left-handed Benjaminite, kills the fat king Eglon (3:12-30). Shamgar strikes down six hundred Philistines with an oxgoad (3:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The book of Judges opens with an echo and a shadow. The question, “Who shall go up first for us?” mirrors the opening of Joshua, and God’s answer is Judah, just as Genesis 49 would suggest. For a few verses, it seems the conquest will continue. But the language quickly changes. “Did not drive out.” This phrase becomes the drumbeat of the chapter, a quiet record of compromise. The tribes of Benjamin, Manasseh, Ephraim, Zebulun, Asher, Naphtali, and Dan each fail to dislodge the Canaanites. The theme is partial obedience. Israel is not rebelling openly, but it is settling for less than God had commanded.

The angel of the LORD arrives at Bochim, “the weepers,” and gives the reason. Israel had made treaties with the people of the land and left their altars standing. They were warned. The consequences are described: the nations will become thorns and their gods a snare. The people weep, and offer a sacrifice, but there is no real repentance. This will be a pattern.

The center of the section is 2:6-3:6, which is the theological preface to the whole book. The generation of Joshua dies, and another arises that “did not know the LORD or the work that he had done.” This is one of the saddest sentences in the Bible. The faith was not handed down. Joshua had built the memorial stones, but the story was not told. Then the cycle begins. Israel does evil, God gives them into the hands of oppressors, they cry out, and God raises up a judge to save them. But when the judge dies, the people go back, and they do so even worse than their fathers. The pattern is a spiral downward.

It is important to see that the judges are not moral exemplars. They are “saviors” whom God raises up, flawed and often surprising. Othniel is the one clean example, a faithful man from Caleb’s family. Ehud is a trickster who uses his left hand and a hidden blade. Shamgar is a rough farmer with an oxgoad. The point is not their virtue but God’s compassion. Judges 2:18 says, “the LORD was moved to pity by their groaning.” God saves not because Israel deserves it but because he is merciful.

Why does God leave some nations in the land? Judges 2:22 and 3:1-4 say it was to test Israel, to see whether they would keep the way of the LORD, and to teach war to the generations who had not known it. The testing exposes the heart. And it creates a longing. If these saviors are so flawed and the people so fickle, we begin to ask for a better savior and a king who will truly lead. Judges is the book that makes the reader long for Christ.

STEP 5

Connection

The failure to drive out the nations contradicts Deuteronomy 7:1-6 and Joshua 23:12-13. The loss of memory in 2:10 contrasts with Deuteronomy 6:4-9, 20-25. The cycle pattern echoes Leviticus 26 and Deuteronomy 28. Othniel's story ties back to Joshua 15:16-19. The repeated "cry out" and God's pity recall Exodus 2:23-25. The judges anticipate the greater Savior of Luke 1:68-75.

STEP 6

Application

First, consider the failure to pass on the faith. If you have children, grandchildren, or others you are discipling, ask what you are doing to tell them what God has done. Plan one concrete step this week, such as sharing a testimony or reading a psalm together.

Second, examine your own cycle. We all have patterns: sin, consequences, a cry for help, forgiveness, and, too often, a return. Where do you see this? Ask the Lord to help you move from regret to repentance and from repentance to a changed life.

Third, take comfort in God's pity. He was "moved to pity by their groaning." He still is. Bring your groaning to him without hiding it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess partial obedience and a short memory, as you see them in your own heart.

Ask him to teach you to tell the next generation what he has done.

Thank him that he is moved to pity by his people's groaning.

DAY 216 · WEEK 31

Judges 4:1-5:31

Deborah and Barak; the song of Deborah

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 57 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 4:1-5:31. The reading includes the story of Deborah and Barak in prose (chapter 4) and a poem of victory (chapter 5). Notice the two women, Deborah and Jael, who play central roles in a book that is otherwise dominated by men. Read the Song of Deborah aloud, if you can.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The cycle of Judges continues. After Ehud's rest, Israel again does evil, and God sells them into the hand of Jabin, a king of Canaan who reigns in Hazor, with a commander named Sisera and nine hundred iron chariots. For twenty years he oppresses Israel. Then comes a remarkable judge, Deborah, a prophetess who sits under a palm tree and settles disputes. She summons Barak, and the story that follows is about courage, hesitation, and the surprising ways God works. The poem in chapter 5 is one of the oldest in the Bible. It celebrates the victory and also names who joined the battle and who stayed home.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Deborah is a prophetess and judge who holds court "under the palm of Deborah" in the hill country of Ephraim (4:4-5).
2. She tells Barak that the LORD commands him to gather ten thousand men to Mount Tabor, and promises to give Sisera into his hand (4:6-7).
3. Barak says, "If you will go with me, I will go, but if you will not go with me, I will not go" (4:8).
4. Deborah replies that the honor will go to a woman, and the LORD will sell Sisera into the hand of a woman (4:9).

5. “The LORD routed Sisera and all his chariots and all his army” (4:15).
6. Sisera flees on foot to the tent of Jael, wife of Heber the Kenite, who gives him milk, covers him, and drives a tent peg through his temple (4:17-21).
7. The Song of Deborah praises the LORD who “marched from Seir,” and notes that the stars fought from heaven and the river Kishon swept the enemy away (5:4-5, 20-21).
8. The song blesses Jael above women and curses Meroz for not coming to the help of the LORD (5:23-24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Deborah is one of the most striking figures in the book. In a world dominated by male warriors, God raises up a woman as a prophet and judge. She does not lead the army herself, but she delivers the word of the LORD, and her authority is recognized by Barak and the tribes. Her role should remind us that God is not bound by cultural expectations about whom he will use, and that the gifts of prophecy and wisdom come from him.

Barak’s hesitation is also instructive. God has already spoken, and the promise is clear. Yet Barak says he will not go without Deborah. His reluctance is not necessarily cowardice. It may show how much he depends on God’s presence through the prophet. But it costs him. The honor of the final blow will go to a woman. The story then contains a reversal: the conquering general of the iron chariots is brought down by a Kenite woman in a tent.

The battle itself is told briefly. God routs Sisera and his army, and the poem fills in the detail: the stars fought, and the river Kishon swept them away. The text gives the glory to God. The mighty chariots, the Canaanites’ most powerful weapon, are neutralized by a flood. Yet again, God shows that victory does not depend on military strength.

Jael’s act is both shocking and ambiguous. She welcomes a fleeing enemy with hospitality and then kills him in his sleep. The narrator does not condemn or praise her explicitly in chapter 4, but the song in chapter 5 blesses her. She has chosen sides, as an outsider who aligned herself with the people of God. Like Rahab, she is a non-Israelite who joins God’s side. We need not imitate her method. The point is that God uses unexpected people.

The Song of Deborah is a masterwork of praise. It begins with the LORD marching from Seir, a reminder of Sinai, and credits God with the whole victory. It lists the tribes who volunteered and those who stayed behind. Reuben “had great searchings of heart” but remained among the sheepfolds. Meroz is cursed for not coming “to the help of the LORD.” The song shows that the people of God are summoned to take part in his work, and neutrality is not an option.

The final line of the song is a prayer: “So may all your enemies perish, O LORD! But your friends be like the sun as he rises in his might.” The victory of God’s people is a picture of the final victory of Christ, the true seed of the woman who crushes the head of the serpent (Genesis 3:15). Sisera’s death by a woman’s hand is a small echo of that promise.

STEP 5

Connection

The defeat of Jabin and Hazor recalls Joshua 11. The Song of Deborah parallels the Song of Moses (Exodus 15) and Hannah’s song (1 Samuel 2). The imagery of the LORD marching from Seir is also in Deuteronomy 33:2 and Habakkuk 3:3-6. The crushing of the head echoes Genesis 3:15, and Mary’s Magnificat in Luke 1:46-55 follows the same pattern of reversal. Jael is mentioned in Judges 5 as “most blessed of women,” a phrase later applied to Mary in Luke 1:42.

STEP 6

Application

First, think about the ways you hesitate to obey. Like Barak, we may say yes to God, but only if some condition is met. Ask yourself whether you are waiting for something God has not promised before you obey.

Second, be willing to take part. The song blesses those who came and warns those who stayed behind. Is there a need in your church that you have been standing back from? Offer your time or talent in one specific way.

Third, learn from Deborah. She exercised her gift without apology and gave God the glory. Whatever your gifting, use it in service.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he uses unexpected people.
- Confess where you have hesitated to obey him.
- Ask him to help you join his work today.

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. This week you finished the book of Joshua and began Judges. You read about the land being divided, the cities of refuge, and Joshua's farewell, and then you watched the nation begin to unravel. Take a moment today to hold both together: a God who never fails, and a people who often do.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Not one word of all the good promises that the LORD had made to the house of Israel had failed; all came to pass."

JOSHUA 21:45

REST

Meditation

Joshua 21:45 is the hinge between two books. It closes the story of Joshua with a statement of God's perfect faithfulness, and it throws a bright light on the sadness of Judges that follows.

"Not one word." Not most, not nearly all. The promises made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and renewed to Moses and Joshua, had been kept in full. After centuries of slavery, wandering, and war, the record says nothing has failed.

"Of all the good promises." The word "good" reminds us that God's promises are not threats. They are gifts. He promised a land, rest, victory, and presence, and he gave them.

"That the LORD had made to the house of Israel." The promises were made to a people, and they were kept for a people. They were also kept for the world, because through this people came the Messiah.

“All came to pass.” The statement is complete. Whatever Israel did or did not do, the LORD was faithful.

This verse will be tested immediately by Judges, where Israel is unfaithful and suffers for it. But God does not fail even then. Paul’s words in 2 Corinthians 1:20 make the point: “All the promises of God find their Yes in him.” Every promise God has made is secured in Christ. Carry this verse into the week. When you wonder whether God will keep his word to you, remember that he has never failed.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you walked through a long arc. You sang Psalm 23 and rested in the shepherd. You read the remaining tribal allotments and Joshua’s rebuke to those who delayed possessing the land. You studied the cities of refuge, the cities of the Levites, and the near-war over the altar by the Jordan, and you saw how Phinehas resolved it by asking first. You read Joshua’s farewell at Shechem, with its great challenge, “Choose this day whom you will serve,” and the sober reminder that no one is able to serve a holy God in his own strength. Then you opened Judges. You saw the incomplete conquest, the generation that did not know the LORD, and the repeating cycle of sin and rescue. You met Othniel, Ehud, Shamgar, and then Deborah, Barak, and Jael, and heard the song of victory.

The week held a sharp contrast: God’s faithfulness is complete, and his people’s faithfulness is not.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

What is your “Shiloh”? Joshua asked the tribes how long they would put off taking what God had given. Is there something you have been waiting on, such as a step of obedience, a conversation, a calling, or a discipline? What is the first small step, and when will you take it?

How does Joshua’s statement, “You are not able to serve the LORD, for he is a holy God,” point you to Jesus? The people were confident they could keep the covenant, and they could not. Christ kept it perfectly on our behalf, and he gives his Spirit to write the law on our hearts. What changes for you when you stop trying to serve God in your own strength and start from what Christ has done?

Whom are you passing the faith on to? Judges 2:10 describes a generation that "did not know the LORD or the work that he had done." Think of one younger person in your life, such as a child, a niece, a friend, or a fellow church member. What is one story of God's faithfulness you could tell them this week?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that not one of his promises has failed.

Thank Christ in whom every promise is yes.

Confess any distrust, and rest in his faithfulness.

DAY 218 · WEEK 32

Psalm 46

God is our refuge and strength

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 46 aloud. It is a psalm of the Sons of Korah, and it was the inspiration for Luther's hymn "A Mighty Fortress." Read it three times: first for the images of chaos, second for the images of the city of God, and third for the repeated refrain, "The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our fortress."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the sobering opening of Judges, with its picture of a nation in decline, this psalm opens the week with a different note. It is about security in the middle of chaos. The psalm sets the shaking of the earth, the roaring of the seas, and the raging of nations against one unshakable fact: God is with his people. It was likely sung in Jerusalem, perhaps after a deliverance such as Sennacherib's defeat. Whatever its original setting, it makes a powerful companion to the book of Judges, where God's people were constantly in crisis and God was constantly their refuge.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble" (v. 1).
2. "Therefore we will not fear though the earth gives way, though the mountains be moved into the heart of the sea" (v. 2).
3. The waters "roar and foam" and the mountains "tremble at its swelling" (v. 3).
4. "There is a river whose streams make glad the city of God, the holy habitation of the Most High" (v. 4).
5. "God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved; God will help her when morning dawns" (v. 5).

6. “The nations rage, the kingdoms totter; he utters his voice, the earth melts” (v. 6).
7. The refrain: “The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our fortress” (vv. 7, 11).
8. “Be still, and know that I am God. I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth” (v. 10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a bold claim: God is not just a refuge from trouble but a “very present help in trouble.” The Hebrew phrase suggests that he is readily found. You do not have to search for him. In the moment of crisis, he is there. The consequence follows at once: “Therefore we will not fear.” Fear is not removed by changing circumstances but by a deeper fact.

The first stanza uses the language of cosmic catastrophe. Mountains fall into the sea, and waters roar. In the ancient world, the sea was the symbol of chaos, and the mountains were the symbol of stability. The psalm imagines both of these being undone. If anything could shake a believer, it would be this. Yet the declaration is, “we will not fear.” The point is not that disasters never come, but that they cannot unseat the God who is present with us.

The second stanza turns to the city of God. There is a river whose streams make it glad. This is striking, because Jerusalem had no river. The psalm is describing something spiritual: the presence of God is the river that nourishes his people. It echoes Eden’s river in Genesis 2 and anticipates the river of the water of life in Revelation 22. In the midst of this city, God dwells. “She shall not be moved.” While the mountains shake, the city stays secure, because God is in her.

The third stanza shifts to the nations and the end of war. The LORD speaks, and the earth melts. He breaks the bow and burns the chariots. The psalm ends with a call: “Be still, and know that I am God.” This is not a gentle invitation to quiet meditation, though it can include that. In context, it is a command to the raging nations to cease their fighting. “Be still” means “stop” or “let go.” But it is also a word to God’s people. When we are anxious, we are told to cease striving and acknowledge God’s rule. The knowledge of God’s sovereignty is the antidote to panic.

The refrain, “The LORD of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our fortress,” ties together the great and the small. He is the commander of heaven’s armies, and he is the God of Jacob, the God who chose a flawed man and bound himself to him. This is the God who stands with Israel in the book of Judges, and with the church today. His name for us in the New Testament is Immanuel, “God with us.”

STEP 5

Connection

The river echoes Genesis 2:10, Ezekiel 47, and Revelation 22:1-2. The deliverance of Jerusalem recalls Isaiah 36-37. The breaking of the bow is also promised in Hosea 2:18 and Zechariah 9:10. “The LORD of hosts is with us” prepares for Isaiah 7:14 and Matthew 1:23, “Immanuel.” Jesus stills the storm in Mark 4:35-41, which shows that he is the God of this psalm.

STEP 6

Application

Identify one area where fear has taken hold. Perhaps it is health, work, a family concern, or the news. Read verses 1-3 and say, “Therefore I will not fear.” Then speak the refrain aloud.

Practice stillness. Set a timer for five minutes today, and in silence, simply repeat “Be still, and know that I am God.” Notice what you are tempted to do instead.

Finally, praise God for his presence in the church. The city of God is not shaken, even when its members are. Thank him for the community he has given you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you are afraid of, and speak Psalm 46:1 over it.
- Ask him to quiet your striving and teach you to be still.
- Thank him that in Christ he is with you.

ZECHARIAH 4:6

DAY 219 · WEEK 32

Psalm 76

In Judah God is known, the God who breaks bows

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 76. It is a short song of victory that celebrates God's defeat of his enemies in Jerusalem. It is thought to be connected to the deliverance of the city from Sennacherib, and it ties naturally with Psalm 46. Notice the movement from God's dwelling place to his judgment of the earth.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

A psalm of Asaph, Psalm 76 sits alongside Psalm 46 as a song of Zion. Both celebrate God's protection of his city and his power over the nations. This psalm is slightly different, though. It concentrates on the character of God as a warrior and a judge. "In Judah God is known; his name is great in Israel." It is a reminder that the God of Israel is not just a tribal deity but the one who breaks weapons and brings kings low. For a church reading Judges, it is a statement that no oppressor, no matter how strong, can ultimately withstand him.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In Judah God is known; his name is great in Israel" (v. 1).
2. "His abode has been established in Salem, his dwelling place in Zion" (v. 2).
3. "There he broke the flashing arrows, the shield, the sword, and the weapons of war" (v. 3).
4. God is "more majestic than the mountains full of prey" (v. 4).
5. "The stouthearted were stripped of their spoil; they sank into sleep; all the men of war were unable to use their hands" (v. 5).
6. "At your rebuke, O God of Jacob, both rider and horse lay stunned" (v. 6).

7. “You, you are to be feared! Who can stand before you when once your anger is roused?” (v. 7).

8. “You make the earth afraid and still, when God arose to establish judgment, to save all the humble of the earth” (vv. 8-9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 76 sings of a victory that no one on Israel’s side won. The weapons were broken. The warriors slept. The horse and rider lay stunned. There is little mention of Israel’s army, because the victory was God’s. The theme of divine warfare, which you saw throughout Joshua and Judges, is here turned into worship.

Notice the first verse. “In Judah God is known.” This is not just a statement of geography but a statement of revelation. God has made himself known in a particular people and a particular place. His dwelling in Salem, which is Jerusalem, was the center of Israel’s worship. It recalls Melchizedek, the priest-king of Salem in Genesis 14, whom you read about earlier. The city that would hold the temple was already associated with that mysterious priest.

The psalm’s depiction of God is both terrifying and comforting. He is “more majestic than the mountains full of prey.” This image suggests that all earthly powers, the predators of the world, are small compared to him. He is to be feared. “Who can stand before you when once your anger is roused?” The answer is no one. But the psalm’s purpose in saying this is salvation. Verse 9 says God arose to establish judgment “to save all the humble of the earth.” The anger that terrifies the proud is the same power that rescues the humble. For those who trust him, his might is a shelter.

The final stanza makes a surprising turn. Even the wrath of man shall praise him. God uses the rage of his enemies to display his glory, and what is left over he restrains. This is a sweeping statement of divine sovereignty. Even the wickedness of the wicked ends up serving the purposes of God. The cross is the ultimate example: the wrath of men against Christ was the means of salvation.

The psalm ends with a call to action. “Make your vows to the LORD your God and perform them.” Because God is the victorious judge, his people are to respond with worship and fidelity. And all around him are to bring gifts to “him who is to be feared.” The psalm has moved from the mountains to the nations to the lives of individual worshipers.

STEP 5

Connection

Salem links to Genesis 14:18 and Hebrews 7:1-2. Both Psalm 46 and Psalm 76 reflect the deliverance in Isaiah 37. The idea that God uses human wrath for his glory is seen in Genesis 50:20, Exodus 9:16, and Acts 4:27-28. The promise to save “the humble of the earth” echoes Psalm 37:11 and Matthew 5:5. Revelation 19 shows the final victory of the Lord over the nations.

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on whom you fear. If you are anxious about powerful people, institutions, or circumstances, read verse 7 aloud. The one who can stand before God is no one. And the one who trusts him need not fear anyone else.

Make a vow and keep it. The psalm ends with a call to fulfill vows to God. Think of a commitment you have made to him or to others, such as a promise to pray, to serve, or to give. Renew it and take one practical step.

Finally, trust that God can use even hostility for good. If you are facing opposition, ask him to bring praise from it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Stand in awe of God’s majesty, in your own words.
- Ask him to keep you from fearing anyone but him.
- Thank him that he saves the humble.

DAY 220 · WEEK 32

Judges 6:1-8:35

Gideon called; the fleece; the 300; victory and aftermath

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 98 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 6:1-8:35. This is a long reading, so read it in three movements: Gideon's call and the fleece (chapter 6), the victory with three hundred men (chapter 7), and the aftermath (chapter 8). Keep in mind the verse that stands behind the story: "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has again done evil, and this time the Midianites oppress them so severely that the people hide in caves and mountain strongholds. Every harvest is stripped by swarms of raiders "like locusts." Into this misery God sends a prophet to remind Israel why they are suffering, and then he sends an angel to a farmer named Gideon, who is threshing wheat in a winepress to hide it from the Midianites. Gideon is not the obvious choice for a hero. The stories that follow show a man who is hesitant, who tests God, and who triumphs only because God shrinks his army to nothing. But they also show how quickly a victory can become a snare.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The angel of the LORD greets Gideon, "The LORD is with you, O mighty man of valor" (6:12), while Gideon is hiding.
2. Gideon objects, "My clan is the weakest in Manasseh, and I am the least in my father's house" (6:15).
3. He tears down his father's altar of Baal and Asherah by night, and is nicknamed Jerubbaal (6:25-32).

4. Gideon asks for a sign with the fleece, first wet with dew while the ground is dry, then the reverse (6:36-40).
5. God reduces the army from 32,000 to 10,000 to 300, “lest Israel boast over me” (7:2-8).
6. The 300 carry trumpets, empty jars, and torches, and shout, “For the LORD and for Gideon!” (7:16-20).
7. The Ephraimites complain that they were not called sooner, and Gideon soothes them with a gentle answer (8:1-3).
8. Gideon refuses the kingship but makes an ephod from the gold, which “became a snare to Gideon and to his house” (8:22-27).
9. After the victory, the land has rest for forty years, but when Gideon dies Israel again goes after the Baals (8:28-35).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The angel’s greeting is deliberately ironic. “The LORD is with you, O mighty man of valor.” Gideon is at the winepress, hiding. God speaks to who he will make him, not who he is now. This is a pattern in the Bible: God sees what he will do through the person, not just their present weakness. Gideon’s response is one of honest objection. “If the LORD is with us, why then has all this happened to us?” It is a real question, and God does not scold him for it. Instead, God answers with a promise: “I will be with you.”

Before Gideon can defeat the Midianites, he must deal with idolatry at home. God tells him to tear down his father’s altar to Baal, and Gideon does it at night, afraid of the people. It is a small act of faith with big consequences. The first battle is always internal. We cannot expect God to defeat our enemies while we shelter our idols.

The fleece story is often misread as a model for guidance. In fact, Gideon had already received a clear word from God, and the fleece shows his unbelief. Still, God graciously answers. The lesson is not that we should seek signs, but that God is patient with weak faith. The better way is to trust his word without needing proof.

The reduction of the army is the center of the story. God says that 32,000 is too many “lest Israel boast over me, saying, ‘My own hand has saved me.’” Twenty-two thousand leave out of fear, and the remaining 10,000 are reduced to 300 by their way of drinking water. The strategy makes the victory unmistakable. Three hundred men with trumpets, jars, and torches defeat a host “like locusts in abundance.” The point is not the cleverness of the plan but its absurdity. God’s power is made perfect in weakness, as Paul will say in 2 Corinthians 12:9.

But the story does not end in triumph. In chapter 8, Gideon deals with Ephraim wisely, but takes brutal revenge on the towns that refused him supplies. He refuses the crown with the right words, "The LORD will rule over you," but then asks for gold and makes an ephod. The ephod becomes an idol, and "all Israel whored after it there." The man who tore down Baal's altar ends by building a rival object of worship. Even the best of the judges fail. The people forget God as soon as Gideon dies. The tragedy shows that Israel's problem is not just a lack of leaders but a hardness of heart. It is a heart problem that no judge can fix.

STEP 5

Connection

The call of Gideon echoes Moses at the burning bush (Exodus 3-4). The shrinking army anticipates 1 Samuel 14:6 and 2 Chronicles 20. The smashing of the jars to reveal the light is echoed in 2 Corinthians 4:7, "we have this treasure in jars of clay." The ephod's failure recalls the golden calf of Exodus 32. Gideon appears in Hebrews 11:32 as a man of faith. The principle of strength through weakness is expressed in 1 Corinthians 1:27-29.

STEP 6

Application

Think of how God sees you. Gideon was addressed as a "mighty man of valor" while he was hiding. In Christ, you are called a saint, a child of God, and a new creation. Ask the Lord to help you live into what he says you are.

Examine the "ephod" risk. After a spiritual success, we can be tempted to build a monument to ourselves or to something that distracts from God. What victories in your life might become a snare if you start to trust them?

Finally, embrace your weakness. If you feel inadequate for what God has put before you, hear the point of the 300. He chooses small instruments so that the glory is his.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to tear down the idols in your house.

Thank him that he wins with the weak, and tell him where you feel weak.

Ask him to keep you from boasting in yourself.

DAY 221 · WEEK 32

Judges 9:1-10:18

Abimelech's treachery; the parable of the trees

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 72 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 9:1-10:18. This is one of the darkest stretches of the book. Abimelech, Gideon's son, murders his brothers and makes himself king. Read Jotham's parable of the trees carefully. It is a sharp piece of political satire with a prophetic punch.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Gideon has died, and Israel immediately returns to the Baals. Gideon's son by a concubine, Abimelech, sees an opportunity. He persuades the leaders of Shechem to make him king, and then he murders seventy of his half-brothers on a single stone. One brother, Jotham, escapes, and from the top of Mount Gerizim he tells a parable. This chapter is a warning about what happens when power is seized by a man with no fear of God. It is also a sign that Israel is sliding from a nation of tribes toward a kingdom, but toward the wrong kind of king. The chapter closes with two more brief judges, Tola and Jair, and another round of oppression.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Abimelech persuades his mother's family to say to the leaders of Shechem, "Which is better for you, that all seventy of the sons of Jerubbaal rule over you, or that one rule over you?" (9:2).
2. The leaders give him seventy pieces of silver from the temple of Baal-berith, and he hires worthless and reckless fellows (9:4).
3. He kills his seventy brothers "on one stone," but Jotham, the youngest, hides (9:5).
4. Jotham's parable: the olive tree, the fig tree, and the vine each refuse to rule, but the bramble agrees (9:7-15).

5. Jotham says, “let fire come out from Abimelech and devour the leaders of Shechem” (9:20).
6. “God sent an evil spirit between Abimelech and the leaders of Shechem” (9:23).
7. A woman drops a millstone on Abimelech’s head, and he asks his armor-bearer to kill him so that it will not be said a woman killed him (9:53-54).
8. “Thus God repaid the evil of Abimelech… and the evil of the men of Shechem God also repaid” (9:56-57).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Abimelech is a picture of the corruption of power. His name means “my father is king,” which says everything about his ambitions. He uses his family connections, the money from a pagan temple, and a gang of thugs to take control. The leaders of Shechem, who make him king, are complicit. They are willing to trade their loyalty to Jerubbaal’s family for a more convenient ruler, and they fund him from the treasury of Baal. The corruption is spiritual and political at once.

Jotham’s parable is the intellectual heart of the chapter. The trees go out to anoint a king. The olive tree, the fig tree, and the vine are all fruitful and useful, and each declines the offer, preferring to continue producing good things. Only the bramble, which produces nothing and is only good for burning, accepts. The sharp point is that those worth following have better things to do than seek power, and those who crave it are often the least fit. The bramble’s offer, “take refuge in my shade,” is absurd. A bramble offers no shade, and a fire may come from it.

The prophecy comes true. Within three years, God raises up strife between Abimelech and Shechem. The conspirators turn on each other, and both are destroyed. The narrator says plainly that God was repaying the evil done to the house of Gideon. The chapter is a case study in justice working itself out through the very sins people commit. Those who live by violence die by violence. Abimelech is killed by a millstone dropped from a tower by a woman, and his death is a bitter mockery of his pride.

The meaning is hardly cheerful, but it is clear. Human kingship without God is a bramble. It grasps, it burns, and it destroys. This sets the stage for a longer story. Israel will ask for a king in 1 Samuel, and the first, Saul, will be a disappointment. Only David will be a man after God’s own heart, and even he will fail. The longing for a true king runs through the whole Old Testament. The perfect king is the one who did not grasp at power but took the form of a servant. Philippians 2:5-8 describes the opposite of Abimelech. Christ, who had every right to rule, humbled himself and died. The true king is the true olive tree, the one who does not seek his own glory but gives himself.

Chapter 10 closes with a short note on two minor judges and then a statement of Israel's apostasy: they serve the Baals, the Ashtaroth, and the gods of seven nations. God finally says, "I will save you no more," but when they put away their foreign gods, "he became impatient over the misery of Israel." His compassion overcomes his anger.

STEP 5

Connection

Abimelech's story echoes Cain's murder of Abel (Genesis 4) and Absalom's rebellion (2 Samuel 15). The parable of the trees is a fable like Nathan's parable in 2 Samuel 12. The woman and the millstone appear again in 2 Samuel 11:21. Shechem was the place of the covenant in Joshua 24, and its fall here shows how far Israel has drifted. The true King contrasts with the bramble in Philippians 2:5-11 and Mark 10:42-45.

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself what drives your ambitions. Are there areas where you are grasping for position, recognition, or control? Pray over them, and ask the Lord to give you the humility of Christ.

Consider whom you follow. The leaders of Shechem chose a bramble because he was convenient. Do you hold your leaders, in church, work, and society, to the standard of Scripture? Pray for those in authority over you.

Finally, take comfort that God sees. Abimelech's crimes were hidden from earthly justice for a time, but not from God. Trust him to repay evil, and don't take revenge into your own hands.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep you from grasping for power.
- Ask him for the heart of the servant king.
- Pray for leaders who fear him.

DAY 222 · WEEK 32

Judges 11:1-12:15

Jephthah's vow; the Ephraimites

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 61 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 11:1-12:15. This reading includes the story of Jephthah, whose rash vow leads to tragedy, and a brief conflict with the Ephraimites. Read it slowly and with care. It is one of the hardest narratives in the book, and the text does not tell us how to feel about it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel is again oppressed, this time by the Ammonites. The elders of Gilead go to Jephthah, a mighty warrior who had been driven out by his half-brothers because his mother was a prostitute. They ask him to lead them. Jephthah negotiates, makes a speech in which he recounts Israel's history, and is empowered by the Spirit of the LORD. Then he makes a vow that will cost him dearly. The story reflects an Israel so far from the knowledge of God that even a judge, a man of faith in Hebrews 11, can act in ignorance and desperation. The chapter is a warning about the danger of vows made without thought.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Jephthah is the son of a prostitute, rejected by his brothers, and gathers "worthless fellows" around him (11:1-3).
2. The elders say, "Come and be our leader." Jephthah says, "Did you not hate me and drive me out of my father's house?" (11:6-7).
3. Jephthah recounts the history of Israel's journey to the Ammonite king, arguing that God, not Israel, took the land (11:12-28).
4. "Then the Spirit of the LORD was upon Jephthah" (11:29).

5. He vows: “If you will give the Ammonites into my hand, then whatever comes out from the doors of my house to meet me… shall be the LORD’s, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering” (11:30-31).
6. The LORD gives the victory, and his only child, a daughter, comes out to meet him with tambourines and dancing (11:34).
7. She says, “My father, you have opened your mouth to the LORD; do to me according to what has gone out of your mouth” (11:36).
8. The Ephraimites quarrel, and 42,000 are killed at the fords of the Jordan, identified by their failure to say “Shibboleth” (12:1-6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Jephthah’s story starts with rejection. He is an outcast, driven away by his family, and he becomes a leader of a band of raiders. When the elders come crawling to him in trouble, he shows both pride and shrewdness. He extracts a promise that, if he wins, he will be their head. There is a note of dignity in this. Yet his speech to the Ammonite king shows real knowledge of Israel’s history. Jephthah knows the Scriptures. He argues from Numbers and Deuteronomy, and he says, “Let the LORD, the Judge, decide.” This is not an ignorant man.

And yet he makes the vow. After the Spirit of the LORD comes upon him, he makes a vow that nobody asked for. The vow assumes that God needs to be bargained with. “If you will give… then I will offer.” The Spirit had already come. The victory was already promised. The vow shows insecurity, a desire to buy what God had freely offered. The vow is a tragic confusion of grace and transaction.

The question of what happened to his daughter is debated. Some interpreters argue that Jephthah did offer her as a burnt sacrifice, and the narrative’s grief supports that. Others suggest that she was given to lifelong service at the sanctuary, unmarried, which also explains the two-month mourning of her virginity. The text is ambiguous, but the heaviness is clear. In any reading, a rash vow has cost two lives, a father’s hope and a daughter’s future. The law of Moses condemned human sacrifice (Leviticus 18:21; Deuteronomy 12:31), and it also provided ways to redeem a vow (Leviticus 27). Jephthah either did not know them or did not trust them. Ignorance of the word of God leads to disaster.

What is the reader to take from this? The book of Judges never presents Jephthah as a model. He is listed in Hebrews 11 among those who by faith conquered kingdoms, but that does not mean everything he did was right. Faith can coexist with great failure. The book of Judges is showing how deep the confusion is in Israel when God’s word is not known. “Everyone did what was right in his own eyes.” Even those with real faith are bent by their culture.

The story of the Ephraimites at the Jordan fords is another sign of decay. The tribes are fighting each other, and 42,000 die over wounded pride. The word “Shibboleth” has become a symbol for any test that separates insiders from outsiders. Israel has a civil war within a few years of victory. Without a king, without knowing the LORD, the unity of the nation is falling apart.

STEP 5

Connection

The law about vows is in Numbers 30, Leviticus 27, and Deuteronomy 23:21-23, and Ecclesiastes 5:2-5 warns against rash vows. The prohibition of child sacrifice is in Leviticus 18:21 and Deuteronomy 18:10. Jephthah is named in Hebrews 11:32 and 1 Samuel 12:11. The pattern of an outcast who rescues his people anticipates Joseph and David, and ultimately Christ, who was rejected by his own (John 1:11). Abraham’s willingness to offer Isaac (Genesis 22) contrasts with God’s provision of a substitute.

STEP 6

Application

First, be careful with promises to God. Do not bargain with him as though he needs persuasion. He has already given what is best in Christ. Consider whether you have made commitments in a rush of emotion that you now need to bring honestly to him.

Second, study God’s word so you are not led by guesswork. Jephthah’s tragedy came in part from not knowing, or not trusting, what God had said. Choose a book of the Bible to read slowly over the next month.

Third, grieve with the daughter. The text invites sorrow. Pray for those in your life who have suffered because of a leader’s foolishness, and ask God to bring justice and healing.

Finally, rejoice that God did not require a human sacrifice. Instead, he provided his own Son.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Pray for those who suffer from foolish vows and ignorance of God’s word.

Thank God that you do not need to bargain, because he gave his own Son.

Ask him to teach you to know him.

DAY 223 · WEEK 32

Judges 13:1-14:20

Samson's birth; his Philistine wife

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 45 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 13:1-14:20. The reading introduces Samson, the most famous and the most troubling of the judges. As you read, notice how the story starts with a promising birth and a faithful couple, and slowly turns into a man ruled by his appetites. Keep in mind that his strength is a gift of the Spirit and not of his muscles.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel has done evil again, and this time the oppressor is the Philistines, who will remain a threat until the time of David. There is a significant difference from the earlier cycles. This time, Israel does not cry out to the LORD. The text does not mention any repentance. God acts on his own initiative. He sends the angel of the LORD to a barren woman in the tribe of Dan, the wife of Manoah, and announces the birth of a son who will begin to save Israel. The stories of Samson open with a miracle birth, but they will end in blindness and death. Samson is a figure of tragic gift: a man consecrated to God from the womb who lives like everyone else.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The people of Israel again did what was evil in the sight of the LORD, and the LORD gave them into the hand of the Philistines forty years" (13:1).
2. The angel of the LORD appears to Manoah's barren wife and says she will conceive a son who will be a Nazirite "from the womb" (13:3-5).
3. The boy is to have no razor on his head and not to drink wine, and he "shall begin to save Israel from the hand of the Philistines" (13:5).

4. Manoah prays for the angel to return, and the angel ascends in the flame of the altar (13:8-20).
5. Manoah says, "We shall surely die, for we have seen God," and his wife reasons that if the LORD wanted to kill them, he would not have accepted their offering (13:22-23).
6. "The boy grew, and the LORD blessed him. And the Spirit of the LORD began to stir him" (13:24-25).
7. Samson demands a Philistine wife: "Get her for me, for she is right in my eyes" (14:3).
8. The text says that this "was from the LORD, for he was seeking an opportunity against the Philistines" (14:4).
9. Samson kills a lion with his bare hands, poses a riddle, and loses his wedding bet through his wife's betrayal (14:5-20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The opening chapter is one of the most beautiful in the book. A barren woman, like Sarah, Rebekah, and Rachel, is visited by God. Like Hannah later and Elizabeth after her, she will bear a child through divine intervention. The pattern is familiar: God overcomes human inability to bring salvation. The angel's instructions emphasize that the boy is to be set apart from birth. The Nazirite vow, described in Numbers 6, included abstaining from wine, avoiding contact with the dead, and leaving the hair uncut. It was a visible sign of consecration.

Notice the contrast between Manoah and his wife. Manoah is fearful and cautious. His wife is perceptive and calm. When the angel ascends in the fire, Manoah despairs. His wife reasons from God's character: if he intended to destroy us, he would not have accepted our sacrifice or told us these things. Her theology is sound, and it is a model of how to reason from the grace of God. She understands that God's gifts are signs of his favor.

Then Samson grows up, and the Spirit begins to stir him, but the next scene is troubling. He sees a Philistine woman and demands, "Get her for me, for she is right in my eyes." This phrase is the key to the whole book. "Everyone did what was right in his own eyes." Samson is the embodiment of the age. The man consecrated to God is governed by what he sees. His parents object, and the text tells us they did not know that this was from the LORD, who was seeking an opportunity against the Philistines. This is a paradox: God uses Samson's sin to accomplish his purposes. It does not excuse Samson. It shows that God's plans are not thwarted by human weakness.

The lion episode reveals the source of his power: “the Spirit of the LORD rushed upon him.” His strength is not physical. It is a gift. Yet he does not tell his parents about the lion or the honey in its carcass, a hint that he has already violated his Nazirite vow by touching a carcass. His riddle at the wedding feast is built on a secret he cannot share, and he loses it to his wife’s tears. The story is a catalog of the ways a man can squander a gift.

Samson is a tragic figure, but he also points forward. His miraculous birth, his consecration, and his role as a deliverer anticipate Christ. But he is a shadow, not the substance. Where Samson indulged his appetites, Jesus resisted the tempter in the wilderness. Where Samson was blinded, Jesus gives sight to the blind. Where Samson finally pulled down a temple in death, Jesus’s death tore the veil of the temple and set people free.

STEP 5

Connection

The Nazirite vow is described in Numbers 6:1-21. The barren-mother pattern appears in Genesis 18, 25, 29, 1 Samuel 1, and Luke 1. The angel of the LORD who ascends in fire recalls Genesis 16 and Exodus 3. The Spirit rushing upon Samson is echoed in Judges 3:10, 6:34, and 11:29, and in 1 Samuel 10:6. Hebrews 11:32 includes Samson. Jesus’s birth, consecration, and victory over Satan contrast with Samson’s failures (Luke 1-4).

STEP 6

Application

First, let Manoah’s wife teach you to reason from God’s grace. When you are afraid, ask what God has already done. His gifts and promises are signs of his intention to bless.

Second, examine what is “right in your eyes.” Samson’s downfall began with what he saw. What do you look at, and what do you pursue because it looks good? Bring your desires before the Lord and ask for his wisdom.

Third, remember that your gifts are not your own. Samson’s strength came from the Spirit. Whatever abilities you have, thank God for them and use them for his purposes.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for gifts you did not earn.

Ask him to keep you from living by what is right in your own eyes.

Ask him for faithfulness in your calling.

THE READING

Today's reading

Today there is no new reading. This week you sang two psalms of God's power over the nations and followed the judges Gideon, Abimelech, Jephthah, and the opening of Samson's story. Rest today in the single truth that runs through all of it: God saves by his own strength, usually through weak instruments.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, says the LORD of hosts."

ZECHARIAH 4:6

REST

Meditation

Zechariah 4:6 comes from a later prophet speaking to a discouraged remnant, but it sums up what this week's readings have been saying.

"Not by might." The word refers to an army or strength in numbers. Gideon began with 32,000 and ended with 300. God does not need a big force. He often deliberately reduces ours so that we cannot take credit.

"Nor by power." The second word refers to individual strength or ability. Samson was the strongest man in Israel, and his strength led to his ruin. Power in our hands is dangerous because it can lead us to trust ourselves.

"But by my Spirit." This is the center. God works through the Spirit, who rushed upon Gideon and stirred Samson. The Spirit is not a force we control but the presence of God himself, accomplishing what we cannot.

“Says the LORD of hosts.” The speaker is the commander of the armies of heaven. His word has the authority of the one who rules all.

For the Christian, this verse is a daily corrective. We are tempted to evaluate our usefulness by our abilities, our resources, or our results. The verse reminds us that God’s work is done by his Spirit, who lives in every believer. Our task is to depend, to obey, and to leave the results to him. Memorize the verse and carry it into whatever feels too big this week.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began with Psalm 46 and Psalm 76, two songs of Zion that celebrate God’s power over chaos and the nations. You heard the command, “Be still, and know that I am God.” Then you read the great cycle of judges. You followed Gideon from the winepress to the 300 and saw how a victory became a snare. You read about Abimelech, the bramble king, whose reign ended with a millstone. You read the sad story of Jephthah’s rash vow and the civil war with Ephraim. And you met Samson, born to a barren woman and consecrated from the womb, yet already living by what was right in his own eyes.

The week showed a pattern: God keeps using weak and flawed people, because his power does not depend on theirs.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where are you tempted to rely on your own strength? Gideon’s army was reduced so that Israel could not boast. Think of an area of life, such as your work, parenting, ministry, or relationships, where you feel pressure to produce results. What would it look like to depend on the Spirit instead?

How does the failure of the judges point you to Christ? Every judge was flawed. Gideon made an idol, Jephthah made a rash vow, and Samson followed his eyes. The book leaves us longing for a perfect deliverer. How does Jesus fulfill what they could only hint at? What does it mean to you that he is both the true Judge and the one who was judged in your place?

What “bramble” offers might be tempting you? Jotham’s parable warns that those who crave power or comfort are often not fit to lead. Are there voices or goals in your life that promise shade but are likely to burn? Who in your life models the humility of the olive tree and the vine?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for saving through weak and flawed people.

Admit that you cannot save yourself, and rest in Jesus, the perfect deliverer.

Rest in his strength today.

DAY 225 · WEEK 33

Judges 15:1-16:31

Samson's exploits; Delilah; his death

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 51 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 15:1-16:31. These chapters finish the story of Samson, from his revenge on the Philistines through Delilah and his death in the temple of Dagon. Read slowly through chapter 16, and watch for the quiet sentence in verse 20: "he did not know that the LORD had left him."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Samson's wedding has ended in betrayal, and his violence against the Philistines escalates. In the stories you read today, he burns their fields with foxes, kills a thousand men with a donkey's jawbone, carries off the gates of Gaza, and then falls in love with Delilah. The text is brutally honest about a man with enormous gifts and no self-control. Samson never leads Israel into freedom, and the Philistines are not defeated in his lifetime. But the story ends with a surprising prayer. The man who lived by his eyes is blinded, humbled, and finally turns to the LORD. His last act is a sacrifice that begins the work God promised.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Samson burns the Philistines' grain with three hundred foxes and torches (15:4-5).
2. The men of Judah, afraid of the Philistines, bind Samson and hand him over; the Spirit rushes upon him, and he kills a thousand with the jawbone of a donkey (15:9-15).
3. Thirsty, Samson cries out to the LORD, and God splits a hollow place so that water comes out (15:18-19).
4. He visits a prostitute in Gaza and carries off the city gates on his shoulders (16:1-3).
5. "He loved a woman in the Valley of Sorek, whose name was Delilah" (16:4).

6. Delilah pressures him day after day until "his soul was vexed to death," and he tells her the secret of his hair (16:16-17).

7. "He did not know that the LORD had left him" (16:20). The Philistines gouge out his eyes and set him to grind at the mill.

8. Samson prays, "O Lord GOD, please remember me and please strengthen me only this once," and pulls down the temple, killing more in his death than in his life (16:28-30).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Samson is a study in contradictions. He is the Spirit-empowered deliverer, and the Spirit comes on him again and again. And yet his life is marked by appetite, revenge, and carelessness. The text never excuses him. Chapter 15 shows his motives to be personal grudges: "As they did to me, so have I done to them." He is not fighting a holy war for Israel. He is settling scores. Even when he is thirsty and cries out to God after a great victory, his prayer includes the complaint, "Shall I now die of thirst?" God still answers him with water. The mercy of God is bigger than Samson's failings.

Chapter 16 tells the tragedy of Delilah. Samson goes to Gaza for a prostitute and then falls in love with a woman who is paid to betray him. The details of the story are almost comic, three times he lies about the secret of his strength and three times she tries it out. And yet he keeps flirting with danger. He is like a man playing with fire, convinced he will not be burned. When Delilah's nagging wears him down, he tells her everything. The cutting of his hair is not magic. It is the final break of a Nazirite vow that he had long been violating. The real loss is described in verse 20: "he did not know that the LORD had left him." This is one of the most chilling sentences in the Bible. He wakes up and says, "I will go out as at other times." He assumes the power will be there. But it is gone.

The consequences are severe. The Philistines gouge out his eyes. The man who followed his eyes into sin is now blind. They put him in bronze shackles to grind at the mill, like an animal. And they celebrate in the temple of Dagon, praising their god for delivering Samson into their hands. This is the lowest point, because the name of the LORD is being mocked.

But the story has one more turn. Samson's hair begins to grow. In the dark, he turns to prayer. The prayer is short, and it is the first time in the story he calls on God as "Lord GOD" with personal appeal, asking to be remembered. His request is for vengeance, but it is also for the vindication of God's name. God answers. Samson pushes the pillars, and the temple falls. "So the dead whom he killed at his death were more than those he had killed during his life."

Samson is not a model of holiness. But he is a sign of God's grace. Hebrews 11:32 lists him among those commended for faith, which suggests that his last prayer was a genuine act of trust. The same grace reaches the worst of us. His story also points to a greater one: a Savior who is delivered to the enemy, bound, mocked, and who by his death destroys the power of those who hold his people captive. Jesus did what Samson only pictured.

STEP 5

Connection

Samson's story fits the pattern of Judges' downward spiral. The Nazirite vow is in Numbers 6. The loss of the Spirit echoes Saul in 1 Samuel 16:14. The temple of Dagon appears again in 1 Samuel 5. Hebrews 11:32 includes Samson, and Matthew 27:35-44 shows Jesus mocked by his captors and conquering through death. Colossians 2:15 and Hebrews 2:14-15 describe Christ's defeat of the powers through death.

STEP 6

Application

Take the warning of verse 20 seriously. Spiritual drift is often not dramatic. It happens in small compromises that dull our sensitivity until we do not notice that God's presence has become faint. Ask yourself honestly: when did you last feel a sense of God's nearness? What may have been dimming it?

Second, guard your eyes and your heart. Decide on one specific boundary this week that will protect you from a recurring temptation.

Third, take hope from Samson's last prayer. No matter how far you have fallen, God hears the cry of a humbled heart. Return to him today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God where you are gifted yet careless.

Ask him to open your eyes to your own heart before the drift goes further.

DAY 226 · WEEK 33

Psalm 130

Out of the depths I cry, hope in God's redeeming love

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 130 slowly. It is a Song of Ascents and one of the seven penitential psalms. It begins in the depths and ends with a hope for all Israel. Read it twice, once as a personal prayer of repentance and once as a word of encouragement to others.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the dark stories of the judges, this psalm is a breath of hope. It speaks out of the "depths" of sin and sorrow, and it finds its way upward by clinging to the character of God. The psalmist does not minimize his guilt. He says that if God marked iniquities, no one could stand. But with the LORD there is forgiveness, and that is why he is feared. For a people reading Judges, who cycle in rebellion and rescue, this psalm shows where the cycle can be broken: in a heart that waits on God's forgiveness and redeeming love. It is also the psalm Martin Luther loved most, and one that Christians have sung for centuries.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Out of the depths I cry to you, O LORD! O Lord, hear my voice!" (vv. 1-2).
2. "If you, O LORD, should mark iniquities, O Lord, who could stand?" (v. 3).
3. "But with you there is forgiveness, that you may be feared" (v. 4).
4. "I wait for the LORD, my soul waits, and in his word I hope" (v. 5).
5. The psalmist waits "more than watchmen for the morning" and repeats it for emphasis (v. 6).
6. The word "wait" occurs several times, and the whole psalm has the movement of hope.

7 “O Israel, hope in the LORD! For with the LORD there is steadfast love, and with him is plentiful redemption” (v. 7).

8 “And he will redeem Israel from all his iniquities” (v. 8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a cry from “the depths,” a word that suggests deep water. The psalmist is drowning, not in an external threat but in his own sin. He does not pretend. He knows that if God kept a ledger of sins, no one could stand. This is not hyperbole. It is the honest conclusion of anyone who has seen their heart. Romans 3:23 says, “All have sinned and fall short of the glory of God.” The psalmist’s rescue does not begin with a promise that he is better than he thinks. It begins with the character of God: “But with you there is forgiveness.”

Notice the surprising reason: “that you may be feared.” We might expect forgiveness to lead to relief or love, and it does. But here forgiveness leads to reverence. A God who forgives is more awesome than a God who merely punishes. Forgiveness shows that he is both holy enough to condemn and gracious enough to pardon. The proper response is awe, and not casual indifference. Those who think forgiveness is cheap have not understood what it cost.

The next verses describe waiting. The psalmist waits for the LORD, and he waits in the word. He does not simply hope in a vague sense. His hope rests on what God has said. Then he uses a vivid image: “more than watchmen for the morning.” A night watchman on the walls of a city looks for the dawn with intense longing. The first light means that the dangerous hours are over. The psalmist says his waiting is like that. He is sure the morning will come.

Then the psalm turns outward. The one who has found forgiveness cannot keep it private. “O Israel, hope in the LORD!” Personal experience leads to public testimony. The reasons given are “steadfast love” (the covenant faithfulness, hesed) and “plentiful redemption.” The word “plentiful” suggests that God’s supply of mercy is more than enough for the sins of his people. And the final verse is a promise: “he will redeem Israel from all his iniquities.” Not from some, but all.

For the Christian, this is the psalm of the cross. The “plentiful redemption” is purchased by the blood of Christ. “In him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of our trespasses, according to the riches of his grace” (Ephesians 1:7). The depths into which we sank were entered by Jesus himself, who cried out in the darkness so that we would not have to.

STEP 5

Connection

This is one of the seven penitential psalms (6, 32, 38, 51, 102, 130, 143). The theme of forgiveness appears in Exodus 34:6-7 and Psalm 103:8-12. The watchman image recalls Isaiah 21:11-12 and Habakkuk 2:1. Paul cites the language of redemption in Ephesians 1:7 and Titus 2:14. Luke 1:68-79 echoes the hope for Israel's redemption.

STEP 6

Application

Name your "depths" honestly. What sin, regret, or weight are you carrying? Pray verses 1-4 in your own words. Do not skip to the hope before you have said the truth.

Then practice the watchman's waiting. Choose one thing you are hoping for from God, and set aside five minutes a day this week to wait on him in his word. Read a short passage, and ask what it says about his character.

Finally, tell someone. The psalm moves from "I" to "Israel." Share one way God's forgiveness has changed you with a friend, a family member, or a member of your church.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Cry to God out of your own depths, saying what you need.
- Thank him that with him there is forgiveness.
- Wait for him in your own words, trusting his word.

DAY 227 · WEEK 33

Psalm 40:1-10

He drew me out of the pit, waiting and the new song

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 10 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 40:1-10. The psalm moves from a testimony of patient waiting to a new song and then to a public declaration. Read it as the testimony of someone who has been rescued and cannot keep quiet. You will meet this psalm again in the book of Hebrews, where it is heard as the voice of Christ.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the despair of Samson and the confession of Psalm 130, this psalm is the answer that follows a long wait. David has been in a pit, and God has lifted him out. This is a psalm of testimony and gratitude. Its opening verses are some of the best-loved in the Psalter. In this unit, we read it as a response to the story of Judges: when God's people cry out, he answers, and a new song follows. In the weeks ahead you will encounter it again in Hebrews, and see how its deeper meaning points to Christ.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I waited patiently for the LORD; he inclined to me and heard my cry" (v. 1).
2. "He drew me up from the pit of destruction, out of the miry bog, and set my feet upon a rock, making my steps secure" (v. 2).
3. "He put a new song in my mouth, a song of praise to our God" (v. 3).
4. "Many will see and fear, and put their trust in the LORD" (v. 3).
5. "Blessed is the man who makes the LORD his trust" (v. 4).
6. "Many, O LORD my God, are the wonders you have done, and your thoughts toward us" (v. 5).

7. “Sacrifice and offering you have not desired, but you have given me an open ear” (v. 6).
8. “I have told the glad news of deliverance in the great congregation; behold, I have not restrained my lips” (v. 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with the experience of waiting. “I waited patiently.” In Hebrew the phrase is intensive: “waiting, I waited.” It was a long season. The person who wrote this did not receive an instant answer. We often want God to rescue us quickly, and he may not. But the psalm says that in the waiting, he “inclined” to David and heard. The image is of someone bending down to hear a faint voice. God stoops to listen.

The pit is a vivid image of helplessness. The “miry bog” is a place where every effort to escape makes you sink deeper. David was unable to rescue himself. God lifted him out and set his feet on a rock. The contrast is physical: from sinking mud to solid stone. And then “making my steps secure.” The rescue is not only an escape but a new stability.

The new song is the natural response. God puts it in David’s mouth. The song is not a performance but a gift. And it has a purpose: “Many will see and fear, and put their trust in the LORD.” David’s testimony is meant to draw others in. A rescued person is a living witness.

Verses 6-8 are the center of the psalm. David says that sacrifice and offering were not the thing God ultimately desired. What he wanted was a hearing heart, an “open ear,” and a life of obedience from within. “I delight to do your will, O my God; your law is within my heart.” David’s gratitude is not expressed in religious activity but in wholehearted obedience. This does not abolish sacrifice. It places it in its proper context. Outward rituals without inward devotion are empty.

The last verses commit David to public testimony. He has not hidden God’s righteousness in his heart. He has told the great congregation about God’s faithfulness and salvation. A person rescued from a pit has something to say. In the book of Hebrews, the middle verses are heard in the voice of Christ, who came into the world to do the Father’s will. You will read that when you reach Hebrews 10. For now, rejoice that God hears, lifts, and gives a new song.

STEP 5

Connection

The pit imagery recalls Joseph in Genesis 37, and Jeremiah 38 and Jonah 2. The new song appears in Psalms 33:3, 96:1, 98:1, and Revelation 5:9. The priority of obedience over sacrifice is in 1 Samuel 15:22, Psalm 51:16-17, and Hosea 6:6. Hebrews 10:5-10 quotes verses 6-8 as the words of Christ. Romans 10:9-10 links heart faith with public confession.

STEP 6

Application

If you are in a season of waiting, take heart. Read verse 1 slowly. God bends down to hear. Bring a specific request to him today, and commit to waiting on him without a deadline.

If God has rescued you from something, write out your "new song." It might be a paragraph describing what he did. Share it with someone this week.

Finally, ask yourself where your obedience has become outward only. Pray verse 8, "I delight to do your will," and ask the Spirit to write God's law within your heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for drawing you out of a pit, and name one.
- Ask him to teach you to wait patiently and delight in his will.
- Ask him to give you a new song and someone to tell of it.

PSALM 130:7

DAY 228 · WEEK 33

Judges 17:1-18:31

Micah's idol; the Danites, religion as private property

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 44 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 17:1-18:31. These chapters begin the long appendix to the book of Judges, which shows how deeply Israel has fallen. Watch for the repeated phrase, "In those days there was no king in Israel. Everyone did what was right in his own eyes." Notice how religion becomes a personal convenience.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The stories of the judges are over, but the book is not. The last five chapters tell two stories that illustrate the moral and spiritual collapse of the nation. The first, which you read today, is about a man named Micah from the hill country of Ephraim, his stolen silver, his private shrine, and a wandering Levite who is hired as his priest. The tribe of Dan then passes through, steals the idol and the priest, and conquers a peaceful city. The two stories show religion without God, worship shaped to the worshiper's tastes, and a priesthood for hire. They are told with dry irony, and they explain why the book keeps saying that Israel needed a king.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Micah's mother has 1,100 pieces of silver stolen, and she pronounces a curse. When Micah confesses, she blesses him in the LORD's name (17:1-2).
2. She dedicates the silver to the LORD to make an idol, and Micah sets up a shrine with an ephod and household gods (17:3-5).
3. "In those days there was no king in Israel. Everyone did what was right in his own eyes" (17:6).

4. A young Levite from Bethlehem, looking for a place to live, agrees to be Micah's priest for ten pieces of silver a year (17:7-12).
5. Micah says, "Now I know that the LORD will prosper me, because I have a Levite as priest" (17:13).
6. The tribe of Dan, looking for land, sends spies, who consult the Levite and are told, "Your journey is under the eye of the LORD" (18:5-6).
7. The Danites steal Micah's idols and persuade the Levite to come with them: "Is it better for you to be priest to the house of one man, or to be priest to a tribe?" (18:19).
8. They destroy the peaceful city of Laish, rename it Dan, and set up the idol for themselves (18:27-31).
9. The author notes that the idol was there "all the time that the house of God was at Shiloh" (18:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Micah story is a careful satire. It begins with a theft and a curse, and the thief is the man's own son. The mother then blesses him in the LORD's name and dedicates the silver to the LORD, and promptly uses part of it to make an idol. Everything is mixed up. They use the name of the LORD, but they ignore his law. They speak of dedication, but they violate the second commandment. The household is spiritually confused, and nobody notices.

Micah's shrine is a religion of convenience. He has his own ephod, his own household gods, and his own priest. He even ordains his son. When a Levite from Bethlehem wanders by, Micah hires him, believing that he now has God's favor secured: "Now I know that the LORD will prosper me." He thinks he can buy blessing. The Levite, a man who should have been serving at the tabernacle and teaching the law, takes the job for ten pieces of silver a year and a suit of clothes. The point is that even those whose calling is to teach God's word have drifted.

The Danites arrive and complete the picture. They seek an inheritance, not trusting God to give them the land he had allotted. They consult the Levite, who gives a vague blessing: "Your journey is under the eye of the LORD." It is exactly what they want to hear. Then they take Micah's idol and the priest. When Micah protests, they threaten him. The Levite goes with them gladly. He finds the offer of a tribe more attractive than a household. His loyalty is to his own advancement.

The conquest of Laish makes the point. They attack a quiet city with no allies, "a people quiet and unsuspecting," and burn it. They then set up the idol and appoint the priest. The narrator adds a quiet closing note: all this happened while God's house was at Shiloh. The true worship was available, and they ignored it.

The whole story shows religion as private property. Each person designs his own faith. What is right in his own eyes becomes the standard, and even the name of the LORD is attached to it. This is not an ancient problem. It is the habit of our day: faith shaped to personal taste, clergy chosen by what they offer, and worship tuned to what feels right. The corrective is the word of God and a true king. Only Christ is the true priest and king, who cannot be bought and who does not tell us only what we want to hear.

STEP 5

Connection

The second commandment is in Exodus 20:4-6. The Levites' calling is in Numbers 18 and Deuteronomy 33:8-10. Dan's later role as one of the places where Jeroboam set up a golden calf appears in 1 Kings 12:28-30. The "no king" refrain recurs in Judges 18:1, 19:1, and 21:25. Compare the false teachers who say what people want to hear in 2 Timothy 4:3-4. Christ as the true priest and king appears in Hebrews 7.

STEP 6

Application

Test your own faith for "Micah's shrine." Are there areas where you have designed God to suit your preferences, such as a convenient view of sin, a comfortable church, or a vague spirituality? Ask the Lord to correct them with his word.

Think about who shapes your beliefs. Do you listen to those who tell you what you want to hear, or to those who tell you the truth? Seek out one person who will speak honestly.

Finally, thank God for the true priest who cannot be hired and the true king who rules in righteousness.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess where you have shaped God to your tastes.

Ask him to teach you to worship him as he is, in spirit and truth.

Thank Jesus, the true priest.

DAY 229 · WEEK 33

Judges 19:1-21:25

The Levite's concubine; civil war, "no king in Israel"

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 83 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Judges 19:1-21:25. This is the most disturbing section of the Bible, and it is meant to be. Read it carefully and prayerfully. Do not rush. The story is not an endorsement of what happens but a portrait of moral collapse. Pay attention to how the story echoes the sin of Sodom and to the closing verse of the book.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the second appendix to Judges, and it shows how far Israel has fallen. A Levite's concubine is raped and killed in Gibeah, a city of Benjamin, and the Levite sends her body in pieces throughout Israel to summon the tribes. The nation gathers in outrage, and a civil war follows that nearly wipes out the tribe of Benjamin. Then Israel, horrified by its own actions, tries to fix the problem by more violence and deceit. The story has no heroes. At its close, the author repeats his summary of the age: "In those days there was no king in Israel. Everyone did what was right in his own eyes." The book of Judges ends in darkness because it needs a king.

STEP 3

Observation

1. A Levite takes a concubine from Bethlehem, who goes back to her father's house, and the Levite goes to bring her back (19:1-3).
2. On the return journey, he refuses to lodge in Jebus, a foreign city, and chooses Gibeah, a city of Benjamin (19:11-15).
3. No one in Gibeah takes them in, until an old man from Ephraim offers hospitality (19:15-21).

4. Worthless men of the city surround the house and demand the Levite, as at Sodom, and the Levite sends out his concubine (19:22-25).
5. In the morning, the woman is found dead at the door, and the Levite cuts her body into twelve pieces and sends them throughout Israel (19:27-30).
6. All Israel assembles at Mizpah, and the tribe of Benjamin refuses to hand over the guilty men (20:1-13).
7. After a bloody civil war in which Israel loses tens of thousands in two defeats, Benjamin is almost destroyed, leaving 600 men (20:14-48).
8. Israel mourns, "Why has this happened in Israel, that today there should be one tribe lacking?" and then secures wives for the survivors by violence and deceit (21:1-23).
9. "In those days there was no king in Israel. Everyone did what was right in his own eyes" (21:25).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The story is a descent into hell. The introduction is subtle: a Levite and his concubine, and a long trip made reluctantly. The Levite refuses to stay in a foreign city and chooses an Israelite one, assuming his own people will be safer. His assumption is exactly wrong. The scene at Gibeah deliberately echoes Genesis 19, where the men of Sodom demanded to abuse Lot's guests. The author wants us to see that Gibeah, a city in Israel, has become Sodom. The people of God have taken on the character of the nations.

The horror reaches its peak in the Levite's act of sending out his concubine. The text tells it without comment, and the lack of comment is the comment. No one comes out well. The Levite is a coward, the old man is willing to sacrifice his own daughter and the concubine, and the men of the city are monsters. Later, the Levite's account to the tribes is self-serving, leaving out his own role. The narrator's silence invites us to be shocked. This is what happens when a people live without the restraint of God's word.

The war that follows is complicated. Israel is right to demand justice, but the way they pursue it is flawed. They ask God, "Shall we go up?" and he says yes, but they lose twice, with great casualties. Only after weeping and fasting before the LORD do they win. The text shows a nation seeking God only in crisis, and acting mostly on emotion. The destruction of Benjamin is nearly complete. Then, in chapter 21, the people suddenly realize that they have nearly erased a tribe. They have sworn not to give their daughters to Benjamin, and they cannot fix it without another sin. They attack Jabesh-gilead and kidnap young women from Shiloh. Each solution produces a new crime. The vows, the violence, and the schemes are all expressions of a nation that has lost its moral compass.

The concluding verse is the book's thesis: no king, and everyone doing what is right in his own eyes. But note the quiet hope. Gibeah is Saul's hometown. Bethlehem is mentioned as the home of the Levite, and Bethlehem will be David's home. The book sets up the contrast between a king who fails and a king who shepherds. And behind both, the reader is meant to long for a king who is truly righteous.

Christians read this story as a call to see the depth of sin and the need for a Savior. If this is what human beings do when left to their own judgment, then law and good intentions are not enough. We need a new heart and a true king. The gospel is not a better idea. It is rescue from a disaster we cannot fix. Only Christ, who was himself handed over to wicked men, can heal what Judges 19-21 reveals.

STEP 5

Connection

The scene at Gibeah echoes Genesis 19 (Sodom). The cut body parts recall Saul's summons in 1 Samuel 11:7. Gibeah was Saul's hometown (1 Samuel 10:26). The refrain "no king" prepares for 1 Samuel 8. Hosea 9:9 and 10:9 refer to "the days of Gibeah" as a byword for corruption. Jesus, handed over to wicked men, is the true suffering king (Matthew 26-27). Romans 3:10-18 describes the universal reach of sin.

STEP 6

Application

Do not look away from this story. Let it increase your sense of what sin does and what Christ saves us from. Spend time in prayer for those who suffer sexual violence and abuse in our own day. Ask the Lord what you can do to protect the vulnerable, such as supporting a ministry, listening to someone's story, or speaking up.

Second, ask where "what is right in your own eyes" influences your decisions. Choose a recent decision and check it against Scripture. Was it guided by God's word or by your own reasoning?

Third, let the story deepen your longing for the true king. Pray, "Come, Lord Jesus," and mean it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Pray for those who suffer violence and betrayal.

Confess where you do what is right in your own eyes.

Pray for Christ's reign to be real in your life and in the church.

PSALM 130:7

DAY 230 · WEEK 33

Ruth 1:1-2:23

Ruth's loyalty; arriving in Bethlehem; Boaz introduced

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 44 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ruth 1:1-2:23. After the darkness of Judges, the book of Ruth is a bright point of light. The story begins with famine and death, and ends with a field of barley and a kind landowner. Read it as a short story, paying attention to the characters and to the quiet working of God's providence.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The book of Ruth is set "in the days when the judges ruled." This is the same dark era, and yet the story is of ordinary faithfulness. A family from Bethlehem, whose name means "house of bread," leaves because of a famine and goes to Moab. There, the father and both sons die, leaving three widows. Naomi decides to return to Bethlehem, and her Moabite daughter-in-law Ruth refuses to leave her. The two women arrive in Bethlehem as the barley harvest begins. By chapter 2, Ruth is gleaning in the field of a man named Boaz. The narrator is quietly showing that even in the worst of times, God has not abandoned his people, and that he is working through unnoticed lives.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Elimelech, Naomi, and their two sons leave Bethlehem for Moab because of famine (1:1-2).
2. Elimelech dies, and the sons marry Moabite women, Orpah and Ruth, and then die too (1:3-5).
3. Naomi hears that "the LORD had visited his people and given them food" and decides to return (1:6-7).

4. Orpah turns back, but Ruth clings to Naomi: “Your people shall be my people, and your God my God” (1:14-17).
5. Naomi tells the women of Bethlehem, “Call me Mara, for the Almighty has dealt very bitterly with me” (1:20).
6. They arrive “at the beginning of barley harvest” (1:22).
7. Ruth goes to glean and “happened to come to the part of the field belonging to Boaz” (2:3).
8. Boaz says, “The LORD repay you for what you have done, and a full reward be given you by the LORD, the God of Israel, under whose wings you have come to take refuge” (2:12).
9. Naomi says Boaz is “one of our redeemers” (2:20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The book opens with sorrow. A family leaves the land of promise for the land of Moab, a nation with a bitter history with Israel. The move seems rational, since there is food in Moab, but it leads to loss. In ten years, Naomi loses her husband and both sons. She returns to Bethlehem with nothing, convinced that the LORD has turned against her. “The hand of the LORD has gone out against me.” Her grief is real, and the text does not scold her. But the narrator slips in a quiet word: Ruth is with her.

Ruth’s vow is among the most famous speeches in the Bible. She is a Moabite, an outsider, with every reason to go home. Naomi tells her twice to leave. Instead she says, “Where you go I will go, and where you lodge I will lodge. Your people shall be my people, and your God my God.” It is a statement of covenant commitment, not only to a mother-in-law but to the God of Israel. Ruth has chosen to take refuge under the wings of the LORD. Like Rahab, she is a Gentile who joins the people of God by faith. The contrast with Orpah is instructive. Orpah’s decision is not evil, but it is the choice of the familiar. Ruth leaps into the unknown.

The return to Bethlehem is accompanied by honest grief. Naomi says to call her “Mara,” bitter. She says she went away full and has returned empty. But she is wrong on one count: she has Ruth, and the harvest has begun. The narrator marks the timing: “at the beginning of barley harvest.” God is already providing.

Chapter 2 introduces Boaz through a series of coincidences. Ruth “happened” to come to Boaz’s field. This is the narrator’s way of saying that God’s providence is at work in ordinary events, without any miracle. Boaz is generous. He notices Ruth, protects her, tells her to drink from the workers’ water jars, and makes sure extra grain is left for her. He has heard of her loyalty, and he asks that she be rewarded by the God "under whose wings you have come to take refuge." His blessing is also an unwitting prayer for himself, since he will become the answer to it.

Naomi's response is a turning point. When she hears that Ruth was in Boaz's field, her tone shifts: "Blessed be he by the LORD, whose kindness has not forsaken the living or the dead!" She sees that God has not forgotten her. And she identifies Boaz as one of their "redeemers," a close relative who has the right and duty to restore a family's fortunes. This is the hinge of the story. The word "redeemer" will carry the book to its conclusion and ultimately to Christ.

STEP 5

Connection

Moab's history with Israel is in Genesis 19:30-38, Numbers 22-25, and Deuteronomy 23:3-6. Ruth's loyalty parallels Abraham's call in Genesis 12. The gleaning laws are in Leviticus 19:9-10 and 23:22. The "wings" image is in Psalm 91:4 and Psalm 36:7. The Redeemer language appears in Leviticus 25:25 and Isaiah 41:14. Ruth is named in Matthew 1:5. Bethlehem anticipates Micah 5:2 and Luke 2:4-7.

STEP 6

Application

First, if you are in a season that feels like Naomi's, empty or bitter, be honest with God, but watch for the signs of his provision. The barley harvest was already beginning. Write down three ways you have seen his kindness in the last month.

Second, learn from Ruth's loyalty. Is there a person in your life who needs someone to stay beside them? Choose one way to show loyal love this week.

Third, look for the "Boaz" in your community. Kind and generous people are signs of God's care. Thank one of them today.

Finally, remember that you too have come to take refuge under the wings of the LORD, and the one under whose wings you shelter is Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he works in quiet ways even in dark times.

Ask him to open your eyes to his provision when you feel empty.

Ask him to teach you to take refuge under his wings.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"O Israel, hope in the LORD! For with the LORD there is steadfast love, and with him is plentiful redemption."

PSALM 130:7

REST

Meditation

Psalm 130:7 turns the week's darkness into hope. After the idols of Micah and the horrors of Gibeah, here is the word that tells us why God's people can keep going.

"O Israel, hope in the LORD!" This is a command and an invitation. The psalmist has been in the depths and has found his way up. Now he turns to the whole people and tells them to hope. Hope is not a feeling that arrives on its own. It is a decision to trust the one who has spoken.

"For with the LORD there is steadfast love." The Hebrew word is hesed, the covenant love that does not let go. It is the love Ruth showed to Naomi and the love God shows to his people. It does not depend on their performance. It is committed to them.

“And with him is plentiful redemption.” The word “plentiful” is a reminder that God’s supply is greater than our need. If your sin is great, his redemption is greater. The judges failed, and the people failed, but the redemption did not run out.

For the Christian, this verse points to Christ. “In him we have redemption through his blood” (Ephesians 1:7). The plentiful redemption has a name. Say the verse aloud, and carry it into any moment this week when you feel the weight of sin or the weariness of waiting. Hope in the LORD.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you saw both the lowest point of Israel’s history and the first light of recovery. You finished Samson’s story, with Delilah’s betrayal, the loss of his strength, and his last prayer. You sang Psalm 130, out of the depths, and Psalm 40, the testimony of one lifted from the pit. You read the stories of Micah’s private idol and the Danites’ theft, and you read the horror of Gibeah and the civil war that followed, ending with the line that explains it all: “In those days there was no king in Israel.” Then you turned to Ruth. You met a Moabite widow who clung to her mother-in-law and her mother-in-law’s God, a bitter Naomi who came home empty, and a generous Boaz in the barley field. The word “redeemer” appeared.

The week held a clear contrast: the nation of Israel did what was right in its own eyes, and a single woman chose to take refuge under the wings of the LORD.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Where do you see yourself in the cycle of Judges this week? Think about the pattern: forgetting God, hitting trouble, crying out, being rescued, and drifting again. Where are you in that cycle right now? What would it look like to break the pattern with a deeper, daily dependence on God?

How does the “plentiful redemption” of Psalm 130 find its fullest meaning in Jesus? Judges ends with a nation that needs a true king and a redeemer. Ruth introduces a kinsman-redeemer who will rescue a family. How does Christ, the greater king and the greater redeemer, answer what Judges leaves unresolved? What does it mean for you that your sin is not too big for his redemption?

Who is your “Ruth” or “Naomi”? Think about the people who have shown steadfast loyalty to you, and the people who need it from you. Is there a person in your life who is bitter, empty, or alone? What is one way you could stay with them this coming week?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for his steadfast love and plentiful redemption.

Thank him that he never stopped working in the dark days.

Rest in him today.

DAY 232 · WEEK 34

Ruth 3:1-4:22

The kinsman-redeemer; redemption; the Davidic lineage

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Reading · 41 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ruth 3:1-4:22. The story reaches its climax at the threshing floor and the city gate. Watch how Boaz acts as a redeemer, and how the chapter ends with a genealogy. That list of names is the point of the whole book.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The barley harvest is ending, and Naomi is thinking about Ruth's future. She devises a plan that is culturally daring: Ruth should go to the threshing floor at night and ask Boaz to act as the kinsman-redeemer. Boaz, who has already shown his generosity, is willing, but there is a closer relative who has the first right. Boaz goes to the city gate, the place of legal business, and settles the matter before ten elders. The story ends with a marriage, the birth of a son, and a genealogy that reaches to King David. For readers of Judges, this is a stunning turn: from "no king in Israel" to the line of the king.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Naomi says, "My daughter, should I not seek rest for you, that it may be well with you?" (3:1).
2. Ruth lies at Boaz's feet at night, and asks him to "spread your wings over your servant, for you are a redeemer" (3:9).
3. Boaz blesses her: "You have made your last kindness greater than the first" and calls her "a worthy woman" (3:10-11).
4. He tells her that there is a redeemer nearer than he, and promises to settle the matter that day (3:12-13).

5. At the gate, Boaz tells the nearer redeemer about the land of Elimelech, and the man says he will redeem it. When Boaz adds that he must also take Ruth, the man declines (4:1-6).
6. Boaz declares before the elders that he will redeem the property and marry Ruth "to perpetuate the name of the dead in his inheritance" (4:9-10).
7. The women say to Naomi, "Blessed be the LORD, who has not left you this day without a redeemer" (4:14).
8. The child Obed is born, and the book ends with a genealogy: Obed fathered Jesse, and Jesse fathered David (4:17-22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The scene at the threshing floor can be misunderstood by modern readers. Ruth's request, to "spread your wings over your servant," is a request for marriage and protection. The same word for "wings" was used by Boaz in chapter 2, when he prayed that Ruth would find refuge under the wings of the LORD. Now Ruth asks Boaz to be that refuge, and he is the answer to his own prayer. The scene is full of integrity. Boaz does not take advantage of the situation. He sends Ruth away before dawn to protect her reputation, and he deals with the legal question openly.

The core of the story is redemption. Under the law of Moses, a close relative could "redeem" a family member who had fallen into poverty by buying back land or marrying a widow to raise children in the dead man's name. The redeemer needed three things: he had to be a relative, he had to be able to pay, and he had to be willing. The nearer redeemer was a relative and was apparently able, but he was not willing when he learned the cost. Boaz is all three. He stands at the gate and takes on the burden of the family at personal cost.

Boaz's actions are a picture of Christ. He is a relative, close to those he redeems. He is able to pay the price. He is willing, even when it costs him. Jesus became our brother in flesh and blood (Hebrews 2:14-17) so that he could redeem us. He paid the price with his own blood (1 Peter 1:18-19), and he did so willingly. "For the joy that was set before him he endured the cross" (Hebrews 12:2). The story invites us to see ourselves in Ruth, a stranger who was brought in and given a name and a place.

The ending is a surprise. The women of Bethlehem celebrate with Naomi, and she who was empty is now full. The baby Obed is placed in her arms. And then the genealogy reveals the reason the story was preserved: Obed is the grandfather of David. The Moabite Ruth is the great-grandmother of Israel's greatest king. And Matthew's Gospel will continue the list: David is the ancestor of Jesus Christ. The story that began in famine and death ends with the line of the Messiah.

The book of Judges ended with the cry for a king. Ruth does not answer it directly, but it provides the beginning of the answer. God is working, in obscure fields and city gates, through obedient and ordinary people, to bring about the king. Even in the days of the judges, God was preparing the way.

STEP 5

Connection

The kinsman-redeemer laws are in Leviticus 25:25-55 and Deuteronomy 25:5-10. The theme of redemption appears in Job 19:25, Isaiah 41-54, and Galatians 4:4-5. Ruth, a Moabite, is named in Matthew 1:5, and Rahab too. The genealogy of Perez, Judah's son, recalls Genesis 38 and 49:8-12. David's line leads to Christ in Luke 1:32 and Romans 1:3.

STEP 6

Application

First, receive Boaz as a picture of Christ. He is near, able, and willing. Consider what that means for the debts you cannot pay: guilt, shame, and failure. Say aloud, "I have a Redeemer."

Second, reflect on Boaz's integrity. In a situation where he could have taken advantage, he acted honorably and openly. Where do you face a similar temptation? Choose to act with integrity this week.

Third, take heart from the genealogy. God's work is often hidden in ordinary lives. The faithfulness of one widow, one landowner, and one baby changed history. Ask the Lord to use your small acts of obedience for purposes you may never see.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank Jesus for being a redeemer who is near, able, and willing.
- Thank God for bringing a stranger into the line of the king, as he brought you in.
- Ask him to make you faithful in ordinary things.

DAY 233 · WEEK 34

Psalm 127; Psalm 128

Unless the LORD builds the house

Year 1 · Unit 8 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 127 and Psalm 128 together. They are Songs of Ascents, sung by pilgrims on the way to Jerusalem. Both are about the home. As you read, think of Ruth and Boaz, and of the house that God builds from unlikely beginnings.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the book of Ruth, these two psalms are a perfect pair. Both are short songs of the family, and both celebrate God's blessing on a household. Psalm 127 is attributed to Solomon, and it asserts that all human labor is vain unless the LORD is its builder. Psalm 128 describes the blessed family of the man who fears the LORD. Together, they answer the question raised by Judges and Ruth: what does a faithful household look like? It is not one that does what is right in its own eyes but one that depends on the LORD for its foundations.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Unless the LORD builds the house, those who build it labor in vain" (127:1).
2. "Unless the LORD watches over the city, the watchman stays awake in vain" (127:1).
3. "It is in vain that you rise up early and go late to rest, eating the bread of anxious toil; for he gives to his beloved sleep" (127:2).
4. "Behold, children are a heritage from the LORD, the fruit of the womb a reward" (127:3).
5. Children are "like arrows in the hand of a warrior" (127:4).
6. "Blessed is everyone who fears the LORD, who walks in his ways!" (128:1).
7. "You shall eat the fruit of the labor of your hands; you shall be blessed, and it shall be well with you" (128:2).

8. The wife is “like a fruitful vine” and the children “like olive shoots around your table” (128:3).

9. “May you see your children’s children! Peace be upon Israel!” (128:6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 127 begins with a challenge to human self-sufficiency. We build, guard, and work, and the psalm says that all of it is empty unless God is in it. This does not mean we should stop working. It means we should stop trusting our work as the thing that holds our lives together. A house built without God may look strong, but it stands on sand. A city guarded only by human watchfulness is vulnerable. The anxious toil that robs us of sleep is a sign that we have forgotten who builds the house.

The surprising line is verse 2: “for he gives to his beloved sleep.” The phrase has a double meaning. God gives sleep to those he loves, and the sleep itself is a gift, even a form of worship. When we lie down in peace, we declare that the world does not depend on us. This is a lesson that fits well with the rhythm of weekly rest in this plan. The one who built the world did not need our help and can run it while we sleep.

The psalm then turns to children, a “heritage from the LORD.” In an age that sometimes sees children as a burden or an accessory, the psalm says that they are a gift, a reward, and arrows in a warrior’s hand. The image of arrows suggests purpose and direction. Children are to be shaped and sent out. The phrase, “He shall not be put to shame when he speaks with his enemies in the gate,” suggests that a family with strong children is a secure family.

Psalm 128 follows with a picture of the blessed home. The man who fears the LORD and walks in his ways will eat the fruit of his labor. His wife will be like a fruitful vine in the heart of his house, and his children will be like olive shoots around his table. These are images of vitality and community. The family is gathered, nourished, and growing. The psalm does not promise that all believers will have this exact family or experience. It describes the blessing that flows from the fear of the LORD, which includes the quiet joys of home, work, and table.

The psalm ends with a prayer for the larger community: “The LORD bless you from Zion! May you see the prosperity of Jerusalem all the days of your life! May you see your children’s children!” The blessing of the family is tied to the blessing of the people of God. And Christians read this in light of the greater household that Christ has built, the church. Jesus said, “I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it” (Matthew 16:18). Unless the LORD builds the house, we labor in vain. And he is building it.

STEP 5

Connection

The “builder” language echoes Solomon’s building of the temple in 1 Kings 5-8 and Proverbs 24:3-4. The anxious toil theme is in Matthew 6:25-34. The fruitful vine and olive imagery appears in Deuteronomy 8:8, Psalm 52:8, and Hosea 14:5-7. The household blessing links to Ruth’s story and the birth of Obed. The church as a house is described in Ephesians 2:19-22 and 1 Peter 2:5.

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself where you are laboring in vain. Is there a project, a plan, or a worry that you are carrying as though it all depended on you? Read Psalm 127:1-2 aloud and give it to the Lord, naming it specifically.

Practice receiving sleep as a gift. Tonight, as you lie down, pray, “Lord, you hold everything, and I rest in you.”

If you are a parent, thank God for your children as a gift. If you are not, pray for the families in your church and look for a way to support one. Everyone has a part in the household of God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess anxious toil, and name what you are working for.
- Ask God to give you sleep as a gift and to build what you cannot.
- Pray for the families around you.

MEMORY

Unit Verse

> "But as for me and my house, we will serve the LORD."
> JOSHUA 24:15

REST

Meditation

Today there is no new reading. Today is for review and reflection on what you have learned in Unit 8.

Begin by memorizing the verse above if you have not already. Joshua 24:15 comes at the end of a long speech, and the whole of Judges shows what happens when it is forgotten. Say it aloud several times. Notice three things.

First, "But as for me." The sentence begins with a contrast. Others may choose differently. The gods of the Amorites and the gods beyond the river are all available. Joshua does not pretend there are no options, and he does not wait to see what the crowd decides. He makes a personal commitment.

Second, "and my house." The commitment extends to the household. Joshua takes responsibility for the spiritual direction of those under his care. This does not mean he can force their faith, but he will lead, teach, and set an example. The failure of the generation after Joshua is the failure to pass this on.

Third, "we will serve the LORD." The verb is "serve," meaning worship and obey. It is not a vague spirituality but a covenant loyalty. And the one served has a name: the LORD, who rescued Israel from Egypt and gave them the land. Joshua will go on to say that the people cannot do this in their own strength. We cannot either. The strength to serve is given by Christ. Pray this verse over your home, your relationships, and your calling.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 8 you have traveled through Joshua, Judges, and Ruth, the story of Israel's entry into the land and the long, painful years that followed. The unit began with God's commission to Joshua and the promise of his presence. You met Rahab, a Canaanite woman who confessed that the LORD is God, hung a scarlet cord, and was brought into the line of the Messiah. You watched the priests step into the Jordan, and you saw twelve stones piled up as a memorial. You saw Jericho fall by faith and obedience, and Israel stumble at Ai because of Achan's hidden sin. You read about the Gibeonite deception, the day the sun stood still, and the northern campaign.

You then studied the distribution of the land: Caleb's faithfulness at eighty-five, the Levites whose inheritance was the LORD himself, the survey of the remaining territory, the cities of refuge that point to Christ our refuge, and the near-war over the altar that was settled by Phinehas's careful inquiry. You heard Joshua's farewell and the great call, "Choose this day whom you will serve," along with the sober reminder that no one is able to serve a holy God in his own strength.

Judges opened with the incomplete conquest and the generation that did not know the LORD. You followed the repeating cycle of sin, oppression, cry, and rescue through Othniel, Ehud, Deborah and Barak, Gideon, Abimelech, Jephthah, and Samson. You saw how each judge was flawed, and how the nation slid toward idolatry and violence. The last chapters showed a people doing what was right in their own eyes, with the refrain "no king in Israel." Then Ruth lit a lamp in the dark: a Moabite widow who took refuge under the wings of the LORD, and a redeemer named Boaz who became the great-grandfather of King David.

Along the way, the Psalms gave you words for every season: the sea fleeing in Psalm 114, God's testing in Psalm 66, your portion in Psalm 16, the shepherd of Psalm 23, the refuge of Psalm 46, the warrior-judge of Psalm 76, the depths of Psalm 130, the new song of Psalm 40, and the house built by the LORD in Psalms 127 and 128.

The message of the unit is that God keeps his promises even when his people do not. The rest he gives is partial and fragile, and it points forward to a better Joshua, a better king, and a better Redeemer.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What does the conquest reveal about the holiness and justice of God?

Look back at Jericho, Achan, and the Gibeonites. The conquest was a judgment on nations whose sin had reached its full measure (Genesis 15:16), and it also showed that Israel itself was not exempt. Achan's sin brought judgment on Israel, and Rahab's faith brought rescue to a Canaanite. God's holiness is real, and his mercy reaches those who take refuge in him. Write a few sentences about how these chapters help you hold God's justice and mercy together. How does the cross, where judgment and mercy meet, bring this tension to its resolution?

What is the cycle in Judges, and how does it function as a mirror for our own hearts?

Recall the pattern: Israel did evil, God gave them into the hands of oppressors, they cried out, God raised up a deliverer, there was rest, and then they relapsed. The judges themselves were flawed, and the book ends in moral chaos. Look at your own life. Where do you see a similar pattern of forgetting, trouble, crying out, and rescue? How does the book make you long for a better deliverer? Write down how Christ breaks the cycle in a way the judges could not.

How does Rahab's story illustrate justification by faith?

Reread Joshua 2 and compare it with Hebrews 11:31 and James 2:25. Rahab was a Canaanite and a prostitute, outside the covenant, with no works to boast of. She heard what God had done, believed, and took refuge in the way of rescue he provided. The scarlet cord marked her house. She was saved by faith, and her actions showed her faith was real. Think about how her story anticipates the gospel. How does it clarify the relationship between faith, works, and the grace of God in Christ?

How does Boaz function as a kinsman-redeemer, and how does he point to Christ?

Return to Ruth 3-4. A redeemer had to be a relative, able to pay the price, and willing to do so. Boaz fulfilled all three. Jesus became our brother in flesh and blood, paid the price of his own life, and did so willingly, for the joy set before him. Consider your own story. What debts or burdens have you been unable to pay? Write a short prayer of thanks to Christ, your Redeemer, for what he has done on your behalf.

DAY 235 · WEEK 34

1 Samuel 1:1-2:36

Hannah's prayer; Samuel born and given; Eli's corrupt sons

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 80 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 1:1-2:36. A new book begins, and it starts with a barren woman at a sanctuary. Read Hannah's prayer in chapter 2 slowly, and notice how it looks far beyond her own situation.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The book of Judges ended with the words, "In those days there was no king in Israel. Everyone did what was right in his own eyes." The books of Samuel pick up the story at that low point. The priesthood is corrupt, the nation is scattered, and the ark is at Shiloh. 1 and 2 Samuel were originally one book, and they tell how Israel moved from the judges to the monarchy, and how God chose David. The story begins with one woman's prayer.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Elkanah has two wives. Peninnah has children, and Hannah, whom he loves, has none, and Peninnah provokes her (1:1-8).
2. Hannah prays in bitterness of soul and makes a vow: if God gives her a son, she will give him to the LORD all his life (1:10-11).
3. Eli the priest thinks she is drunk, then blesses her, and "her face was no longer sad" (1:12-18).
4. Samuel is born, and when he is weaned, Hannah brings him to Eli at Shiloh: "For this child I prayed" (1:20-28).
5. Hannah's song begins, "My heart exults in the LORD; my horn is exalted in the LORD" (2:1).

6. “There is none holy like the LORD: for there is none besides you; there is no rock like our God” (2:2).
7. “The LORD kills and brings to life… He raises up the poor from the dust” (2:6-8). The song ends with “his king” and “his anointed” (2:10).
8. Eli’s sons, Hophni and Phinehas, “were worthless men. They did not know the LORD” (2:12), and a man of God announces judgment on Eli’s house (2:27-36).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The opening scene is quiet and domestic, yet it sets the tone for the whole book. God works through the weak. Hannah is barren and humiliated. The priest misjudges her. The nation is corrupt. Yet from this pain comes the prophet who will anoint Israel’s kings. It echoes Sarah, Rebekah, and Rachel, the barren mothers of Genesis, and it shows that God’s plan often begins where human strength has run out.

Hannah’s prayer is honest and costly. She does not hide her bitterness. She pours out her soul before the LORD. And she vows to give back what she asks for. When Samuel is weaned, she keeps her vow, and she leaves her only son at the sanctuary. The gift is real, and it is received in joy: she worships rather than grieves.

Her song in chapter 2 is the theological center of the section, and it announces the theme of the whole book. The LORD reverses human expectation. The mighty are broken, the feeble gird on strength, the full hire themselves out for bread, the barren bear seven. “He raises up the poor from the dust.” The song ends by looking forward to “his king” and “his anointed.” Hannah does not yet know that Israel will have a king, but she already sees that God’s kingdom turns the world upside down.

Against this stands the failure of Eli’s house. His sons take the sacrificial meat by force and sleep with the women who serve at the tent. Eli rebukes them gently, but he does not restrain them. The prophecy against his house shows that God will not be mocked in his own sanctuary. He will raise up a faithful priest.

The chapter sets two houses side by side. One is a house of prayer and faith, and the other is a house of privilege and corruption. The LORD honors those who honor him, and those who despise him will be lightly esteemed.

STEP 5

Connection

Mary's Magnificat in Luke 1:46-55 echoes Hannah's song closely, with its themes of the mighty brought down and the lowly lifted up. Hannah is the first to speak of God's "anointed" (the Messiah) in the Bible. Jesus, like Samuel, grew in "favor with the LORD and also with man" (2:26; Luke 2:52). Paul says that "God chose what is foolish in the world to shame the wise" (1 Corinthians 1:27).

STEP 6

Application

Bring something you are bitter about to God honestly, as Hannah did.

Read Hannah's song aloud. Ask which line you most need to hear.

Think about what you have been given that you could dedicate back to God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray honestly about something you have been holding back from God.
- Thank him for lifting the poor from the dust.
- Ask him to help you give back to him what he has given.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 34

1 SAMUEL 2:2

DAY 236 · WEEK 34

1 Samuel 3:1-4:22

God calls Samuel; the ark captured; Ichabod

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 43 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 3:1-4:22. These chapters tell how God called Samuel and how the ark was lost in battle. Notice how the word of the LORD comes to a child and how Israel treats the ark as a charm.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The word of the LORD was rare in those days, and visions were not widespread (3:1). Samuel, still a boy, serves in the sanctuary under Eli. The scenes that follow show God breaking the silence, and then a terrible defeat when Israel goes to war against the Philistines. The chapters belong together: in the first, the word of God is heard, and in the second, it is ignored, with disastrous results.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The lamp of God had not yet gone out, and Samuel was lying down in the temple of the LORD where the ark was (3:3).
2. The LORD calls “Samuel!” three times, and Samuel thinks it is Eli (3:4-8).
3. Eli tells him to answer, “Speak, LORD, for your servant hears” (3:9).
4. God tells Samuel that he will judge Eli’s house forever, “because his sons were blaspheming God, and he did not restrain them” (3:13).
5. Eli says, “It is the LORD. Let him do what seems good to him” (3:18).
6. “And all Israel from Dan to Beersheba knew that Samuel was established as a prophet of the LORD” (3:20).

7. Israel is defeated by the Philistines and brings the ark of the covenant from Shiloh, and the Philistines hear the shout and are afraid (4:1-7).

8. The ark is captured, Hophni and Phinehas are killed, Eli falls and dies, and Phinehas' wife names her son Ichabod, "The glory has departed from Israel" (4:10-22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The call of Samuel is among the most loved stories in Scripture, and it carries a sharp lesson. "Samuel did not yet know the LORD, and the word of the LORD had not yet been revealed to him." He served in the sanctuary, but he had not yet been addressed by God. Religious activity is not the same as hearing God. The LORD takes the initiative, and he calls a child.

Eli's response is a mixture of failure and faithfulness. He was a poor father who let his sons go unchecked. Yet when Samuel is called, Eli tells him the right words, "Speak, LORD, for your servant hears." Even a flawed leader can point someone toward God. And when he hears the word of judgment, he accepts it humbly. There is something moving in his submission, though it does not erase his guilt.

Samuel's first prophetic task is heavy: to tell his master that judgment is coming. He is afraid. But Eli asks him to speak plainly, and he does. This is the first test of a prophet: to say what God says, even when it is hard.

Chapter 4 shows the cost of ignoring the word. Israel loses a battle, and instead of repenting, the elders decide to bring the ark, as though it were a lucky charm. "Let us bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD here from Shiloh, that it may come among us and save us from the power of our enemies." They treat God's presence as a tool. The Philistines are afraid, but God does not fight for people who use him. Israel is crushed, the ark is taken, and the corrupt priests die.

The name Ichabod captures the meaning: "The glory has departed." It is the lowest point in the story so far. But the God who is not bound to an object will soon show his power in Philistia.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, "Whoever is of God hears the words of God" (John 8:47), and "My sheep hear my voice" (John 10:27). James 1:22 calls us to be doers of the word. Jeremiah 7:12-14 points back to Shiloh as a warning not to trust in the temple. Hebrews 1:1-2 says that God, who spoke in many ways, has now spoken by his Son.

STEP 6

Application

Pray Samuel's prayer, "Speak, LORD, for your servant hears," before your next time in Scripture.

Ask whether you treat any religious object, place, or habit as a charm.

If someone has said a hard word to you from God's Word, consider listening with Eli's humility.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Pray, "Speak, LORD, your servant hears," and then listen for a moment.

Ask him to keep you from treating his presence as a tool.

Thank him for the Word made flesh.

1 SAMUEL 2:2

DAY 237 · WEEK 34

Psalm 1

Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the wicked

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 6 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 1. It is the doorway to the whole Psalter. Read it slowly, and notice the contrast between two ways of life.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 1 has no title and no named author, and it serves as the introduction to the Psalter. It places two ways in front of every reader: the way of the righteous and the way of the wicked. It begins with the word "blessed," the same word that opens many of the most important sections of Scripture. After the story of Eli's sons and Israel's failure, the psalm shows what a blessed life looks like.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Blessed is the man who walks not in the counsel of the wicked, nor stands in the way of sinners, nor sits in the seat of scoffers" (v. 1).
2. "But his delight is in the law of the LORD, and on his law he meditates day and night" (v. 2).
3. "He is like a tree planted by streams of water that yields its fruit in its season, and its leaf does not wither" (v. 3).
4. "In all that he does, he prospers" (v. 3).
5. "The wicked are not so, but are like chaff that the wind drives away" (v. 4).
6. "Therefore the wicked will not stand in the judgment, nor sinners in the congregation of the righteous" (v. 5).
7. "For the LORD knows the way of the righteous" (v. 6).

8 “But the way of the wicked will perish” (v. 6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 1 uses three verbs in verse 1 for the downward slide of the wicked: walk, stand, sit. A person first walks with the wicked, then stands in their way, then settles in as one of them. The slide is gradual. The first step is to take their counsel. It starts with what we listen to.

The positive picture is a tree. The righteous person is rooted in God’s word. His delight is in the law of the LORD, and he meditates on it day and night. The word “meditates” means to mutter or murmur, to go over the words quietly again and again. It is the opposite of casual reading. The tree is planted by streams of water, and its roots go deep, so that it bears fruit in season and does not wither.

Verse 3 says, “In all that he does, he prospers.” This must be read carefully. It does not promise worldly success in every case. The psalms themselves show righteous people suffering. It describes the fruit of a rooted life, and it points to the ultimate outcome. A person planted by the water will be fruitful, even if the fruit is not always visible.

The wicked are like chaff, the dry, weightless husk that the wind blows away. They have no root and no substance. The contrast is between weight and lightness, depth and surface. Verse 6 gives the reason behind it all: “The LORD knows the way of the righteous.” This is covenant knowledge. He watches over them and cares for them. The way of the wicked perishes because it leads nowhere.

Psalm 1 sets the tone for everything that follows. The Psalter is the prayer book of those who delight in God’s word. The key is the law of the LORD, which at this point in the story is the book of Moses, and which will be fulfilled in the one who perfectly kept it.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the truly blessed man who never walked in the counsel of the wicked and who delighted in the Father’s will (John 4:34). Jeremiah 17:7-8 echoes the tree image, and Revelation 22:2 shows the tree of life by the river. Jesus said, “I am the vine; you are the branches” (John 15:5). Paul says that we are “rooted and grounded in love” (Ephesians 3:17), and “rooted and built up in him” (Colossians 2:7).

STEP 6

Application

Ask whose counsel you listen to most. Is there a voice you need to turn down?

Choose a short passage to meditate on throughout the day. Return to it often.

Thank God that he knows your way.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you want to be a tree planted by his streams.

Ask him to root you in his word and keep you from the counsel of the wicked.

Thank him that he knows your way.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"There is none holy like the LORD: for there is none besides you; there is no rock like our God."

1 SAMUEL 2:2

REST

Meditation

Hannah's prayer is one of the great statements of faith in the Bible, and this verse is its center. She says it after she has given up her only son, with a heart full of joy.

"There is none holy like the LORD." Holiness means being set apart, utterly distinct. There is no one who is like the LORD in purity, power, and goodness. This is a statement of worship. When we compare God to anyone or anything else, he is incomparable.

"For there is none besides you." It is a statement of exclusivity. There is no other god. The gods of the nations are nothing. The great problem of Israel in the days of the judges was that they forgot this. Hannah remembers.

"There is no rock like our God." A rock is a symbol of security, strength, and permanence. In a world of shifting sand, there is something solid. In the Song of Moses, God is called the Rock (Deuteronomy 32:4). Hannah takes it up in her own song. When everything else gives way, he stands.

For the Christian, the verse is a joy and a confession. Jesus is the Holy One of God (Mark 1:24), and he is the cornerstone on which the church is built (Ephesians 2:20). He is the rock that does not move, and the one in whom all who trust find security. Say it in your own words today: There is no one like you.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began the books of Samuel. You read of Hannah's prayer and the birth of Samuel, and her song that proclaimed the God who raises the poor from the dust. You saw the corruption of Eli's sons and the word of judgment on his house. You read how God called the boy Samuel in the night and made him a prophet, and how Israel lost the ark in battle because they treated it as a charm. You began the Psalter with Psalm 1, the portrait of the blessed man who is like a tree planted by water. The week taught that God exalts the humble, that he speaks to those who listen, and that his presence cannot be used as a tool.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Hannah's prayer was honest, costly, and answered. What is one thing you need to bring honestly to God this week?

Israel treated the ark like a good luck charm. Where are you tempted to use religious things as a substitute for a living relationship with God?

Psalm 1 describes a person who delights in God's word and bears fruit. What would it take for you to be more like that tree, and where in your day could you begin?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that there is none holy like him.

Thank him for answering prayer and speaking to those who listen.

Rest in him today.

DAY 239 · WEEK 35

Psalm 2

Why do the nations rage?, the anointed Son

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 2. This is the second psalm of the Psalter, and one of the most important messianic psalms. Read it as a drama with four voices: the nations, the LORD, the king, and the psalmist.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 2 is a royal psalm, probably used at the coronation of a king in Jerusalem. It begins with nations in rebellion, moves to God's answer from heaven, and ends with a call to submit. Along with Psalm 1, it forms the introduction to the Psalter. Psalm 1 is about the righteous person, and Psalm 2 is about the righteous king. Placed here, at the start of the books of Samuel, it points ahead to the king God will establish.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Why do the nations rage and the peoples plot in vain?" (v. 1).
2. "The kings of the earth set themselves, and the rulers take counsel together, against the LORD and against his anointed" (v. 2).
3. "Let us burst their bonds apart and cast away their cords from us" (v. 3).
4. "He who sits in the heavens laughs; the Lord holds them in derision" (v. 4).
5. "As for me, I have set my King on Zion, my holy hill" (v. 6).
6. "You are my Son; today I have begotten you" (v. 7).
7. "Ask of me, and I will make the nations your heritage, and the ends of the earth your possession" (v. 8).
8. "Kiss the Son, lest he be angry… Blessed are all who take refuge in him" (vv. 12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with a question that exposes the folly of human rebellion: “Why do the nations rage?” The kings of the earth gather against the LORD and his anointed, saying, “Let us burst their bonds apart.” They see God’s rule as a prison. But their plotting is “in vain.” It is the oldest delusion: that we can throw off the rule of our Creator and be free.

God’s response is striking. He laughs. It is not the laughter of cruelty. It is the laughter of one who is secure. The nations’ rage cannot touch him. He sits in heaven, and then he speaks, and his word is terrifying: “I have set my King on Zion.” God’s answer to rebellion is a king.

In verse 7, the king speaks. “You are my Son; today I have begotten you.” In ancient Israel, the king was called God’s son at his enthronement, a way of saying that he ruled as God’s representative. The promise to David in 2 Samuel 7:14 is in view, and you will read it soon. But the words reach beyond any ordinary king. The ends of the earth are promised to this Son, and “you shall break them with a rod of iron.”

The psalm ends with an invitation. The kings are told to be wise, to serve the LORD with fear, to kiss the Son, to submit. The final line is a beatitude: “Blessed are all who take refuge in him.” It echoes the “blessed” of Psalm 1:1. The Psalter begins and ends the introduction with blessing.

For Israel, the king in Jerusalem was a sign. But as Israel’s kings failed one after another, the psalm began to be read as a promise of a king still to come, the Messiah, who would truly rule the nations.

STEP 5

Connection

The New Testament quotes Psalm 2 more than any other psalm. At Jesus’ baptism and transfiguration, the Father says, “You are my beloved Son” (Mark 1:11; 9:7). Acts 4:25-28 applies verses 1 and 2 to the plot against Jesus. Paul quotes verse 7 about the resurrection (Acts 13:33). Hebrews 1:5 and 5:5 use it of Christ’s sonship and priesthood. Revelation 2:27, 12:5, and 19:15 apply the rod of iron to his final victory.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether you ever see God’s rule as a prison. Bring that to him honestly.

Take refuge in the Son. Name one fear, and place it in his hands.

Pray for leaders in your nation and for a spirit of humility among them.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what you do when the nations rage and plots seem to prosper.

Take refuge in the Son, and tell him so.

Ask him to teach you to rejoice with trembling.

PSALM 3:3

DAY 240 · WEEK 35

1 Samuel 5:1-7:17

The ark in Philistia; its return; Samuel judges Israel

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 61 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 5:1-7:17. The ark, captured in chapter 4, now travels through Philistine cities and comes home. Then Samuel leads Israel in repentance. Notice who is in control throughout.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Philistines have captured the ark and taken it to the temple of Dagon in Ashdod. These chapters show what happens next. The ark is not a trophy. It is the throne of the LORD, and he defeats Dagon without an army. After seven months, the Philistines send it back with an offering. At Kiriath-jearim it rests for twenty years. Then Samuel calls Israel to turn from idols and leads them to a decisive victory at Mizpah.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The Philistines set the ark beside Dagon, and the next morning Dagon has fallen on his face before the ark (5:1-3).
2. The next morning, Dagon is on the ground again, with head and hands cut off (5:4).
3. The LORD afflicts the people of Ashdod, Gath, and Ekron with tumors, and they say, “The hand of his is heavy against us” (5:6-12).
4. The Philistine priests advise sending the ark back with a guilt offering, to test whether the LORD is responsible (6:1-9).
5. Two cows pull the cart straight to Beth-shemesh, “lowing as they went” (6:10-12).
6. Some of the men of Beth-shemesh look into the ark, and God strikes them. They say, “Who is able to stand before the LORD, this holy God?” (6:19-20).

7. Samuel says, “If you are returning to the LORD with all your heart, then put away the foreign gods” (7:3).

8. Samuel sets up a stone and calls it Ebenezer, saying, “Till now the LORD has helped us” (7:12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The story of the ark in Philistia is told with a touch of dark humor. The god Dagon bows to the ark of the LORD, falls, and breaks. The Philistines suffer plagues. And the cows, who have never pulled a cart, walk straight to Israel with their calves left behind. The point is that the LORD does not need anyone’s help. He was not defeated at Aphek. He allowed Israel to be defeated, and he is still the God above all gods. The loss of the ark was not his defeat, but his judgment.

The lesson for Israel is double. First, God cannot be used. The Philistines learn that the ark cannot be treated as a prize. The men of Beth-shemesh learn that the ark cannot be treated casually, either. God’s holiness cuts both ways. The cry of the men of Beth-shemesh, “Who is able to stand before the LORD, this holy God?” is the question that the whole law raises.

The turning point is chapter 7. After twenty years, the people lament after the LORD. Samuel’s answer is simple and direct: if you are returning with all your heart, put away the foreign gods. Repentance is not just sorrow. It is the removal of idols. Israel obeys, they fast and confess at Mizpah, and when the Philistines attack, the LORD thunders from heaven and routs them. The people do nothing but cry out. God fights for them.

The stone Ebenezer, “stone of help,” is a monument of memory. “Till now the LORD has helped us.” It is a statement of gratitude and also of confidence about the future. If he has helped us thus far, he will not stop. The hymn “Come, Thou Fount” echoes this verse.

Samuel judges Israel throughout his life, going on a circuit each year. This is the beginning of a leader who is not a warrior but a man of prayer.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that “what agreement has the temple of God with idols?” (2 Corinthians 6:16). Jesus is greater than the ark; he is the true presence of God with us. John 1:14 says that the Word “dwelt” among us. Hebrews 12:28-29 calls God a consuming fire. 1 John 5:21 ends with, “Little children, keep yourselves from idols.”

STEP 6

Application

Name one “Ebenezer” in your own story, a place where you can say, “Till now the LORD has helped me.”

Ask whether there is a foreign god you need to put away: something you trust more than God.

Remember that God is not defeated when things seem to go wrong. He is working.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Put away a foreign god in your own life, by naming it before God.
- Return to him with all your heart, and say what that means today.
- Thank him for helping you thus far.

PSALM 3:3

DAY 241 · WEEK 35

1 Samuel 8:1-10:27

Israel demands a king; Saul anointed, God as true King

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 72 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 8:1-10:27. Israel asks for a king, and Saul is chosen. This is one of the most important turning points in the Old Testament. Read the elders' request, and listen for what it reveals about their hearts.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Samuel is old, and his sons are corrupt. The elders of Israel gather at Ramah and ask for a king "to judge us like all the nations." Samuel is displeased, and God tells him that the people have not rejected Samuel, but God. The following chapters describe how Saul, a young Benjaminite, is found, anointed in private by Samuel, and presented publicly at Mizpah. The monarchy begins, with a mixture of divine permission and human error.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The elders say, "Behold, you are old and your sons do not walk in your ways. Now appoint for us a king to judge us like all the nations" (8:5).
2. The LORD says, "They have not rejected you, but they have rejected me from being king over them" (8:7).
3. Samuel warns them what a king will take: sons, daughters, fields, and servants (8:10-18).
4. The people refuse to listen: "No! But there shall be a king over us, that we also may be like all the nations" (8:19-20).
5. Saul is described as "a handsome young man… from his shoulders upward he was taller than any of the people" (9:2).

6. Saul is searching for lost donkeys and finds Samuel, who anoints him privately (9:3-10:1).
7. The Spirit of God rushes on Saul, and he prophesies (10:6-13).
8. At Mizpah, Saul is chosen by lot but is found hiding among the baggage (10:17-24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The request for a king is not simply wrong. The law of Moses had anticipated it (Deuteronomy 17:14-20), and God had promised kings from Judah (Genesis 49:10). What is wrong is the reason. The elders want a king "like all the nations." Israel was supposed to be different. Their distinctiveness was that the LORD was their king. Wanting to be like the nations is a form of unbelief, a desire to trust in visible power instead of the invisible God.

Samuel's warning is a catalog of what human kings do: take. The word appears again and again. A king will take your sons for his army, your daughters for his kitchen, your best fields, your servants, and a tenth of your flocks. "And you shall be his slaves." It is a prophecy of Solomon's oppression and of every oppressive government. Yet the people say no, they will have a king. God gives them what they ask, and what they ask for will cost them.

Saul looks like a king. He is tall and handsome. But the narrative also shows his weaknesses. He is searching for lost donkeys, he is shy, and when he is chosen, he hides among the baggage. His humility is attractive, but it will turn into insecurity and fear of the people. At this stage, though, the Spirit of the LORD comes on him, and "God gave him another heart" (10:9). He begins well.

The chapters show a delicate balance. The monarchy is permitted, even blessed, and yet it is the fruit of a flawed motive. God works through human weakness. He will take Israel's misguided desire for a king and, in time, produce the king who is the Messiah. The people wanted a king like the nations. God will give them a king who is nothing like the nations.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the king who does not take but gives, who "came not to be served but to serve, and to give his life as a ransom for many" (Mark 10:45). Pilate asked him, "Are you the King of the Jews?" (John 18:33), and he answered, "My kingdom is not of this world." The people shouted, "We have no king but Caesar" (John 19:15), echoing the elders' rejection of God. Revelation 19:16 shows him as King of kings.

STEP 6

Application

Ask where you are tempted to follow what everyone else does instead of trusting God.

Think about who or what you rely on in place of God, and what it costs you.

Thank God that Jesus is a king who gives himself for his people.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have wanted to be like the nations.
- Ask him to keep you from trusting anything visible more than him.
- Thank Jesus, the king who serves.

DAY 242 · WEEK 35

1 Samuel 11:1-13:23

Saul's early success; his impatience; the kingdom taken

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 11:1-13:23. These chapters show the best and the worst of Saul. He wins a great victory, then he disobeys at Gilgal. Read chapter 13 slowly, and ask what Saul's real mistake was.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After Saul is chosen at Mizpah, he returns to farm in Gibeah. Then Nahash the Ammonite besieges Jabesh-gilead, and the Spirit of God comes powerfully on Saul. He leads Israel to victory, and the kingdom is renewed at Gilgal. In chapter 12, Samuel gives his farewell address. Then, in chapter 13, the Philistines gather a large army, and Saul faces a crisis that exposes his heart.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Nahash offers terms: the men of Jabesh may surrender if he can gouge out their right eyes (11:1-2).
2. "The Spirit of God rushed upon Saul when he heard these words, and his anger was greatly kindled" (11:6).
3. After the victory, Saul says, "Not a man shall be put to death this day, for today the LORD has worked salvation in Israel" (11:13).
4. In his farewell, Samuel says, "Far be it from me that I should sin against the LORD by ceasing to pray for you" (12:23).
5. Samuel also says, "The LORD will not forsake his people, for his great name's sake" (12:22).

6. Saul is told to wait seven days at Gilgal for Samuel to come and offer sacrifices (13:8).
7. When the people begin to scatter, Saul offers the burnt offering himself (13:9-10).
8. Samuel says, “You have done foolishly. You have not kept the command of the LORD your God… But now your kingdom shall not continue. The LORD has sought out a man after his own heart” (13:13-14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Saul’s first victory shows what a leader can be when the Spirit of God is upon him. He is angry at injustice, he acts decisively, and he is generous in victory. “Not a man shall be put to death this day, for today the LORD has worked salvation.” He gives God the credit. This is a king who understands that his power is on loan.

Samuel’s farewell speech is a model of pastoral integrity. He asks the people to testify against him if he has ever taken anything from them, and they say he has not. He then rebukes them for asking for a king, but with a promise: “Do not fear; you have done all this evil. Yet do not turn aside from following the LORD.” And he adds the lovely words, “I will not cease to pray for you.” A leader who loves his people prays for them even when they have wronged him.

Chapter 13 is the first sign of Saul’s downfall. The situation is grave: the Philistines have a huge army and Israel has no weapons. Saul waits seven days, as Samuel had told him. Then, as his men begin to leave, he offers the sacrifice himself, a task reserved for priests. It looks like a small thing. He was under pressure, and he meant well. But the narrative shows that it was a failure of trust. Saul was acting from fear of the people and the enemy, not from faith in God.

Samuel’s rebuke is severe. Saul’s kingdom will not continue. God has sought a man “after his own heart.” This phrase does not mean that David will be perfect, but that he will be a man whose heart is oriented toward God. The difference between Saul and David is not one of skill or sin, but of the posture of the heart.

The lesson is simple and searching: obedience is a matter of trust. Saul feared the people and tried to take control, and he lost the kingdom. Real leadership means waiting on God, even when everything seems to be falling apart.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus waited on the Father’s timing, as when he said, “My hour has not yet come” (John 2:4), and he trusted him in the garden: “Not my will, but yours, be done” (Luke 22:42). Paul quotes the phrase about David in Acts 13:22. The Hebrew phrase “a man after his own heart” finds its fulfillment in the one who always did what pleased the Father (John 8:29). Peter says that the one who believes in him will not be put to shame (1 Peter 2:6).

STEP 6

Application

Think of a time you took matters into your own hands instead of waiting on God. What drove you?

Pray for your leaders as Samuel did, even if they have wronged you.

Ask the Lord to give you a heart oriented toward him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God for a heart after his own heart.
- Ask him to teach you to wait when everything says to act.
- Pray for those who lead you.

PSALM 3:3

DAY 243 · WEEK 35

Psalm 3

O LORD, how many are my foes, David's morning psalm

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 3. This is the first psalm in the Bible with a title that gives its setting: "A Psalm of David, when he fled from Absalom his son." It is a morning prayer of trust in the face of danger.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

David wrote this psalm during the worst crisis of his reign, when his son Absalom led a rebellion and David had to flee Jerusalem. You will read that story in 2 Samuel 15 to 18. The psalm is placed here at the start of the stories about David. It shows what kind of man he was: when he was most afraid, he prayed. It is a prayer for a day that began in danger.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O LORD, how many are my foes! Many are rising against me" (v. 1).
2. "Many are saying of me, There is no salvation for him in God" (v. 2).
3. "But you, O LORD, are a shield about me, my glory, and the lifter of my head" (v. 3).
4. "I cried aloud to the LORD, and he answered me from his holy hill" (v. 4).
5. "I lay down and slept; I woke again, for the LORD sustained me" (v. 5).
6. "I will not be afraid of many thousands of people who have set themselves against me all around" (v. 6).
7. "Arise, O LORD! Save me, O my God!" (v. 7).
8. "Salvation belongs to the LORD; your blessing be on your people!" (v. 8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a list of problems. David has many enemies, and they are saying he is finished. It is the voice of discouragement: "There is no salvation for him in God." The worst part of David's trouble is not the armies but the taunt that God has abandoned him. This is the hardest thing for believers in distress: not simply the pain, but the suspicion that God is not there.

Then comes the great "But you." David turns from the voices around him to the LORD. "But you, O LORD, are a shield about me." A shield protects on every side. He is also "my glory," meaning that even when David has lost his throne, his honor rests in God. And he is "the lifter of my head." A defeated man hangs his head. God lifts it.

The most surprising line is verse 5: "I lay down and slept." David is on the run from his own son, with an army in pursuit, and he sleeps. This is not carelessness. It is trust. He sleeps because "the LORD sustained me." The sleep is a sign that he has given his anxiety to God. It is one of the most practical pictures of faith in the Bible.

He is not naive about the danger. He asks God to arise and save, and he describes God striking his enemies' jaws. The psalm ends with a statement that is a creed in four words: "Salvation belongs to the LORD." David cannot save himself, and neither can anyone else.

Even in a bitter family conflict, with his own son against him, David prays, "Your blessing be on your people." He does not forget the nation. In his distress, he thinks of others.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus slept in a boat during a storm (Mark 4:38), showing the same trust. He too was betrayed by someone close, and he crossed the Kidron valley into a garden (John 18:1). Paul says, "We are afflicted in every way, but not crushed" (2 Corinthians 4:8). Hebrews 12:2 says that Jesus "for the joy that was set before him endured the cross." Revelation 7:10 declares, "Salvation belongs to our God."

STEP 6

Application

Pray this psalm tonight before you go to sleep, and entrust your worries to God.

Think about the voices that say there is no help for you in God. Answer them with "But you, O LORD."

Pray a blessing over your church and your nation.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he is a shield about you, and tell him about those who rise against you.

Ask him to let you sleep in his care.

Bless his people in your own words.

PSALM 3:3

DAY 244 · WEEK 35

Psalm 4; Psalm 5

Evening and morning prayer, trust amid enemies

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 16 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 4 and Psalm 5. These are an evening prayer and a morning prayer, and they belong together. Notice the way each begins and how each ends with peace and protection.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 4 is traditionally read as an evening prayer, and Psalm 5 as a morning prayer. Both are attributed to David and both appear in the early part of the Psalter. They come directly after Psalm 3, so the first five psalms of David form a rhythm of day and night: morning in Psalm 3, evening in Psalm 4, and morning in Psalm 5. David teaches us to pray at the edges of the day.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “Answer me when I call, O God of my righteousness! You have given me relief when I was in distress” (4:1).
2. “But know that the LORD has set apart the godly for himself; the LORD hears when I call to him” (4:3).
3. “Be angry, and do not sin; ponder in your own hearts on your beds, and be silent” (4:4).
4. “There are many who say, Who will show us some good? Lift up the light of your face upon us, O LORD!” (4:6).
5. “You have put more joy in my heart than they have when their grain and wine abound” (4:7).

6. “In peace I will both lie down and sleep; for you alone, O LORD, make me dwell in safety” (4:8).

7. “O LORD, in the morning you hear my voice; in the morning I prepare a sacrifice for you and watch” (5:3).

8. “But I, through the abundance of your steadfast love, will enter your house. I will bow down toward your holy temple in the fear of you” (5:7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 4 is a prayer to be said before going to sleep. David is troubled, but he does not simply complain. He recalls that God has given him relief before. He tells his opponents to “ponder in your own hearts on your beds, and be silent.” The advice is good for anyone: before sleep, let your anger settle, and do not let it turn into sin. “Be angry, and do not sin” is one of the best pieces of advice in the Bible.

The psalm sets two kinds of happiness side by side. Many people say, “Who will show us some good?” They look for happiness in grain and wine, in material abundance. David asks for something different: “Lift up the light of your face upon us.” It is the blessing of Numbers 6, which you read in the last unit. And he says that God has put more joy in his heart than their abundance gives them. Joy that comes from God’s face is deeper than joy that comes from prosperity.

The last verse is among the most restful in the Psalter. “In peace I will both lie down and sleep; for you alone, O LORD, make me dwell in safety.” The “alone” is important. Safety is not from locks or armies, but from the LORD.

Psalm 5 turns to the morning. David begins his day with prayer: “In the morning you hear my voice; in the morning I prepare a sacrifice for you and watch.” The word “watch” suggests eager expectation. He lays out his prayer as a priest lays out the sacrifice, and then he looks to see how God will answer.

The psalm contrasts the wicked, whom God hates, with the righteous, who come into his house through his steadfast love. David enters by grace: “through the abundance of your steadfast love.” Our access to God does not rest on our goodness. He asks God to lead him in the way and make it straight. The psalm ends with the promise that God will bless the righteous and cover them “as with a shield.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus began his days in prayer (Mark 1:35), and he withdrew to pray at night (Luke 6:12). Paul quotes Psalm 4:4 in Ephesians 4:26: “Be angry and do not sin; do not let the sun go down on your anger.” Paul also says, “The peace of God, which surpasses all understanding, will guard your hearts” (Philippians 4:7). Psalm 5:9 is quoted in Romans 3:13 as a description of human sinfulness.

STEP 6

Application

Make a point of praying at the beginning and end of your day, even briefly.

Before bed tonight, let go of any anger you are holding. Do not let the sun go down on it.

Prepare your morning prayer as a sacrifice, and then watch to see how God answers.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray an evening prayer: give God today and what is unfinished.
- Ask him to put more joy in your heart than abundance can.
- Thank him that he alone makes you dwell in safety.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"But you, O LORD, are a shield about me, my glory, and the lifter of my head."

PSALM 3:3

REST

Meditation

David wrote this verse while running from his own son. Everything he had was at risk, and yet he turned his eyes from the voices around him to the LORD.

"But you." These two words are the hinge of the verse. Around David were enemies, rumors, and a suspicion that God had left him. But he sets one word against them all. When your circumstances say one thing, you may answer with "But you."

"A shield about me." A shield is held up between the warrior and the arrow. David says the LORD is not only in front of him but all around him. There is no side on which he is exposed.

"My glory." David had lost his palace and his crown. If his honor depended on his position, he would have none. But his glory is God himself. No one can take that from him.

"The lifter of my head." The ashamed hang their heads, and the defeated look at the ground. God lifts the chin of his people and lets them look him in the face.

The Christian reads this verse through Christ. He is our shield (Ephesians 6:16), he is the glory of God (John 1:14), and he lifts us out of shame (Romans 10:11). Say it today whenever you feel surrounded.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read of Israel's request for a king and the rise and first failure of Saul. You saw the ark in Philistia, where Dagon fell and the LORD showed that he needs no one's help, and you read of the stone Ebenezer, "Till now the LORD has helped us." You read Samuel's warning about what kings take, and how Saul lost his kingdom at Gilgal because he feared the people more than he trusted God. In the Psalms you read the royal Psalm 2, where God answers rebellion by setting his King on Zion, and the prayers of David in Psalms 3 to 5 for morning and for evening. The week taught that God rules even when his people ask for the wrong thing, and that his anointed king is the only safe refuge.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Saul acted out of fear when he should have waited on God. Where are you tempted to act in your own strength this week instead of waiting?

Psalm 2 says, "Blessed are all who take refuge in him." How does Jesus, the Son and the anointed King, become a refuge for you in a specific worry?

Ebenezer means "Till now the LORD has helped us." Write down three ways he has helped you in the last year.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he is a shield and the lifter of your head.

Thank him for the King he set on Zion.

Rest in the knowledge that he holds you.

DAY 246 · WEEK 36

Psalm 6

O LORD, rebuke me not in your anger, the first penitential psalm

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 6. This is the first of the seven traditional penitential psalms. Read it as the prayer of someone who is worn out by suffering and has nowhere else to turn.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 6 is a prayer of David, with the note "according to The Sheminith," probably a musical direction. Nothing in it tells us the exact crisis, and that is useful, because it lets many sufferers pray it. David is physically and emotionally exhausted, and he feels that God's anger is on him. The psalm moves from desperate pleading to a sudden confidence at the end.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O LORD, rebuke me not in your anger, nor discipline me in your wrath" (v. 1).
2. "Be gracious to me, O LORD, for I am languishing; heal me, O LORD, for my bones are troubled" (v. 2).
3. "My soul also is greatly troubled. But you, O LORD, how long?" (v. 3).
4. "Turn, O LORD, deliver my life; save me for the sake of your steadfast love" (v. 4).
5. "For in death there is no remembrance of you; in Sheol who will give you praise?" (v. 5).
6. "I am weary with my moaning; every night I flood my bed with tears; I drench my couch with my weeping" (v. 6).
7. "Depart from me, all you workers of evil, for the LORD has heard the sound of my weeping" (v. 8).
8. "The LORD has heard my plea; the LORD accepts my prayer" (v. 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This psalm holds nothing back. David is weak, his bones are shaking, and his nights are given over to tears. He asks God not to rebuke him in anger. He does not claim to be innocent. He knows that suffering may be connected to sin, and he asks for mercy rather than strict justice. The ground of his appeal is not his own goodness but God's "steadfast love," the covenant word that appears again and again in the Psalms.

The question "How long?" is the cry of the sufferer in many psalms. It is not rebellion. It is an honest question brought to God. Believers in the Bible are allowed to ask it. The Bible does not require us to hide our exhaustion behind pious language.

Verse 5 is an argument. David says that the dead cannot praise God, so why let him die? At this point in the story of Scripture, the hope of resurrection is not yet fully revealed, and David's view of death is dark. The argument is that God's glory is served by keeping his servant alive to praise him. Later revelation will show that death is not the end for those in God's hands.

The turn comes without warning. In verse 8, the tone changes: "Depart from me, all you workers of evil, for the LORD has heard the sound of my weeping." Nothing in David's circumstances has changed. What changed is that he has prayed, and he is sure he has been heard. He says it three times: God has heard my weeping, my plea, my prayer.

The psalm teaches that tears are a form of prayer, and that God hears them. It also teaches that we may leave our suffering with God and trust him with the outcome, even before we see it.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, "My soul is very sorrowful, even to death" (Matthew 26:38), and "In the days of his flesh, Jesus offered up prayers and supplications, with loud cries and tears" (Hebrews 5:7). Jesus took on our weakness. John 12:27 echoes verse 3: "Now is my soul troubled." Revelation 21:4 promises that God will wipe away every tear.

STEP 6

Application

Bring your exhaustion to God without dressing it up. Tell him how long it has been.

Ask for mercy based on his steadfast love, not on your record.

Thank him that he hears the sound of your weeping.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God honestly how weary you are.
- Ask him to be gracious to you for the sake of his steadfast love.
- Thank Jesus for weeping and praying in the same way.

DAY 247 · WEEK 36

1 Samuel 14:1-15:35

Jonathan's faith; Saul's foolishness; Saul rejected

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 82 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 14:1-15:35. Chapter 14 shows Jonathan's faith and Saul's rash vow. Chapter 15 records Saul's final rejection. Pay close attention to Samuel's words in 15:22-23.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Israel is still under Philistine pressure. Jonathan, Saul's son, takes the initiative against a Philistine outpost, trusting that the LORD can save by many or by few. Later, God commands Saul through Samuel to destroy the Amalekites, who had attacked Israel in the wilderness. Saul's partial obedience is the failure that ends his dynasty. These chapters mark the turning of the kingdom from Saul toward David.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Jonathan says to his armor-bearer, "It may be that the LORD will work for us, for nothing can hinder the LORD from saving by many or by few" (14:6).
2. Saul makes a rash oath that no one may eat before evening, and Jonathan, who did not hear it, eats honey (14:24-27).
3. The people ransom Jonathan, and he is not put to death (14:45).
4. The LORD tells Saul to strike Amalek and devote all that they have to destruction (15:1-3).
5. Saul spares King Agag and the best of the sheep and oxen (15:9).
6. Saul says, "I have performed the commandment of the LORD," and Samuel answers, "What then is this bleating of the sheep in my ears?" (15:13-14).
7. "To obey is better than sacrifice, and to listen than the fat of rams" (15:22).

8 “The LORD has rejected you from being king over Israel” (15:26). And “the Glory of Israel will not lie or have regret” (15:29).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Jonathan is a bright figure in a dark story. He and his armor-bearer climb a cliff against a garrison, and his words show a faith that does not depend on numbers: “Nothing can hinder the LORD from saving by many or by few.” The LORD gives a great victory. Jonathan’s faith contrasts with his father’s, who stays under a pomegranate tree and then binds the army with a foolish oath. Saul’s religion is concerned with rules and ceremony, but his heart does not trust God. The oath nearly costs Jonathan his life.

Chapter 15 is the decisive moment. The command against Amalek is a hard one, part of the judgment on a people whose long violence had been judged by God. Saul obeys in part. He spares the king and the best animals, and he says it is to sacrifice them to the LORD. When Samuel confronts him, Saul first claims he obeyed, then blames the people, then offers religious reasons.

Samuel’s reply is one of the great sentences of the Bible: “Has the LORD as great delight in burnt offerings and sacrifices, as in obeying the voice of the LORD? Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice.” God is not looking for religious performance but for a surrendered heart. Rebellion is as the sin of divination, and presumption is as iniquity and idolatry.

Saul’s confession is shallow. He says, “I have sinned,” but he immediately asks Samuel to honor him before the elders. He is more worried about his reputation than about his sin. Repentance that seeks to keep the appearance of standing is not true repentance.

The chapter ends with Samuel mourning for Saul, and “the LORD regretted that he had made Saul king.” The word “regret” here speaks of sorrow and a change of course, not of God being surprised. Verse 29 insists that God does not change his mind like a man. His purposes stand.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus quotes Hosea 6:6 twice, “I desire mercy, and not sacrifice” (Matthew 9:13; 12:7), in the same spirit as Samuel. Hebrews 10:5-10 says that Christ came to do God’s will, where sacrifices could not satisfy. Jesus was “obedient to the point of death” (Philippians 2:8), succeeding where Saul failed. John 14:15: “If you love me, you will keep my commandments.”

STEP 6

Application

Ask where you offer God religious activity instead of obedience.

Look at your last confession of sin. Was it about the sin, or about how you look?

Thank Jesus that he obeyed fully, and ask for a listening heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have offered God less than your heart.
- Ask for the faith of Jonathan, who believed nothing can hinder God.
- Thank Christ for his perfect obedience.

1 SAMUEL 16:7

DAY 248 · WEEK 36

1 Samuel 16:1-17:58

David anointed; Goliath, the shepherd-king

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 74 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 16:1-17:58. God chooses David, and David defeats Goliath. Read slowly, and notice what each side says about who will win and why.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After Saul's rejection, God sends Samuel to Bethlehem to anoint one of Jesse's sons as king. The chosen one is the youngest, a shepherd. David enters Saul's service as a musician, and then, in the valley of Elah, faces the Philistine champion Goliath when the whole army of Israel is paralyzed with fear. These chapters introduce the central human figure of the Old Testament narrative.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God tells Samuel, "Fill your horn with oil, and go. I will send you to Jesse the Bethlehemite, for I have provided for myself a king among his sons" (16:1).
2. "Man looks on the outward appearance, but the LORD looks on the heart" (16:7).
3. David is brought in from the sheep, "ruddy, with beautiful eyes and handsome", and the LORD says, "Arise, anoint him, for this is he" (16:12).
4. "The Spirit of the LORD rushed upon David from that day forward" (16:13), while the Spirit departs from Saul (16:14).
5. Goliath, who stood about nine feet tall, taunts Israel for forty days (17:4, 16).
6. David says, "Who is this uncircumcised Philistine, that he should defy the armies of the living God?" (17:26).
7. David refuses Saul's armor and takes five smooth stones and his sling (17:38-40).

8 “You come to me with a sword and with a spear and with a javelin, but I come to you in the name of the LORD of hosts… that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel” (17:45-46).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The story of David’s anointing begins with a reversal of expectations. Samuel looks at Eliab, the tall oldest son, and thinks, “Surely the LORD’s anointed is before him.” But the LORD says, “Do not look on his appearance… For the LORD sees not as man sees.” This echoes the story of Saul, who looked the part and failed. God chooses the youngest, the one who was left with the sheep. It is a repeated pattern in the Bible: Isaac over Ishmael, Jacob over Esau, Joseph, Moses, and now David.

The Spirit’s movement is dramatic. He rushes on David and leaves Saul. Saul is now troubled by a harmful spirit, and David’s music soothes him. The king who has been rejected receives comfort from the one who will replace him.

The Goliath narrative is often read as a lesson in courage, but its real theme is who fights for Israel. The whole army, Saul included, sees Goliath’s size and trembles. David sees Goliath’s defiance of God. For David the question is not whether Goliath is big, but whether the living God is big enough. He has fought lions and bears, and he credits the LORD with those victories.

David’s declaration before the battle is the heart of the chapter. “The battle is the LORD’s.” He does not rely on Saul’s armor or on conventional weapons. He wants the world to know that God can save without sword or spear. The victory is not just David’s. It is for all Israel, a public sign that there is a God in Israel.

There is a deeper pattern. David stands alone as a representative for the people. If he wins, they win. If he loses, they are slaves. The people share in the victory of their champion without lifting a sword.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the greater David: born in Bethlehem, a shepherd, and the anointed King (Micah 5:2; John 10:11). He is the champion who fights in our place, defeating sin, death, and the devil (Colossians 2:15; Hebrews 2:14-15). The victory is ours without our having lifted a sword. Paul says, “God chose what is weak in the world to shame the strong” (1 Corinthians 1:27).

STEP 6

Application

Ask what your “Goliath” is, the thing that has been mocking you for forty days.

Remember that Christ has already fought and won. Stand in his victory.

Ask the Lord to teach you to see people as he sees them, by the heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to teach you to see as he sees, and to trust him in the battle you face.
- Thank Jesus, your champion, who defeated sin and death.
- Name a giant in your life and give it to him.

DAY 249 · WEEK 36

1 Samuel 18:1-20:42

David and Jonathan; Saul's jealousy; covenant friendship

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 94 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 18:1-20:42. These chapters show David's rise, Saul's jealousy, and the friendship of Jonathan and David. Notice how David responds to being hunted.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the victory over Goliath, David becomes a leading figure in Saul's army. The women sing, "Saul has struck down his thousands, and David his ten thousands," and jealousy takes root in the king's heart. Saul tries several times to kill David. Jonathan, Saul's son and heir, becomes David's closest friend and risks his own father's anger to protect him.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The soul of Jonathan was knit to the soul of David, and Jonathan loved him as his own soul" (18:1).
2. Jonathan makes a covenant with David and gives him his robe, armor, sword, bow, and belt (18:3-4).
3. The women's song makes Saul angry, and "Saul eyed David from that day on" (18:7-9).
4. Saul twice hurls a spear at David, and "Saul was afraid of David, because the LORD was with him" (18:11-12).
5. Saul offers his daughters Merab and Michal, hoping the Philistines will kill David (18:17-27).
6. Michal helps David escape through a window (19:11-17).
7. Jonathan says to David, "Whatever you say, I will do for you" (20:4), and they renew their covenant (20:16-17).

8. Jonathan shoots arrows as a signal, and David and Jonathan weep together as they part (20:35-42).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Saul's jealousy is the central tragedy of these chapters. He had been a victorious king, and now he cannot bear to hear another man praised. The spirit that began with envy ends in murder. It illustrates how sin grows: a small resentment, left unchecked, becomes a consuming obsession. Saul even sees that the LORD is with David and that he himself has been abandoned, yet he fights against God's chosen.

David's behavior in the face of this is notable. He plays the harp, serves faithfully, and does not take revenge. "David behaved wisely in all his undertakings, for the LORD was with him." He does not defend himself with a plot to take the throne. He trusts the promise that God made through Samuel.

The friendship of Jonathan and David is among the most moving in Scripture. Jonathan is the king's heir, and David is the one who will take the throne from his house. A less godly man would have seen David as a rival. Jonathan sees him as the LORD's anointed. He hands over his robe and his armor, a symbolic transfer of his claim to the throne. He says later that he knows David will be king (23:17). He chooses loyalty to God's plan over personal ambition.

The covenant between the two friends is renewed in chapter 20, and the scene of their parting is full of grief. Each man is faithful to the other, and yet they must separate. Jonathan will remain with his father, and David will become a fugitive.

Faithful friendship, in this story, is a gift from God and a refuge in time of trouble. Jonathan protects David at risk to himself, and speaks the truth to his father even when it brings danger.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, "Greater love has no one than this, that someone lay down his life for his friends" (John 15:13). Jonathan gave up his claim to the throne for David, but Christ laid down his own life for his people. John 15:15 says, "I have called you friends." Like David, Jesus was hated without cause (John 15:25) and hunted by those who envied him (Mark 15:10).

STEP 6

Application

Examine your heart for jealousy. Who do you resent because they are praised?

Give thanks for a friend who has been loyal to you, and tell them.

Ask God to make you a Jonathan, a person who puts his purposes above your own advancement.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to guard your heart against envy.
- Ask him to give you Jonathan's loyalty and David's patience.
- Thank Jesus for calling you his friend.

1 SAMUEL 16:7

DAY 250 · WEEK 36

Psalm 7

O LORD my God, in you do I take refuge

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 17 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 7. David prays when he has been falsely accused. Notice how he asks God to judge him, and how he trusts the Judge of all the earth.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title reads, “A Shiggaion of David, which he sang to the LORD concerning the words of Cush, a Benjaminite.” We do not know who Cush was, but the setting is likely during the years when Saul, a Benjaminite, was pursuing David on false charges. The psalm is a cry for vindication from a man who has been slandered. It is placed here, right after the reading about Saul’s pursuit.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “O LORD my God, in you do I take refuge; save me from all my pursuers and deliver me” (v. 1).
2. “O LORD my God, if I have done this, if there is wrong in my hands… then let the enemy pursue my soul and overtake it” (vv. 3-5).
3. “Arise, O LORD, in your anger… awake for me; you have appointed a judgment” (v. 6).
4. “God is a righteous judge, and a God who feels indignation every day” (v. 11).
5. “Behold, the wicked man conceives evil and is pregnant with mischief and gives birth to lies” (v. 14).
6. “He makes a pit, digging it out, and falls into the hole that he has made” (v. 15).
7. “His mischief returns upon his own head, and on his own skull his violence descends” (v. 16).

8 “I will give to the LORD the thanks due to his righteousness, and sing praise to the name of the LORD, the Most High” (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David’s prayer here is bold. He asks God to examine him, and says that if he has done what his enemies say, then they may overtake him. This is not pride. It is a clear conscience before God on this particular charge. He is not claiming to be sinless, but he is saying that on this issue, he is innocent.

His great appeal is to God as judge. “God is a righteous judge.” When we are slandered, we are often tempted to take revenge or to defend ourselves at all costs. David takes the better way. He brings the case to the highest court and asks the Judge to rule. It is an act of trust, and it frees him from the need to retaliate. We will see this in his own behavior when he spares Saul’s life in the next chapters.

The image in verses 14 to 16 is memorable. The wicked person conceives, is pregnant with evil, and gives birth to lies. Evil has a life cycle. The person digs a pit for others, and falls into it himself. The universe has a moral structure, and sin often brings its own consequences. It is a warning to the wicked and a comfort to the wronged.

The psalm begins with refuge and ends with praise. The pattern is typical: David brings his case, rests it with God, and moves to thanksgiving before he has seen the verdict. The title of “Most High” for God reminds him that no earthly power can stand against the one who rules over everything.

The psalm is not an invitation to vindictiveness. It places justice in God’s hands. Paul would later say, “Never avenge yourselves, but leave it to the wrath of God” (Romans 12:19).

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus was falsely accused and “entrusted himself to him who judges justly” (1 Peter 2:23). He is the Righteous One, and he will return to judge the living and the dead (Acts 17:31). On the cross he committed his spirit to the Father (Luke 23:46). The wicked fall into their own pits, but the cross shows that God can turn even the pit into salvation (Acts 2:23-24).

STEP 6

Application

If you have been falsely accused or treated unjustly, bring the case to God rather than defending yourself in anger.

Search your own heart honestly, as David did. Is there anything you need to confess?

Give thanks that God is a righteous judge.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to search your heart and show you where you have sinned.
- Leave in his hands a wrong done to you.
- Thank Jesus for trusting the Father with his cause.

1 SAMUEL 16:7

DAY 251 · WEEK 36

Psalm 11; Psalm 12

In the LORD I take refuge; save, O LORD

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 17 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 11 and Psalm 12. Both psalms respond to a world where the foundations seem to be crumbling. Notice what David says about the LORD in each.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 11 was written when David's friends were advising him to flee like a bird to the mountains. Psalm 12 laments the decline of honest speech in the community. Both are attributed to David and fit the period of Saul's persecution, when the order of the kingdom was breaking down. They are paired here because together they address the question of what to do when righteousness seems to be losing.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In the LORD I take refuge; how can you say to my soul, Flee like a bird to your mountain" (11:1).
2. "If the foundations are destroyed, what can the righteous do?" (11:3).
3. "The LORD is in his holy temple; the LORD's throne is in heaven; his eyes see, his eyelids test the children of man" (11:4).
4. "For the LORD is righteous; he loves righteous deeds; the upright shall behold his face" (11:7).
5. "Save, O LORD, for the godly one is gone; for the faithful have vanished from among the children of man" (12:1).
6. "Everyone utters lies to his neighbor; with flattering lips and a double heart they speak" (12:2).

7. “Because the poor are plundered, because the needy groan, I will now arise, says the LORD; I will place him in the safety for which he longs” (12:5).

8. “The words of the LORD are pure words, like silver refined in a furnace on the ground, purified seven times” (12:6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 11 begins with a tempting suggestion from friends: run. “The wicked bend the bow; they have fitted their arrow to the string to shoot in the dark at the upright in heart.” Things look dangerous, and the foundations of order are shaking. The question, “What can the righteous do?” is an honest one. David’s answer is not to deny the danger but to look past it: “The LORD is in his holy temple; the LORD’s throne is in heaven.” The foundations may shake, but the throne does not.

The point is that God sees. His eyes “test the children of man.” He is not absent, and he is not passive. He loves righteous deeds, and he will deal with the wicked. For those who trust him, the final promise is the best: “The upright shall behold his face.” To see God’s face is the greatest reward of the faithful.

Psalm 12 turns to a different danger: the corruption of speech. Lies, flattery, and the boasting of the proud have taken over. The godly seem to have vanished. Anyone who feels isolated in their commitment to truth will recognize the mood. David does not hide the situation, and he brings it to God.

God answers in the middle of the psalm, in his own voice. “Because the poor are plundered, because the needy groan, I will now arise.” He hears the groaning of the poor, and he acts. It is one of the most comforting words in the Psalter.

The contrast with human words is stark. The speech of men is double-hearted, but “the words of the LORD are pure words, like silver refined in a furnace.” When all speech around us is unreliable, the word of God is the one thing we can trust completely. He will keep us and guard us from this generation forever.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the truth (John 14:6), the Word who is himself pure and without deceit (1 Peter 2:22). Hebrews 12:27-28 speaks of receiving a kingdom that cannot be shaken. He is in heaven now, at the right hand of the throne (Hebrews 8:1). Matthew 5:8 says, “Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God,” echoing Psalm 11:7. Revelation 22:4 says, “They will see his face.”

STEP 6

Application

When you feel the urge to flee, remember that the LORD is on his throne.

Examine your own speech this week. Where is there flattery or exaggeration in it?

Open your Bible with trust that these words are pure and reliable.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what feels shaken in your life right now.
- Ask him to keep your lips from flattery and your heart undivided.
- Thank him that his words are pure and trustworthy.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read 1 Samuel 16:7 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Man looks on the outward appearance, but the LORD looks on the heart."

1 SAMUEL 16:7

REST

Meditation

God says this to Samuel as he stands before Jesse's oldest son, tall and impressive. It is a correction to every human way of judging.

"Man looks on the outward appearance." We evaluate people by how they look, speak, and perform. We do it to others, and we do it to ourselves. Entire industries run on this habit, and so do many of our fears. We worry about how we appear.

"But the LORD looks on the heart." God sees what is hidden. He sees motives, desires, loves, and fears. This can be frightening, because nothing is concealed from him. But it is also freeing. If he sees the heart, then the person who is overlooked, the one who is left with the sheep, may be the one he has chosen. And the one who looks impressive may be empty.

David was not chosen for his strength or his looks. The next passage says he was handsome, but that was not why. God saw a heart that was oriented toward him. Even so, David's heart was not perfect, as the coming chapters will show. The verse does not say that David's heart was without sin, only that it was what God was looking for.

For the Christian, there is both warning and comfort. Warning, because religious appearances do not impress him. Comfort, because he sees our sincere faith even when we feel weak, and because the righteousness we stand in is not our own but Christ's. Pray the words of Psalm 139: "Search me, O God, and know my heart."

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read of Saul's rejection and the choosing of David. You saw Jonathan's bold faith, and Saul's partial obedience in the war with Amalek, with Samuel's verdict that to obey is better than sacrifice. You read how God looked past Jesse's older sons to anoint the shepherd boy, and how David met Goliath in the name of the LORD of hosts. You saw Saul's jealousy grow, and the covenant friendship of David and Jonathan. In the Psalms you prayed with David in his weeping, and in a time of false accusation, and in a world where the foundations were shaking. The week taught that God judges by the heart, that the battle belongs to the LORD, and that he is a refuge for the oppressed.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

God looks at the heart and not at appearances. What part of your heart do you most need to bring into the light?

David was a shepherd who became a champion for his people. How does Jesus, the greater Shepherd and Champion, give you hope in a battle you cannot win?

Jonathan gave up his claim to the throne out of loyalty. Where is God asking you to put his purposes ahead of your own advancement?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to search your heart and lead you in the way everlasting.

Thank Jesus for fighting for you and winning.

Rest in his care today.

DAY 253 · WEEK 37

Psalm 13; Psalm 14

How long?, and: the LORD looks down from heaven

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 13 and Psalm 14. Psalm 13 is a short lament that ends in trust, and Psalm 14 describes the state of humanity without God. Read the two together.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Both psalms are attributed to David. Psalm 13 is the shortest of the great laments, with only six verses, and many readers have found that it expresses the experience of waiting on God better than any other. Psalm 14 is a sober assessment of human sin, which Paul quotes in Romans 3. They are paired in the Psalter, and here they sit during David's years on the run, when answers were slow to come.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "How long, O LORD? Will you forget me forever? How long will you hide your face from me?" (13:1).
2. "How long must I take counsel in my soul and have sorrow in my heart all the day?" (13:2).
3. "Light up my eyes, lest I sleep the sleep of death" (13:3).
4. "But I have trusted in your steadfast love; my heart shall rejoice in your salvation" (13:5).
5. "I will sing to the LORD, because he has dealt bountifully with me" (13:6).
6. "The fool says in his heart, There is no God" (14:1).
7. "The LORD looks down from heaven on the children of man, to see if there are any who understand, who seek after God" (14:2).

8 “They have all turned aside; together they have become corrupt; there is none who does good, not even one” (14:3).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The structure of Psalm 13 is a model for lament. First comes the complaint, four times repeated: “How long?” David feels forgotten, hidden from, and abandoned in his own thoughts. Second comes the request: “Consider and answer me, O LORD my God.” Third comes the turn: “But I have trusted in your steadfast love.” The final line is a vow of praise.

The turn is the key. Nothing has changed in David’s situation. There is no explanation of how the enemy will be defeated. What changes is that David decides to trust. The word “trusted” is in the past tense, as though he were holding on to what he already knows. He recalls the covenant love of God and remembers that he has been dealt with bountifully before. Lament leads to trust not by getting answers, but by returning to what God has already revealed about himself.

Psalm 14 is darker. The fool, in the Bible, is not someone of low intelligence but a person who lives as though there were no God. The fool says it “in his heart,” meaning that it is a practical atheism more than a formal argument. The result is corruption. The psalm describes God looking down over the whole human race and finding no one who seeks him.

This is a hard truth, and it is the basis of the gospel. “There is none who does good, not even one.” Human beings cannot find their own way to God. Paul uses these lines in Romans 3 to prove that all, Jew and Gentile, are under sin.

Yet the psalm ends with hope: “Oh, that salvation for Israel would come out of Zion!” If humans cannot save themselves, then salvation must come from God. And the psalm says that God is “the refuge” of the poor and that he is with the generation of the righteous.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Psalm 14:1-3 in Romans 3:10-12 to show that all are under sin, and then shows that God’s righteousness comes by faith in Christ (Romans 3:21-26). Salvation did come out of Zion in Jesus (Romans 11:26). Jesus cried, “My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?” (Matthew 27:46) so that we might never be forsaken. Ephesians 2:4-5 says that God, being rich in mercy, made us alive.

STEP 6

Application

If you are in a long season of waiting, pray Psalm 13 aloud as your own.

Notice where you live as a practical atheist, making plans without God.

Thank God that salvation did come out of Zion.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God how long you have been waiting, and what for.

Confess where you have lived as though there were no God.

Thank him for sending salvation.

PSALM 18:2

DAY 254 · WEEK 37

1 Samuel 21:1-23:29

David flees; Ahimelech; David at Adullam

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 84 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 21:1-23:29. David is now a fugitive. Notice the mix of fear, faith, and God's guidance in these chapters, and read the horror of chapter 22 carefully.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

David has escaped from Saul's court and has nothing: no weapons, no army, and no safe place. He flees first to Nob, where the priest Ahimelech helps him, and then to Gath, to the cave of Adullam, and elsewhere. A band of distressed men gathers around him. Saul's pursuit becomes more violent, and the priests of Nob pay a terrible price. Through it all, David inquires of the LORD and is guided.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David lies to Ahimelech and receives the bread of the Presence and Goliath's sword (21:1-9).
2. In Gath, David feigns madness before King Achish to escape (21:10-15).
3. At the cave of Adullam, "everyone who was in distress, and everyone who was in debt, and everyone who was bitter in soul, gathered to him" (22:2).
4. Doeg the Edomite reports David's visit to Nob, and at Saul's order he strikes down eighty-five priests (22:9-19).
5. Abiathar, one son of Ahimelech, escapes and joins David (22:20-23).
6. David asks the LORD, "Shall I go and attack these Philistines?" and the LORD says, "Go" (23:2).

7. Jonathan visits David and says, “You shall be king over Israel, and I shall be next to you” (23:16-17).

8. Saul almost captures David at the wilderness of Maon, but is called away by a Philistine raid (23:26-29).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David’s flight shows that being chosen by God is not the same as being comfortable. He has been anointed king, and he is in a cave. The pattern is clear in many Bible stories: before glory comes hardship, and God uses the wilderness to shape his servants. David was formed as a king in the same years that he was hunted as an outlaw.

His behavior in these chapters is mixed. His lie to Ahimelech has terrible consequences, and David later admits his responsibility: “I have occasioned the death of all the persons of your father’s house” (22:22). Scripture does not hide the flaws of its heroes. David is not the model king because he never fails. He is the model because he repents, inquires of the LORD, and clings to God’s promises.

The band that gathers at Adullam is striking. The distressed, the indebted, and the bitter come to him. This is a company of misfits, and David becomes their captain. It is an image of what a faithful king does: he receives those who have nowhere else to go.

The massacre at Nob is one of the darkest scenes in the book. Saul’s own officers refuse to touch the priests, and the Edomite Doeg does it. A king who began with the Spirit of God is now killing the LORD’s priests. The anger that began as envy ends in sacrilege.

Against the darkness, the LORD guides David. Again and again, David inquires through the ephod, and God answers. In chapter 23, the people of Keilah would betray him, but God warns him, and he escapes. Jonathan comes to him “and strengthened his hand in God.” The chapter ends with a narrow escape, which the place name records as “the Rock of Escape.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus, the Son of David, was also rejected by his own, and in his ministry those in distress, in debt, and bitter of soul gathered to him (Luke 15:1; Matthew 11:28). Jesus cited David’s eating of the bread of the Presence to show that mercy outranks ritual (Matthew 12:3-4). Hebrews 11:38 says of the faithful that they “wandered about in deserts and mountains and in dens and caves of the earth.”

STEP 6

Application

If you are in a wilderness season, remember that God may be forming you.

Ask God for guidance in a decision, as David did, before you act.

Think about who the “distressed, indebted, and bitter” are around you, and how you might welcome them.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God about a wilderness where you feel he is forming you.

Thank Jesus for welcoming those who have nowhere else to go.

Ask him to strengthen you in him.

PSALM 18:2

DAY 255 · WEEK 37

1 Samuel 24:1-26:25

David spares Saul twice; Abigail's wisdom

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 80 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 24:1-26:25. David has two chances to kill Saul, and he refuses both. Notice his reasoning each time, and how he deals with the foolish Nabal in chapter 25.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Saul pursues David with three thousand men. In a cave at En-gedi, Saul unknowingly enters the very cave where David and his men are hiding. In chapter 26, David finds Saul asleep in his camp. Between these two scenes comes the story of Nabal, a rich, foolish man who insults David, and Abigail, his wise wife, who prevents David from taking revenge. The three stories together form a lesson on restraint.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David's men say, "Here is the day of which the LORD said to you, Behold, I will give your enemy into your hand" (24:4).
2. David cuts off a corner of Saul's robe, and his heart strikes him (24:5).
3. "I will not put out my hand against my lord, for he is the LORD's anointed" (24:10).
4. Saul weeps and says, "You are more righteous than I, for you have repaid me good, whereas I have repaid you evil" (24:17).
5. Nabal's name means "fool," and he insults David's men and refuses them bread (25:3-11).
6. Abigail brings food and says, "Let this be no cause of grief to my lord… that you have avenged yourself with your own hand" (25:31).
7. David says, "Blessed be the LORD… who has sent you this day to meet me! Blessed be your discretion" (25:32-33).

8 In chapter 26, David again spares Saul, and says, “The LORD rewards every man for his righteousness and his faithfulness” (26:23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

These three chapters ask what we do when we have the power to repay a wrong. David is not a weak man. He has a company of warriors. He is fleeing for his life. Saul has tried to kill him many times. When he has the chance, his men tell him that God has given his enemy into his hand. They might even say it with scriptural confidence. But David will not touch the LORD’s anointed.

His reason is not weakness. It is faith. If God has promised him the throne, God will give it in his own time. David does not need to seize it. To kill Saul would be to take for himself what God has promised to give. Instead of grasping, he waits. This is the opposite of Saul’s attitude in 1 Samuel 13.

Nabal provides a test of a different kind. David’s anger is provoked by an ordinary insult, and he sets out to wipe out Nabal’s household. Abigail, wise and quick, intervenes. She brings gifts and speaks gracefully, and she reminds David of his calling. “Let it not be a cause of grief or pangs of conscience to my lord that you have shed blood without cause.” David hears her, and he praises God. It is a healthy sign that the king can be corrected, even by a woman he has never met.

Not every enemy is a Saul. Some are just fools. And the response is different. David is stopped by Abigail’s wisdom, and later Nabal dies when the LORD strikes him.

The refrain of the section is that vengeance belongs to the LORD. “The LORD will judge between me and you,” David says to Saul. When David leaves vengeance to God, he is free from guilt. And the lesson is not passivity, but trust that God will do justice.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you” (Matthew 5:44), and on the cross he prayed, “Father, forgive them” (Luke 23:34). Paul says, “Repay no one evil for evil… leave it to the wrath of God” (Romans 12:17-19). Peter holds up Christ as the one who “when he was reviled, did not revile in return” (1 Peter 2:23). Abigail is a peacemaker, like those Jesus called blessed (Matthew 5:9).

STEP 6

Application

Name someone who has wronged you. Pray for them today, and entrust them to God.

Ask whether you are trying to take by your own hand something that God has promised to give.

Thank God for the people who have corrected you with wisdom.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give God the desire to repay a wrong done to you.

Ask him for David's restraint and Abigail's wisdom.

Thank Jesus for praying for his enemies.

PSALM 18:2

DAY 256 · WEEK 37

Psalm 18:1-30

The LORD is my rock and my fortress

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 30 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 18:1-30. This is David's great song of deliverance. Today read the first half, with its images of rescue and its confession of who God is.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title says David spoke this song "to the LORD on the day when the LORD rescued him from the hand of all his enemies, and from the hand of Saul." It is also found, with small changes, in 2 Samuel 22, which you will read soon. Psalm 18 looks back on all of David's flight and sums up what he learned. It stands here at the end of the years of fleeing, as David's own testimony.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I love you, O LORD, my strength" (v. 1).
2. "The LORD is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer, my God, my rock, in whom I take refuge, my shield, and the horn of my salvation, my stronghold" (v. 2).
3. "The cords of death encompassed me; the torrents of destruction assailed me" (v. 4).
4. "In my distress I called upon the LORD; to my God I cried for help. From his temple he heard my voice" (v. 6).
5. "Then the earth reeled and rocked; the foundations also of the mountains trembled" (v. 7).
6. "He rode on a cherub and flew; he came swiftly on the wings of the wind" (v. 10).
7. "He sent from on high, he took me; he drew me out of many waters" (v. 16).

8 “He brought me out into a broad place; he rescued me, because he delighted in me” (v. 19).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with love: “I love you, O LORD.” It is not an argument or a doctrine. It is an expression of the heart. And then David piles up images, seven of them in one verse: rock, fortress, deliverer, refuge, shield, horn of salvation, stronghold. He has been in caves and on cliffs, and he knows what a rock is. But he says that God is the true rock.

Then he describes the danger. The cords of death were around him. The torrents of destruction rushed at him. He was close to dying. And in that place, “I called upon the LORD.” This is the pattern of the whole Psalter: crying out, and being heard.

The description of God’s response is a spectacular poem. The earth shakes, smoke rises from his nostrils, he parts the heavens and comes down. The language is that of a storm and an earthquake, the imagery of the exodus and of Sinai. God comes to rescue one man in a cave. David is saying that the God of Sinai is the God who hears one frightened servant. His power is not remote but personal.

The rescue is described tenderly: “He drew me out of many waters.” The word for “drew” is the same as the one used for Moses (Exodus 2:10). “He brought me out into a broad place.” After years in narrow caves, David is brought to a spacious place. Why? “Because he delighted in me.” Behind the whole rescue is God’s delight in his servant. It is grace.

In verses 20 to 30, David speaks of his own righteousness. This must be read in context. He is not claiming sinlessness before God, but declaring that in the matter of his conflict with Saul, he has kept faith. And he rests on the principle that “with the merciful you show yourself merciful.” The final line of today’s reading is a famous one: “This God, his way is perfect; the word of the LORD proves true; he is a shield for all those who take refuge in him.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the ultimate rescued one. He was in the “cords of death,” and God raised him (Acts 2:24). Paul quotes verse 49 in Romans 15:9. Zechariah calls Christ “a horn of salvation” in Luke 1:69. Colossians 1:13 says that God “has delivered us from the domain of darkness.” And Psalm 18:2’s rock is Christ himself (1 Corinthians 10:4).

STEP 6

Application

Begin your prayer today with “I love you, O LORD.” Mean it.

Write down a time God brought you into a “broad place” after a narrow one.

Read verse 30 slowly: “His way is perfect.” Where do you struggle to believe it?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

PSALM 18:2

DAY 257 · WEEK 37

Psalm 18:31-50

He trains my hands for war

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 18:31-50. The second half of David's song moves from God's character to David's victories, and ends in praise among the nations.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The first half of the psalm praised God as rescuer. The second half describes how God equips David for battle, gives him victory, and establishes his kingdom. It ends with a promise to praise God among the nations and a reference to "his anointed" and his offspring forever. This looks forward to the covenant you will read in 2 Samuel 7.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "For who is God, but the LORD? And who is a rock, except our God?" (v. 31).
2. "The God who equipped me with strength and made my way blameless" (v. 32).
3. "He makes my feet like the feet of a deer and sets me secure on the heights" (v. 33).
4. "You have given me the shield of your salvation, and your right hand supported me, and your gentleness made me great" (v. 35).
5. "You made me the head of the nations; people whom I had not known served me" (v. 43).
6. "The LORD lives, and blessed be my rock, and exalted be the God of my salvation" (v. 46).
7. "For this I will praise you, O LORD, among the nations, and sing to your name" (v. 49).
8. "Great salvation he brings to his king, and shows steadfast love to his anointed, to David and his offspring forever" (v. 50).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The second half of the psalm gives God credit for everything David has achieved. “The God who equipped me with strength.” “He trains my hands for war.” “You have given me the shield of your salvation.” David was a skilled warrior, but he does not say it. He says that God made him able. It is a model of how a believer should speak of any success.

One phrase stands out: “Your gentleness made me great.” The word is often translated “condescension” or “humility.” It is the picture of the great God bending down to raise a shepherd boy. David’s greatness is the result of God’s stooping. It is perhaps the most beautiful line in the psalm. God does not merely give power; he gives it with gentleness.

In verses 37 to 42, David describes his victories, in the strong language of ancient warfare. The point is not violence for its own sake, but the defeat of the enemies of God’s anointed. The nations that were hostile come to serve. David’s kingdom is established, and the psalm hints that it extends to people he had not known.

The ending is the most important part. David vows to praise God among the nations, a surprising foreshadowing of the mission of Israel to the world. And the last verse points beyond David: “Great salvation he brings to his king, and shows steadfast love to his anointed, to David and his offspring forever.” The promise is for David’s descendants. This is what God will say in the covenant of 2 Samuel 7.

The psalm is a model of how to remember. It begins with love and ends with a promise. Everything in between is thanksgiving for what God has done.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes verse 49 in Romans 15:9 to show that the Messiah praises God among the Gentiles. Jesus is “David’s offspring forever,” the anointed who brings great salvation (Luke 1:32-33). Matthew 11:29 says that Jesus is “gentle and lowly in heart.” Philippians 2:5-11 shows him humbling himself and being exalted. Hebrews 2:13 puts words of Psalm 18 on Christ’s lips.

STEP 6

Application

When you succeed at something, practice saying, “God equipped me.”

Think about a time when God’s gentleness, not force, brought you through.

Pray for the nations to come to praise him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for equipping and supporting you.

Thank him for his gentleness that makes you great.

Pray that his salvation would reach the nations.

PSALM 18:2

DAY 258 · WEEK 37

Psalm 54; Psalm 59

O God, save me by your name; deliver me from my enemies

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 16 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 54 and Psalm 59. Both come from the years when David was hunted by Saul, and both are brief prayers of someone surrounded by enemies. Notice how each ends.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 54 has the title "when the Ziphites went and told Saul, Is not David hiding among us?" (see 1 Samuel 23:19). Psalm 59 was written "when Saul sent men to watch his house in order to kill him" (see 1 Samuel 19:11). They are two snapshots from the same terrifying period, in which David was betrayed by neighbors and cornered in his own home.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O God, save me by your name, and vindicate me by your might" (54:1).
2. "For strangers have risen against me; ruthless men seek my life; they do not set God before themselves" (54:3).
3. "Behold, God is my helper; the Lord is the upholder of my life" (54:4).
4. "With a freewill offering I will sacrifice to you; I will give thanks to your name, O LORD, for it is good" (54:6).
5. "Deliver me from my enemies, O my God; protect me from those who rise up against me" (59:1).
6. "They come back at evening, howling like dogs and prowling about the city" (59:6).
7. "O my Strength, I will watch for you, for you, O God, are my fortress" (59:9).
8. "But I will sing of your strength; I will sing aloud of your steadfast love in the morning. For you have been to me a fortress and a refuge in the day of my distress" (59:16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 54 is among the shortest prayers in the Psalter, and it is a model of how to pray when under pressure. There are three movements. First, a cry for help. Second, a statement of trust: “Behold, God is my helper.” Third, a vow of thanksgiving. The “Behold” invites us to look. David is surrounded by enemies, but he asks us to look at the one who is on his side.

The Ziphites were from David’s own tribe of Judah. He was betrayed by his own people. This hurts. In the psalm, he describes them as “strangers,” and says they do not set God before them. The people we expect to defend us sometimes fail.

Psalm 59 comes from a house under siege. Saul’s men wait outside to kill David in the morning, and Michal helps him escape through a window. The psalm uses the image of dogs prowling at night, hungry, circling the city. It is a picture of terror. And yet the psalm repeatedly describes God as a fortress and a strength. David does not try to defeat the dogs. He turns to the one who is higher.

An important feature is the contrast between night and morning. The enemies prowl at evening. David sings in the morning. The long night of fear gives way to the dawn of praise. He says he will “watch” for God, like a watchman waiting for the sun.

What makes these psalms Christian prayers is the closing note. David promises to sing about the steadfast love of God, even before he has been rescued. This is faith that praises in advance. The believer does not wait for a perfect outcome before giving thanks.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus was betrayed by one of his own (John 13:18), and those who came to arrest him came at night with swords and clubs (Luke 22:52-53). Psalm 59:4-5 and 54:3 describe the hostility Jesus faced. Paul says, “If God is for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31). Hebrews 13:6 quotes Psalm 118 but echoes the same confidence: “The Lord is my helper; I will not fear.”

STEP 6

Application

Memorize Psalm 54:4, “Behold, God is my helper.” Repeat it when you feel alone.

If you have been betrayed by someone close, bring it to God. He knows.

Practice morning praise: begin tomorrow by singing of his steadfast love.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God about those who surround or trouble you.
- Ask him to be your fortress and refuge.
- Sing of his strength and love in your own words.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 18:2 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The LORD is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer, my God, my rock, in whom I take refuge, my shield, and the horn of my salvation, my stronghold."

PSALM 18:2

REST

Meditation

This verse comes from a man who has lived in caves and on cliffs, and who knows what shelter is worth. David loads one sentence with seven images of God.

A rock is solid ground. When everything else is shifting, it holds. A fortress is a strong place that an enemy cannot enter. A deliverer pulls out of danger. A refuge is a place to hide, and a shield is a defense held up between you and an arrow. A horn of salvation is a symbol of strength and victory, like the horn of a wild ox. A stronghold is a high place that cannot be reached.

Each image answers a different fear. When you feel unstable, God is a rock. When you feel attacked, he is a fortress and a shield. When you are trapped, he is a deliverer. When you are exposed, he is a refuge. When you feel weak, he is a horn of salvation. When you feel overwhelmed, he is a stronghold. David does not say that God gives these things. He says that God is these things.

Notice the repeated "my." David is not describing a general idea of divine power. He is speaking of the LORD as his own. It is personal faith.

Christians have always read this verse in the light of Christ. He is the rock (1 Corinthians 10:4), the cornerstone (1 Peter 2:6), the shield of faith's defender (Ephesians 6:16), and the horn of salvation raised up for us (Luke 1:69). Each time you read this verse, you may fill in the name of Jesus.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed David as a fugitive. You read how the priests at Nob were slaughtered, how the distressed and the indebted gathered to David at Adullam, and how God guided him through the wilderness. You saw David spare Saul twice, and you saw Abigail turn aside his anger against Nabal. In the Psalms, you heard David's love for the LORD in Psalm 18, his testimony of rescue and the God who equips with gentleness, and prayers in Psalms 54 and 59 from the hardest nights. The week taught that vengeance belongs to the LORD, that waiting is an act of faith, and that the God who delivers is both a rock and a gentle helper.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

David refused to seize the throne by force and waited on God's timing. What is God asking you to wait for rather than grab?

David praised God as rock, fortress, and deliverer. Which of those images do you most need this week, and how does Jesus fulfill it?

Abigail's wisdom turned David from a sin. Who has God used to correct you, and how might you thank them?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he is your rock, fortress, and deliverer.

Thank him for the gentleness that makes you great.

Rest in his protection today.

DAY 260 · WEEK 38

Psalm 64; Psalm 70

Hide me from the wicked; make haste, O God, to deliver me

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 14 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 64 and Psalm 70. One is a prayer against slander and secret plots, and the other is a short cry for speedy help. Notice how each ends with confidence.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These two psalms are attributed to David and belong to the years of his persecution. Psalm 64 speaks of hidden enemies who sharpen their tongues like swords, and Psalm 70 is a five-verse petition, repeated almost word for word in Psalm 40:13-17. Both are brief, urgent, and honest.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “Hear my voice, O God, in my complaint; preserve my life from dread of the enemy” (64:1).
2. “Who whet their tongues like swords, who aim bitter words like arrows” (64:3).
3. “They hold fast to their evil purpose; they talk of laying snares secretly, thinking, Who can see them?” (64:5).
4. “But God shoots his arrow at them; they are wounded suddenly” (64:7).
5. “Then all mankind fears; they tell what God has brought about and ponder what he has done” (64:9).
6. “Let the righteous one rejoice in the LORD and take refuge in him!” (64:10).
7. “Make haste, O God, to deliver me! O LORD, make haste to help me!” (70:1).
8. “But I am poor and needy; hasten to me, O God! You are my help and my deliverer; O LORD, do not delay!” (70:5).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 64 is about the weapon of the tongue. David's enemies do not use swords. They use words, and they use them in secret. "They talk of laying snares secretly, thinking, Who can see them?" It is the voice of a conspiracy, of whispering and plotting. Slander is among the oldest weapons, and it is hard to defend against because it works in the dark.

David's answer is to bring the matter to God, who sees what is hidden. The whole psalm turns on the reversal of verse 7. The enemies shoot arrows from ambush, but God shoots an arrow at them. The ones who thought no one could see them are seen. "They are wounded suddenly." The tongues they used against others are turned back on themselves.

The result is awe. All mankind fears, and tells what God has done. The justice of God, when it falls, is a lesson to the world. And the righteous rejoice and take refuge. The psalm ends not with revenge, but with refuge.

Psalm 70 is shorter and more urgent. "Make haste" appears twice. David is in an emergency, and he does not pretend otherwise. His request is simple: help me, now. He describes himself as "poor and needy." It is the best position from which to pray. The person who knows they have nothing to offer can only receive.

Even in this hurried prayer, there is room for the praise of others: "May all who seek you rejoice and be glad in you! May those who love your salvation say evermore, God is great!" David cannot help thinking of others.

Together these prayers teach us two things. First, God sees what is done in secret. Second, we may pray urgently and simply, and we do not need elaborate words.

STEP 5

Connection

James 3:5-8 calls the tongue a fire and a restless evil, and Jesus warned that we will give an account for every careless word (Matthew 12:36). He was himself the target of plots made in secret (Mark 14:1). Psalm 64:3 is echoed in Revelation, and the "arrow" language has a New Testament counterpart in Romans 12:19. The poor and needy have a special place with Christ (Matthew 5:3; 2 Corinthians 8:9).

STEP 6

Application

If you have been the target of gossip, bring it to God. He sees what is hidden.

Examine your own tongue. Is there a whisper you should stop?

When you need help urgently, pray Psalm 70:5 as a short prayer.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to protect you from slander and to keep your tongue from harming others.
- Tell him you are poor and needy.
- Ask him to hasten to help you.

DAY 261 · WEEK 38

1 Samuel 27:1-31:13

David among the Philistines; the witch of Endor; Saul's death

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 78 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Samuel 27:1-31:13. These chapters show David in Philistine territory, Saul's last night, and the end of Saul's reign. Read chapter 28 and chapter 31 with care.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Weary of running, David says in his heart, "I shall be swept away one day by the hand of Saul," and he takes refuge among the Philistines at Ziklag. Saul, meanwhile, faces the Philistine army at Gilboa with no word from God. He goes to a medium at Endor. The book ends with Saul's defeat and death on Mount Gilboa. It is a sober ending to the story of Israel's first king.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David lives among the Philistines for a year and four months and raids the Geshurites and Amalekites (27:1-12).
2. Saul, afraid, inquires of the LORD, "but the LORD did not answer him, either by dreams, or by Urim, or by prophets" (28:6).
3. Saul disguises himself and visits the medium at Endor, though he himself had expelled mediums (28:3, 7-8).
4. The spirit says, "Tomorrow you and your sons shall be with me" (28:19).
5. David returns to Ziklag to find it burned and the families taken, and "David strengthened himself in the LORD his God" (30:6).
6. David pursues and recovers everything, and divides the spoil fairly (30:7-25).

7. The Philistines defeat Israel at Gilboa; Jonathan and his brothers are killed, and Saul falls on his sword (31:1-6).
8. The men of Jabesh-gilead remember Saul's rescue of their city, and recover his body (31:11-13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David's choice to live among the Philistines is a low point for him. He is tired, and his faith slips. "David said in his heart, Now I shall perish." He does not ask the LORD. The man who has inquired of God so faithfully now decides on his own. He lies to the king of Gath and raids Israel's enemies while pretending to raid Judah. It is a messy period, and the narrative does not hide it. Even a man after God's own heart can have seasons of fear.

Saul's last night is among the saddest in the Bible. God is silent. And Saul, who had banished mediums, seeks out a medium. When the spirit appears, it announces the end of his kingdom and his life. Saul falls to the ground in terror and has no strength left. He had refused to obey God when he was able, and now God does not answer. It is a picture of the cost of persistent rebellion.

Chapter 30 is the counterweight. David returns to find Ziklag burned and his wives and children captured. His own men talk of stoning him. This is his lowest moment. And here is the most important sentence: "David strengthened himself in the LORD his God." He turns to God. He asks through the ephod, and God says, "Pursue, for you shall surely overtake and shall surely rescue." And so it happens.

The contrast with Saul is deliberate. Saul, in distress, consults a medium. David, in distress, strengthens himself in the LORD. Their endings differ accordingly.

Chapter 31 closes the story of Saul with a death that is tragic rather than triumphant. He dies in battle with his sons. Yet the men of Jabesh-gilead show loyalty and honor him. The book ends not with David's triumph but with a funeral. The way to the throne is open, but it is paved with grief.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus was tempted to take shortcuts but trusted the Father (Matthew 4). Hebrews 3:12-13 warns against hardening our hearts in unbelief. When Jesus was alone in the garden he found his strength in prayer (Luke 22:43-44). Paul says, "Be strong in the Lord and in the strength of his might" (Ephesians 6:10), and, "I can do all things through him who strengthens me" (Philippians 4:13).

STEP 6

Application

When you are discouraged, practice “strengthening yourself in the LORD.” What does that look like for you?

Think about where you turn first when you are afraid. Is it God, or something else?

Pray for someone who has hardened their heart to listen again.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what makes you afraid, and ask him to strengthen you.

Ask him to keep you from seeking answers in the dark.

Thank Jesus, who turned to the Father and never failed.

DAY 262 · WEEK 38

2 Samuel 1:1-3:39

David mourns Saul; anointed over Judah; Ish-bosheth

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 72 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 1:1-3:39. David grieves for Saul and Jonathan, and becomes king, first over Judah and then over a divided kingdom. Read his lament in chapter 1 carefully.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The second book of Samuel opens with a messenger bringing news of Saul's death. David's response is grief, not triumph. After the lament, God directs David to Hebron, where he is anointed king over Judah. For seven and a half years, there is civil war between David's house and the house of Saul. Abner, Saul's commander, eventually switches sides, and is murdered by Joab.

STEP 3

Observation

1. A man claims to have killed Saul and brings his crown to David. David has him executed because he "stretched out your hand to destroy the LORD's anointed" (1:14-16).
2. David's lament: "How the mighty have fallen!" (1:19, 25, 27).
3. "Saul and Jonathan, beloved and lovely! In life and in death they were not divided" (1:23).
4. "I am distressed for you, my brother Jonathan; very pleasant have you been to me; your love to me was extraordinary, surpassing the love of women" (1:26).
5. David inquires of the LORD, goes up to Hebron, and is anointed king over Judah (2:1-4).
6. "There was a long war between the house of Saul and the house of David. And David grew stronger and stronger" (3:1).

7. Abner makes a covenant with David, and Joab kills Abner in revenge for his brother (3:12-27).

8. David mourns Abner and says, “Do you not know that a prince and a great man has fallen this day in Israel?” (3:31-38).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David’s first act as the next king is to weep. The man who brings Saul’s crown expects a reward, but David has him killed. David has consistently honored Saul as the LORD’s anointed, and he will not profit from his death, even by a messenger’s lie. There is no gloating in his heart.

The lament in chapter 1 is a work of poetry and of real love. David praises Saul, who had pursued him for years, and Jonathan, his friend. He does not mention Saul’s failures. He mourns a king who fell, and he honors the good. The refrain “How the mighty have fallen!” echoes through the poem like a bell. It teaches that grief for the fallen is compatible with God’s judgment, and that we should be slow to speak ill of the dead.

When David is anointed in Hebron, he is told to go there by the LORD. He inquires. He has learned the lesson of dependence. But notice that he does not rush to take the whole kingdom. The war between the houses lasts seven years. He waits, and “David grew stronger and stronger, while the house of Saul grew weaker and weaker.”

The story of Abner and Joab shows the dangers of power. Abner brings the northern tribes over to David, a great peace. But Joab, for personal revenge, murders Abner. It is a stain on David’s reign. David declares his innocence, curses Joab’s house, and mourns publicly. He composes another lament for Abner. The people are pleased, “for all the people took note of it.” Yet David admits, “I am this day weak, though anointed king” (3:39). He is aware of the limits of his power.

The chapters teach that God’s promise is fulfilled slowly. David is king, but he must still grieve, wait, and deal with violence in his own camp.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus wept over Jerusalem (Luke 19:41) and at the tomb of Lazarus (John 11:35). He too was anointed king and had to wait for his kingdom. Hebrews 2:8-9 says, “At present, we do not yet see everything in subjection to him. But we see him… crowned with glory and honor.” Paul says, “Rejoice with those who rejoice, weep with those who weep” (Romans 12:15).

STEP 6

Application

Think of someone who has hurt you and has since died or fallen. Can you honor what was good in them?

Wait on God for what he has promised. Do not force the timing.

Grieve honestly over the losses in your life, and bring them to him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to teach you to grieve well and honor the fallen.

Ask him to make you patient as you wait for his promises.

Thank Jesus, the King who wept and will reign.

PSALM 20:7

DAY 263 · WEEK 38

Psalm 20

May the LORD answer you in the day of trouble

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 9 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 20. It is a prayer for the king before he goes into battle. Read it as a congregation praying for its leader.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 20 is a royal psalm "of David," in which the people pray for the king as he goes out to war. The speakers shift between "we" and "I," as the congregation prays and the king, or a priest, answers. David is now king, and the psalms of his kingship begin. After the long years of flight, the nation has a king whose success depends on God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The LORD answer you in the day of trouble! The name of the God of Jacob protect you!" (v. 1).
2. "May he send you help from the sanctuary and give you support from Zion" (v. 2).
3. "May he remember all your offerings and regard with favor your burnt sacrifices" (v. 3).
4. "May he grant you your heart's desire and fulfill all your plans!" (v. 4).
5. "May we shout for joy over your salvation, and in the name of our God set up our banners!" (v. 5).
6. "Now I know that the LORD saves his anointed; he will answer him from his holy heaven" (v. 6).
7. "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the LORD our God" (v. 7).
8. "O LORD, save the king! May he answer us when we call" (v. 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This psalm shows how a community prays for its leader. The people do not simply hope that the king will win. They ask the LORD to answer him, protect him, support him, and fulfill his plans. It is a model of intercessory prayer. A nation is stronger when its people pray for those who lead.

The psalm assumes that the king is a servant of God. His offerings are remembered. His plans are the plans God grants. Success is not the king's alone. The people shout for joy over "your salvation," but they raise their banners in "the name of our God." The glory goes to God.

The turning point is verse 6. A voice declares, "Now I know that the LORD saves his anointed." It is a statement of settled confidence. The prayer has been answered in the heart of the one who prays. This is common in the Psalms: prayer ends with certainty before the outcome is seen.

Verse 7 is the center of the psalm, and one of the most quoted lines in the Psalter. "Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the LORD our God." Chariots and horses were the superweapons of the ancient world. Israel was told never to multiply horses (Deuteronomy 17:16). The psalm declares that real security is found in God's name, not in military power. In our time the chariots and horses may be money, technology, connections, or intelligence.

The closing line is a prayer that has become a national anthem for Israel: "O LORD, save the king!" In time, Israel's kings would fail, and this prayer would point to the King who does not.

STEP 5

Connection

The "anointed" of this psalm is the Messiah. Jesus was the king who went to battle against sin and death, and the Father heard him (Hebrews 5:7). "In the day of trouble" echoes his Gethsemane prayer. 1 Timothy 2:1-2 calls us to pray for kings and all in authority. Paul says that we trust "not in ourselves but in God who raises the dead" (2 Corinthians 1:9).

STEP 6

Application

Pray this psalm for a leader you know: a pastor, a boss, a government official.

Name your "chariots and horses," the things you trust in apart from God.

Pray "O LORD, save the king" with Jesus in mind, who reigns now.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what you trust in when trouble comes, and what you want to trust instead.

Ask him to answer those who lead you in the day of trouble.

Raise your banner in his name by telling him why you trust him.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 21 is a royal psalm of thanksgiving, likely used at a celebration of the king's accession or a victory. Psalms 20 and 21 should be read together, as a prayer followed by a praise. The king is a figure of joy in God's strength, and the psalm points beyond David to a king whose reign has no end.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O LORD, in your strength the king rejoices, and in your salvation how greatly he exults!" (v. 1).
2. "You have given him his heart's desire and have not withheld the request of his lips" (v. 2).
3. "For you meet him with rich blessings; you set a crown of fine gold upon his head" (v. 3).
4. "He asked life of you; you gave it to him, length of days forever and ever" (v. 4).
5. "His glory is great through your salvation; splendor and majesty you bestow on him" (v. 5).
6. "For you make him most blessed forever; you make him glad with the joy of your presence" (v. 6).
7. "For the king trusts in the LORD, and through the steadfast love of the Most High he shall not be moved" (v. 7).

8 “Be exalted, O LORD, in your strength! We will sing and praise your power” (v. 13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Where Psalm 20 asked, Psalm 21 gives thanks. The pattern is a reminder that prayer is not only petition. Many of us ask and forget to thank. The people here return to God to say that he has answered. The king’s heart’s desire has been given. The language is of overflowing generosity: rich blessings, a crown of gold, glory, splendor, majesty.

A phrase in verse 4 is striking: “He asked life of you; you gave it to him, length of days forever and ever.” In terms of the historical David, “forever” might be read as a long life, or as the length of his dynasty. But “forever and ever” reaches further. It points to a king who will live and reign eternally. Psalm 21 asks us to read it with more than David in mind.

The root of the king’s blessing is stated at the end: “For the king trusts in the LORD.” His strength is not his own. The word “trusts” is the key to his success. He will not be moved, “through the steadfast love of the Most High.” The king’s security rests on God’s covenant love.

Verses 8 to 12 describe judgment on the king’s enemies. The imagery is strong: a fiery furnace, a consuming fire. These lines are not an invitation to violence, but a recognition that the reign of the LORD’s anointed brings the end of all who oppose him. It is a theme that runs from Psalm 2 to Revelation.

The psalm closes with a collective song. The people return their gaze from the king to the LORD: “Be exalted, O LORD, in your strength!” The king is blessed, but the center is always God.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 5:7-9 speaks of Christ who asked for deliverance from death and was heard. “Length of days forever and ever” is fulfilled in his resurrection (Acts 2:24-28; Revelation 1:18). “The joy of your presence” echoes Acts 2:28 and Hebrews 12:2. The crown of gold points to Revelation 14:14, where the Son of Man wears a golden crown. Philippians 2:9-11 says God has highly exalted him.

STEP 6

Application

Make a list of ways God has answered prayer in the last month, and thank him for each.

Ask what it means to rejoice in his strength rather than your own.

Give thanks for the King who lives forever.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for answered prayer and good gifts.
- Thank Jesus, who asked for life and was given it forever.
- Ask him to be exalted in his strength in your life.

DAY 265 · WEEK 38

2 Samuel 4:1-6:23

David king over all Israel; Jerusalem captured; the ark

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 74 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 4:1-6:23. David is made king over all Israel, takes Jerusalem, and brings the ark to the city. Notice the contrast between the two attempts to move the ark.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After Abner's death, Ish-bosheth, Saul's son, is murdered by two of his own captains, and the northern tribes come to David at Hebron. He is anointed king over all Israel. He then captures the Jebusite city of Jerusalem and makes it his capital. The ark of the covenant, which had been in obscurity since 1 Samuel 7, is brought to the city, but not without tragedy.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David has Ish-bosheth's murderers executed, saying, "How much more, when wicked men have killed a righteous man in his own house" (4:11).
2. All the tribes come to Hebron and say, "You shall be shepherd of my people Israel, and you shall be prince over Israel" (5:2-3).
3. David takes the stronghold of Zion, "that is, the city of David" (5:7).
4. "And David became greater and greater, for the LORD, the God of hosts, was with him" (5:10).
5. David defeats the Philistines twice, inquiring of the LORD each time (5:17-25).
6. The ark is carried on a new cart, and Uzzah reaches out to steady it and dies (6:1-8).
7. David fears the LORD that day and leaves the ark with Obed-edom, whom God blesses (6:9-11).

8. David dances “before the LORD with all his might” and Michal despises him in her heart (6:14-16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David’s rise to the throne over all Israel is the fulfillment of what God promised through Samuel. It is not the result of his own plotting. He has waited. When the tribes come to him, they acknowledge what God had said: “You shall be shepherd of my people Israel.” The term “shepherd” is a reminder of where David came from and what a king is for.

The capture of Jerusalem makes the city “the city of David.” It will become the center of Israel’s worship and, ultimately, of the story of salvation. The narrator says plainly why David succeeded: “The LORD, the God of hosts, was with him.” His greatness is a gift.

The story of the ark in chapter 6 is a lesson on how to approach a holy God. The first attempt copies the Philistines’ method, with a new cart. The ark was to be carried by the Levites on poles. When the cart is shaken, Uzzah reaches out and is struck down. It seems harsh, and David is angry and afraid. But the lesson is that God’s holiness is not to be handled casually, even with good intentions. Good motives do not override God’s instructions.

The second attempt, three months later, is done correctly, with sacrifices and with joy. David dances before the LORD, wearing a linen ephod. He is not too proud to be undignified before God. Michal looks down on him from a window. Her scorn is the scorn of those who prefer propriety to passion. David’s answer is that he will be “even more contemptible than this” for the LORD’s sake.

The chapters show a king who inquires of God, who is awed by his holiness, and who rejoices in his presence. This is the heart of true worship: reverence and joy together.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the true presence of God in the midst of his people (John 1:14). He rode into Jerusalem while the crowds rejoiced (Matthew 21:8-9), and some wanted the disciples to be silenced (Luke 19:39-40). Hebrews 12:28 says, “Let us offer to God acceptable worship, with reverence and awe.” Acts 5 shows a similar fear of God’s holiness in the early church.

STEP 6

Application

Ask if your worship is a mix of reverence and joy, or leans heavily in one direction.

Look at where you are doing a good thing in a way God did not instruct.

Think about whether you are afraid of looking foolish in worship, and ask God to free you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to teach you to worship with both reverence and joy.
- Confess where you have handled his word lightly.
- Thank him that in Jesus he is with you.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 20:7 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Some trust in chariots and some in horses, but we trust in the name of the LORD our God."

PSALM 20:7

REST

Meditation

This verse sets two kinds of trust side by side. It is a simple contrast, but it asks a searching question: where does your confidence rest?

Chariots and horses were the strongest military technology of the ancient Near East. An army with them was thought to be unbeatable. Israel was told not to depend on them (Deuteronomy 17:16; Isaiah 31:1). The psalm does not say that chariots are useless. It says that the people of God have a different foundation.

What are our chariots and horses? They are whatever we lean on for security instead of God. For some it is a bank account. For others, it is a résumé, a network of influential friends, good health, a clever plan, or a disciplined routine. These things are not evil. They are gifts. But when we trust in them, they become idols, and they fail.

“We trust in the name of the LORD our God.” In the Bible, a name stands for the whole person. To trust in God’s name is to trust in who he is: faithful, powerful, merciful, covenant-keeping. And notice the “we.” This is a community statement. We say it together, as a church.

The contrast in the next verse is vivid: “They collapse and fall, but we rise and stand upright.” Those who trust in horses fall. Those who trust in God stand.

For the Christian, the name of the LORD has been revealed in Jesus. “There is salvation in no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved” (Acts 4:12). Hold this verse when you are tempted to feel safe because of something other than him.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed the end of Saul and the rise of David. You read Saul’s last night, when God was silent and he turned to a medium, and David’s response in his own low moment: he strengthened himself in the LORD his God. You read David’s lament over Saul and Jonathan, and how he became king first over Judah and then over all Israel. You saw him take Jerusalem and bring the ark to the city, after the sobering lesson of Uzzah. In the Psalms, you prayed for the king in Psalm 20 and gave thanks for him in Psalm 21. The week taught that God’s anointed trusts in the name of the LORD, that God’s holiness must be honored, and that true worship joins reverence with joy.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

David strengthened himself in the LORD when everything was taken from him. What does that look like for you in a hard season?

Psalm 21 says the king trusts in the LORD and will not be moved. How does Jesus, the King who trusted perfectly, give you security when you feel shaken?

What are the “chariots and horses” you are most tempted to trust? What would it look like to trust in the name of the LORD instead?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that you trust in his name and not in chariots.

Thank him for the King who trusts him perfectly.

Rest in his strength today.

DAY 267 · WEEK 39

2 Samuel 7:1-29

The Davidic Covenant, the throne, the son, the kingdom forever

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 29 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 7:1-29. This is the pivotal chapter of the books of Samuel and one of the most important in the whole Bible. Read it slowly, twice if you can. It is the anchor of this unit.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

David is settled in his palace in Jerusalem, and the LORD has given him rest from his enemies. He feels it is wrong that he lives in a house of cedar while the ark dwells in a tent. He tells the prophet Nathan that he wants to build a house for God. God responds, through Nathan, with a promise that turns David's plan inside out. This is the Davidic covenant.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David says, "See now, I dwell in a house of cedar, but the ark of God dwells in a tent" (7:2).
2. The LORD says, "Would you build me a house to dwell in?... I took you from the pasture, from following the sheep, that you should be prince over my people Israel" (7:5-8).
3. "I will make for you a great name, like the name of the great ones of the earth" (7:9).
4. "The LORD declares to you that the LORD will make you a house" (7:11).
5. "I will raise up your offspring after you... and I will establish the throne of his kingdom forever" (7:12-13).
6. "I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son. When he commits iniquity, I will discipline him with the rod of men" (7:14).
7. "But my steadfast love will not depart from him" (7:15).

8 “And your house and your kingdom shall be made sure forever before me. Your throne shall be established forever” (7:16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David’s desire is good. He wants to honor God. But God’s reply reverses the direction. David wants to build a house for God, and God says that he will build a house for David. The word “house” is used in two senses: a building and a dynasty. God will give David a lasting line of kings. The initiative belongs to God, and the covenant is one of pure promise. David has done nothing to earn it. He was a shepherd, and God made him a king.

The promises are staggering. A great name. A place for Israel, secure from enemies. A son who will build the temple. And above all, a throne established forever. Verse 13 says that God will establish the throne of the kingdom “forever,” and verse 16 repeats it. This is a promise that no human king can fulfill by himself, for every king dies. Even Solomon, the immediate son, will fall. The promise points to a royal line that does not end, and ultimately to a king who lives forever.

Verse 14 is also important. The king is called God’s son: “I will be to him a father, and he shall be to me a son.” This echoes Psalm 2. It is a statement about the closeness between God and the Davidic king. If the king sins, he will be disciplined, but the covenant will not be cancelled. This differs from Saul. God’s steadfast love is the basis. The promise is unconditional in its ultimate outcome and personal in its fatherly discipline.

David’s prayer in response is one of the most beautiful in Scripture. He goes in and sits before the LORD, and says, “Who am I, O Lord GOD, and what is my house, that you have brought me thus far?” He is overwhelmed. He praises God’s greatness and his choosing of Israel. And he ends with a humble request: “Do as you have promised.” He rests on the word of God.

In the larger story, this chapter is the pivot. All the earlier covenants, with Abraham, with Israel at Sinai, narrow now to a king from David’s line. All the later prophecy points to this son of David. The Bible becomes the story of the search for the promised King.

STEP 5

Connection

The New Testament opens with “the book of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David” (Matthew 1:1). Gabriel tells Mary that “the Lord God will give to him the throne of his father David, and he will reign over the house of Jacob forever” (Luke 1:32-33). Peter says that David “being a prophet… foretold the resurrection of the Christ” (Acts 2:30-31). Hebrews 1:5 quotes 2 Samuel 7:14 of Jesus. Revelation 22:16: “I am the root and the descendant of David.”

STEP 6

Application

Read David's prayer in verses 18 to 29 aloud as your own prayer of thanksgiving.

Ask where you are trying to do something for God when he is asking you to receive something from him.

Thank God that the throne of David is held forever by Jesus.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what it means that he has brought you this far.

Thank him for the promise to David and its fulfillment in Jesus.

Ask him to establish what he has begun in you.

DAY 268 · WEEK 39

Psalm 22:1-21

My God, my God, why have you forsaken me, the suffering king

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 21 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 22:1-21. This is the psalm Jesus quoted from the cross. Read it in its own setting first, as David's cry. Then read it again with Good Friday in mind.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 22 is a psalm of David, titled "According to The Doe of the Dawn." We do not know the event that prompted it, and it uses language that goes beyond anything recorded in David's life. It begins in the deepest abandonment and ends in universal praise. Placed after the covenant of 2 Samuel 7, it shows that the promised King will suffer before he reigns. Today's reading covers the first twenty-one verses, the lament.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "My God, my God, why have you forsaken me? Why are you so far from saving me?" (v. 1).
2. "O my God, I cry by day, but you do not answer, and by night, but I find no rest" (v. 2).
3. "But I am a worm and not a man, scorned by mankind and despised by the people" (v. 6).
4. "All who see me mock me; they make mouths at me; they wag their heads" (v. 7).
5. "He trusts in the LORD; let him deliver him; let him rescue him, for he delights in him!" (v. 8).
6. "I am poured out like water, and all my bones are out of joint; my heart is like wax" (v. 14).

7. “For dogs encompass me; a company of evildoers encircles me; they have pierced my hands and feet” (v. 16).

8. “They divide my garments among them, and for my clothing they cast lots” (v. 18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Read as David’s own cry, this psalm describes the experience of feeling abandoned by God while surrounded by enemies. The opening words are shocking. “My God, my God, why have you forsaken me?” David does not say, “Why have you stopped helping?” He says, “You have forsaken me.” The Bible permits us to pray the language of felt abandonment. It does not hide it.

But even in the question, there is faith. He still says “My God.” The psalm contains a long review of what God has done in the past: “In you our fathers trusted; they trusted, and you delivered them.” David cannot square the past with the present. This tension is the heart of a lament. He does not resolve it with a quick answer. He keeps praying.

The imagery is graphic. “A worm and not a man.” Mockers wag their heads. “I am poured out like water.” Bones out of joint. A tongue stuck to the jaws. A pack of dogs. Hands and feet pierced. Garments divided by lot. David describes his suffering in terms that go far beyond what history records of him. These details were fulfilled in the death of Jesus, almost word for word.

At the end of the section the tone shifts. Verses 19 to 21 are a cry for help: “But you, O LORD, do not be far off! O you my help, come quickly to my aid!” He finishes with “You have rescued me from the horns of the wild oxen.” Even in the pit, he knows who to call.

This psalm shows us that the suffering of the righteous is not a sign of God’s absence. It is part of the pattern of how God’s anointed enters into glory. It prepares us for the cross.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus cried the first line of this psalm from the cross (Matthew 27:46; Mark 15:34). The mockery of verses 7 and 8 is repeated by the passersby and chief priests (Matthew 27:39-43). The dividing of garments is quoted in John 19:24. The thirst of verse 15 is in John 19:28. The piercing of hands and feet is seen in the crucifixion itself. Jesus entered the darkness of abandonment so that we would never be truly forsaken (2 Corinthians 5:21; Hebrews 13:5).

STEP 6

Application

If you are in a season of feeling far from God, pray this psalm. Do not hide.

Read the crucifixion account in John 19 alongside this psalm, and notice the details.

Thank Jesus that he was forsaken so you would not be.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Jesus for being forsaken so that you would not be.

Tell God where you feel far from him.

Praise him that he is near and has not hidden his face.

2 SAMUEL 7:16

DAY 269 · WEEK 39

Psalm 24

Lift up your heads, O gates, the King of glory enters

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 10 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 24. Read it as a processional song, with questions and answers. Picture the ark being carried up to the city, and the gates opening to receive the King.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

You read Psalm 24 earlier, in Unit 6, as part of the story of the temple and God's presence. Here it appears again, in its natural setting after the ark's arrival in Jerusalem (2 Samuel 6). It is likely the very song sung when David brought the ark up to Zion. Today, read it with that scene in mind, and notice how it moves from the whole earth to a single hill, and from the hill to the King who enters.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The earth is the LORD's and the fullness thereof, the world and those who dwell therein" (v. 1).
2. "For he has founded it upon the seas and established it upon the rivers" (v. 2).
3. "Who shall ascend the hill of the LORD? And who shall stand in his holy place?" (v. 3).
4. "He who has clean hands and a pure heart, who does not lift up his soul to what is false" (v. 4).
5. "He will receive blessing from the LORD and righteousness from the God of his salvation" (v. 5).
6. "Lift up your heads, O gates! And be lifted up, O ancient doors, that the King of glory may come in!" (v. 7).

7. “Who is this King of glory? The LORD, strong and mighty, the LORD, mighty in battle!” (v. 8).

8. “Who is this King of glory? The LORD of hosts, he is the King of glory!” (v. 10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm has three movements, and the second reading adds a layer to each. First, a declaration: the whole earth belongs to the LORD. He made it and holds it together. The God who has come to Zion is not a local deity. He is the Creator of all. When David brought the ark to Jerusalem, he was bringing the throne of the God of the whole earth.

Second, a question: “Who shall ascend the hill of the LORD?” Having just read of Uzzah, the question is sharp. Not everyone can approach God in any way they like. The answer is a person of clean hands and a pure heart, whose actions and desires are right. But no one fits that description perfectly. The question hangs over the reader, and it prepares for the good news that someone has fulfilled it.

Third, a procession. The company reaches the gates of the city and calls on them to open. The call-and-response is dramatic: “Who is this King of glory?” The answer comes: “The LORD, strong and mighty.” Then the call is made again, and the answer is expanded: “The LORD of hosts.” The king who comes is the commander of the heavenly armies.

Having read the account of the ark’s arrival, we see how the psalm fits. The ark, a symbol of God’s throne, is brought into the city. But no gate in Jerusalem could finally contain him. The psalm points beyond the ark to the day when the King of glory would truly enter the city.

The key move is from the heights to the humble. The one who owns the whole earth comes to a particular hill. The one who is infinitely holy invites sinners to come near, if they are clean. The gospel is that he makes us clean.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the one with clean hands and a pure heart, the only one who can ascend the hill of the LORD. He entered Jerusalem as King (Matthew 21:9), and he ascended into heaven, where the gates are lifted for him (Hebrews 4:14; Ephesians 4:8-10). We ascend with him by faith, clothed in his righteousness (2 Corinthians 5:21; Hebrews 10:19-22). Paul quotes verse 1 in 1 Corinthians 10:26.

STEP 6

Application

Thank God that your access to him does not depend on your clean hands, but on Christ’s.

Look at how you treat what you have. If the earth is the LORD's, so are your possessions.

Open the gates of your heart to the King of glory today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Open a gate in your life for the King of glory, and name it.
- Thank Jesus, who ascended with clean hands and clothes you in his righteousness.
- Praise God that the earth and everything in it is his.

DAY 270 · WEEK 39

2 Samuel 8:1-10:19

David's victories; Mephibosheth, covenant kindness

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 58 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 8:1-10:19. David's kingdom reaches its height, and he shows kindness to Mephibosheth. Notice what David does with the covenant love he has received.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the covenant of chapter 7, the narrative shows the LORD giving David victory on every side. Chapter 8 summarizes his conquests and his administration. Chapter 9 turns from war to mercy, as David seeks out any survivor of Saul's house to show kindness for Jonathan's sake. Chapter 10 returns to war with the Ammonites and Arameans. This is the high point of David's reign.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "And the LORD gave victory to David wherever he went" (8:6, 14).
2. "So David reigned over all Israel. And David administered justice and equity to all his people" (8:15).
3. David asks, "Is there still anyone left of the house of Saul, that I may show him the kindness of God?" (9:3).
4. Mephibosheth, Jonathan's son, is crippled in both feet and living in Lo-debar (9:3-5).
5. "Do not fear, for I will show you kindness for the sake of your father Jonathan, and I will restore to you all the land of Saul your father, and you shall eat at my table always" (9:7).
6. Mephibosheth bows and says, "What is your servant, that you should show regard for a dead dog such as I am?" (9:8).

7. “So Mephibosheth lived in Jerusalem, for he ate always at the king’s table. Now he was lame in both his feet” (9:13).

8. Joab says, “Be of good courage, and let us be courageous for the sake of our people, and for the cities of our God, and may the LORD do what seems good to him” (10:12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 8 is a record of success, and it is framed by the repeated phrase, “The LORD gave victory to David wherever he went.” David’s reign is blessed because God is with him. He also dedicates the plunder to the LORD (8:11). The chapter closes with a summary of his administration, and with the key statement that he “administered justice and equity to all his people.” A king’s greatness is measured by his justice.

Chapter 9 is the gem of the section. It is a story of grace. Saul’s family was David’s enemy. Under the customs of the time, a new king would eliminate the old dynasty’s heirs. Instead, David asks, “Is there anyone left that I may show the kindness of God?” The phrase “kindness of God” means covenant faithfulness (the Hebrew word is the one translated “steadfast love”). He is acting out of a promise he made to Jonathan (1 Samuel 20:14-17).

Mephibosheth is a picture of every sinner. He was lame in both feet, hiding in a place called Lo-debar (“no pasture”), thinking of himself as a dead dog. He expected death. Instead, he is called, brought to the king’s table, given land, and treated as one of the king’s sons. “You shall eat at my table always.” He did nothing to earn it. He was invited because of what the king promised to another.

The scene ends with a line that is easy to miss: “Now he was lame in both his feet.” His condition did not change. He was seated at the king’s table with his disability intact. Grace does not require us to be healed before we are welcomed.

Chapter 10 returns to war and shows the other side of the king. But David is no longer the man who fears. He trusts the LORD for the result.

STEP 5

Connection

The story of Mephibosheth is a picture of the gospel. We were far from the King, crippled by sin, and expecting judgment. But for the sake of the Son, we are brought near and seated at the table (Ephesians 2:13; Luke 22:29-30). Jesus invited the lame and the poor to his banquet (Luke 14:13-23). Revelation 19:9 speaks of the marriage supper of the Lamb. Titus 3:4-5 speaks of the kindness of God our Savior.

STEP 6

Application

Think of yourself as Mephibosheth. Let the picture of being brought to the table sink in.

Ask who in your life needs “the kindness of God” from you, someone who expects nothing.

Remember that you do not have to be fixed before you come to Jesus.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for his kindness to you, shown for the sake of his Son.
- Ask him to teach you to show that kindness to someone who cannot repay it.
- Thank him for a seat at his table.

David and Bathsheba; Nathan's rebuke

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 55 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 11:1-12:31. This is the darkest chapter of David's life. Read it slowly and honestly. Notice how sin grows, how Nathan confronts it, and what God says in response to David's repentance.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

It is spring, when kings go out to war, but David stays in Jerusalem. From his roof he sees a woman bathing. What follows is adultery, deception, and murder. After months of silence, the prophet Nathan is sent to confront him. The chapters record the cost of David's sin and the shape of true repentance.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In the spring of the year, the time when kings go out to battle, David sent Joab... But David remained at Jerusalem" (11:1).
2. David sees Bathsheba, sends for her, and sleeps with her. She becomes pregnant (11:2-5).
3. David tries to cover it up by recalling Uriah from battle, and when that fails, has Joab put Uriah in the front line to be killed (11:6-25).
4. "But the thing that David had done displeased the LORD" (11:27).
5. Nathan tells a parable about a rich man who takes a poor man's only lamb, and says, "You are the man!" (12:1-7).
6. "I anointed you king over Israel... Why have you despised the word of the LORD, to do what is evil in his sight?" (12:7-9).

7. David says, “I have sinned against the LORD.” Nathan replies, “The LORD has put away your sin; you shall not die” (12:13).

8. “Nevertheless… the child who is born to you shall die” (12:14). David worships, and later Solomon is born, “and the LORD loved him” (12:15-25).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The sin begins with an idle moment. David was not where he should have been. He sees, wants, takes. He moves from lust to adultery, to the abuse of power, to deception, to murder. At each step he tries to cover the previous sin with a worse one. It is a picture of how sin multiplies. The narrator does not excuse him. The king who should have been guarding justice becomes its violator. The phrase “But David remained at Jerusalem” is where the story starts to unravel.

For a year, he seems to have gotten away with it. But “the thing that David had done displeased the LORD.” God sends Nathan, who tells a story. David’s anger is aroused against the rich man in the parable, and he pronounces judgment. Then Nathan says, “You are the man.” It is the moment of truth. The king who judged others is judged himself.

God’s words through Nathan are heartbreaking. He recounts what he has given David and says, “If this were too little, I would add to you as much more.” David despised God’s word and did evil. It is an act of ingratitude as well as of lust.

David’s response is brief and real. “I have sinned against the LORD.” There is no excuse, no blaming. And Nathan answers with some of the most precious words in the Old Testament: “The LORD has put away your sin; you shall not die.” Forgiveness is immediate and complete. But consequences remain. The child dies, and the sword will not depart from David’s house. Grace does not cancel the effects of sin in this world.

The scene shows both the severity and the mercy of God. He does not ignore sin, even in his favorite. And he does not refuse forgiveness to the one who confesses. At the end, God gives the couple a son, Solomon, whom he loves.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says, “Where sin increased, grace abounded all the more” (Romans 5:20). Paul quotes Psalm 32, which David wrote after this episode, in Romans 4:6-8 as a description of justification by faith. Matthew’s genealogy mentions “Uriah’s wife” (Matthew 1:6), reminding us that Jesus came through this broken line. Christ is the greater David who, unlike David, never abused his power, and who laid down his life instead of taking another’s.

STEP 6

Application

Look for places where you are “staying home” when you should be at your post. What is the first step you could take away from temptation?

If you are hiding something, bring it to God now. Do not wait for a Nathan.

Remember that forgiveness is real and complete, even when consequences remain.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess honestly where you have sinned, and do not cover it.
- Ask him to keep you from the “roof” where temptation finds you.
- Thank Jesus for bearing the sin you confess.

DAY 272 · WEEK 39

Psalm 32

Blessed is the one whose transgression is forgiven

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 32. David wrote this after the events of the last reading. It is a song of forgiveness, and one of the great teaching psalms in the Bible.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title calls it "A Maskil of David," meaning a song of instruction. It seems to reflect on the period after his sin with Bathsheba, the silence of the months when he hid it, and the relief that came when he confessed. It is one of the seven traditional penitential psalms, but it is characterized more by joy than by sorrow. Placed right after Day 271, it tells the other side of the story.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Blessed is the one whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered" (v. 1).
2. "Blessed is the man against whom the LORD counts no iniquity, and in whose spirit there is no deceit" (v. 2).
3. "For when I kept silent, my bones wasted away through my groaning all day long" (v. 3).
4. "For day and night your hand was heavy upon me; my strength was dried up as by the heat of summer" (v. 4).
5. "I acknowledged my sin to you, and I did not cover my iniquity; I said, I will confess my transgressions to the LORD, and you forgave the iniquity of my sin" (v. 5).
6. "You are a hiding place for me; you preserve me from trouble; you surround me with shouts of deliverance" (v. 7).

7. “I will instruct you and teach you in the way you should go; I will counsel you with my eye upon you” (v. 8).

8. “Many are the sorrows of the wicked, but steadfast love surrounds the one who trusts in the LORD” (v. 10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a double blessing, and uses three words for sin: transgression, sin, and iniquity. Each is matched with a word for forgiveness: forgiven, covered, and not counted. The piling up of terms shows how thoroughly God deals with every type of wrong. He lifts it away, covers it, and does not count it against us.

David then describes the misery of hiding his sin. His body suffered. His bones wasted away. God’s hand was heavy on him. The groaning went on all day. The guilt of unconfessed sin is not just a spiritual problem. It touches the whole person. David knew by experience that silence and concealment do not work. They drain strength like summer heat.

Then comes the turn, in verse 5: “I acknowledged my sin to you.” Notice the three verbs: acknowledged, did not cover, confessed. And the result: “You forgave.” The speed of it is striking. David says he will confess, and God forgives. This is the same forgiveness Nathan announced. God is not reluctant. He is eager to forgive.

The rest of the psalm shows what follows from forgiveness. God becomes a hiding place. The man who ran from God now runs to him. God also becomes a teacher: “I will instruct you.” The forgiven person is ready to learn. And God’s counsel is personal, “with my eye upon you.” The forgiven are guided, not like a mule that needs a bit and bridle, but like a person who follows willingly.

The final verses are an invitation to the whole community: “Be glad in the LORD, and rejoice, O righteous, and shout for joy, all you upright in heart!” Forgiveness leads to joy.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul uses verses 1 and 2 in Romans 4:6-8 as proof that God justifies the ungodly by faith, and not by works. “Blessed is the man against whom the Lord will not count his sin.” This is the heart of justification: the imputing of righteousness and the non-imputing of sin. Christ became sin for us, so that we might become the righteousness of God (2 Corinthians 5:21). 1 John 1:9 says, “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us.”

STEP 6

Application

If there is any sin you are hiding, confess it today. Do not wait.

Read verses 1 and 2 as a description of your status in Christ.

Ask God to counsel you with his eye upon you. Then listen.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Acknowledge your sin to God without covering it.
- Thank him for the forgiveness that makes you blessed.
- Ask him to be your hiding place.

Sabbath Rest

No new reading today. Rest, remember, and look back over the week.

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Sabbath

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read 2 Samuel 7:16 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. This is the anchor verse for the whole unit. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And your house and your kingdom shall be made sure forever before me. Your throne shall be established forever."

2 SAMUEL 7:16

REST

Meditation

This verse is the center of the unit. It is God's promise to David, spoken through Nathan, and it is one of the most important sentences in the Old Testament.

"Your house." David wanted to build God a house, and God promises to build his. This is a dynasty, a line of descendants who will sit on the throne. Every promise in the Bible after this moment hangs on this one thread: a son of David.

"And your kingdom." It is not just a family that is promised, but a realm. The kingdom of David is the kingdom of God's rule on earth, carried out through a human king.

"Shall be made sure forever before me." The word "sure" means firm and established. The promise rests on God's own faithfulness. David's later sin would not cancel it. His descendants' failures would not cancel it. God said it, and it stands.

“Your throne shall be established forever.” The repetition of “forever” is key. Every king in the line of David died. Solomon, in all his glory, fell into idolatry. The kingdom was divided, and the last king of Judah was taken to Babylon in chains. Yet the promise was never withdrawn. The prophets kept saying that a son of David would come, who would reign forever. Isaiah called him “the Prince of Peace.”

For the Christian, this verse is fulfilled in Jesus. “He will be great and will be called the Son of the Most High. And the Lord God will give to him the throne of his father David, and he will reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there will be no end” (Luke 1:32-33). When you say this verse, you are saying that Jesus reigns. Memorize it. It is a promise that cannot fail.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week brought David to the throne and to the center of God’s plan. You read the end of Saul at Gilboa and the lament of David over Saul and Jonathan. You saw David anointed over all Israel, take Jerusalem, and bring the ark up with dancing. You read the heart of the unit, the covenant of 2 Samuel 7, in which God promised David a house, a kingdom, and a throne forever. You saw David’s grace to Mephibosheth, and then the dark chapters of his sin with Bathsheba and his repentance. In the Psalms you prayed for the king in Psalm 20, gave thanks in Psalm 21, and heard the cry of Psalm 22, which Jesus prayed on the cross. Psalm 24 welcomed the King of glory, and Psalm 32 celebrated forgiveness. The week taught that God keeps his promises to David in spite of David’s sin, and that the true King would suffer and reign.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

God took David from the pasture and made him king, without any merit on David’s part. What has God done for you that you did not earn?

The covenant promised a son of David whose throne would last forever. How does Jesus fulfill this promise, and what does his reign mean for your life this week?

David hid his sin until Nathan confronted him, and then he confessed and was forgiven. Is there something you have been hiding? What would it look like to bring it into the light?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the promise to David and for Jesus, whose throne lasts forever.

Thank him for forgiveness that covers every sin.

Ask him to make you tender to his word.

DAY 274 · WEEK 40

Psalm 51

Create in me a clean heart, David's penitential psalm

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 19 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 51. You read this psalm earlier in Unit 6. Today read it in its original setting, as David's prayer right after Nathan confronted him. Read it slowly, as his own words.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title says, "A Psalm of David, when Nathan the prophet went to him, after he had gone in to Bathsheba." You met this psalm in Unit 6 as a general prayer of repentance. Having now read 2 Samuel 11 and 12, you can hear it as a particular man's prayer after a particular fall. Notice how little he says about the circumstances, and how much he says about God and his own heart.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Have mercy on me, O God, according to your steadfast love; according to your abundant mercy blot out my transgressions" (v. 1).
2. "Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin!" (v. 2).
3. "Against you, you only, have I sinned and done what is evil in your sight" (v. 4).
4. "Behold, I was brought forth in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me" (v. 5).
5. "Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean; wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow" (v. 7).
6. "Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me" (v. 10).
7. "Cast me not away from your presence, and take not your Holy Spirit from me" (v. 11).
8. "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and contrite heart, O God, you will not despise" (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David begins with God's character, not his own record. "According to your steadfast love... according to your abundant mercy." He has no defense and no excuse, so he asks for mercy. Three words for sin appear again, as in Psalm 32: transgression, iniquity, and sin. And three requests: blot out, wash, cleanse. He knows the problem is deep.

Verse 4 is surprising. "Against you, you only, have I sinned." David had sinned against Bathsheba and Uriah and the nation. Yet he says that the offense is against God. This does not deny the harm to others, but recognizes that every sin is first of all a rebellion against the Creator, whose law has been broken. When we see sin at that level, we understand why it requires forgiveness, not just repair.

Verse 5 is not an excuse but a confession of depth. David realizes that his sin did not come out of nowhere. It flows from a nature that has been bent since birth. The problem is not only what he did, but what he is. He needs more than a new start. He needs a new heart, and so he prays, "Create in me a clean heart." The verb "create" is the one used in Genesis 1. Only God can make a new heart from nothing.

He also asks, "Take not your Holy Spirit from me." He had seen what happened to Saul. His fear is of losing God's presence, not of losing the throne. Then he asks for the joy of salvation and for a willing spirit.

The psalm ends with the great principle: "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit." God does not need religious performance as a substitute for repentance. A broken and contrite heart he will not despise. He receives the one who comes with nothing.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the answer to David's prayer. By his blood we are washed (1 John 1:7; Revelation 1:5), and in him we are a new creation (2 Corinthians 5:17). Ezekiel 36:26 promises a new heart and the gift of the Spirit, fulfilled in the new covenant. Jesus said, "Blessed are the poor in spirit" (Matthew 5:3), and told the story of the tax collector who cried, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner!" (Luke 18:13).

STEP 6

Application

Use this psalm as a pattern for confession. Pray through it slowly, line by line.

Ask for more than forgiveness. Ask for a clean heart and a right spirit.

Thank God that he does not despise a broken and contrite heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray Psalm 51 in your own words, naming what needs cleansing.
- Ask him to create a clean heart and a right spirit in you.
- Ask him not to take his Spirit from you, and thank him for Jesus.

PSALM 51:10

DAY 275 · WEEK 40

2 Samuel 13:1-14:33

Amnon and Tamar; Absalom's revenge

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 66 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 13:1-14:33. These chapters show the first consequences of David's sin: violence and division within his own house. Read them with sorrow. They are painful.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Nathan told David that "the sword shall never depart from your house" (12:10). Chapters 13 and 14 show that word beginning to come true. David's son Amnon rapes his half-sister Tamar. Her brother Absalom murders Amnon, and flees. After three years, Joab arranges for Absalom's return. The family that David has built is breaking apart.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Amnon desires Tamar, and on the advice of Jonadab, pretends to be ill and asks that Tamar bring him food (13:1-9).
2. Tamar says, "No, my brother, do not violate me, for such a thing is not done in Israel" (13:12).
3. Amnon rapes her and then hates her "with very great hatred" and throws her out (13:14-17).
4. "When King David heard of all these things, he was very angry" (13:21). He does nothing.
5. Absalom says nothing to Amnon, "either good or bad," for he hated him (13:22).
6. After two years, Absalom has Amnon killed at a sheep-shearing feast, and flees to Geshur (13:23-38).

7. A wise woman of Tekoa, sent by Joab, tells David a story about two sons, so that he will bring Absalom back (14:1-20).

8. Absalom returns, but David will not see him for two years, and when they finally meet, "the king kissed Absalom" (14:28-33).

STEP 4

Interpretation

These chapters are among the saddest in the Bible. The violence in David's house echoes his own sin. A son takes what he wants from a woman. A father fails to act. Another son murders in revenge. The pattern of David's sins, desire, deception, and bloodshed, is repeated by his children. Children often imitate what their parents have done, and they usually take it further.

Tamar is the innocent victim. Her words to Amnon are wise and clear, and she even tells him to ask the king to give her to him in marriage. He will not hear. After the assault, she tears her robe and puts ashes on her head and lives "a desolate woman" in Absalom's house. The Bible does not minimize her pain. Her story reminds readers that the effects of abuse are real, and that God sees. Her cry, "Where could I carry my shame?" is heard.

David's failure is the lack of action. "He was very angry," says the text, but he does nothing. The Greek and Dead Sea texts add that he did not rebuke Amnon "because he was his firstborn and he loved him." David's own guilt may have left him unable to discipline his sons. A leader who has lost moral authority through unrepented sin cannot easily correct others.

Absalom's two years of silence is a picture of bitterness that is growing. Then the murder. His flight and the ensuing exile set the stage for the rebellion in chapters 15 to 18. David's half-hearted attempt to deal with the matter, bringing Absalom home but keeping him from his presence, solves nothing. Reconciliation without truth does not heal.

The tragedy is that David's confession and God's forgiveness did not remove the consequences. Forgiveness restores our relationship with God. It does not undo what we have set in motion. This is why sin is so serious, and why the cross is so necessary.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the opposite of David as a father and king. He defends the vulnerable and rebukes oppressors (Matthew 23:14; Mark 9:42). He is the one who "binds up the brokenhearted" (Isaiah 61:1; Luke 4:18). Hebrews 12:15 warns against a "root of bitterness" that causes trouble. Ephesians 4:26-27 warns against letting anger give the devil a foothold. Galatians 6:7 says, “Whatever one sows, that will he also reap.”

STEP 6

Application

If you are a parent or leader, ask where you have failed to act when you should have.

Pray for those who have suffered abuse. Ask God to help you listen and believe.

Examine any bitterness you are nursing, and bring it to God before it grows.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray for those who have been wronged, and for comfort for the desolate.
- Ask him to keep you from nursing bitterness.
- Ask him to give leaders courage to act justly.

PSALM 51:10

DAY 276 · WEEK 40

2 Samuel 15:1-17:29

Absalom's rebellion; David flees Jerusalem

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 90 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 15:1-17:29. Absalom leads a rebellion, and David flees Jerusalem. Notice how David responds, and how God works behind the scenes through Hushai and Ahithophel.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Absalom has spent years winning the hearts of the people at the city gate. At last he declares himself king at Hebron, and David, hearing that "the hearts of the men of Israel have gone after Absalom," flees Jerusalem on foot. This is the setting for Psalm 3. These chapters are a long account of betrayal, loyalty, and the hidden hand of God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel" (15:6).
2. David leaves the city, weeping, barefoot, with his head covered, and says, "If I find favor in the eyes of the LORD, he will bring me back" (15:25-30).
3. Ittai the Gittite swears loyalty: "As the LORD lives, and as my lord the king lives, wherever my lord the king shall be, whether for death or for life, there also will your servant be" (15:21).
4. David prays, "O LORD, please turn the counsel of Ahithophel into foolishness" (15:31).
5. Hushai pretends loyalty to Absalom, to counter Ahithophel's advice (15:32-37; 17:5-14).
6. Shimei curses David, and David says, "Let him alone, and let him curse, for the LORD has told him to" (16:5-14).

7. “For the LORD had ordained to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel, so that the LORD might bring harm upon Absalom” (17:14).
8. Ahithophel sets his house in order and hangs himself (17:23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Absalom’s rebellion is the working out of Nathan’s prophecy. His method is subtle. He wins people by flattery, by promising justice, and by acting like a friend of the common man. It is a pattern of political manipulation as old as humanity: a man who “steals hearts” by appearing to offer what the king does not. He is charming, handsome, and ruthless.

David’s response is remarkable for its humility. He could fight. But he leaves the city, weeping, barefoot. He does not cling to the throne. Even the ark, which Zadok brings out, he sends back: “If I find favor in the eyes of the LORD, he will bring me back… But if he says, I have no pleasure in you, behold, here I am, let him do to me what seems good to him.” David has learned that he cannot manipulate God. He accepts whatever God decides.

His humility is tested by Shimei, who throws stones and curses him. David’s men want to kill Shimei. David says to leave him. Perhaps God has told him to curse. This is not weakness but a grasp that God may be using even insult to discipline him.

The contest between Ahithophel and Hushai shows God’s hidden providence. Ahithophel’s counsel was said to be like the word of God. David prays that it will be turned into foolishness. Hushai gives Absalom worse advice, and Absalom accepts it. The narrator tells us plainly: “The LORD had ordained to defeat the good counsel of Ahithophel.” God was at work behind the scenes, though no miracle was seen. Ahithophel, seeing that his advice was rejected, hangs himself.

The lesson is that God’s purposes are not defeated by human betrayal. He works through ordinary decisions, conversations, and even through bad advice.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus, too, left the city, crossed the Kidron, and went up the Mount of Olives weeping, and he was betrayed by one of his own counselors (2 Samuel 15:23, 30; John 18:1; Luke 22:47-48; Luke 19:41). Judas, like Ahithophel, hanged himself (Matthew 27:5). Jesus declared that the Father’s will would be done. And Romans 8:28 says that God works all things together for good.

STEP 6

Application

Practice David's humility: in a conflict, ask, "What if God is using this to teach me?"

Think about a time when God's hidden hand turned something for good, and thank him.

Pray, as David did, for wisdom and for confusion of plans that oppose his purposes.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to give you David's humility when you are wronged.
- Thank Jesus for being betrayed by his own for you.
- Trust him with what is happening behind the scenes.

PSALM 51:10

DAY 277 · WEEK 40

Psalm 63

O God, you are my God; earnestly I seek you

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 63. David prays in the wilderness of Judah. Read it as a song of longing and satisfaction. Notice how much it says about desire for God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title reads, “A Psalm of David, when he was in the wilderness of Judah.” This may refer to the days when he fled from Saul, or when he fled from Absalom and crossed the wilderness near the Jordan (2 Samuel 15:23; 16:2, 14). Today it fits well with the last reading. A king in exile, with nothing, finds that he still has what matters most.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “O God, you are my God; earnestly I seek you; my soul thirsts for you; my flesh faints for you, as in a dry and weary land where there is no water” (v. 1).
2. “So I have looked upon you in the sanctuary, beholding your power and glory” (v. 2).
3. “Because your steadfast love is better than life, my lips will praise you” (v. 3).
4. “So I will bless you as long as I live; in your name I will lift up my hands” (v. 4).
5. “My soul will be satisfied as with fat and rich food, and my mouth will praise you with joyful lips” (v. 5).
6. “When I remember you upon my bed, and meditate on you in the watches of the night” (v. 6).
7. “For you have been my help, and in the shadow of your wings I sing for joy” (v. 7).
8. “My soul clings to you; your right hand upholds me” (v. 8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The setting is a desert, and the images are thirst and hunger. David has lost his palace, his bed, and his table. Yet in the wilderness he finds that what he truly wants is God himself. “My soul thirsts for you; my flesh faints for you.” It is the language of deep desire. This is not a lukewarm interest in religion. It is the longing of someone who knows he cannot live without God.

He remembers the sanctuary. He has seen God’s glory there. The memory of worship sustains him in a place where there is no sanctuary. Past experiences of God, stored in the heart, can carry us through dry seasons. This is why corporate worship and memory matter.

The central statement is verse 3: “Your steadfast love is better than life.” This is an extraordinary claim. David loves life. Yet he declares that God’s love is better. It is the confession of a man who has been stripped of everything except God and has found it to be enough. In the Bible, the greatest good is not life, comfort, or safety, but God’s steadfast love.

The satisfaction he describes in verse 5 is the answer to the thirst in verse 1. In the desert he is feasting. The paradox is that those who thirst for God are satisfied by him. He meditates on God in the night, lifting his hands in the darkness. He senses the shelter of God’s wings, a picture of a parent bird.

Verse 8 balances the whole psalm: “My soul clings to you; your right hand upholds me.” There is a double movement. David clings, and God holds. Faith is a grasping, and also a being held. Both are true.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness, for they shall be satisfied” (Matthew 5:6), and “If anyone thirsts, let him come to me and drink” (John 7:37). Philippians 3:8 shows Paul counting everything as loss for the sake of knowing Christ. Jesus also went into the wilderness and drew near to the Father (Luke 5:16). Revelation 7:16-17 promises that the redeemed will no more hunger or thirst.

STEP 6

Application

Ask if your desire for God is a thirst, or only a habit. Ask him to increase it.

In the next dry or lonely time, recall a moment when you knew God’s presence.

Say aloud, “Your steadfast love is better than life.” Where do you struggle to believe it?

PSALM 51:10

DAY 278 · WEEK 40

Psalm 61

Hear my cry, O God; lead me to the rock

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 61. It is a short prayer from the ends of the earth. Notice the images of rock, tent, and wings.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 61 is attributed to David and is traditionally linked to his exile east of the Jordan, during Absalom's rebellion, when he felt "from the end of the earth." It follows Psalm 63 in this reading as a second prayer from the wilderness. It is only eight verses, but it reaches from the farthest place to the king's throne.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Hear my cry, O God, listen to my prayer" (v. 1).
2. "From the end of the earth I call to you when my heart is faint" (v. 2).
3. "Lead me to the rock that is higher than I" (v. 2).
4. "For you have been my refuge, a strong tower against the enemy" (v. 3).
5. "Let me dwell in your tent forever! Let me take refuge under the shelter of your wings!" (v. 4).
6. "For you, O God, have heard my vows; you have given me the heritage of those who fear your name" (v. 5).
7. "Prolong the life of the king; may his years endure to all generations!" (v. 6).
8. "May he be enthroned forever before God; appoint steadfast love and faithfulness to watch over him!" (v. 7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with an honest statement of distance and weakness. David is far from home, and his heart is faint. The phrase “the end of the earth” conveys that he is as far from help as he can imagine. Yet he calls. Prayer does not depend on proximity. We can pray from anywhere, to a God who hears.

His request is vivid: “Lead me to the rock that is higher than I.” The prayer recognizes that he cannot reach safety on his own. The rock is higher than he is. He needs to be led. It is an admission of dependence. We cannot climb to safety by our own strength, and God must bring us there.

The language of refuge builds: a rock, a strong tower, a tent, the shelter of wings. David has seen all kinds of shelters, and he knows what he needs. In the middle of the psalm, he declares a desire to “dwell in your tent forever.” It is a longing for permanent communion, not just a rescue.

Then, surprisingly, he prays for the king. “Prolong the life of the king.” David is speaking of himself in the third person, or speaking of the king as an office. In either case, his prayer extends beyond his own survival to the continuance of the royal line. He asks that steadfast love and faithfulness would “watch over him.” It connects with 2 Samuel 7, the covenant that David has received.

The psalm ends in vow-keeping: “So will I ever sing praises to your name, as I perform my vows day after day.” Prayer and praise are daily acts.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus, the true king whose years “endure to all generations,” is the Rock that is higher than we are (1 Corinthians 10:4). He is the tent where God dwells with man (John 1:14; Revelation 21:3), and he spoke of gathering Jerusalem “as a hen gathers her brood under her wings” (Matthew 23:37). Hebrews 7:25 says that he “always lives to make intercession” for those who draw near to God through him.

STEP 6

Application

When you feel far away, pray this prayer: “From the end of the earth I call to you.”

Pick a metaphor from verses 2 to 4 (rock, tower, tent, wings) and spend time with it.

Pray for the leaders of your church and nation, as David prayed for the king.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Cry to God from wherever you are today.
- Ask him to lead you to the rock higher than you.
- Thank him for the King who reigns forever.

PSALM 51:10

DAY 279 · WEEK 40

2 Samuel 18:1-19:43

Absalom defeated; David restored, grief and kingship

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 80 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 18:1-19:43. Absalom is defeated and killed, and David mourns. Notice David's grief and Joab's rebuke, and how David is restored to Jerusalem.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

David's forces, led by Joab, Abishai, and Ittai, meet Absalom's army in the forest of Ephraim. David has told his commanders to deal gently with Absalom. The battle goes to David, but Absalom is caught by his hair in a tree and killed by Joab. David's grief is so great that it threatens the victory. Slowly, he is brought back across the Jordan and restored.

STEP 3

Observation

1. David commands, "Deal gently for my sake with the young man Absalom" (18:5).
2. Absalom's mule runs under an oak, and his head catches in the branches. Joab thrusts three javelins into his heart (18:9-15).
3. A Cushite brings the news, and David asks, "Is it well with the young man Absalom?" (18:29-32).
4. "O my son Absalom, my son, my son Absalom! Would I had died instead of you, O Absalom, my son, my son!" (18:33).
5. "So the victory that day was turned into mourning for all the people" (19:2).
6. Joab says, "You have today covered with shame the faces of all your servants… because you love those who hate you and hate those who love you" (19:5-6).
7. David sits in the gate, and the people come before him (19:8).

8. The tribes of Israel argue over who has the greater claim to bring the king back. David shows mercy to Shimei, and Mephibosheth appears with a loyal heart (19:9-40).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The battle itself is told briefly. What matters is its aftermath. A father has lost a son who tried to kill him, and he weeps. David's love for Absalom is deep and painful. It is also a love marked by failure. He had not corrected Absalom, he had not reconciled with him properly, and now he has no chance to do so. His cry, "Would I had died instead of you," is among the most poignant words in the Old Testament. It shows a father's heart, and it is also impossible. A man cannot die in place of another. But another Son would.

Joab's rebuke is harsh, but not without truth. The people are being demoralized by the king's grief. A leader must carry both his own sorrow and his responsibility. David listens, rises, and sits in the gate. He lets his duty override his mourning for the moment. Grief is real, but it does not excuse neglect.

Chapter 19 shows David's ability to forgive. He pardons Shimei, who had cursed him. He is gracious to Mephibosheth, who had been slandered by his servant Ziba. He tries to repair division between the tribes. David is not perfect, and there are signs of favoritism and quarrel, but the broad picture is of a king who restores rather than avenges.

The Jordan crossing is symbolic. David returns to the land, to the city, and to the throne, passing through the water, as Israel did under Joshua. After the exile of Absalom's rebellion, David is restored. It is a small picture of the great restoration that the prophets would later promise: God's king returning to Zion.

The lasting image is of the grieving father. The story of Absalom is the story of a son who would not be reconciled, and a father who would have given anything to save him.

STEP 5

Connection

The cry "Would I had died instead of you" finds its answer in Christ, who did die in our place (Romans 5:8). God the Father gave up his own Son for rebels (Romans 8:32). Unlike David's grief, the cross is not an unproductive tragedy but a victory. Jesus, like David, wept over his enemies (Luke 19:41). And as David showed mercy to Shimei, Jesus said, "Father, forgive them" (Luke 23:34).

STEP 6

Application

Think about a relationship where reconciliation was delayed. Is there something you could say today?

If you are grieving, be honest about it. And also ask how grief and duty can live together.

Show mercy to someone who has cursed you, as David did to Shimei.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for giving his Son for rebels like you.

Pray for those who grieve and for divided families.

Ask him to teach you to love those who have wronged you.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 51:10 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

PSALM 51:10

REST

Meditation

This is a prayer for those who have discovered that their problem is deeper than their behavior. David asks God not simply to forgive what he has done but to change who he is.

"Create." The Hebrew verb is bara, used in Genesis 1:1 for God's making of the heavens and earth. Only God creates. David is saying that he cannot produce a clean heart on his own. No amount of effort, resolution, or discipline will do it. It must be a gift, a work of God's creative power.

"A clean heart." In the Bible, the heart is the center of the person: thoughts, desires, will, and affections. A clean heart is a heart purified of whatever defiles. David knows that the root of his sin was not an isolated action but the condition of his heart.

"Renew a right spirit." The word "renew" implies that something steadfast once existed and has been lost. He asks for a spirit that is firm and fixed in the right direction, one that will not waver.

"Within me." The work must be inward. Religion that changes only the surface is not enough. This is what the prophets promised in the new covenant: "I will give you a new heart, and a new spirit I will put within you" (Ezekiel 36:26).

For the Christian, this prayer is answered at conversion and continues through sanctification. We are born again (John 3:3-6), and the Spirit is at work making us new. Yet we keep praying this prayer, because we are still being made clean. Pray it daily.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week took David from the heights to the depths. You read the early Psalm 51 in its setting, David's prayer after Nathan's confrontation. You saw the family consequences of his sin: the assault on Tamar, Absalom's murder of Amnon, and Absalom's rebellion. You followed David out of Jerusalem, weeping, with his head covered, and saw how God worked behind the scenes through Hushai. You read the psalms of the wilderness, with Psalm 63's thirst and Psalm 61's cry from the end of the earth. You saw Absalom die and David grieve, and his gracious restoration. The week taught that forgiveness does not erase consequences, that God works through human frailty, and that the human heart needs to be re-created by God.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

David prayed for a clean heart because he saw that his problem went deeper than behavior. What do you see about your heart that behavior changes alone cannot fix?

David wished he could have died in place of his son, but could not. How does Jesus, who did die in our place, answer the grief behind that cry?

Psalm 63 says God's steadfast love is better than life. In what areas of life do you find it hardest to believe that?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to create in you a clean heart.

Thank him for the Son who died in your place.

Rest in him, asking him to satisfy your soul.

DAY 281 · WEEK 41

2 Samuel 20:1-22:51

Sheba's revolt; famine; David's song, the LORD is my rock

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 90 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 20:1-22:51. Sheba's rebellion is put down, and the narrative moves to an appendix that begins with David's long song of thanksgiving. Notice how the chapters end with praise.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After David's return, a worthless man named Sheba leads a revolt of the northern tribes, and Joab murders Amasa and puts it down. Chapters 21 to 24 form an appendix to the book, rather than a chronological narrative, and begin with a famine that David deals with, a list of warriors, and finally the song of chapter 22, which is the same as Psalm 18, which you read earlier.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Sheba says, "We have no portion in David, and we have no inheritance in the son of Jesse" (20:1).
2. Joab murders Amasa with a sword, and a wise woman of Abel saves her city by persuading the people to throw out Sheba's head (20:8-22).
3. A three-year famine comes because of Saul's bloodguilt against the Gibeonites, and David deals with it (21:1-14).
4. David's mighty men kill Philistine giants (21:15-22).
5. "The LORD is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer, my God, my rock, in whom I take refuge" (22:2-3).
6. "He reached down from on high, he took me; he drew me out of many waters" (22:17).

7. “This God, his way is perfect; the word of the LORD proves true” (22:31).
8. “Great salvation he brings to his king, and shows steadfast love to his anointed, to David and his offspring forever” (22:51).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The rebellion of Sheba is a short echo of Absalom’s. It shows that the unity of the kingdom is fragile. The cry, “We have no portion in David,” foreshadows the division that will follow Solomon (1 Kings 12:16). Even in David’s restoration, the seeds of the split are visible.

Chapter 21 is hard for modern readers. Saul had violated an ancient oath to the Gibeonites by trying to wipe them out. A famine follows, and David asks God. The solution involves the execution of seven of Saul’s descendants. The chapter shows that sins have long consequences, and that oaths made in God’s name are serious. It also shows David’s care for Jonathan’s son Mephibosheth, whom he spares for the sake of his oath, and his honor for the bones of Saul and Jonathan.

The list of David’s mighty men, and the stories of giants slain, remind us that the kingdom was won by the courage of many. David does not stand alone. He leads a band of faithful warriors. Yet when David grows weary, his men insist that he no longer go out to battle, “lest you quench the lamp of Israel” (21:17). The king’s life is precious because the nation depends on him.

Then comes the song. It is Psalm 18, placed here as a summary of David’s life. The editor of the book wanted readers to look back on everything that had happened and hear David’s own testimony: God rescued me. The song ends with the promise of an everlasting kingdom. The appendix begins with the rock and ends with the offspring of David forever.

The structure is intentional. Between the wars and the failures, the book wants us to see God’s faithfulness. The final word is steadfast love.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the “lamp” that does not go out (John 8:12), and the greater king who did not stay home from battle but went to the cross. Paul quotes 2 Samuel 22:50 in Romans 15:9 and applies it to Christ among the Gentiles. The theme of the one who is “rescued out of many waters” finds its fulfillment in the resurrection. Hebrews 11:32-34 recalls David among those who conquered through faith.

STEP 6

Application

Look back over your life and write your own short song of thanks, modeled on 2 Samuel 22.

Ask whether any promise or oath you have made needs to be kept.

Thank God for the people who fight alongside you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what he has been to you: rock, fortress, deliverer.

Thank him for rescuing you.

Thank him for steadfast love that has not left.

PSALM 34:8

DAY 282 · WEEK 41

Psalm 34

I will bless the LORD at all times, taste and see

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 22 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 34. This is an acrostic psalm, each verse beginning with the next letter of the Hebrew alphabet. Read it as a testimony and a teaching.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title says it was written "when he changed his behavior before Abimelech, so that he drove him out, and he went away." This refers to the time David feigned madness before King Achish of Gath (1 Samuel 21:10-15). Abimelech seems to be a title or alternate name. Having read that story, notice that David writes a psalm of praise about one of his most embarrassing moments. He saw the hand of God even in that.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I will bless the LORD at all times; his praise shall continually be in my mouth" (v. 1).
2. "Oh, magnify the LORD with me, and let us exalt his name together!" (v. 3).
3. "I sought the LORD, and he answered me and delivered me from all my fears" (v. 4).
4. "This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him and saved him out of all his troubles" (v. 6).
5. "The angel of the LORD encamps around those who fear him, and delivers them" (v. 7).
6. "Oh, taste and see that the LORD is good! Blessed is the man who takes refuge in him!" (v. 8).
7. "The LORD is near to the brokenhearted and saves the crushed in spirit" (v. 18).
8. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the LORD delivers him out of them all" (v. 19).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David turns an embarrassing escape into a hymn. He had acted like a madman, drooling on his beard, to avoid being killed. Yet he does not boast of his cleverness. He credits God: “This poor man cried, and the LORD heard him.” He calls himself poor. He knows he was saved by grace, not by his own wits.

The psalm moves from personal testimony to public invitation. “Magnify the LORD with me.” David wants others to share his joy. A good testimony is not just a story about what God did for me. It is an invitation to see God for who he is.

The famous line, “Taste and see that the LORD is good,” invites experience rather than argument. God is not only to be believed in but tasted. The psalm does not ask for blind faith. It points to the evidence of a life lived under God’s care, and it invites us to test it.

Verse 10 offers a striking contrast: “The young lions suffer want and hunger; but those who seek the LORD lack no good thing.” Lions are the strongest of predators, and yet they go hungry. Those who trust God, though weak, lack nothing that is truly good.

The center of the psalm’s teaching is verse 18: “The LORD is near to the brokenhearted.” It is one of the most comforting promises in the Bible. God is not distant from those who suffer. He is near. And verse 19 is honest: “Many are the afflictions of the righteous.” The psalm does not promise a life without trouble. It promises deliverance from it all.

The final verse offers a guarantee: “The LORD redeems the life of his servants; none of those who take refuge in him will be condemned.”

STEP 5

Connection

John 19:36 applies verse 20 to Jesus: “Not one of his bones will be broken.” Peter quotes verses 12 to 16 in 1 Peter 3:10-12 to teach Christians how to live. 1 Peter 2:3 echoes “taste and see” (“if indeed you have tasted that the Lord is good”). Jesus is the “angel of the LORD” fulfilled in the sense that he is near to those who are crushed (Matthew 11:28-30). Romans 8:1 says there is no condemnation for those in Christ Jesus.

STEP 6

Application

Turn an embarrassing or painful memory into a testimony of God’s help.

Today, “taste and see.” Look for a specific way that God shows his goodness.

Reach out to someone who is brokenhearted and be near to them.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bless the LORD at this moment, in your own words.

Thank him for answering you in the past.

Pray for someone brokenhearted, and thank him that he is near.

PSALM 34:8

DAY 283 · WEEK 41

Psalm 56; Psalm 57

When I am afraid I trust in you

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 22 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 56 and Psalm 57. Both come from David's fugitive years. Notice the repeated refrains and the confidence they reflect.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 56 is set "when the Philistines seized him in Gath," and Psalm 57 "when he fled from Saul, in the cave." Both carry the title Miktam, and both use the tune "Do Not Destroy." They are written in the narrowest places: a foreign city and a cave. Both end in a refrain of praise, which shows that faith can speak boldly even when circumstances are small and frightening.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "When I am afraid, I put my trust in you" (56:3).
2. "In God, whose word I praise, in God I trust; I shall not be afraid. What can flesh do to me?" (56:4).
3. "You have kept count of my tossings; put my tears in your bottle. Are they not in your book?" (56:8).
4. "This I know, that God is for me" (56:9).
5. "Be merciful to me, O God, be merciful to me, for in you my soul takes refuge; in the shadow of your wings I will take refuge, till the storms of destruction pass by" (57:1).
6. "I cry out to God Most High, to God who fulfills his purpose for me" (57:2).
7. "My heart is steadfast, O God, my heart is steadfast! I will sing and make melody!" (57:7).
8. "Be exalted, O God, above the heavens! Let your glory be over all the earth!" (57:5, 11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 56 gives a very honest account of fear. “When I am afraid.” It does not say “if.” David is afraid. He is in Gath, the home of Goliath, with the sword of Goliath in his hand. The psalm says that fear is a normal part of life, and the answer is not to deny it, but to bring it to God. “When I am afraid, I put my trust in you.” Courage in the Bible is not the absence of fear. It is trust in the midst of it.

The image of God collecting tears in a bottle has been loved for centuries. God does not just see our sorrow. He keeps count of our tossings and records our tears. Nothing is wasted. No tear falls unnoticed. It is among the most tender images in the Psalms.

And verse 9: “This I know, that God is for me.” It is a statement of settled conviction. It is the truth David holds to when he cannot see anything else. Paul would later write, “If God is for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31).

Psalm 57 is set in a cave, but the cave becomes a place of high praise. “In the shadow of your wings I will take refuge, till the storms of destruction pass by.” It is a refuge for a season. David knows that the storm will pass. His confidence rests on God, “who fulfills his purpose for me.” God has a plan, and the cave cannot stop it.

The two refrains are lovely. Psalm 56 says, “In God I trust; I shall not be afraid.” Psalm 57 says, “Be exalted, O God, above the heavens!” In the first, trust is the response to fear. In the second, praise is the response to danger. Both turn the heart from circumstances to God.

Verse 8 of Psalm 57 is a morning song: “Awake, my glory! Awake, O harp and lyre! I will awake the dawn!” David wakes the dawn, rather than waiting for it.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus found refuge not in a cave but in his Father, who “collects” his tears (Hebrews 5:7). Paul quotes Psalm 56:4 in spirit in Romans 8:31 and Hebrews 13:6. Psalm 57:10 (“your steadfast love is great to the heavens”) echoes in Ephesians 3:18-19. Jesus said, “In the world you will have tribulation. But take heart; I have overcome the world” (John 16:33).

STEP 6

Application

Pray, “When I am afraid, I put my trust in you,” the next time you feel fear rising.

Remember that God keeps your tears in a bottle. None of them is wasted.

Wake the dawn with praise tomorrow morning, even if it is hard.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what makes you afraid, and say, “I trust you.”

Thank him that he keeps count of your tears.

Ask him to be exalted above your fears.

PSALM 34:8

DAY 284 · WEEK 41

Psalm 30

I will extol you, O LORD, for you have drawn me up

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 30. It is a psalm of thanksgiving for being brought back from the edge of death. Notice how it moves from mourning to dancing.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title reads, “A Psalm of David. A Song at the dedication of the temple.” The “house” may refer to David’s own palace, or to the temple site. In 2 Samuel 24 David numbers the people and faces a plague, which ended at the site where the temple would be built. Whatever the occasion, it is a psalm of a man who has come near to death and been raised.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “I will extol you, O LORD, for you have drawn me up and have not let my foes rejoice over me” (v. 1).
2. “O LORD my God, I cried to you for help, and you have healed me” (v. 2).
3. “O LORD, you have brought up my soul from Sheol; you restored me to life from among those who go down to the pit” (v. 3).
4. “For his anger is but for a moment, and his favor is for a lifetime. Weeping may tarry for the night, but joy comes with the morning” (v. 5).
5. “As for me, I said in my prosperity, I shall never be moved” (v. 6).
6. “You hid your face; I was dismayed” (v. 7).
7. “You have turned for me my mourning into dancing; you have loosed my sackcloth and clothed me with gladness” (v. 11).

8 “That my glory may sing your praise and not be silent. O LORD my God, I will give thanks to you forever!” (v. 12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm is a story of three stages: security, crisis, and rescue. In the first, David was prosperous and said, “I shall never be moved.” He felt safe. But the security was in his prosperity rather than in God. Then God hid his face, and David was dismayed. The sudden loss of the sense of God’s presence showed him how much he depended on God. Third, he cried out, and God healed him.

The lesson is that comfort can breed complacency. When all is well, we can forget that we depend on God. Crises remind us. This is not a sentimental thought. David learned it by a frightening experience.

Verse 5 is one of the best-loved lines in the Psalter: “His anger is but for a moment, and his favor is for a lifetime. Weeping may tarry for the night, but joy comes with the morning.” It does not deny that the night is real. It says that the night will end. In the Bible, God’s discipline is brief compared to his kindness. The pain of this world is not the last word.

The reversal in verse 11 is a beautiful image. “You have turned for me my mourning into dancing.” It is God who does the turning. The sackcloth is loosed, and gladness is the new clothing. This is the pattern of the gospel: death becomes life, mourning becomes dancing.

The psalm ends with a purpose. God has done all this “that my glory may sing your praise and not be silent.” Our deliverance is meant to lead to worship. Silence is not an option for the one who has been rescued. David resolves to give thanks “forever.”

STEP 5

Connection

The movement from night to morning is the pattern of Easter. Jesus’ mourning disciples saw him alive on the third day (John 16:20-22; Luke 24). “Joy comes with the morning” echoes Mary at the tomb at dawn (John 20:1). Paul says, “For this light momentary affliction is preparing for us an eternal weight of glory” (2 Corinthians 4:17). Revelation 21:4 promises that mourning will pass away.

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on whether prosperity has made you too comfortable. Ask God to keep you dependent.

If you are in a night of weeping, hold on to verse 5 as a promise.

Think about how God has turned mourning into dancing in your own story, and share it with someone.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that his anger is for a moment and his favor for a lifetime.

Tell him what mourning you want turned into dancing.

Give him praise for healing you.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 35 is a psalm of David, and it is one of the longest of his cries against enemies. It uses the language of the courtroom and the battlefield. It likely comes from the years of persecution under Saul, when David was accused unjustly and hunted. In the Bible, such prayers are not about private revenge but about asking God to act as judge and defender.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “Contend, O LORD, with those who contend with me; fight against those who fight against me!” (v. 1).
2. “Say to my soul, I am your salvation!” (v. 3).
3. “For without cause they hid their net for me; without cause they dug a pit for my life” (v. 7).
4. “Then my soul will rejoice in the LORD, exulting in his salvation” (v. 9).
5. “All my bones shall say, O LORD, who is like you, delivering the poor from him who is too strong for him?” (v. 10).
6. “They repay me evil for good; my soul is bereft” (v. 12).
7. “But I, when they were sick, wore sackcloth; I afflicted myself with fasting; I prayed with head bowed on my chest” (vv. 13).

8 “Then my tongue shall tell of your righteousness and of your praise all the day long” (v. 28).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with the call for God to fight. The language is of a defense attorney and of a soldier. David is asking the Lord to take his side. It is not private vengeance but an appeal to divine justice. He does not take up the sword himself. Instead, he asks God to act. We see this restraint in David’s behavior toward Saul.

At the heart of the request is verse 3: “Say to my soul, I am your salvation!” More than victory over enemies, David wants assurance that God is his. The deepest need in times of attack is to know that God is for us.

The center of the psalm is the contrast between how David treated his enemies and how they treated him. When they were sick, he wore sackcloth and fasted and prayed for them. Now they gather against him and mock. This is the hardest part: being repaid evil for good. “They repay me evil for good; my soul is bereft.” David feels deep grief at the unfairness, and he brings it to God.

This is the kind of pain that Jesus experienced. The psalm’s lines “without cause” and “they hated me without a cause” are quoted by Jesus in John 15:25 as fulfilled in him. He healed, taught, and served, and was repaid with hatred.

The psalm has three cycles, each ending with a vow of praise (verses 9 to 10, 18, and 27 to 28). In each, David moves from lament to anticipated thanksgiving. He ends by saying that his tongue will tell of God’s righteousness all day long. The pattern is a model for prayer in the face of injustice: tell God the truth, ask for his help, and promise to praise.

The imprecatory parts of the psalm, in which David asks for the shame of his enemies, should be read as a request that God’s justice would be done, and not as a license for personal hatred.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus quoted verse 19 in John 15:25: “They hated me without a cause.” He was falsely accused, mocked, and betrayed (Matthew 26:59-61). He answered with love and forgiveness (Luke 23:34). Paul teaches, “Bless those who persecute you; bless and do not curse” (Romans 12:14). 1 Peter 3:9 says, “Do not repay evil for evil… but on the contrary, bless.”

STEP 6

Application

If someone has repaid your kindness with cruelty, bring it to God in prayer rather than responding in kind.

Ask God to “say to your soul, I am your salvation.” Pause and listen.

Consider how you can pray for an enemy as David did when they were sick.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bring God your hurt about being repaid evil for good.

Ask him to help you bless and not curse.

Thank Jesus for being hated without cause.

DAY 286 · WEEK 41

Psalm 38; Psalm 39

Rebuke me not in your anger; show me, O LORD, my end

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 26 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 38 and Psalm 39. These are two of David's most honest prayers, about the suffering that comes with sin and with the brevity of life. Read them slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 38 is a penitential psalm, "for the memorial offering," and describes suffering in body and soul because of sin. Psalm 39 is a meditation on the shortness of life, written by a man who tried to hold his tongue and could not. They are placed together here after David's long reign and the sins and sorrows of the last chapters. Together they describe the weariness of a man who knows his frailty.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O LORD, rebuke me not in your anger, nor discipline me in your wrath!" (38:1).
2. "For my iniquities have gone over my head; like a heavy burden, they are too heavy for me" (38:4).
3. "I am utterly bowed down and prostrate; all the day I go about mourning" (38:6).
4. "O Lord, all my longing is before you; my sighing is not hidden from you" (38:9).
5. "For I hope in you, O LORD; it is you, O Lord my God, who will answer" (38:15).
6. "Make haste to help me, O Lord, my salvation!" (38:22).
7. "O LORD, make me know my end and what is the measure of my days; let me know how fleeting I am!" (39:4).
8. "And now, O Lord, for what do I wait? My hope is in you" (39:7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 38 is a portrait of sin's weight. David feels it as a heavy burden, a pain in his body, and a mourning of his soul. His friends and neighbors stand aloof. He is aware of his guilt. And yet he does not despair. In the middle of the psalm, he says, "For I hope in you, O LORD." This is the same turn we have seen elsewhere: from the weight of the problem to the strength of the one who can solve it.

A significant line is verse 9: "All my longing is before you; my sighing is not hidden from you." God knows what we cannot put into words. A sigh is a prayer. There are times when we cannot form sentences, and the psalm assures us that God hears even our groans.

Psalm 39 begins with an attempt at silence. David determined to guard his mouth, so as not to sin with his tongue in the presence of the wicked. But the silence burned inside him, and finally he spoke. What he said was a prayer about the brevity of life.

"Make me know my end... let me know how fleeting I am!" It is a startling request. Most of us avoid thinking about death. David asks for awareness. "Behold, you have made my days a few handbreadths, and my lifetime is as nothing before you." Every person, even at his best, is a mere breath. This is not morbid. It is the beginning of wisdom. Moses prays the same in Psalm 90:12: "Teach us to number our days that we may get a heart of wisdom."

The turning point is verse 7: "And now, O Lord, for what do I wait? My hope is in you." If life is a breath, then everything depends on God. The question is where to place hope. David finds the answer in God alone.

The psalm ends in a plea for relief, with the confession that he is a sojourner with God, a guest on earth. Our time here is short. Our home is with him.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus carried our burden of sin: "He himself bore our sins in his body on the tree" (1 Peter 2:24). James 4:14 says, "You are a mist that appears for a little time and then vanishes." Psalm 39:12 is echoed in Hebrews 11:13 and 1 Peter 2:11, where believers are "sojourners and exiles." Paul says, "We look not to the things that are seen but to the things that are unseen" (2 Corinthians 4:18).

STEP 6

Application

Spend a few minutes asking God to "number your days." What would you do differently if you took your mortality seriously?

Bring a sigh to God today, something you cannot put into words.

Recall that you are a sojourner. Where have you been settling in too deeply?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to teach you to number your days.
- Tell him how heavy your iniquities feel and where your hope lies.
- Thank Jesus for carrying them.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Oh, taste and see that the LORD is good! Blessed is the man who takes refuge in him!"

PSALM 34:8

REST

Meditation

This verse is an invitation, not a command to believe on faith alone. David says, in effect, "Try it for yourself."

"Taste." You cannot know the flavor of food by reading about it. Tasting is personal and immediate. David is saying that the goodness of God is not only a doctrine. It is something we can experience. He had tasted it in the cave, in Gath, and in the wilderness. He asks us to do the same.

"And see." The tasting leads to seeing. What the Lord does is visible in the lives of those who trust him. This is the evidence David offers: not a philosophical argument, but a life.

"That the LORD is good." The goodness of God is the foundation of everything. He is not only powerful, or just, or wise, but good. When we are tempted to doubt, this is the claim we need most. God's goodness is not diminished by suffering. David wrote this psalm in a time of fear and embarrassment.

“Blessed is the man who takes refuge in him.” The result of tasting is taking shelter. A person who knows that God is good will run to him. The word “blessed” echoes Psalm 1:1 and shows how David’s psalms continue the same theme.

Peter echoes this verse in 1 Peter 2:3: “If indeed you have tasted that the Lord is good.” The Lord is Jesus, and the tasting is personal. At the table of communion, we taste and see in a special way. Throughout the week, ask where you can taste his goodness: in answered prayer, in a kindness, in a beautiful day, in forgiveness.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed David in the aftermath of his sin. You prayed Psalm 51 with him and saw the pain in his family: Tamar’s suffering, Absalom’s revenge, and the rebellion that drove David from Jerusalem. You saw his humility as he walked out weeping, and how God worked through Hushai. You read the psalms of the wilderness, praising God’s steadfast love as better than life. You saw Absalom’s death and David’s grief, and the king’s restoration. In the appendix of 2 Samuel, David’s song looked back on God’s rescue. In Psalms 34, 56, 57, 30, 35, 38, and 39 you prayed with a man who knew fear, injustice, joy, and mortality. The week taught that God is near to the brokenhearted, that tears are never wasted, and that life is short but his goodness is not.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

David told his story of being rescued from a humiliating situation as a song of praise. What embarrassing or hard moment in your life could become a testimony of God’s help?

Psalm 34:18 says the LORD is near to the brokenhearted. How did Jesus, the Man of Sorrows, demonstrate that nearness, and how can you lean on it this week?

Psalm 39 asks God to teach us how brief life is. What would change in how you spend this week if you lived it with that awareness?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Taste and see: name one way you have seen God to be good this week.

Thank him for being near to the brokenhearted.

Thank Jesus, who knows your sorrows.

DAY 288 · WEEK 42

2 Samuel 23:1-24:25

David's last words; the mighty men; the census and plague

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 47 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Samuel 23:1-24:25. These are David's last words, the roll of his mighty men, and the story of the census and the plague. Notice how the book ends: with a sin, a sacrifice, and an altar.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The last chapters of 2 Samuel are an appendix, standing outside the main story. David speaks his final oracle, and the narrator lists his mighty men. Then comes an account of David numbering the people, a sin that brings a plague on Israel. The plague stops at the threshing floor of Araunah the Jebusite, where David builds an altar. This is the place where the temple will rise.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The oracle of David, the son of Jesse… the sweet psalmist of Israel" (23:1).
2. "The Spirit of the LORD speaks by me; his word is on my tongue" (23:2).
3. "When one rules justly over men, ruling in the fear of God, he dawns on them like the morning light, like the sun shining forth on a cloudless morning" (23:3-4).
4. "For does not my house stand so with God? For he has made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and secure" (23:5).
5. Three mighty men break through the Philistine camp to bring David water from Bethlehem, and he pours it out to the LORD (23:13-17).
6. David orders Joab to number the people, and afterward his heart strikes him: "I have sinned greatly in what I have done" (24:1-10).

7. David says, “Let us fall into the hand of the LORD, for his mercy is great; but let me not fall into the hand of man” (24:14).

8. “I will not offer to the LORD my God burnt offerings that cost me nothing” (24:24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

David’s last words are a reflection on kingship, and they sketch the portrait of the ideal king: one who rules justly in the fear of God. Such a king is like the morning light, like the sun after rain. The poem describes what David was meant to be and often was not. It is also an unwitting description of the coming Messiah. David says that God “has made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered in all things and secure.” At the end of his life, his hope is in the covenant, not in his own record.

The story of the three mighty men and the water from Bethlehem is a small gem. David longs for a drink from the well of his hometown. Three of his warriors risk their lives to get it. When they bring it, David will not drink. He pours it out to the LORD, saying that it is the blood of men who risked their lives. He sees their devotion as too holy to be consumed. It is a gesture of honor, and a sign that David understood the worth of sacrifice.

The census in chapter 24 is puzzling at first. Why was it a sin? The text does not say, but the likely issue is pride and self-reliance: counting the nation’s military strength as if the king’s power came from numbers. Even Joab sees the problem. David is struck in conscience and confesses. The prophet Gad offers three punishments, and David’s choice is a mark of his character: “Let us fall into the hand of the LORD, for his mercy is great.” Seventy thousand die. When the angel stretches out his hand over Jerusalem, “the LORD relented.”

David’s response is to buy the threshing floor and build an altar. “I will not offer burnt offerings that cost me nothing.” True worship involves cost. The plague stops, and the site becomes the temple mount (2 Chronicles 3:1). The book that began with a barren woman at a sanctuary ends with a king at an altar. A kingdom built on sacrifice and mercy.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the “sun shining forth on a cloudless morning” of righteous rule (Malachi 4:2; Luke 1:78-79). He is the king who does not count his strength in numbers but gives himself. The place where the plague stopped became the place of sacrifice, and the greater sacrifice at Jerusalem turned away God’s wrath for good (Romans 3:25; Hebrews 9:11-14). David’s refusal to offer what costs nothing is fulfilled in Christ, who gave everything.

STEP 6

Application

Ask if you are tempted to measure your security by numbers: income, followers, savings, or influence.

Think about what worship costs you. Is there anything you offer God that costs you nothing?

Pour out something precious to the LORD today, in gratitude.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep you from trusting in numbers or success.
- Thank him for an everlasting covenant secure in all things.
- Thank him for the altar where wrath was turned away.

DAY 289 · WEEK 42

1 Kings 1:1-2:46

Solomon established on the throne; David's final charge

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 85 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 1:1-2:46. David is old, and the question of who will succeed him comes to a head. Read David's charge to Solomon in chapter 2 with care.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The first book of Kings opens with an elderly, cold David and a succession crisis. His son Adonijah declares himself king, but Nathan and Bathsheba persuade David to keep his promise that Solomon will reign. Solomon is anointed at Gihon. Before he dies, David gives Solomon a final charge. Then Solomon deals with those who threaten his throne.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Adonijah, "a very handsome man," says, "I will be king" (1:5-6).
2. Nathan and Bathsheba remind David of his oath that Solomon would reign (1:11-31).
3. Zadok the priest anoints Solomon with oil from the tent, and the people shout, "Long live King Solomon!" (1:38-40).
4. David's charge: "Be strong, and show yourself a man, and keep the charge of the LORD your God, walking in his ways" (2:2-3).
5. "That the LORD may establish his word that he spoke concerning me, saying, If your sons pay close attention to their way… you shall not lack a man on the throne of Israel" (2:4).
6. David dies: "Then David slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David" (2:10).
7. Solomon has Adonijah, Joab, and Shimei dealt with (2:13-46).

8 “So the kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon” (2:46).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first chapters of Kings show the covenant of 2 Samuel 7 being worked out in real life. Adonijah’s bid for the throne follows the pattern of Absalom: a handsome prince, an entourage, and a claim made while the father is weak. But God has chosen Solomon, and God’s choice stands. Nathan, who spoke the covenant, and Bathsheba, who knows the promise, ensure that David’s oath is honored. The promise of God is kept through the quiet work of faithful people.

David’s last words to Solomon are the passage to read most carefully. They are a charge: “Keep the charge of the LORD your God, walking in his ways, and keeping his statutes… that you may prosper in all that you do.” The promise of the dynasty is tied to the obedience of the king. This is the pattern of the Davidic covenant as it unfolds: the promise of God is certain, but the individual kings who enjoy it must walk in faithfulness. It sets up the question the rest of Kings will answer: will the sons of David obey?

David also leaves Solomon some hard instructions about Joab and Shimei. These can read as vengeful, but David is passing on matters of justice that he had left unresolved. Joab had murdered Abner and Amasa. Shimei had cursed the king. Solomon, in his early reign, removes these threats. The narrative presents it as the establishment of the kingdom.

Notice the quiet line: “David slept with his fathers.” The man who was a shepherd, a fugitive, a king, an adulterer, a poet, and a penitent dies in peace. His reign lasted forty years. The kingdom now passes to his son.

The last line of the chapter is a hinge: “So the kingdom was established in the hand of Solomon.” It is a statement of fulfillment, and also a question about what will happen next.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the true Son of David who was anointed at the Jordan and cried, “It is finished.” Unlike Solomon, he needed no one to clear away his rivals. He conquered death by his own death. The charge to “be strong and keep the charge of the LORD” was kept perfectly only by him (Hebrews 3:6). Luke 22:29: “I assign to you, as my Father assigned to me, a kingdom.”

STEP 6

Application

If you are a parent or mentor, think about what charge you would leave to those who come after you.

Ask where you need to keep your word, as David did.

Thank God that the promised kingdom is established by Christ and not dependent on human obedience.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for keeping his promises through quiet and faithful people.

Ask him to help you walk in his ways.

Thank him for the true Son of David.

PSALM 72:19

DAY 290 · WEEK 42

Psalm 45

My heart overflows, the royal wedding

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 17 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 45. This is a royal wedding song. Read it as a song for a king and his bride, and then read it again with the Messiah in mind.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title calls it "A Maskil of the Sons of Korah, a love song," set to the tune "Lilies." It was probably composed for a royal wedding in Israel, perhaps even Solomon's. After the story of Solomon's accession, it is a fitting psalm to hear. But the language is so lofty that it was early read as pointing to the Messiah, and the New Testament quotes it that way.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "My heart overflows with a pleasing theme; I address my verses to the king; my tongue is like the pen of a ready scribe" (v. 1).
2. "You are the most handsome of the sons of men; grace is poured upon your lips; therefore God has blessed you forever" (v. 2).
3. "In your majesty ride out victoriously for the cause of truth and meekness and righteousness" (v. 4).
4. "Your throne, O God, is forever and ever. The scepter of your kingdom is a scepter of uprightness" (v. 6).
5. "You love righteousness and hate wickedness. Therefore God, your God, has anointed you with the oil of gladness beyond your companions" (v. 7).
6. "At your right hand stands the queen in gold of Ophir" (v. 9).

7. “Hear, O daughter, consider, and incline your ear: forget your people and your father’s house, and the king will desire your beauty” (vv. 10-11).

8. “I will cause your name to be remembered in all generations; therefore nations will praise you forever and ever” (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm is a love song, and it shows that the Bible is not embarrassed by joy at a wedding. The poet describes the king in glowing terms: handsome, gracious in speech, a warrior who rides out “for the cause of truth and meekness and righteousness.” The three words are unexpected for a king. A king who fights for truth, for meekness (humility), and righteousness is no ordinary monarch.

Then comes the surprise. The poet turns and addresses the king: “Your throne, O God, is forever and ever.” In the Hebrew, the king is addressed as “God.” Some readers have understood it as a figure of speech for the king’s godlike authority, but the line goes beyond the limits of any mere human king. The psalm raises a question that only the New Testament answers: who is this king whose throne is eternal and who is addressed as God?

The king is anointed “with the oil of gladness beyond your companions.” It is an echo of the Messiah’s anointing. And the king has a bride. In the second half of the psalm, the queen is told to forget her father’s house and to honor the king. She is given beautiful garments and brought in with joy. The picture of a royal marriage became, for the prophets and then the apostles, a picture of God’s covenant with his people.

The psalm ends with a promise that the king’s name will be remembered forever and that the nations will praise him. It is a promise that no human wedding could fulfill, but one that looks beyond to a king whose reign has no end.

Read in its original setting, it celebrates the royal house of David. Read in light of the whole Bible, it points to the wedding of the Lamb.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 1:8-9 quotes verses 6 and 7 and applies them directly to the Son: “But of the Son he says, Your throne, O God, is forever and ever.” The psalm is a witness to Christ’s deity. Paul describes the church as Christ’s bride (Ephesians 5:25-32), and Revelation 19:7-9 and 21:2 describe the marriage supper of the Lamb. John 3:29 says, “The one who has the bride is the bridegroom.”

STEP 6

Application

Read verses 6 and 7 aloud as praise to Jesus, whom Hebrews says is addressed here.

Think about how your relationship with Christ is like that of a bride with her husband.

Pray for the church, that she would be ready for the wedding.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what fills your heart when you think of Christ, the King.

Thank him that the King loves his bride, the church.

Ask him to make you faithful to the King.

PSALM 72:19

DAY 291 · WEEK 42

Psalm 72

Give the king your justice, the ideal reign

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 72. It is a prayer for the king, and the only psalm attributed to Solomon in this section. Notice how much it says about justice for the poor, and how widely the king's rule extends.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title says, "Of Solomon," and the last line says, "The prayers of David, the son of Jesse, are ended." It may be a prayer by David for his son, or a prayer for Solomon at his accession. It closes Book II of the Psalter. The psalm describes what a king should be, and in doing so, reaches far beyond anything Solomon could achieve. It describes the Messiah.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Give the king your justice, O God, and your righteousness to the royal son!" (v. 1).
2. "May he judge your people with righteousness, and your poor with justice!" (v. 2).
3. "May he defend the cause of the poor of the people, give deliverance to the children of the needy, and crush the oppressor!" (v. 4).
4. "May they fear you while the sun endures, and as long as the moon, throughout all generations!" (v. 5).
5. "May he be like rain that falls on the mown grass, like showers that water the earth!" (v. 6).
6. "May he have dominion from sea to sea, and from the River to the ends of the earth!" (v. 8).
7. "For he delivers the needy when he calls, the poor and him who has no helper" (v. 12).

8 “May his name endure forever, his fame continue as long as the sun! May people be blessed in him, all nations call him blessed!” (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The prayer begins with a request that the king would have God’s own justice. The king does not make justice. He receives it from God. A good ruler is one who reflects the character of the LORD. And the first test of justice, in this psalm, is how the poor are treated. The king is called to defend the poor, deliver the needy, and crush the oppressor. The word “poor” appears again and again. In the Bible, a ruler’s quality is measured by what happens to the weakest.

The next image is a beautiful one: the king’s rule as rain on mown grass. After the harvest, the field is cut short and dry, and rain brings new growth. A righteous king revives the land. Justice brings flourishing.

The psalm’s scope is large. “From sea to sea.” “To the ends of the earth.” “Kings bow down to him.” This is a vision of universal rule, and it reflects the promise to Abraham that all nations would be blessed (Genesis 12:3). In the last verses, we hear the promise echoed: “May people be blessed in him, all nations call him blessed!”

Solomon’s reign did not match this ideal. It began with promise, but it ended in oppression, taxation, and idolatry. The psalm remained a prayer waiting for an answer. The people kept praying for the king who would fulfill it.

The final doxology, “Blessed be the LORD, the God of Israel, who alone does wondrous things,” closes the second book of the Psalms. It leaves the reader with the sense that this prayer is not finished. “May the whole earth be filled with his glory! Amen and Amen!”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the king who defends the poor (Luke 4:18; 6:20), who delivers the needy who cry to him, and whose rule will reach “from sea to sea.” The wise men from the East brought gifts and bowed down (Matthew 2:11). Philippians 2:10-11 says every knee will bow. Galatians 3:8 shows the blessing of Abraham reaching the nations. Revelation 21:24-26 pictures the kings of the earth bringing glory into the city.

STEP 6

Application

Ask how you treat the poor, the needy, and those without influence. What does the psalm ask of you?

Pray this psalm for the leaders of your nation, and for the reign of Christ.

Pray “May the whole earth be filled with his glory” for a specific place or people.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Pray for justice for the poor and needy.
- Thank Jesus, who defends them.
- Pray that all nations would come to know him.

Solomon's wisdom; the golden age begins

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 3:1-5:18. Solomon asks for wisdom, shows it in the case of the two women, and builds a flourishing kingdom. Notice both the glory and the small warnings.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Solomon's reign begins with a political marriage to Pharaoh's daughter and with worship at the high places, which are small signs that things are not perfect. At Gibeon, God appears to him in a dream and offers him whatever he asks. These chapters show the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham: a peaceful, prosperous Israel with influence over the nations. Solomon prepares to build the temple.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Solomon marries Pharaoh's daughter, and "only, the people were sacrificing at the high places" (3:1-3).
2. God says, "Ask what I shall give you" (3:5).
3. Solomon answers, "I am but a little child. I do not know how to go out or come in... Give your servant therefore an understanding mind to govern your people, that I may discern between good and evil" (3:7-9).
4. "It pleased the Lord that Solomon had asked this" (3:10). God gives wisdom, riches, and honor (3:11-14).
5. Two women claim the same baby, and Solomon proposes to divide it. The true mother says, "Give her the living child" (3:16-28).

6. “Judah and Israel were as many as the sand by the sea. They ate and drank and were happy” (4:20).
7. “God gave Solomon wisdom and understanding beyond measure, like the sand on the seashore” (4:29).
8. Solomon writes 3,000 proverbs and 1,005 songs, and people come from all nations to hear his wisdom (4:32-34).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Solomon’s prayer at Gibeon is a model of humility. He calls himself a little child, aware of his inadequacy. He asks not for wealth, or long life, or the death of enemies, but for an understanding heart. God is pleased, and gives him what he asked and what he did not. The principle is stated elsewhere in the Bible: “Seek first the kingdom of God… and all these things will be added to you” (Matthew 6:33).

The story of the two women shows what the wisdom looks like in practice. It is not abstract. It is the ability to see through a deadlock and reveal the truth. “All Israel heard of the judgment that the king had rendered, and they stood in awe of the king, because they perceived that the wisdom of God was in him.” Wisdom from God allows a ruler to administer justice.

Chapter 4 describes the kingdom at its height. The people are as many as the sand by the sea, and “each man under his vine and under his fig tree.” It is the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham and a taste of the peace that God wants for his people. The description of Solomon’s wisdom is stunning: greater than that of all the people of the East. Nations send ambassadors.

But there are quiet warnings, if you read carefully. The marriage alliance with Egypt, the lingering practice of high places, and the long lists of provisions all hint at a king who is gathering what Deuteronomy 17 told kings not to gather: wives, horses, and wealth. The text does not tell us this yet, but it plants the question.

The treaty with Hiram of Tyre in chapter 5 prepares for the temple. It also shows the cost: forced labor. “King Solomon drafted forced labor out of all Israel.” The shadow of oppression begins.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is “greater than Solomon” (Matthew 12:42). He is the wisdom of God (1 Corinthians 1:24, 30), and in him are “hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Colossians 2:3). James 1:5 says, “If any of you lacks wisdom, let him ask God, who gives generously to all without reproach.” The peace of Solomon’s reign points to the peace that Christ brings (Ephesians 2:14).

STEP 6

Application

Pray Solomon’s prayer today. Ask for an understanding mind to do what God has given you to do.

Notice what you ask God for most often. What does that reveal?

Look for the quiet warnings in your own life, small compromises that seem harmless now.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God for an understanding mind and a discerning heart.
- Thank him for Jesus, the wisdom of God, greater than Solomon.
- Ask him to keep you from small compromises.

DAY 293 · WEEK 42

1 Kings 6:1-7:51

The Temple built, the permanent dwelling of God

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 101 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 6:1-7:51. The temple is built. Read the details as a description of a house for God's presence, and watch for the note in 6:11-13, where God speaks.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Solomon begins to build the temple in the fourth year of his reign, 480 years after the exodus. The temple is on Mount Moriah, the threshing floor David had purchased. The design follows that of the tabernacle but is larger and more permanent. The chapters also describe Solomon's palace and the bronze work of Hiram. It was a seven-year project.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In the four hundred and eightieth year after the people of Israel came out of the land of Egypt… he began to build the house of the LORD" (6:1).
2. The stones were prepared at the quarry, "so that neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron was heard in the house while it was being built" (6:7).
3. God's word comes to Solomon: "Concerning this house that you are building, if you will walk in my statutes… then I will establish my word with you, which I spoke to David your father" (6:11-13).
4. "And I will dwell among the children of Israel and will not forsake my people Israel" (6:13).
5. The inner sanctuary, the Most Holy Place, is a cube, overlaid with gold, with two cherubim of olive wood (6:19-28).
6. The walls are carved with cherubim, palm trees, and open flowers (6:29-35).

7. “He was seven years in building it” (6:38).
8. Solomon spent thirteen years building his own house (7:1).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The temple is a work of extraordinary care. Even its construction was done in reverence: stones cut at the quarry, so that no hammering was heard at the site. It reflects the holiness of the place. The temple’s carvings of cherubim, palm trees, and open flowers recall the garden of Eden. The temple is a miniature Eden: a place where God dwells with his people. The Most Holy Place, a perfect cube covered in gold, is later echoed in the New Jerusalem (Revelation 21:16).

In the middle of the building account, God speaks. It is a short but important interruption. The temple is not enough. The building is secondary to obedience. “If you will walk in my statutes… then I will establish my word with you.” The promise of dwelling among them is tied to faithfulness. The temple could not save Israel if they were not obedient. This is the theme the prophets would later echo (Jeremiah 7:4).

The detail that it took seven years to build the temple and thirteen to build his own house is probably a quiet comment. The narrator does not accuse. But the contrast gives the reader pause. Where do a king’s priorities lie? Over time, the palace would grow while devotion declined.

The bronze work of Hiram, with the two pillars Jachin and Boaz, the sea, and the ten basins, shows the grandeur. The pillars’ names mean “he establishes” and “in him is strength.” They stood at the entrance as a statement about where Israel’s security lay.

The temple is a beautiful thing. But the people of God needed to learn that God does not live in houses made with hands. He chose to dwell there, but he cannot be contained by it.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the true temple (John 2:19-21), the place where God dwells with man (John 1:14). Believers are now God’s temple, built together into a dwelling place for God by the Spirit (1 Corinthians 3:16; Ephesians 2:21-22). Stephen reminded his hearers that “the Most High does not dwell in houses made by hands” (Acts 7:48). Revelation 21:22 says of the New Jerusalem, “I saw no temple in the city, for its temple is the Lord God the Almighty and the Lamb.”

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on the proportion between how much you invest in your own house and in God’s.

Remember that you are now a temple of the Holy Spirit. How does that shape how you live?

Thank God for the Eden-like promise of dwelling with his people.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for making his dwelling with his people.

Thank him that you are a dwelling place for his Spirit.

Ask him to keep you from building your own house before his.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Psalm 72:19 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Blessed be his glorious name forever; may the whole earth be filled with his glory! Amen and Amen!"

PSALM 72:19

REST

Meditation

This verse ends the second book of the Psalms with a burst of praise. It follows the long prayer for the king and carries the hope of the whole psalm into a doxology.

"Blessed be his glorious name forever." To bless the name of God is to speak well of him, to honor him as he deserves. His name is his character and reputation, everything about him that has been revealed. The word "forever" is the language of eternity: not for a moment, not for a lifetime, but without end.

"May the whole earth be filled with his glory!" This is one of the Bible's great prayers. It echoes Numbers 14:21, where God says, "All the earth shall be filled with the glory of the LORD." It anticipates Habakkuk 2:14. It is the purpose of creation and redemption: that the glory of God would cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

“Amen and Amen!” The double Amen is an emphatic “Let it be so.” It is the people’s agreement. They are not spectators but participants.

The context matters. This psalm is a prayer for a king, and the verse puts the king’s reign in its place. The king’s task is not to build his own name but to serve a purpose bigger than himself: the glory of God in all the earth. Solomon did not achieve this. His kingdom faded, and his temple fell. But the prayer remained, and it points to a king who will.

For the Christian, this is a prayer for the coming of Christ’s kingdom. When we pray “Hallowed be your name, your kingdom come,” we pray the same thing. And we live for it: that the earth would be filled with his glory. Let this be the prayer of your heart.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week the Davidic story reached its end and the Solomonic age began. You read David’s last words and his oracle of the just king, and the sobering account of the census and the plague, which ended at the threshing floor that would become the temple mount. You saw Solomon anointed and David’s charge to him, and you watched Solomon ask for wisdom and show it. You read of the building of the temple, a miniature Eden where God would dwell. In the Psalms, you read the royal wedding song of Psalm 45, which Hebrews applies to the Son, and Psalm 72, the prayer for the king that no human king could answer. The week taught that David’s hope rested on an everlasting covenant, that wisdom is a gift from God, and that the temple, though glorious, pointed to a greater dwelling.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

David refused to offer God what cost him nothing. What does faithful worship cost you, and what are you tempted to hold back?

Hebrews says Psalm 45 is addressed to the Son: “Your throne, O God, is forever and ever.” How does it change your view of Jesus to hear him addressed this way?

Solomon asked for wisdom, and God gave him more. Where do you need wisdom this week, and how will you ask for it?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bless God’s glorious name and pray for the earth to be filled with his glory.

Thank him for the King who judges with righteousness.

Rest in him today.

DAY 295 · WEEK 43

1 Kings 8:1-66

The Temple dedicated; Solomon's great prayer

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 66 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 8:1-66. This is the dedication of the temple, and Solomon's great prayer. Read the prayer slowly, and notice how often he asks God to hear and forgive.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The temple is complete, and the ark is brought in. The glory of the LORD fills the house in a cloud, as it filled the tabernacle in Exodus 40. Solomon blesses the people and offers a long prayer of dedication. He asks God to hear the prayers offered toward the temple, whatever the circumstances, and to forgive. The feast ends with enormous sacrifices and joy.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The priests bring the ark into the Most Holy Place, "and when the priests came out of the Holy Place, a cloud filled the house of the LORD" (8:6-10).
2. "For the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD" (8:11).
3. "The LORD has said that he would dwell in thick darkness. I have built you an exalted house, a place for you to dwell in forever" (8:12-13).
4. "O LORD, God of Israel, there is no God like you, in heaven above or on earth beneath, keeping covenant and showing steadfast love to your servants who walk before you with all their heart" (8:23).
5. "But will God indeed dwell on the earth? Behold, heaven and the highest heaven cannot contain you; how much less this house that I have built!" (8:27).
6. "Hear in heaven your dwelling place, and when you hear, forgive" (8:30).
7. "For there is no one who does not sin" (8:46).

8 “That all the peoples of the earth may know that the LORD is God; there is no other” (8:60).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The cloud that fills the temple is a sign that God has accepted the house. It echoes the glory at Sinai and in the wilderness tabernacle. The priests cannot stand to minister. The reality of God’s presence overwhelms them. This is the high point of the temple’s history. It is the moment when the dream of God dwelling with his people seemed to come true.

Solomon’s prayer is a masterpiece of theology. It starts with praise: there is no God like you, who keeps covenant and shows steadfast love. It acknowledges that God has kept his promise to David. And then comes the great honesty of verse 27: “Will God indeed dwell on the earth? Heaven and the highest heaven cannot contain you; how much less this house.” Solomon knows that the temple does not limit God. It is a place where God chooses to put his name, not a box that holds him.

The heart of the prayer is a series of seven situations: wrong done between neighbors, defeat in war, drought, famine and plague, the foreigner who comes, battle, and exile. In each, Solomon asks God to hear in heaven and forgive. The temple becomes a house of prayer. The assumption throughout is that the people will sin: “There is no one who does not sin.” The temple, then, is above all a place of forgiveness. It is where sacrifice is offered, where sins are atoned, and where the lost may turn back.

Verses 41 to 43 are a remarkable window: the foreigner who comes from a far country “for your name’s sake” is to be heard, “that all the peoples of the earth may know your name.” The temple was meant to be a light to the nations.

The dedication ends with a benediction and a feast of fellowship offerings. “The people went to their homes joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness that the LORD had shown to David his servant and to Israel his people.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the true dwelling of God, the glory in the flesh (John 1:14). He is greater than the temple (Matthew 12:6). On the cross, the temple curtain was torn, opening the way into the presence of God (Matthew 27:51; Hebrews 10:19-22). He called the temple “a house of prayer for all nations” (Mark 11:17). Acts 2 shows the Spirit filling the church, as the glory once filled the house.

STEP 6

Application

Pray the pattern of Solomon's prayer: praise, honest confession, and a request for forgiveness.

Remember that God cannot be contained by any building. Where do you try to confine him?

Pray for someone from another nation to come to know the name of the LORD.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God that heaven cannot contain him and yet he dwells with his people.
- Tell him what you want him to hear and forgive.
- Thank Jesus, the true temple.

DAY 296 · WEEK 43

Psalm 48

Great is the LORD in the city of our God

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 14 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 48. It is a song of Zion, the city of God. Imagine walking around Jerusalem, counting its towers, and giving thanks for God's protection.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 48 is a song of the sons of Korah and one of the Songs of Zion (see also Psalms 46, 76, 84, 87, 122). Written to celebrate God's deliverance of Jerusalem, perhaps from a military threat, it praises the city as the place of God's presence. Following the dedication of the temple, it is a fitting song for the pilgrims who came to worship there.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Great is the LORD and greatly to be praised in the city of our God! His holy mountain, beautiful in elevation, is the joy of all the earth" (vv. 1-2).
2. "Mount Zion, in the far north, the city of the great King" (v. 2).
3. "Within her citadels God has made himself known as a fortress" (v. 3).
4. "For behold, the kings assembled; they came on together. As soon as they saw it, they were astounded" (vv. 4-5).
5. "As we have heard, so have we seen in the city of the LORD of hosts" (v. 8).
6. "We have thought on your steadfast love, O God, in the midst of your temple" (v. 9).
7. "Walk about Zion, go around her, number her towers, consider well her ramparts" (vv. 12-13).
8. "That you may tell the next generation that this is God, our God forever and ever. He will guide us forever" (vv. 13-14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a declaration of the greatness of God, and then celebrates the city where he lives. Zion is called beautiful in elevation, the joy of all the earth. It is not praised because of its architecture or defenses, but because of who lives there. “God has made himself known as a fortress” within her. The city’s security is the LORD himself.

The picture of the kings assembling and being astounded is dramatic. They see the city and flee in panic. It does not describe a human victory. They are overcome by the sight of God’s presence. The psalm echoes the stories of Jerusalem’s deliverance, perhaps in the days of Jehoshaphat or Hezekiah.

Verse 9 gives the center: “We have thought on your steadfast love, O God, in the midst of your temple.” The temple is not a source of national pride. It is a place to meditate on the covenant love of God. And that praise reaches “to the ends of the earth.”

The psalm then gives a unique invitation: “Walk about Zion, go around her, number her towers.” Pilgrims are told to go around the city and look carefully, as if to say, “Check for yourself. Count the towers.” The purpose is not tourism. It is so that “you may tell the next generation that this is God, our God forever and ever.” The tour is for the sake of testimony. Remembering what God has done is a duty to the young.

The psalm ends with a promise: “He will guide us forever.” The God who lives in Zion is not just a defender but a guide. The psalm makes the city a symbol of the permanent protection of God’s people.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 12:22-24 says that believers have come “to Mount Zion and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem,” and to Jesus. Matthew 5:35 calls Jerusalem “the city of the great King.” Revelation 21 describes the New Jerusalem coming down from heaven, safe forever. Jesus said he would build his church, and the gates of hell would not prevail against it (Matthew 16:18).

STEP 6

Application

Walk around your own “Zion” in your mind and count what God has done for your church and family. Tell it to someone younger.

Ask where you are depending on your own towers rather than on God.

Meditate on God’s steadfast love in prayer or in worship this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God, in your own words, for being great.

Tell him what you have thought on of his steadfast love.

Ask him to help you tell someone younger that this is God.

DAY 297 · WEEK 43

Psalm 84

How lovely is your dwelling place

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 12 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 84. It is a pilgrim's song, a longing for the courts of the LORD. Read it slowly and notice the happy people it describes.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 84 is a psalm of the sons of Korah, who were temple singers and doorkeepers. It is a song for pilgrims traveling to Jerusalem for one of the feasts, probably Tabernacles. It is among the most beloved psalms of all time. Following the dedication of the temple and the song of Zion, it expresses the deep desire of the heart to be where God is.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "How lovely is your dwelling place, O LORD of hosts!" (v. 1).
2. "My soul longs, yes, faints for the courts of the LORD; my heart and flesh sing for joy to the living God" (v. 2).
3. "Even the sparrow finds a home, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, at your altars" (v. 3).
4. "Blessed are those who dwell in your house, ever singing your praise!" (v. 4).
5. "Blessed are those whose strength is in you, in whose heart are the highways to Zion" (v. 5).
6. "As they go through the Valley of Baca they make it a place of springs" (v. 6).
7. "For a day in your courts is better than a thousand elsewhere. I would rather be a doorkeeper in the house of my God than dwell in the tents of wickedness" (v. 10).

8 “For the LORD God is a sun and shield; the LORD bestows favor and honor. No good thing does he withhold from those who walk uprightly” (v. 11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with exclamation. “How lovely!” It is not a calm analysis but an outburst of longing. The poet’s soul “faints” for the temple. “My heart and flesh sing for joy to the living God.” Worship is not merely duty. It is joy and desire. The psalm teaches us to want what we ought to want.

The sparrow and the swallow are a charming picture. Even the smallest birds make their homes near the altar. The poet envies them. They live in the presence of God. It is an image of belonging: the smallest and least can find a home in God’s house.

Then come two beatitudes. First, “Blessed are those who dwell in your house.” Second, “Blessed are those whose strength is in you, in whose heart are the highways to Zion.” The second is subtle. The pilgrim has the roads to Zion in his heart. Even when he is far away, his heart is already traveling. A heart set on pilgrimage makes the journey a blessing.

“As they go through the Valley of Baca they make it a place of springs.” Baca means “weeping.” The pilgrim route passes through a dry valley, a place of sorrow. But those who go with their hearts set on God transform the valley into springs. Suffering becomes a source of refreshment. And “they go from strength to strength.” The pilgrimage is a journey in which strength grows.

The famous tenth verse puts it simply: “A day in your courts is better than a thousand elsewhere.” The poet would rather be a doorkeeper, the lowest servant, at God’s house than live in luxury elsewhere. Being near God is the greatest good. The psalm ends with a promise: “No good thing does he withhold from those who walk uprightly.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the sun and shield, and the true dwelling place (John 1:14; Malachi 4:2). He said, “Come to me, all who labor and are heavy laden” (Matthew 11:28). In him, believers have access to the Father (Ephesians 2:18; Hebrews 10:19-22). Romans 8:32 echoes verse 11: “He who did not spare his own Son but gave him up for us all, how will he not also with him graciously give us all things?” Philippians 3:8-14 shows Paul pressing on to know Christ.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether you long for God’s presence. If not, ask him to give you the desire.

When you walk through your own “Valley of Baca,” consider how God may turn it into springs.

Meet with God’s people this week, and treat it as a gift.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what your soul longs for.
- Ask him to make your strength be in him.
- Say aloud that a day in his courts is better than a thousand elsewhere.

2 SAMUEL 7:16

DAY 298 · WEEK 43

Psalm 87

Glorious things of you are spoken, O city of God

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 7 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 87. This short psalm is a song about Zion and the nations. Read it slowly. It makes a surprising claim about who belongs to God's city.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 87 is another psalm of the sons of Korah and another song of Zion. It is only seven verses, and it is one of the most unusual psalms. It names the great enemies of Israel (Rahab, Babylon, Philistia, Tyre, Cush) and declares that people from these nations will be counted as born in Zion. It looks forward to the day the nations share in the blessing of God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "On the holy mount stands the city he founded" (v. 1).
2. "The LORD loves the gates of Zion more than all the dwelling places of Jacob" (v. 2).
3. "Glorious things of you are spoken, O city of God" (v. 3).
4. "Among those who know me I mention Rahab and Babylon; behold, Philistia and Tyre, with Cush: This one was born there" (v. 4).
5. "And of Zion it shall be said, This one and that one were born in her" (v. 5).
6. "For the Most High himself will establish her" (v. 5).
7. "The LORD records as he registers the peoples, This one was born there" (v. 6).
8. "Singers and dancers alike say, All my springs are in you" (v. 7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This psalm turns expectations upside down. Rahab is a poetic name for Egypt. Babylon, Philistia, Tyre, and Cush are the major powers around Israel, and most of them were Israel's enemies. In the psalm, God says that he will count them among "those who know me." People from those nations will be said to have been born in Zion.

Being "born in Zion" means being a full citizen, a native of God's city. The psalm imagines the LORD keeping a register. As he reads the list, he says of Egyptians, Babylonians, Philistines, and Ethiopians, "This one was born there." It is a vision of grace beyond Israel. The people who were enemies become citizens of the city of God. The wall of separation is broken.

Why is this so important? It reflects the promise to Abraham that all nations would be blessed (Genesis 12:3). It anticipates the prophets, who spoke of the nations streaming to Zion (Isaiah 2:2-3). The Davidic covenant was not simply for Israel's benefit. God's purpose was a family drawn from every nation.

The last verse ties it together. "All my springs are in you." The singers and dancers find all their joy in Zion. For those who are born there, it is the source of life itself.

This psalm shows how the Old Testament prepares for the gospel. It is not a late idea that the nations are welcome. It was always God's plan. When Peter and Paul preach to the Gentiles, they are fulfilling what psalms like this foretold.

STEP 5

Connection

Galatians 4:26 speaks of "the Jerusalem above" as our mother. Ephesians 2:19 says, "You are no longer strangers and aliens, but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God." Jesus said, "You must be born again" (John 3:7). Philippians 3:20 says, "Our citizenship is in heaven." Revelation 7:9 pictures a multitude from every nation standing before the throne.

STEP 6

Application

Thank God that you are a citizen of his city, whatever your background.

Ask whether you have drawn lines around who belongs. Is there a group you consider an outsider?

Pray for a nation that seems far from God, that people from it would be counted as born in Zion.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for counting you as born in Zion.

Ask him to make you welcoming to those who are far off.

Pray that people from every nation would belong to him.

DAY 299 · WEEK 43

Psalm 101

I will sing of steadfast love and justice, David's royal vow

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 101. David describes the kind of king he intends to be. Read it as a vow, and ask how it applies to anyone who has influence over others.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 101 is a psalm of David, and it reads like a king's inaugural pledge. He promises to rule with integrity, to avoid evil in his house, and to remove the wicked from the city. In the sequence of this unit, it comes after the temple is built and before the story of Solomon's downfall. David's vow stands in contrast to what Solomon will become.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I will sing of steadfast love and justice; to you, O LORD, I will make music" (v. 1).
2. "I will ponder the way that is blameless. Oh when will you come to me? I will walk with integrity of heart within my house" (v. 2).
3. "I will not set before my eyes anything that is worthless" (v. 3).
4. "The one who has a haughty look and an arrogant heart I will not endure" (v. 5).
5. "I will look with favor on the faithful in the land, that they may dwell with me; he who walks in the way that is blameless shall minister to me" (v. 6).
6. "No one who practices deceit shall dwell in my house; no one who utters lies shall continue before my eyes" (v. 7).
7. "Morning by morning I will destroy all the wicked in the land" (v. 8).
8. "Cutting off all the evildoers from the city of the LORD" (v. 8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with praise, not boasting. “I will sing of steadfast love and justice.” The twin themes of God’s own character become the foundation of David’s kingship. A king must reflect both love and justice. If either is missing, the rule fails.

The heart of the psalm is the integrity of the king’s own life. “I will walk with integrity of heart within my house.” Before David concerns himself with the nation, he concerns himself with the household. Private character comes first. A person’s integrity is tested where no one sees. “I will not set before my eyes anything that is worthless.” It is a commitment to guard what he looks at, an important thought for a man who fell through what he saw from his roof.

David then describes the kind of people he will have around him. He will not tolerate slander or arrogance. He will look for the faithful and honor them. A leader’s choice of associates shapes his rule. He will not let deceit dwell in his house.

The language of the closing verse may seem harsh, “Morning by morning I will destroy all the wicked,” but it refers to the king’s duty to administer justice, to purge evil from the community. The “morning by morning” recalls the daily court sessions held at the city gate.

We know that David did not live up to this vow. His sin with Bathsheba, his failure with his sons, and the rest of the story show that he fell short. And Solomon, who inherited the throne, would let deceit, idolatry, and compromise into his house. The psalm stands as an ideal that no human king achieved. It is an unfulfilled vow waiting for the king who would.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the king whose life matches this vow. He walked in the way that is blameless (Hebrews 4:15), and he will one day remove all evil from his kingdom (Matthew 13:41; Revelation 21:27). He looks with favor on the faithful (Matthew 25:21). Paul says that Christians should guard their eyes and hearts (Philippians 4:8). 1 John 2:16 warns about “the desires of the eyes.”

STEP 6

Application

Make a small vow like David’s about what you will not set before your eyes.

Reflect on how your integrity at home compares with your public self.

Consider who you allow near you as friends and advisers.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to help you walk with integrity at home.
- Ask him to guard what you set before your eyes.
- Confess where you have fallen short, and ask for help.

DAY 300 · WEEK 43

1 Kings 9:1-11:43

God's warning; Solomon's foreign wives; the kingdom fractures

Year 1 · Unit 9 · Reading · 99 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 9:1-11:43. God appears to Solomon a second time with a warning. Then the story shows Solomon's wealth, his many wives, and his fall into idolatry. Read chapter 11 with care. It is the end of the unit's story.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After the temple's dedication, God appears to Solomon with a conditional promise and a warning. The following chapters describe Solomon's accomplishments: cities, ships, the visit of the Queen of Sheba, and enormous wealth. Then, in chapter 11, the narrator gives a sad accounting of Solomon's heart. The kingdom that began with wisdom ends in compromise. God announces the division of the kingdom, but for David's sake, not all of it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. God says, "If you will walk before me, as David your father walked… then I will establish your royal throne over Israel forever" (9:4-5).
2. "But if you turn aside from following me… then I will cut off Israel from the land" (9:6-7).
3. The Queen of Sheba says, "The half was not told me. Your wisdom and prosperity surpass the report that I heard" (10:7).
4. "Blessed be the LORD your God, who has delighted in you" (10:9).
5. Solomon's gold: 666 talents a year, ivory, horses, and chariots (10:14-29).
6. "King Solomon loved many foreign women… he had 700 wives, who were princesses, and 300 concubines. And his wives turned away his heart" (11:1-3).

7. “His heart was not wholly true to the LORD his God, as was the heart of David his father” (11:4).

8. “Because you have done this… I will tear the kingdom from you… However, I will not do it in your days, for the sake of David your father… I will give one tribe to your son, for the sake of David my servant” (11:11-13).

STEP 4

Interpretation

God’s second appearance to Solomon repeats the pattern of the covenant: the promise is sure, but the individual’s blessing depends on obedience. “If you will walk before me… I will establish your throne. But if you turn aside… Israel will become a proverb and a byword among all peoples.” It is a clear warning, delivered right after the temple’s dedication.

Chapter 10 shows the glory. The Queen of Sheba comes from far away to test Solomon with hard questions. She is overwhelmed. Her response is one of the most moving praises in Kings: “Blessed be the LORD your God, who has delighted in you.” The nations are drawn to the wisdom of Israel’s king. For a moment, it looks as though the promise to Abraham is being fulfilled.

But the details are ominous. “Gold, ivory, horses from Egypt.” Deuteronomy 17:16-17 had warned the king not to acquire many horses, wives, or silver and gold. Solomon does all three. The narrator lists them with growing weight. What looks like prosperity is the accumulation of what he was told to avoid.

Chapter 11 is the tragic center. Solomon loved many foreign women, and they turned his heart away to other gods. The wisest man in Israel is a fool for love. He builds high places for Chemosh and Molech. “His heart was not wholly true to the LORD.” It is not that he stops believing in the LORD, but that he divides his heart. Divided loyalty is a form of idolatry.

God’s judgment is real: the kingdom will be torn. But even here, mercy shines. Not in Solomon’s lifetime, “for the sake of David,” and not the whole kingdom, “for the sake of Jerusalem which I have chosen.” God’s covenant with David is the reason the line continues. The promise holds, not because of Solomon’s merit, but because of God’s faithfulness.

The unit ends with a question the whole Old Testament will keep asking: if even Solomon fails, who can be the king God promised?

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the king who did not divide his heart, who resisted every temptation (Matthew 4:1-11), and whose wisdom exceeds Solomon's (Matthew 12:42). He is the true Son of David who will never fall. Where Solomon was led astray by foreign wives, the church is the bride of Christ, kept faithful by his grace (Ephesians 5:27). James 4:4-8 calls for single-hearted devotion. Hebrews 3:12 warns against an "evil, unbelieving heart."

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether your heart is wholly true to the LORD or divided.

Look at what you have accumulated. Does anything have a hold on you?

Thank God that his promise rests on his faithfulness, and not on yours.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God for an undivided heart.
- Ask him to keep you from accumulating what turns you from him.
- Thank him that his promise stands, even when people fail.

REST

Meditation

Today there is no new reading. Today is for review and Sabbath rest. This is a combined day, so take it slowly. Rest first, then remember.

Begin with the anchor verse of Unit 9, printed above. Read it aloud several times. Say it from memory if you can. This promise holds together everything you have read in the last sixty-seven days: the anointing of David, the covenant with his house, his sin and his repentance, the glory of Solomon's temple, and the sad division at the end. The throne is established forever. That is God's promise, and he does not break his promises.

Notice the sweep of what you have read. A barren woman prays, and a prophet is born. A people ask for a king and get Saul, who fails. God chooses a shepherd boy, who defeats a giant and flees through the wilderness. The throne comes to him, and with it a covenant that outlasts him. He falls, and he is forgiven. His son builds the temple and then loses his heart. The story ends in compromise, but the promise remains.

Read the verse once more, and think of Jesus. Gabriel said to Mary, "The Lord God will give to him the throne of his father David, and he will reign over the house of Jacob forever" (Luke 1:32-33). The promise stands because of him. He is the offspring who is also the Son of God, the king who does not fail.

Then rest. Do not catch up on missed readings. Do not do extra work. Take the Sabbath as a gift, a sign that the work of salvation does not depend on you.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This final week of the unit followed the story from the end of David to the beginning of the end of Solomon. You read David's last words, in which he trusted the everlasting covenant, and the account of the census and plague that ended at the temple mount. You saw Solomon anointed, ask for wisdom, and build the temple, and you read his great prayer at its dedication. In the Psalms you read the royal wedding song of Psalm 45 and the prayer for the king in Psalm 72, and the songs of Zion in Psalms 48, 84, and 87, and David's vow of integrity in Psalm 101. You ended with Solomon's fall, and God's decision to tear the kingdom, but for David's sake. The week taught that God's presence is the glory of his people, that his promises stand in spite of human failure, and that we need a greater king.

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

In Unit 9 you have followed the story of the Davidic covenant through 1 and 2 Samuel, 1 Kings 1 to 11, and a large selection of the Psalms. The books of Samuel began with Hannah's song and ended with David's altar. In between, you saw Israel ask for a king and receive Saul, whose partial obedience cost him the throne. You saw God choose David, a shepherd, whom he looked at by the heart and not by the appearance.

You saw David as a fugitive: spared Saul twice, learned to strengthen himself in the LORD, and wrote some of the Bible's greatest prayers in caves and deserts. You saw him become king, take Jerusalem, and bring the ark to the city. And you read the center of the unit, 2 Samuel 7, where God promised David a house, a kingdom, and a throne forever.

You also saw his fall. The affair with Bathsheba and the murder of Uriah were followed by Nathan's confrontation and David's confession. You read Psalms 32 and 51, the great songs of forgiveness. And you saw the consequences: the violence in his house, Absalom's rebellion, and David's weeping flight. God did not abandon the king, and he did not hide the cost of sin.

Solomon's reign was the high point: wisdom, peace, and the temple. But the narrator also showed the quiet compromises that led to his fall. The kingdom would be torn in two, and yet, for David's sake, a lamp would remain in Jerusalem.

The Psalms in this unit were the voice of the king and of the people. Psalm 2 showed the anointed Son. Psalms 3 to 5, 13, 18, 22, 24, 32, 34, 51, and 63 gave words for fear, longing, repentance, and trust. Psalms 45 and 72 pointed to the king whose throne is forever and whose rule reaches to the ends of the earth. The theme throughout was that David's greater Son would come, and that God would keep his word.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What is the covenant God makes with David in 2 Samuel 7?

Recall the promises: a great name, a place for Israel, a son who will build the temple, and a throne established forever. God says he will be a father to the king and discipline him, but his steadfast love will not depart. Notice that David wanted to build God a house, and God said he would build David a house. Write a few sentences about what this covenant promises and why it matters for the rest of the Bible. How does Jesus fulfill it? Look at Luke 1:32-33 and Acts 2:29-36.

How does David's sin with Bathsheba illustrate both grace and consequence?

Look back at 2 Samuel 11 and 12 and Psalms 32 and 51. David's sin was serious, and God sent Nathan to confront him. When David confessed, Nathan said, "The LORD has put away your sin." Yet the child died and the sword did not leave his house. Write about how forgiveness and consequence can both be true. Where do you see this pattern in your own life? How does the cross hold both justice and mercy together?

What makes Solomon's reign both the high point and the beginning of the end?

Think about the wisdom, the peace, the temple, and the prayer of dedication, and then about the horses, the wives, and the high places. The Deuteronomy 17 warnings were ignored one by one. Write a few sentences about how great gifts can lead to great failures. What does Solomon's story teach about the need for an undivided heart? How does Jesus succeed where Solomon failed?

What do the Messianic Psalms teach us about the kind of king God ultimately promises?

Look back at Psalms 2, 22, 45, and 72. The king is God's Son, he suffers and is abandoned, he is addressed as God with an eternal throne, and he defends the poor and rules to the ends of the earth. Write a few sentences describing the king these psalms portray. Which of these features surprises you most? How do they come together in Jesus?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for keeping covenant with David and fulfilling it in Jesus.

Confess where your heart has been divided.

Rest and ask him to keep the unit verse before you.

DAY 302 · WEEK 44

Proverbs 1:1-2:22

The purpose of Proverbs; wisdom's call; the two paths

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 44 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 1:1-2:22. These chapters introduce the whole book. Read the opening statement of purpose slowly, then listen to the voice of Wisdom crying out in the street.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Proverbs is a collection of wise sayings, largely associated with Solomon, gathered over generations in Israel. It is not a book of promises or laws. It is practical instruction on how to live well in God's world, written mostly as a father speaking to his son. The first nine chapters form an extended introduction, urging the reader to choose wisdom over folly. You have just read the story of Solomon, who asked for wisdom and then lost his way. Now you read the wisdom itself.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The book is for "learning about wisdom and instruction, for understanding words of insight" (1:2).
2. "The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge; fools despise wisdom and instruction" (1:7).
3. "Hear, my son, your father's instruction, and forsake not your mother's teaching" (1:8).
4. Sinners entice: "Come with us... let us ambush the blameless" (1:10-19).
5. "Wisdom cries aloud in the street, in the markets she raises her voice" (1:20).
6. "Whoever listens to me will dwell secure and will be at ease, without dread of disaster" (1:33).

7. “For the LORD gives wisdom; from his mouth come knowledge and understanding” (2:6).

8. Wisdom will deliver “from the way of evil” and “from the forbidden woman” (2:12, 16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The opening sentence of Proverbs sets the agenda. This is a book about skill in living: how to handle money, words, friendships, work, sex, and anger in a way that fits the world as God made it. The Hebrew word for wisdom means practical skill, like the skill of a craftsman. Wisdom is not first about being clever. It is about being rightly aligned.

Verse 7 is the key to the whole book: “The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge.” To fear the LORD is to take him seriously as God, to live in reverent awe and trust before him. It is not terror but a right orientation. Everything else in the book flows from it. A person can be intelligent and still be a fool if he leaves God out. The beginning point of wisdom is not information, but a relationship.

The book is delivered as a father’s teaching, and the father warns his son about the pull of the crowd. The sinners’ invitation is attractive: easy money and belonging. But Proverbs says the gang is heading for a trap, “lying in wait for their own blood.” The hardest part of the lesson is that sin often looks like a shortcut.

Wisdom is then personified as a woman crying aloud in the street. She is not hidden. She calls in the markets and at the gates. The tragedy is that people do not listen. When disaster comes, she says, “I will laugh at your calamity,” meaning that those who refused every invitation are left to what they chose. But those who listen “will dwell secure.”

Chapter 2 gives the path to wisdom: receive the words, treasure the commands, call out for insight, and seek it like silver. And it gives the source: “The LORD gives wisdom.” We do not find wisdom by ourselves. We ask for it, and God gives it. The chapter ends with two ways: the path of the upright, who will dwell in the land, and the way of the wicked, who will be cut off.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that Christ became to us “wisdom from God, righteousness and sanctification and redemption” (1 Corinthians 1:30), and that in him “are hidden all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge” (Colossians 2:3). James 1:5 invites us to ask God for wisdom. Jesus himself taught in the manner of the wise, with parables and sayings, and said the wise man builds on the rock (Matthew 7:24).

STEP 6

Application

Ask God for wisdom today, as the passage urges. Name one decision where you need it.

Think about the voices that invite you to take a shortcut. Which one is loudest right now?

Treat the fear of the LORD as a starting point and not an extra.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to begin wisdom in you by the fear of him.
- Ask him to keep you from the way of the crowd.
- Tell him where you most need wisdom this week.

PROVERBS 1:7

DAY 303 · WEEK 44

Proverbs 3:1-4:27

Trust the LORD; the value of wisdom; guard your heart

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 62 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 3:1-4:27. These chapters contain the unit's anchor, Proverbs 3:5-6. Read it slowly in its setting, and notice how the father urges his son to guard his heart.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The father continues his instruction to his son in a series of short lessons. Chapter 3 gives commands about trust, honor, and discipline, along with promises of life and favor. Chapter 4 recalls the father's own teaching from his father, passing wisdom from generation to generation. These chapters hold some of the best-known verses of the Bible.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Let not steadfast love and faithfulness forsake you; bind them around your neck; write them on the tablet of your heart" (3:3).
2. "Trust in the LORD with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding" (3:5).
3. "In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths" (3:6).
4. "Be not wise in your own eyes; fear the LORD, and turn away from evil" (3:7).
5. "Honor the LORD with your wealth and with the firstfruits of all your produce" (3:9).
6. "My son, do not despise the LORD's discipline or be weary of his reproof, for the LORD reproves him whom he loves, as a father the son in whom he delights" (3:11-12).
7. "Blessed is the one who finds wisdom, and the one who gets understanding" (3:13).
8. "Keep your heart with all vigilance, for from it flow the springs of life" (4:23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The center of the passage is 3:5-6, a call to total trust. “With all your heart” means with the whole inner person, without holding back. And its opposite is leaning on your own understanding. This is not a call to stop thinking. It is a call to stop treating our own judgment as the final authority. We often feel certain, and we are often wrong. The alternative is to “acknowledge him in all your ways,” to bring God into every decision, large and small. The promise is that “he will make straight your paths.” It does not mean a life without difficulty, but a life that God directs.

The chapter then moves through practical areas. Money: honor the LORD with the firstfruits. Discipline: do not resent it. The father’s note on discipline is among the most important in the book: God reproves those he loves, “as a father the son in whom he delights.” Hardship, correction, and loss are not signs that God has abandoned us. They are signs that we have a Father.

Wisdom is then praised in glowing terms. She is better than silver and gold, more precious than jewels. “Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.” She is “a tree of life to those who lay hold of her.” And the writer points to creation: “The LORD by wisdom founded the earth.” The wisdom we are offered is the same wisdom by which the world was made.

Chapter 4 adds the generational dimension and the famous warning to guard the heart. The heart is the source of everything: words, eyes, feet. If the spring is polluted, the stream is polluted. The path of the righteous is “like the light of dawn, which shines brighter and brighter until full day,” while the way of the wicked is like deep darkness.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus trusted the Father completely, even to death, saying, “Not my will, but yours, be done” (Luke 22:42). Hebrews 12:5-11 quotes Proverbs 3:11-12 to teach how God disciplines his children as a Father. John 1:3 and Colossians 1:16 show Christ as the one through whom the world was made, the wisdom of God. Jesus said, “I am the light of the world” (John 8:12), the one who leads us into the full day.

STEP 6

Application

Take Proverbs 3:5-6 with you. Write it somewhere you will see it.

Name one area where you lean on your own understanding. Give it to God.

If you are going through a hard season, ask whether the Father may be correcting you in love.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God where you lean on your own understanding and give it to him.
- Ask him to make your paths straight.
- Thank him that his discipline is love.

PROVERBS 1:7

DAY 304 · WEEK 44

Proverbs 5:1-6:35

Warnings against adultery; practical wisdom

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 58 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 5:1-6:35. The father warns his son about adultery and gives a series of practical warnings about debt, laziness, and the things God hates. Read these as pastoral warnings, not just rules.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The father's warnings about sexual temptation are among the most frequent in Proverbs 1 to 9. They reflect the danger to a young man in a world where seductive voices were everywhere. Chapter 6 widens the scope to financial foolishness, laziness, and a list of seven things the LORD hates. The advice is frank, and it assumes that desire is powerful and must be directed.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The lips of a forbidden woman drip honey, and her speech is smoother than oil, but in the end she is bitter as wormwood" (5:3-4).
2. "Keep your way far from her, and do not go near the door of her house" (5:8).
3. "Drink water from your own cistern, flowing water from your own well" (5:15).
4. "Let your fountain be blessed, and rejoice in the wife of your youth" (5:18).
5. "For a man's ways are before the eyes of the LORD, and he ponders all his paths" (5:21).
6. "Go to the ant, O sluggard; consider her ways, and be wise" (6:6).
7. "There are six things that the LORD hates, seven that are an abomination to him" (6:16).
8. "For the commandment is a lamp and the teaching a light, and the reproofs of discipline are the way of life" (6:23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first warning is not a prudish one. The father admits that the seductive woman's speech is smooth and sweet. The temptation is real. But "in the end she is bitter as wormwood." The pattern of sin is a sweet start and a bitter end. The wise person looks at the end first.

The practical advice is to keep far away: "Do not go near the door of her house." Wisdom does not test how close it can get. It flees. It is a principle that applies far beyond sexual sin: the way to avoid falling is to avoid the places where one is likely to fall.

The father does not only warn. He points to a positive alternative: delight in the wife of your youth. "Let her breasts fill you at all times with delight; be intoxicated always in her love." The Bible is not suspicious of desire. It places it in marriage, where it is meant to flourish. The metaphor of the cistern and the fountain makes the point: there is a rightful source of satisfaction, and it is close to home. The ultimate reason is theological: "A man's ways are before the eyes of the LORD." Nothing is hidden.

Chapter 6 widens the lens. Be careful about taking on debt for others, and get out quickly if you are in. Look at the ant, which works without anyone forcing her. The sluggard sleeps and poverty comes "like a robber." Then the list of seven things the LORD hates, which includes haughty eyes, a lying tongue, hands that shed innocent blood, and "one who sows discord among brothers."

The chapter returns to adultery with a blunt statement: "He who commits adultery lacks sense; he who does it destroys himself." It describes the cost in plain terms. The commandment is "a lamp" and the teaching "a light," guiding the way through the dark.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus taught that sin begins in the heart and in the eyes (Matthew 5:27-30). Paul says to "flee from sexual immorality" (1 Corinthians 6:18), echoing "keep your way far from her." Hebrews 13:4 says marriage is to be held in honor. Ephesians 5:25-32 shows marriage as a picture of Christ and the church, a love that is faithful. Jesus is the faithful husband who never fails his bride.

STEP 6

Application

Identify one "door" you need to stay far from this week.

If you are married, thank God for your spouse. Do something to delight them.

Consider where laziness or debt are hurting your life, and take one step.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you far from the door of temptation.

Ask him to give you delight in what he has given.

Thank Jesus, the faithful bridegroom.

DAY 305 · WEEK 44

Psalm 19

The heavens and the law, creation and word declare God's glory

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 14 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 19. It is a psalm in two halves, one about God's glory in the heavens and one about his glory in his word. Notice how the psalmist connects them.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 19 is a psalm of David, and C. S. Lewis called it among the greatest poems in the Psalter. It moves from creation to Scripture to the heart. It stands at a fitting place in this unit: wisdom literature teaches that God's world and God's word fit together. Proverbs says that God made the world by wisdom, and this psalm shows how the world and the law both tell of him.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the sky above proclaims his handiwork" (v. 1).
2. "Day to day pours out speech, and night to night reveals knowledge" (v. 2).
3. "There is no speech, nor are there words, whose voice is not heard" (v. 3).
4. "In them he has set a tent for the sun" (v. 4).
5. "The law of the LORD is perfect, reviving the soul; the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple" (v. 7).
6. "More to be desired are they than gold, even much fine gold; sweeter also than honey and drippings of the honeycomb" (v. 10).
7. "Who can discern his errors? Declare me innocent from hidden faults" (v. 12).

8 “Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in your sight, O LORD, my rock and my redeemer” (v. 14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first half is a hymn to the silent voice of creation. The sky speaks without words, and its message goes out to all the earth. The sun is described as a bridegroom coming out of his chamber, running its course with joy. Creation is a constant witness. It tells us that there is a God, that he is glorious, and that he is powerful. Paul uses this psalm to say that no one is without a witness (Romans 10:18).

But creation’s testimony, however clear, is limited. It tells of God’s glory, but it does not tell us how to know him or be forgiven. So the psalm turns, in verse 7, to the law of the LORD. Six names for God’s word, six descriptions, and six effects fill the second section. The law is perfect, reviving the soul. The testimony is sure, making wise the simple. The precepts are right, rejoicing the heart. The commandment is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the LORD is clean, enduring forever. The rules are true and righteous. God’s word does what the heavens cannot: it restores, it instructs, it gives joy.

The word is also better than wealth and sweeter than honey. The psalmist treasures it. But it also warns: “By them is your servant warned; in keeping them there is great reward.”

The third section is personal. Having seen God’s glory in the heavens and the word, the psalmist sees himself. He realizes that he cannot see his own faults. “Who can discern his errors?” He asks for cleansing from hidden sins and for restraint from presumptuous ones. And the psalm ends with the most beloved prayer: “Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in your sight, O LORD, my rock and my redeemer.”

The movement is from creation, to Scripture, to the heart. The glory of God, rightly seen, makes us aware of our need for him.

STEP 5

Connection

Romans 1:19-20 and 10:18 draw on this psalm’s picture of creation’s witness. Hebrews 1:1-2 says God has spoken by his Son. John 1:14 shows the Word made flesh, who is the fullest revelation of God’s glory. Jesus said, “The words that I have spoken to you are spirit and life” (John 6:63). The “redeemer” of the last verse is fulfilled in Christ (Titus 2:14).

STEP 6

Application

Step outside today and let the sky speak. Thank God for what you see.

Read verses 7 to 9 slowly. Pick the description of God's word that you most need right now.

Pray verse 14 as you start your day.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for speaking through both creation and his word.
- Ask him to cleanse you from hidden faults and keep you from presumption.
- Pray Psalm 19:14 as your own prayer.

PROVERBS 1:7

DAY 306 · WEEK 44

Psalm 119:1-40

Blessed are those whose way is blameless

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 40 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:1-40. This is the first of several readings from the longest chapter in the Bible, a poem in praise of God's word. Notice how many different words for Scripture the psalmist uses.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 119 is an acrostic of twenty-two stanzas, each of eight verses, with each verse in a stanza beginning with the same Hebrew letter. Nearly every verse mentions God's word under one of several names: law, testimonies, precepts, statutes, commandments, rules, word, and promise. The author is unnamed. Over the next weeks you will read it in sections, alongside Proverbs. The first stanzas describe the blessing of walking in God's word and the psalmist's longing to keep it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Blessed are those whose way is blameless, who walk in the law of the LORD!" (v. 1).
2. "With my whole heart I seek you; let me not wander from your commandments!" (v. 10).
3. "How can a young man keep his way pure? By guarding it according to your word" (v. 9).
4. "I have stored up your word in my heart, that I might not sin against you" (v. 11).
5. "Open my eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of your law" (v. 18).
6. "I am a sojourner on the earth; hide not your commandments from me!" (v. 19).
7. "Turn my eyes from looking at worthless things; and give me life in your ways" (v. 37).
8. "I will run in the way of your commandments when you enlarge my heart!" (v. 32).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins as Psalm 1 does, with the word “blessed.” The blessed person walks in the law of the LORD. The psalmist is not claiming to have achieved it. His prayer is that he would. He asks God to teach him, to keep him from wandering, and to open his eyes.

Verse 9 asks the question every young person faces: “How can a young man keep his way pure?” The answer is simple and demanding: guard it according to God’s word. The word is not a decoration. It is a guardrail. And verse 11 shows how: “I have stored up your word in my heart.” Memorizing and treasuring Scripture is a defense against sin. The word has to be inside to act as a guard.

Verse 18 is one of the best prayers for anyone who opens a Bible: “Open my eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of your law.” The psalmist knows that reading is not enough. The Spirit must open our eyes. Even a faithful reader needs God’s help to see what is there.

There is an honest strain in these verses. The psalmist feels like a sojourner, a foreigner, in the world. He asks God not to hide his commandments. He feels the pull of what is worthless, so he prays for God to turn his eyes. He knows that obedience does not come naturally.

Verse 32 offers a lovely picture: “I will run in the way of your commandments when you enlarge my heart.” Obedience is not a grim trudge. When God widens the heart, it becomes a run. The psalm is not a manual of rule-keeping. It is the song of someone who has fallen in love with the voice of God.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the Word made flesh, and he is the one who perfectly walked in the law of the LORD (John 1:14; Matthew 5:17). He said, “Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that comes from the mouth of God” (Matthew 4:4). Ephesians 1:18 prays that “the eyes of your hearts [be] enlightened,” echoing verse 18. Colossians 3:16 urges, “Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly.”

STEP 6

Application

Choose one verse to store up in your heart this week, as verse 11 urges.

Pray verse 18 before you read the Bible tomorrow.

Ask what “worthless things” your eyes are drawn to, and bring that to God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God you want to seek him with your whole heart.
- Ask him to store his word in your heart so that you do not sin.
- Ask him to open your eyes to wonderful things in it.

PROVERBS 1:7

DAY 307 · WEEK 44

Proverbs 7:1-8:36

The seductress; Wisdom personified, the craftsman at God's side

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 63 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 7:1-8:36. Chapter 7 is a vivid warning about a seductive woman, and chapter 8 is one of the great poems of the Bible, in which Wisdom herself speaks. Read chapter 8 slowly. It is the high point of the first nine chapters.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These two chapters set the opposite voices in sharp contrast. In chapter 7, a young man without sense is drawn to a smooth-talking woman. In chapter 8, Wisdom speaks, calling to all who will listen. She reveals that she is older than creation and was with God as he made the world. This is among the passages most important for how the church has understood the relationship between wisdom and Christ.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Bind them on your fingers; write them on the tablet of your heart" (7:3).
2. "And behold, the woman meets him, dressed as a prostitute, wily of heart" (7:10).
3. "All at once he follows her, as an ox goes to the slaughter" (7:22).
4. "Her house is the way to Sheol, going down to the chambers of death" (7:27).
5. "Does not wisdom call? Does not understanding raise her voice?" (8:1).
6. "The fear of the LORD is hatred of evil" (8:13).
7. "The LORD possessed me at the beginning of his work, the first of his acts of old" (8:22).
8. "Then I was beside him, like a master workman, and I was daily his delight, rejoicing before him always" (8:30).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 7 tells the story like a short film. A young man with no sense walks along the street at twilight, near the corner of her house. A woman meets him with flattery, religious language ("I had to offer sacrifices"), and an invitation. He follows "as an ox goes to the slaughter." The chapter describes the way sin deceives: it comes with smooth talk, a good reason, and a sense of safety. And the end is death.

The warning is not simply a moral rule. It is meant to help the reader see what he is walking into. The young man's problem was lack of sense, but also lack of caution. He was in the wrong place at the wrong time. "Do not let your heart turn aside to her ways."

Then Wisdom speaks. She calls from the heights, at the crossroads, and at the gates. Unlike the seductress, she calls openly. She offers "noble things," truth, and righteousness. Her fruit is better than gold. Kings reign by her. And she says, "Those who love me I love, and those who seek me diligently find me."

The center of chapter 8 is verses 22 to 31. Wisdom says that the LORD possessed her at the beginning, before the earth. She was there when he set the heavens in place and marked out the foundations of the earth. "I was beside him, like a master workman." Wisdom is not a mere abstraction. She is portrayed as a person, present with God and delighting in him, and in the human race. Christians have long read this passage in the light of the New Testament as a shadow of Christ, though it should be read carefully. In its own setting, Wisdom is a poetic personification of God's wisdom. In the light of the whole Bible, it points to the Son through whom the world was made.

The chapter ends with a stark choice: "Whoever finds me finds life… but he who fails to find me injures himself; all who hate me love death."

STEP 5

Connection

John 1:1-3 says that the Word was with God in the beginning, and all things were made through him. Colossians 1:15-17 says Christ is "the firstborn of all creation" and that all things were created through him. 1 Corinthians 1:24 calls Christ "the power of God and the wisdom of God." Jesus said, "Come to me, all who labor" (Matthew 11:28), the call of Wisdom in the form of a Savior.

STEP 6

Application

Notice what voices speak to you with smooth words today. Do they lead to life?

Read 8:22-31 aloud as praise to Christ, the one through whom all things were made.

Ask God to help you hate evil, as verse 13 describes.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you from ways that lead to death.

Thank him for Wisdom who calls aloud.

Thank Christ, who was with the Father in the beginning.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Proverbs 1:7 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge; fools despise wisdom and instruction."

PROVERBS 1:7

REST

Meditation

This verse is the motto of the whole book of Proverbs, and it appears again in 9:10. Everything in the book rests on it.

"The fear of the LORD." The word fear has two layers in the Bible. There is the awe that shakes us when we realize who God is, and there is the trust that keeps us coming to him. A child who loves and respects his father fears him in this sense: he takes him seriously and does not want to displease him. To fear the LORD is to live as though God is real, holy, good, and in charge.

"Is the beginning." The word can mean either the first part or the chief part. Both are true. It is where wisdom starts, and it is what wisdom is made of. You cannot skip it and arrive at wisdom some other way.

“Of knowledge.” It is the starting point for knowing anything rightly. The world makes sense only if the one who made it is acknowledged. Apart from him, knowledge becomes fragmented, proud, or useless.

“Fools despise wisdom and instruction.” The fool is not one who lacks intelligence but one who rejects correction. He thinks he knows best. The contrast is between a person who bows to God and a person who bows to himself.

For the Christian, the fear of the LORD is not opposed to the love of God. It deepens as we see his holiness and his grace together at the cross. We fear him because he is holy, and we run to him because he is merciful. Pray this verse often, and ask God to give you a heart that fears him.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began the wisdom books. You opened Proverbs and heard the father’s call to his son, with the fear of the LORD as the starting point. You read the anchor of the unit, Proverbs 3:5-6, which calls us to trust the LORD with all our heart and not to lean on our own understanding. You read the warnings about adultery, debt, and laziness, and the beautiful alternative of faithful love. In the Psalms you saw the glory of God in creation and in his word in Psalm 19, and began Psalm 119 with its longing to walk in God’s law. You ended the week with Wisdom’s own speech in Proverbs 8, where she stands beside God at creation. The week taught that wisdom starts with reverent trust in God, that his word guards the heart, and that Christ is the wisdom of God.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Proverbs 3:5-6 asks us to trust the LORD with all our heart and not lean on our own understanding. Where are you leaning on your own understanding right now?

Proverbs 8 pictures Wisdom as present with God at creation, and the New Testament shows Christ as the wisdom of God. How does that change the way you think about seeking wisdom?

Psalm 119:11 says, “I have stored up your word in my heart, that I might not sin against you.” What is one practical way you can store up God’s word this week?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you want to begin knowing him with fear.

Thank him for Christ, the wisdom of God.

Rest, and ask him to guard your way with his word.

DAY 309 · WEEK 45

Proverbs 9:1-11:31

Wisdom and Folly's rival invitations

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 9:1-11:31. Chapter 9 closes the first major section with two rival invitations. Chapters 10 and 11 begin the collection of short sayings. Notice the change of style.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 9 ends the long introduction with a banquet scene. Lady Wisdom and the woman Folly both call out from the heights of the city, but one leads to life and the other to the grave. Then, beginning at chapter 10, the book changes. The long speeches give way to short two-line sayings, mostly about the contrast between the righteous and the wicked. These are the proverbs most people think of.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Wisdom has built her house; she has hewn her seven pillars" (9:1).
2. "Leave your simple ways, and live, and walk in the way of insight" (9:6).
3. "The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom, and the knowledge of the Holy One is insight" (9:10).
4. "The woman Folly is loud; she is seductive and knows nothing" (9:13).
5. "But he does not know that the dead are there, that her guests are in the depths of Sheol" (9:18).
6. "A wise son makes a glad father, but a foolish son is a sorrow to his mother" (10:1).
7. "When pride comes, then comes disgrace, but with the humble is wisdom" (11:2).

8 “Whoever brings blessing will be enriched, and one who waters will himself be watered” (11:25).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The picture in chapter 9 is of two banquets. Wisdom has built her house, prepared her meat, mixed her wine, and sent out her servants. The invitation is open to the simple. Folly also sits at the door of her house, on the high places of the city, calling to those passing by. The words are similar, but the end is different. “He does not know that the dead are there.” The meal that looks like life is the doorway to death.

The chapter’s lesson is that no one is neutral. Everyone is eating at one of the two tables. We are being formed either by wisdom or by folly. And verse 10 repeats the theme: “The fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom.”

Chapter 10 begins the first collection of sayings attributed to Solomon. They are scattered, not organized by topic, and the reader is meant to take them one at a time, like a string of pearls. Many are contrasts: the righteous and the wicked, the diligent and the lazy, the wise and the fool.

It is important to read proverbs as proverbs. They are general truths about how the world tends to work, not promises that apply in every case. “The hand of the diligent will rule” is generally true. It is not a guarantee. Proverbs describe the grain of the world, the way things usually go when God’s moral order is at work. The book of Job and Ecclesiastes will later explore the exceptions.

Several themes emerge in these chapters: honest speech, generosity, humility, and the danger of pride. “Whoever is generous will be blessed.” “One gives freely, yet grows all the richer.” Generosity is not a loss but a form of wisdom. The righteous are described as a tree of life, a “fruit” that helps others. And “whoever trusts in his riches will fall, but the righteous will flourish like a green leaf.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus told parables of two houses (Matthew 7:24-27) and two banquets (Luke 14:15-24), and spoke of the narrow and wide gates (Matthew 7:13-14). He is the true wisdom who sends out his servants with the invitation to come to the feast (Matthew 22:1-10). He said, “It is more blessed to give than to receive” (Acts 20:35), echoing 11:25. Proverbs 11:30 (“the fruit of the righteous is a tree of life”) points to Revelation 22:2.

STEP 6

Application

Ask which table you are eating at today. What is feeding you: wisdom or folly?

Practice one act of generosity this week and watch what it does to your heart.

Read proverbs one at a time, and slowly. Choose one to think about throughout the day.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Accept Wisdom's invitation, and tell God what that means for you.
- Ask him to keep you from the table of Folly.
- Thank Christ for spreading a feast for you.

DAY 310 · WEEK 45

Proverbs 12:1-14:35

The fruit of the lips; diligence; the way of the upright

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 88 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 12:1-14:35. These chapters continue the collection of contrasting sayings. As you read, look for what the proverbs say about the tongue, hard work, and the way that seems right.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These chapters continue the first Solomonic collection. The sayings are brief, and they move quickly from subject to subject. They are not meant to be read all at once but to be pondered. Look for repeated themes: speech, work, the fear of the LORD, and the difference between appearance and reality. Some of the most quoted proverbs appear here.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “Whoever loves discipline loves knowledge, but he who hates reproof is stupid” (12:1).
2. “There is one whose rash words are like sword thrusts, but the tongue of the wise brings healing” (12:18).
3. “Anxiety in a man’s heart weighs him down, but a good word makes him glad” (12:25).
4. “The soul of the sluggard craves and gets nothing, while the soul of the diligent is richly supplied” (13:4).
5. “Whoever walks with the wise becomes wise, but the companion of fools will suffer harm” (13:20).
6. “Whoever spares the rod hates his son, but he who loves him is diligent to discipline him” (13:24).
7. “There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way to death” (14:12).

8 “Righteousness exalts a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people” (14:34).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The sayings of these chapters circle around a few basic truths. First, the willingness to be corrected is the mark of the wise. “Whoever loves discipline loves knowledge.” The person who hates correction is called “stupid,” a strong word. It is a challenge to anyone who is touchy about criticism. Growth requires being willing to be told when we are wrong.

Second, words matter. Rash words are like swords, but wise words heal. The tongue can wound or it can restore. “A good word makes him glad.” A kind word to an anxious person is a gift. The book returns again and again to speech, because speech reveals and shapes the heart.

Third, the company we keep forms us. “Whoever walks with the wise becomes wise.” We become like those we spend time with. The proverb is a reminder to choose friendships carefully, and to be the kind of friend others can learn from.

The most searching proverb in the section is 14:12: “There is a way that seems right to a man, but its end is the way to death.” It appears twice in the book (16:25). The danger is not only that we choose obvious wrong. It is that we are often convinced we are right. Self-deception is a serious problem, and it is why we need God’s word and wise counsel. We cannot trust our own sense of rightness.

The collection also includes strong statements on work, honesty, and the poor. “Whoever oppresses a poor man insults his Maker, but he who is generous to the needy honors him.” How we treat the poor is a statement about how we regard God. And there are sayings about the fear of the LORD as a fountain of life and a place of confidence.

The section ends with a corporate lesson: “Righteousness exalts a nation.” Moral character is not a private matter. It shapes whole societies.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said that out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaks (Matthew 12:34), and that we will give an account for every careless word (Matthew 12:36). He warned that many call the narrow way hard and choose the broad one (Matthew 7:13-14). Proverbs 14:31 is echoed in Matthew 25:40: “As you did it to one of the least of these my brothers, you did it to me.” James 3 expands on the power of the tongue.

STEP 6

Application

Think of a recent conversation. Did your words wound or heal? Ask forgiveness if needed.

Examine your friendships. Who are you becoming like?

Ask God where you might have a “way that seems right” that leads somewhere else.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to give you a love for correction.
- Ask him to make your words bring healing.
- Ask him to show you the way that seems right but is not.

PSALM 119:105

DAY 311 · WEEK 45

Psalm 119:41-96

Steadfast love and the commandments

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 56 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:41-96. Today's section moves from steadfast love to affliction. Notice how the psalmist finds comfort in God's word in suffering.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the second reading from Psalm 119, covering stanzas four through eleven. The psalmist is under pressure. Insolent people mock him, and he suffers affliction. Yet again and again, he turns to the word of God, which he finds to be his comfort, his song, and his life. The section includes some of the most famous lines of the whole psalm.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Let your steadfast love come to me, O LORD, your salvation according to your promise" (v. 41).
2. "And I shall walk in a wide place, for I have sought your precepts" (v. 45).
3. "This is my comfort in my affliction, that your promise gives me life" (v. 50).
4. "Your statutes have been my songs in the house of my sojourning" (v. 54).
5. "The LORD is my portion; I promise to keep your words" (v. 57).
6. "It is good for me that I was afflicted, that I might learn your statutes" (v. 71).
7. "Forever, O LORD, your word is firmly fixed in the heavens" (v. 89).
8. "If your law had not been my delight, I would have perished in my affliction" (v. 92).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Verse 41 begins with a request for God's steadfast love. The psalmist asks that God's covenant love come to him, according to his promise. The word of God and the love of God are tied together. The promise is the way God's love reaches us.

The theme of affliction threads through the section. The psalmist does not say that God's word makes life painless. He says that it is his comfort in affliction. "Your promise gives me life." The promise is what keeps him alive when everything else is hard. A believer in difficult times needs something to hold, and God's word is it. The psalmist even makes songs from the statutes "in the house of my sojourning." He sings the word in a foreign place.

The most challenging line is verse 71: "It is good for me that I was afflicted, that I might learn your statutes." It is a statement made in hindsight. The writer does not say that suffering is pleasant. He says that it taught him. Affliction drove him to God's word and made him learn what comfort cannot. And verse 67: "Before I was afflicted I went astray, but now I keep your word." Trouble corrected him.

The psalm also says the LORD is his portion, as the Levites had no land but God himself as their inheritance. For the psalmist, owning God is greater than owning anything else.

Verse 89 stands as a statement of confidence: "Forever, O LORD, your word is firmly fixed in the heavens." Human opinions shift. Cultures change. God's word does not. His faithfulness continues to all generations, and the earth established by him endures. And verse 92 is a stark acknowledgment: "If your law had not been my delight, I would have perished."

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, "Heaven and earth will pass away, but my words will not pass away" (Matthew 24:35). Romans 8:28 says God works all things for good for those who love him, echoing verse 71. Hebrews 12:11 speaks of the peaceful fruit of discipline. 2 Corinthians 1:3-5 describes God as the Father of mercies and God of all comfort. Peter writes that the word of the Lord remains forever (1 Peter 1:25).

STEP 6

Application

If you are in affliction, name one promise from Scripture to hold on to this week.

Look back at a hardship and ask what God taught you through it.

Sing or read aloud a verse of Scripture in a hard place, as the psalmist did.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask for God's steadfast love according to his promise.
- Tell him where his promise gives you life in affliction.
- Ask him to fix his word in your heart.

DAY 312 · WEEK 45

Proverbs 15:1-17:28

The gentle answer; God weighs the heart; friendship

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 88 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 15:1-17:28. As you read, look for what these chapters teach about words, the heart, and the sovereignty of God over human plans.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These chapters continue the Solomonic collection, and now more sayings speak directly about the LORD. They deal with the gentle answer, the way God sees the heart, plans and God's purposes, pride, and friendship. Chapter 16 in particular grapples with how human planning and divine control fit together.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "A soft answer turns away wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger" (15:1).
2. "The eyes of the LORD are in every place, keeping watch on the evil and the good" (15:3).
3. "Without counsel plans fail, but with many advisers they succeed" (15:22).
4. "All the ways of a man are pure in his own eyes, but the LORD weighs the spirit" (16:2).
5. "Commit your work to the LORD, and your plans will be established" (16:3).
6. "The heart of man plans his way, but the LORD establishes his steps" (16:9).
7. "Pride goes before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall" (16:18).
8. "A friend loves at all times, and a brother is born for adversity" (17:17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The famous opening line of chapter 15 gives a practical truth: “A soft answer turns away wrath.” A gentle word can defuse a conflict. The next lines contrast the wise tongue with the foolish mouth, and show that the way we speak reflects the state of our hearts. The whole section turns often to the tongue: “A gentle tongue is a tree of life, but perverseness in it breaks the spirit.”

Verse 3 says that “the eyes of the LORD are in every place.” It can be a comfort or a warning. For the one who hides, it is a warning. For the one who walks in integrity, it is a comfort. God sees. We are not unobserved, and we are not forgotten.

Chapter 16 sets a key principle of Christian life: our planning and God’s sovereignty. “The heart of man plans his way, but the LORD establishes his steps.” We should make plans. The Bible does not say planning is wrong. But we hold them with open hands. God has the final say. “The lot is cast into the lap, but its every decision is from the LORD.” Even what looks like chance is under his rule. This does not make us passive. It makes us humble and trusting. “Commit your work to the LORD, and your plans will be established.”

Verse 2 is a warning about self-assessment: “All the ways of a man are pure in his own eyes, but the LORD weighs the spirit.” We tend to judge ourselves by our intentions and others by their actions. God weighs the heart. And the famous verse 18 warns about pride, “before a fall.” The humble in spirit, by contrast, are described as better off than the proud.

Chapter 17 includes a series of sayings about friendship and family: “A friend loves at all times.” “A joyful heart is good medicine, but a crushed spirit dries up the bones.” And it also warns about quarreling. “The beginning of strife is like letting out water, so quit before the quarrel breaks out.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus, “when he was reviled, did not revile in return” (1 Peter 2:23), and taught that blessed are the meek (Matthew 5:5). Paul wrote, “Let your speech always be gracious” (Colossians 4:6). James 4:13-15 echoes Proverbs 16:9: “You ought to say, If the Lord wills, we will live.” Jesus, the friend of sinners (Luke 7:34), is “a friend who sticks closer than a brother.” Romans 8:28 holds God’s sovereignty and our good together.

STEP 6

Application

In your next tense conversation, try a soft answer.

Hold one of your plans loosely today. Commit it to the LORD, and notice what changes.

Consider where you judge yourself by your intentions, and ask God to weigh your heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to give you gentle answers.
- Ask him to establish your steps and keep you from pride.
- Thank him that he weighs the spirit with perfect knowledge.

DAY 313 · WEEK 45

Proverbs 18:1-19:29

The tongue; pride; plans and the LORD's purposes

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 53 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 18:1-19:29. Notice the sayings about the power of the tongue, the LORD as a refuge, and how God's purposes stand above human plans.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapters 18 and 19 continue to gather sayings on speech, friendship, wealth and poverty, and discipline. Some of the best loved lines in the book are here, including the strong tower and the friend who sticks closer than a brother. The sayings are loosely organized but return to central themes of the book.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "If one gives an answer before he hears, it is his folly and shame" (18:13).
2. "The name of the LORD is a strong tower; the righteous man runs into it and is safe" (18:10).
3. "The rich man's wealth is his strong city, and like a high wall in his imagination" (18:11).
4. "Death and life are in the power of the tongue, and those who love it will eat its fruits" (18:21).
5. "He who finds a wife finds a good thing and obtains favor from the LORD" (18:22).
6. "A man of many companions may come to ruin, but there is a friend who sticks closer than a brother" (18:24).
7. "Whoever is generous to the poor lends to the LORD, and he will repay him for his deed" (19:17).

8 “Many are the plans in the mind of a man, but it is the purpose of the LORD that will stand” (19:21).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Two strongholds are set side by side in chapter 18. The name of the LORD is a strong tower, and the rich man’s wealth is a strong city “in his imagination.” The comparison is sharp. The rich man imagines himself secure, but his wall is only in his mind. The righteous man runs to the LORD and is actually safe. We all have something we run to when life is threatening: money, a plan, a person, a reputation. Proverbs asks whether that thing is a real tower or an imagined one.

The proverbs on speech continue. “If one gives an answer before he hears, it is his folly.” Listening before speaking is a mark of wisdom. “Death and life are in the power of the tongue.” The tongue is a powerful instrument. The one who uses it will taste the results, good or bad.

A significant saying about friendship appears at the end of chapter 18. “A man of many companions may come to ruin, but there is a friend who sticks closer than a brother.” Quantity is not the measure of friendship. A single faithful friend is worth more than a crowd. Believers have always seen in this verse a picture of Christ.

Chapter 19 contains a strong statement on caring for the poor: “Whoever is generous to the poor lends to the LORD, and he will repay him.” Generosity to the poor is loaning to God himself. He takes it personally. It is one of the Bible’s most striking ideas: the poor man is God’s debtor, and God promises to repay.

The key theological statement of the chapter is verse 21: “Many are the plans in the mind of a man, but it is the purpose of the LORD that will stand.” We make many plans. Some come to nothing. But God’s purpose cannot be overturned. This is a comfort to those who trust him, and a warning to those who plot against him. And verse 23: “The fear of the LORD leads to life, and whoever has it rests satisfied.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the friend who sticks closer than a brother. He said, “No longer do I call you servants… but I have called you friends” (John 15:15). He is the strong tower, the refuge of the weary (Hebrews 6:18). Matthew 25:40 shows that kindness to the least is kindness to Christ. In Acts 4:28 the plans of men against Jesus served only “whatever your hand and your plan had predestined to take place.”

STEP 6

Application

Name your “strong tower.” Is it the LORD, or something imaginary?

Practice listening fully before answering in your next important conversation.

Give something to a person in need this week, and think of it as lending to the LORD.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Run into the strong tower of God’s name, and tell him why you need it.
- Ask him to guard your tongue and teach you to listen.
- Thank Jesus, the friend who sticks closer than a brother.

DAY 314 · WEEK 45

Proverbs 20:1-21:31

Justice, integrity, and the king's heart in the LORD's hand

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 62 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 20:1-21:31. These chapters continue the collection. Notice what is said about the king, justice, and the heart, and the great statement in 21:1 and 21:31.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The sayings of chapters 20 and 21 have a strong focus on rulers, justice, and honest dealing. This is fitting for a collection associated with a king. They also continue the theme of God's rule over human hearts and plans. As the last of the Solomonic sayings before the "Sayings of the Wise," these chapters are a high point in the theology of providence.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Wine is a mocker, strong drink a brawler, and whoever is led astray by it is not wise" (20:1).
2. "Who can say, I have made my heart pure; I am clean from my sin?" (20:9).
3. "The hearing ear and the seeing eye, the LORD has made them both" (20:12).
4. "Do not say, I will repay evil; wait for the LORD, and he will deliver you" (20:22).
5. "The king's heart is a stream of water in the hand of the LORD; he turns it wherever he will" (21:1).
6. "Every way of a man is right in his own eyes, but the LORD weighs the heart" (21:2).
7. "To do righteousness and justice is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice" (21:3).
8. "The horse is made ready for the day of battle, but the victory belongs to the LORD" (21:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 20 begins with a warning about drink, then turns to honesty and the king's role. A king who sits on the throne of judgment "winnows all evil with his eyes." Good rule requires moral discernment. Yet the chapter also contains a question that humbles every ruler: "Who can say, I have made my heart pure; I am clean from my sin?" The answer is no one. Even the wisest king, and even the wisest reader, needs forgiveness.

Verse 22 is a gem for those who are wronged: "Do not say, I will repay evil; wait for the LORD, and he will deliver you." It echoes the principle of David's restraint with Saul. Vengeance belongs to God. Waiting is an act of faith. Honest scales and weights also come up repeatedly. "Unequal weights and unequal measures are both alike an abomination to the LORD." The God of the temple cares about the marketplace.

Chapter 21 opens with one of the most sweeping statements of God's sovereignty. "The king's heart is a stream of water in the hand of the LORD; he turns it wherever he will." The most powerful person in the land has a heart that is directed by God, as a farmer directs the channel of irrigation. God is not threatened by kings. He guides them, even when they do not know it. This is comfort for those living under unjust or foolish rulers.

Verse 3 repeats what Samuel told Saul and the prophets will say: "To do righteousness and justice is more acceptable to the LORD than sacrifice." Ritual without righteousness is empty. And verse 13 states a principle of mercy: "Whoever closes his ear to the cry of the poor will himself call out and not be answered."

The chapter ends with a verse that sums up providence: "The horse is made ready for the day of battle, but the victory belongs to the LORD." Prepare, plan, and work, but know that the result is God's. The following verse, 21:30, says, "No wisdom, no understanding, no counsel can avail against the LORD."

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that governing authorities are instituted by God (Romans 13:1), and 1 Timothy 2:1-2 urges prayer for kings. Jesus said, "My Father is working until now, and I am working" (John 5:17). Romans 12:19 echoes verse 22: "Never avenge yourselves... leave it to the wrath of God." Jesus quoted the prophets that God desires "mercy, and not sacrifice" (Matthew 9:13). Psalm 33:16-17 adds that a war horse is a false hope for victory.

STEP 6

Application

Pray for a leader whose decisions affect you, trusting that God can turn their heart.

When you are wronged, practice waiting on the LORD instead of repaying.

Do your part in a hard task, and release the outcome to God.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Admit before God that you cannot make your own heart pure.
- Ask him for mercy and for patience when you are wronged.
- Thank him that he holds even the king's heart.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path."

PSALM 119:105

REST

Meditation

This is one of the best-loved verses about Scripture, from the middle of the longest chapter in the Bible. It uses a simple image: a lamp.

"Your word." The psalmist speaks to God, and says that the word is his. It is not the opinion of men. It is God's speech, and it has his authority and his love in it.

"Is a lamp to my feet." In the ancient world, a lamp was a small oil flame, held at the level of the feet. It did not light up the whole road. It showed the next few steps. This is how God's word usually works. We do not get a complete map of our future. We get enough light for the next step. And the psalmist does not complain about it. He is grateful for it. We walk by faith, one step at a time.

"And a light to my path." The path is the whole road of life, and the word shows where it leads. "Path" also suggests direction. The word of God not only lights each step but also reveals where it all goes, and warns of where the other paths end.

The verse invites us to treat the Bible not as a book of general ideas but as a daily guide. When you are unsure of a decision, the lamp is for your feet. When you are tempted, the lamp shows the pit. When you are afraid of the future, the lamp reminds you that the one who holds it knows the way.

For the Christian, this verse is fulfilled in Christ, who said, “I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life” (John 8:12). The word that lights our path has a name. Walk in his light.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you worked through the heart of Proverbs. You read the two banquets of Wisdom and Folly, and the first collection of Solomon’s sayings, with their contrasts between the righteous and the wicked. You saw how the gentle answer turns away wrath, how the tongue holds the power of life and death, and how the name of the LORD is a strong tower. You saw that human plans are held in God’s hand: the heart of man plans his way, but the LORD establishes his steps, and the king’s heart is a stream of water in his hand. In Psalm 119 you heard the psalmist turn to God’s word in affliction and say that it is good that he was afflicted. The week taught that wisdom is practical, that God is sovereign over human plans, and that his word is a light for each step.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Proverbs says that the name of the LORD is a strong tower, and that a rich man’s wealth is a strong city only in his imagination. What do you run to when you feel unsafe, and is it a real tower?

Jesus is the friend who sticks closer than a brother, and the one who held fast to the Father’s will. How does knowing his friendship change how you face a lonely or hard moment this week?

Psalm 119:105 says God’s word is a lamp to the feet. What is the next step you need light for, and how will you ask God for it?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that his word is a lamp for your feet.

Thank him for the strong tower of his name.

Rest, and ask him to establish your steps.

DAY 316 · WEEK 46

Proverbs 22:1-24:34

Sayings of the wise; warnings about wealth

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 68 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 22:1-24:34. A new section begins, the Sayings of the Wise. Read for what it says about reputation, wealth, and what to do when you fail.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

At 22:17 the collection changes. The father's voice returns, and the sayings are introduced as "the words of the wise." Many scholars see a link with ancient Egyptian wisdom texts, which shows that Israel's sages worked within the wider world of wisdom while rooting it in the fear of the LORD. These chapters give practical teaching on money, work, justice, and enemies.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "A good name is to be chosen rather than great riches, and favor is better than silver or gold" (22:1).
2. "The rich and the poor meet together; the LORD is the Maker of them all" (22:2).
3. "Train up a child in the way he should go; even when he is old he will not depart from it" (22:6).
4. "The rich rules over the poor, and the borrower is the slave of the lender" (22:7).
5. "Do not toil to acquire wealth; be discerning enough to desist" (23:4).
6. "Rescue those who are being taken away to death" (24:11).
7. "For the righteous falls seven times and rises again, but the wicked stumble in times of calamity" (24:16).

8 “Do not rejoice when your enemy falls, and let not your heart be glad when he stumbles” (24:17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 22 opens with values. A good name, meaning a reputation for integrity, is worth more than wealth. And the rich and poor share the same Maker. No class is beyond God’s concern. The saying prepares for warnings elsewhere against exploiting the poor, “for the LORD will plead their cause.”

The well-known verse about training a child is a proverb, not a promise. It describes the general way that early formation shapes a life. It calls parents to teach deliberately, and it does not guarantee a result in every case. Proverbs elsewhere acknowledges that children can choose a different path. What the verse affirms is the power and the responsibility of early instruction.

Chapter 23 contains warnings about gluttony, drunkenness, and the pursuit of wealth. “Do not toil to acquire wealth.” Wealth is fragile: “When your eyes light on it, it is gone, for suddenly it sprouts wings.” The sayings on alcohol are vivid, describing its effects with humor and horror. The father also gives a tender instruction: “My son, give me your heart, and let your eyes observe my ways.” Wisdom is not just information but a relationship of trust.

Chapter 24 includes two of the book’s most challenging lines. Verse 11 calls us to rescue those being led to death. We cannot say, “Behold, we did not know this,” for God weighs the heart. Silence in the face of injustice is a failure. And verse 16 gives a glimpse of resilience: “The righteous falls seven times and rises again.” The righteous person is not one who never falls, but one who gets up. This gives comfort to anyone who has failed.

The warning about enemies is also bracing: “Do not rejoice when your enemy falls.” The reason is that the LORD will see it and be displeased. Gloating is a sin. And the chapter closes with a picture of the sluggard’s field, overgrown with thorns, and a warning that poverty comes “like a robber.” The wise man looks at the field and “receives instruction.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Let the children come to me” (Mark 10:14), and called for justice and mercy toward the least. Paul instructs fathers to bring children up “in the discipline and instruction of the Lord” (Ephesians 6:4). Jesus told the story of the Good Samaritan, who rescued the one being left for dead (Luke 10:30-37). The righteous who falls and rises again points to the One who rose, and to the grace that lifts his people (Micah 7:8).

STEP 6

Application

Ask what your reputation says about you, and whether it reflects your character.

Think about someone you could “rescue” this week: someone who needs an advocate.

If you have failed recently, hold on to 24:16. Get up.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to give you a good name before him.
- Ask him to help you rescue those being led toward death.
- Ask him to keep you from gloating over an enemy.

PROVERBS 31:30

DAY 317 · WEEK 46

Psalm 119:97-144

The commandments as wisdom

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 48 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 119:97-144. This section is the heart of the psalm. Notice how the psalmist describes the sweetness, the light, and the righteousness of God's word.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This is the third reading from Psalm 119, covering stanzas thirteen through eighteen. It contains the famous verse 105, the lamp, and some of the strongest statements about how God's word gives wisdom. It fits the theme of the unit: the commandments as a source of insight and a guide for life.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Oh how I love your law! It is my meditation all the day" (v. 97).
2. "Your commandment makes me wiser than my enemies, for it is ever with me" (v. 98).
3. "I have more understanding than all my teachers, for your testimonies are my meditation" (v. 99).
4. "How sweet are your words to my taste, sweeter than honey to my mouth!" (v. 103).
5. "Your word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path" (v. 105).
6. "The unfolding of your words gives light; it imparts understanding to the simple" (v. 130).
7. "My eyes shed streams of tears, because people do not keep your law" (v. 136).
8. "Your testimonies are righteous forever; give me understanding that I may live" (v. 144).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The stanza that begins at verse 97 starts with an exclamation: “Oh how I love your law!” The psalmist does not just obey. He loves. His meditation is constant, “all the day.” This is the Bible’s picture of a believer who treasures God’s word as a delight and a source of wisdom.

The claims of verses 98 to 100 are striking. The psalmist says he is wiser than his enemies, his teachers, and the aged. This is not arrogance but a statement about the power of the word. A humble student of Scripture may have more insight than a clever person who ignores it. Wisdom is not a matter of age or education. It is a matter of heeding God’s testimonies.

Verse 103 describes the word as sweet: “sweeter than honey.” It is both nourishing and delightful. And verse 105 gives the great image of the lamp. Verse 130 adds that “the unfolding of your words gives light.” The word brings understanding, especially to the simple. You do not need to be an expert. The unfolding, the opening up, of the word gives light.

The psalm is not naive. The section includes pain. In verse 136, the psalmist’s eyes shed streams of tears because others do not keep the law. Love for God’s word includes grief at its neglect. And in verses 107 and 139, he describes his affliction and his zeal consuming him. This is a person who feels deeply.

Verse 144 closes the passage with a request that sums up what the psalm is about: “Give me understanding that I may live.” Understanding and life belong together. To know God’s word is to live. The psalmist’s prayer is the same as ours: help me to see.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Man shall not live by bread alone” (Matthew 4:4), and “The words that I have spoken to you are spirit and life” (John 6:63). He grieved over Jerusalem (Luke 19:41), echoing verse 136. Revelation 10:9-10 uses the image of the word as sweet as honey. Paul writes that the Scriptures “are able to make you wise for salvation through faith in Christ Jesus” (2 Timothy 3:15).

STEP 6

Application

Read a short passage of Scripture today and ask: what is sweet in this?

Pray that you would grieve what grieves God.

Ask for understanding not just to know but to live.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you love about his law.
- Ask him for understanding that gives light.
- Grieve with him over those who do not keep his law.

PROVERBS 31:30

DAY 318 · WEEK 46

Proverbs 25:1-27:27

Hezekiah's collection; friendship; self-knowledge

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 25:1-27:27. A new collection begins, copied by the men of Hezekiah. As you read, notice the images from nature and everyday life, and what the sayings say about friends and enemies.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Proverbs 25:1 says that these are "also proverbs of Solomon which the men of Hezekiah king of Judah copied." They come from the time of Hezekiah, about 700 BC, when the scribes of Judah collected and preserved earlier wisdom. This collection is rich in similes and comparisons, drawn from the world of ordinary experience: snow, rain, apples, thorn bushes, iron.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "It is the glory of God to conceal things, but the glory of kings is to search things out" (25:2).
2. "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in a setting of silver" (25:11).
3. "If your enemy is hungry, give him bread to eat, and if he is thirsty, give him water to drink" (25:21).
4. "Like a dog that returns to his vomit is a fool who repeats his folly" (26:11).
5. "Do not answer a fool according to his folly, lest you be like him yourself" (26:4), and "Answer a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own eyes" (26:5).
6. "Do not boast about tomorrow, for you do not know what a day may bring" (27:1).
7. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend; profuse are the kisses of an enemy" (27:6).

8 “Iron sharpens iron, and one man sharpens another” (27:17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The collection begins with a reflection on knowledge: “It is the glory of God to conceal things, but the glory of kings is to search things out.” God has left much to be discovered. The search for understanding is a kind of honor, and wisdom requires humility before the mystery of God.

The collection is full of word pictures. A word fitly spoken is like gold apples in a silver setting: beautiful, fitting, valuable. A faithful messenger is like cold snow in harvest time. A man without self-control is “like a city broken into and left without walls.” These images ask the reader to slow down and to see the world as a source of wisdom.

Chapter 25’s counsel about enemies is among the most radical in the Old Testament: “If your enemy is hungry, give him bread to eat.” Paul quotes it in Romans 12:20. To give food to an enemy is to overcome evil with good. The “burning coals” are probably a picture of shame leading to repentance.

Chapter 26 gathers the proverbs on fools in a stunning series. The seeming contradiction between 26:4 and 26:5 is intentional. Sometimes a fool should not be answered, so that you do not become like him. Sometimes he should be answered, so that he does not think himself wise. Wisdom is knowing which. Proverbs are not formulas. They require discernment.

Chapter 27 turns to friendship and self-knowledge. “Faithful are the wounds of a friend.” A true friend tells the truth, even when it hurts. “Iron sharpens iron.” We grow through honest relationships. And “as in water face reflects face, so the heart of man reflects the man.” The state of our heart shows in our life. The chapter ends with the call to know the condition of your flocks, a reminder that wealth does not last forever and that careful stewardship matters.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Proverbs 25:21-22 in Romans 12:20 and says, “Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good.” Jesus said, “Love your enemies” (Matthew 5:44), and showed it on the cross. James 4:13-14 echoes 27:1. Hebrews 10:24 calls believers to “stir up one another to love and good works.” Peter uses 26:11 in 2 Peter 2:22.

STEP 6

Application

Do something kind this week for someone who has been unkind to you.

Ask a trusted friend for honest feedback, and be ready to hear it as a wound that heals.

Think of a “word fitly spoken” that you could offer to someone today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to make you humble in your search for understanding.

Ask him to teach you to speak a word fitly spoken.

Ask him for the grace to receive the wounds of a friend.

DAY 319 · WEEK 46

Proverbs 28:1-29:27

Justice, leadership, and the righteous

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 55 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 28:1-29:27. These chapters are about leadership, justice, and the effect of rulers on a nation. Notice what they say about confession, and the fear of man.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These chapters continue the collection copied by Hezekiah's men. The focus turns to rulers and the righteous. They reflect the concern for justice that runs through the prophets. The wise sayings here are strongly moral and contrast the righteous with the wicked, the oppressor with the generous, and the stubborn with the repentant.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The wicked flee when no one pursues, but the righteous are bold as a lion" (28:1).
2. "Whoever conceals his transgressions will not prosper, but he who confesses and forsakes them will obtain mercy" (28:13).
3. "Blessed is the one who fears the LORD always, but whoever hardens his heart will fall into calamity" (28:14).
4. "Whoever trusts in his own mind is a fool, but he who walks in wisdom will be delivered" (28:26).
5. "Whoever gives to the poor will not want, but he who hides his eyes will get many a curse" (28:27).
6. "When the righteous increase, the people rejoice, but when the wicked rule, the people groan" (29:2).

7. “Where there is no prophecy the people cast off restraint, but blessed is he who keeps the law” (29:18).

8. “The fear of man lays a snare, but whoever trusts in the LORD is safe” (29:25).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first verse of chapter 28 describes a mark of conscience. The wicked run when no one is chasing them, because guilt is its own pursuer. The righteous are bold, because they have nothing to hide. A clear conscience is a source of courage.

Verse 13 is one of the central statements on confession in the Bible: “Whoever conceals his transgressions will not prosper, but he who confesses and forsakes them will obtain mercy.” Both confession and forsaking are required. It is not enough to admit a sin and carry on. And the promise is mercy. David knew this from his own experience (Psalm 32). Hiding sin makes things worse. Confessing opens the way to mercy.

Verse 26 returns to the theme of Proverbs 3:5. “Whoever trusts in his own mind is a fool.” The wise person knows the limits of his own judgment and relies on God. The proverbs about the poor continue: generosity brings blessing, while ignoring need brings a curse. And the book’s concern for rulers appears: “A ruler who lacks understanding is a cruel oppressor, but he who hates unjust gain will prolong his days.”

Chapter 29 gives an important principle for communities: “When the righteous increase, the people rejoice, but when the wicked rule, the people groan.” The character of leaders affects the lives of ordinary people. This is why believers pray for those in authority and take care in how they choose and serve.

Verse 18 is one of the most quoted: “Where there is no prophecy the people cast off restraint.” The Hebrew word for “prophecy” means vision or revelation. When God’s word is not heard, people lose their moorings. “But blessed is he who keeps the law.” And verse 25 states the central problem of the people-pleaser: “The fear of man lays a snare.” To fear people is to be trapped. To trust the LORD is to be safe.

STEP 5

Connection

1 John 1:9 says, “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us.” Jesus is the righteous bold as a lion, the Lion of the tribe of Judah (Revelation 5:5). Jesus said, “Do not fear those who kill the body” (Matthew 10:28). Paul says, “If I were still trying to please man, I would not be a servant of Christ” (Galatians 1:10). Amos 8:11 describes a famine of hearing the words of the LORD.

STEP 6

Application

Confess one thing you have been concealing, and turn from it.

Ask whose approval you fear most. Bring it to the LORD.

Pray for the leaders in your community, that righteousness would increase.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess and forsake a sin before God.
- Ask him to keep you from the fear of man.
- Ask him to make you bold because you are clean before him.

DAY 320 · WEEK 46

Proverbs 30:1-31:31

Agur's words; King Lemuel; the excellent wife

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 64 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Proverbs 30:1-31:31. The book ends with the words of Agur, the words of King Lemuel, and the famous poem of the excellent wife. Read the final poem as the capstone of the book, and ask who she really is.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 30 is attributed to Agur, an otherwise unknown man, and includes numerical sayings and a prayer. Chapter 31 begins with what a queen mother taught her son the king, and ends with an acrostic poem in praise of "an excellent wife." It is the final word of Proverbs. Since the book opened with wisdom as a woman calling in the street, it closes with a portrait of wisdom lived out.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Surely I am more brutish than any man. I have not the understanding of a man" (30:2).
2. "Who has ascended to heaven and come down?... What is his name, and what is his son's name? Surely you know!" (30:4).
3. "Every word of God proves true; he is a shield to those who take refuge in him" (30:5).
4. "Give me neither poverty nor riches; feed me with the food that is needful for me" (30:8).
5. "Open your mouth for the mute, for the rights of all who are destitute" (31:8).
6. "An excellent wife who can find? She is far more precious than jewels" (31:10).
7. "Strength and dignity are her clothing, and she laughs at the time to come" (31:25).

8 “Charm is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman who fears the LORD is to be praised” (31:30).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Agur begins with a confession of humility, almost despairing. He claims no wisdom. He then asks rhetorical questions about who has ascended into heaven and gathered the wind in his fists, “What is his name, and what is his son’s name?” The questions point to the mystery of God. He knows his limits. And then comes a statement of faith: “Every word of God proves true; he is a shield to those who take refuge in him.” The proper response to our limits is not despair but trust in God’s word.

Agur’s prayer in verses 7 to 9 is a model of balanced petition. “Give me neither poverty nor riches.” He fears wealth, lest he deny God, and poverty, lest he steal. It shows self-knowledge. He asks for enough. The numerical sayings that follow, “Three things are too wonderful for me… four I do not understand,” show wonder at creation.

The words of King Lemuel are a mother’s teaching to her son. She warns against indulgence and calls him to speak up for those who have no voice. “Open your mouth for the mute.” A good ruler is an advocate for the helpless.

The final poem, the “excellent wife,” is an acrostic, each line beginning with the next letter of the Hebrew alphabet, a completeness from A to Z. She is a woman of strength, wisdom, industry, generosity, and fear of the LORD. She works with her hands, manages her household, trades, invests, gives to the poor, and teaches with kindness. The poem is not a checklist of tasks a woman must do. It is a portrait of wisdom embodied. The word “excellent” is the same word used elsewhere for a “mighty” warrior. It is a picture of valor.

The key line is verse 30: “Charm is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman who fears the LORD is to be praised.” The book ends where it started: with the fear of the LORD. Wisdom is not an abstraction. It takes shape in a life lived under God.

STEP 5

Connection

Agur’s question, “Who has ascended to heaven and come down?” finds its answer in Christ (John 3:13; Ephesians 4:9-10). “Every word of God proves true” is echoed in Jesus’ trust in the Scriptures (Matthew 5:18). Ephesians 5:25-27 shows Christ’s love for the church as a bride. Jesus said, “Give us this day our daily bread” (Matthew 6:11), the prayer of Agur’s “food that is needful.”

STEP 6

Application

Pray Agur's prayer: ask God for "enough" and not too much or too little.

Whether man or woman, read the Proverbs 31 poem as a portrait of wisdom to imitate.

Speak up for someone who has no voice this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that every word of his proves true.

Ask him for neither poverty nor riches but what you need.

Ask him to teach you to open your mouth for those who cannot speak for themselves.

DAY 321 · WEEK 46

Ecclesiastes 1:1-2:26

Vanity of vanities; the futility of wisdom and pleasure

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 44 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ecclesiastes 1:1-2:26. The tone changes sharply from Proverbs. Read slowly, and let the Preacher's honesty about life sink in. Do not rush to resolve it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Ecclesiastes is the book of the Preacher (Hebrew Qoheleth), "the son of David, king in Jerusalem," traditionally taken to be Solomon. If Proverbs says that wisdom leads to life, Ecclesiastes asks what happens when life seems not to add up. The key word is "vanity," literally "breath" or "vapor." The Preacher explores life "under the sun," that is, as seen from a purely earthly viewpoint, and comes back with hard truths. This is the second book of the wisdom collection, and it is an honest companion to Proverbs.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Vanity of vanities, says the Preacher, vanity of vanities! All is vanity" (1:2).
2. "What does man gain by all the toil at which he toils under the sun?" (1:3).
3. "A generation goes, and a generation comes, but the earth remains forever" (1:4).
4. "What has been is what will be, and what has been done is what will be done, and there is nothing new under the sun" (1:9).
5. "For in much wisdom is much vexation, and he who increases knowledge increases sorrow" (1:18).
6. He tries pleasure, laughter, wine, great works, wealth, and music (2:1-8).
7. "Then I considered all that my hands had done... and behold, all was vanity and a striving after wind" (2:11).

8 “There is nothing better for a person than that he should eat and drink and find enjoyment in his toil. This also, I saw, is from the hand of God” (2:24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first line stuns the reader: “Vanity of vanities! All is vanity.” The word “vanity” (hebel) means a breath, a vapor, something that cannot be grasped. The Preacher is not saying that life is meaningless in every way, but that it is fleeting and elusive, impossible to hold. His starting question is: what does a person gain from all his work? If all work ends in death and is forgotten, what is the point?

He observes nature: the sun rises and sets, the wind circles, the streams run to the sea, and nothing is ever finished. History repeats. There is “nothing new under the sun.” The human heart is not satisfied by seeing and hearing. These lines describe the weariness of life without a larger purpose.

In chapter 2, the Preacher conducts an experiment. He tries pleasure, laughter, wine. He builds houses and gardens, gathers silver and gold, and has everything his eyes desire. And at the end of it, “Behold, all was vanity and a striving after wind.” He does not deny that these things are enjoyable. He says they cannot satisfy. Wisdom is better than folly, as light is better than darkness, but the same fate comes to both. The wise man dies like the fool.

This is a painful honesty. The Preacher does not offer easy answers. He lays out the problem: a life lived only for what this world offers, even in the best circumstances, ends in frustration. Death is the great leveler.

But the chapter ends with a hint of something else: “There is nothing better than that he should eat and drink and find enjoyment in his toil. This also, I saw, is from the hand of God.” Enjoyment is possible, but only as a gift received from God, not as something grasped. This is the first note of a theme that runs through the book.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that creation was “subjected to futility” in hope of liberation (Romans 8:20-21), echoing the Preacher’s vanity. Jesus asked, “What does it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his soul?” (Mark 8:36). In Christ, our labor “is not in vain” (1 Corinthians 15:58). Jesus is the one who gives the satisfaction that nothing under the sun can: “Whoever drinks of the water that I will give him will never be thirsty” (John 4:14).

STEP 6

Application

Ask what you are chasing that cannot satisfy. Be honest.

Receive one ordinary joy today (a meal, a conversation) as a gift from God's hand.

Do not rush past the question of futility. Let it drive you to Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what you tend to chase that leaves you empty.
- Ask him to satisfy you in himself.
- Ask him to teach you to receive eating, drinking, and work as gifts.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Charm is deceitful, and beauty is vain, but a woman who fears the LORD is to be praised."

PROVERBS 31:30

REST

Meditation

This verse is the last great statement of the book of Proverbs. It sums up the portrait of the excellent wife, and it says what matters most.

"Charm is deceitful." Charm is the ability to win people with a pleasant manner. It can be real and it can be a cover. It can hide a hollow heart. We have all known people who were delightful and untrustworthy. Charm alone is not a foundation.

"And beauty is vain." The word "vain" is the same as "vanity" in Ecclesiastes: a breath that passes. Beauty fades. In a culture that prizes appearance, this verse says that it cannot bear the weight we put on it. This is not a criticism of beauty as such, which the Bible celebrates. It is a warning against making it the measure of a life.

“But a woman who fears the LORD is to be praised.” This is the heart of it. The thing that lasts is a heart that fears the LORD. The book that began with “The fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge” ends with the same note. Everything in the long poem of the excellent wife flows from this root. Her strength, her generosity, her wisdom, and her laughter at the days to come grow from it.

Although the verse speaks of a woman, the principle applies to every person. Whatever we are tempted to rely on, charm, looks, talent, or position, will fade. What endures is a life oriented toward God.

For the Christian, the fear of the LORD is fulfilled in a living faith in Christ, who calls us to a beauty that does not fade (1 Peter 3:3-4). Ask God to make this the thing you want to be known for.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished Proverbs and began Ecclesiastes. You read the Sayings of the Wise, with their call to rescue those being led to death and their promise that the righteous falls seven times and rises again. You read the collection copied by Hezekiah’s men, with the proverb that iron sharpens iron and the command to feed an enemy. You saw how confession brings mercy, how the fear of man is a snare, and how Agur prayed for neither poverty nor riches. You ended Proverbs with the excellent wife, the portrait of wisdom lived out. Then Ecclesiastes opened with its stark verdict: vanity of vanities. In Psalm 119 you read of the sweetness of God’s word and its power to give understanding. The week taught that wisdom is lived out in speech, friendship, justice, and generosity, and that nothing under the sun satisfies without God.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Proverbs 28:13 says, “Whoever conceals his transgressions will not prosper, but he who confesses and forsakes them will obtain mercy.” What do you need to bring into the light this week?

Proverbs 31 ends with the fear of the LORD as the root of a praiseworthy life, and Christ is the one who lived it perfectly. How does his life give you both a model and a Savior?

The Preacher says that everything under the sun is vanity. What is one thing you have been expecting to satisfy you that cannot?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to make the fear of him your root.

Tell him where you have trusted charm, beauty, or achievement.

Thank Christ for satisfying what nothing else can.

DAY 323 · WEEK 47

Ecclesiastes 3:1-4:16

A time for everything; oppression and friendship

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 38 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ecclesiastes 3:1-4:16. This includes the famous poem about time and the Preacher's reflections on oppression, envy, and companionship. Read the poem slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Preacher continues his reflection. Having seen that effort alone cannot satisfy, he now considers the structure of time itself. Chapter 3 is among the most quoted passages in the Bible, and chapter 4 returns to the harsh realities of oppression and loneliness, and offers a consolation in the value of friendship.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "For everything there is a season, and a time for every matter under heaven" (3:1).
2. "A time to be born, and a time to die… a time to weep, and a time to laugh… a time to mourn, and a time to dance" (3:2-4).
3. "He has made everything beautiful in its time" (3:11).
4. "Also, he has put eternity into man's heart, yet so that he cannot find out what God has done from the beginning to the end" (3:11).
5. "I perceived that there is nothing better for them than to be joyful and to do good as long as they live" (3:12).
6. "I perceived that whatever God does endures forever" (3:14).
7. "And I saw all the oppressions that are done under the sun. And behold, the tears of the oppressed, and they had no one to comfort them" (4:1).
8. "Two are better than one, because they have a good reward for their toil" (4:9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The poem of times is a catalog of fourteen pairs of opposite experiences: birth and death, planting and uprooting, weeping and laughing, embracing and refraining. It affirms that life has seasons, and that God governs them. It is not saying that all things are good, but that there is a time for everything, including grief. We are not meant to be always joyful or always sorrowful. Wisdom discerns the time.

The central statement is verse 11. God has made everything beautiful in its time. And he has put "eternity into man's heart." We have a sense of something beyond the present. We long for the permanent in a world of passing things. But we cannot see the whole picture. We live in the middle of the story and cannot grasp its end. This is why we are restless. The longing for eternity is a pointer to God. We are made for more than this world offers.

The Preacher's response is not despair but a call to receive life as a gift: be joyful, do good, eat and drink, and see it as the gift of God. And he reminds us of a comforting truth: "Whatever God does endures forever." Human works fade, but God's work stands. "God has done it, so that people fear before him."

Chapter 4 gives an honest view of injustice. The oppressed weep, and "they had no one to comfort them." The Preacher is moved by it, and he does not offer a quick answer. He sees envy driving much of human labor and sees the loneliness of those who work without end.

The balance comes in the section on companionship. "Two are better than one." If one falls, the other lifts him. Two keep warm. And the line, "A threefold cord is not quickly broken," has become a proverb for marriage and friendship. In a world of vapor, relationships are among the few things that give strength.

STEP 5

Connection

Galatians 4:4 says, "When the fullness of time had come, God sent forth his Son." The time of Christ's coming was God's chosen time. Jesus wept (John 11:35) and danced no less with joy (Luke 15:25-32), and entered all the seasons of human experience. Romans 8:18-25 describes our groaning as we wait. Jesus sent his disciples out two by two (Luke 10:1). Hebrews 10:24-25 urges believers not to neglect meeting together.

STEP 6

Application

Ask what season you are in. What is God asking of you in it?

Notice the "eternity" longing in your heart, and let it point you to God.

Think of a friend you can strengthen or lean on this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to help you discern the season you are in.
- Thank him for putting eternity in your heart.
- Pray for the oppressed, and ask what he would have you do.

ECCLESIASTES 12:13

DAY 324 · WEEK 47

Psalm 49

Why should I fear in times of trouble?, Ecclesiastes in the Psalter

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 49. This psalm is a wisdom psalm and a reflection on death and wealth. It is close to Ecclesiastes in tone. Read it as a sermon.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 49 is a psalm of the sons of Korah. It begins like a wisdom teacher's address to all peoples, rich and poor, and it takes up the same problem Ecclesiastes explores: all human beings die, whatever their wealth. It also gives an answer that Ecclesiastes only hints at: God will ransom the faithful from Sheol. It is placed here as the Psalter's echo of the Preacher.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Hear this, all peoples! Give ear, all inhabitants of the world, both low and high, rich and poor together!" (vv. 1-2).
2. "My mouth shall speak wisdom; the meditation of my heart shall be understanding" (v. 3).
3. "Why should I fear in the days of evil, when the iniquity of my persecutors surrounds me?" (v. 5).
4. "Truly no man can ransom another, or give to God the price of his life" (v. 7).
5. "Man in his pomp will not remain; he is like the beasts that perish" (v. 12).
6. "Like sheep they are appointed for Sheol; Death shall be their shepherd" (v. 14).
7. "But God will ransom my soul from the power of Sheol, for he will receive me" (v. 15).
8. "Be not afraid when a man becomes rich, when the glory of his house increases. For when he dies he will carry nothing away" (vv. 16-17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a universal audience. It is not for Israel only but for all the inhabitants of the world. The question it addresses concerns everyone: why fear when the wealthy and powerful seem to have the upper hand? The answer is death. “No man can ransom another.” Not even the richest can buy his way out of the grave. “For he sees that even the wise die.” Wealth, wisdom, and fame all end in the same place.

The psalm describes the false confidence of the wealthy. They name lands after themselves. They trust in their riches and boast of their abundance. But “man in his pomp will not remain.” He is like the beasts. The psalm uses a shocking image: death is their shepherd, leading them like sheep to Sheol. They are being herded, not leading.

Then comes the great turn in verse 15. “But God will ransom my soul from the power of Sheol, for he will receive me.” It is one of the clearest statements of hope beyond death in the Old Testament. The word “ransom” recalls the failure of human ransom in verse 7. No man can ransom another, but God can. And “he will receive me” uses the same verb that was used of Enoch and Elijah being taken by God. It points to a hope of life with God beyond the grave.

The psalm ends with a call not to fear. Do not be afraid when the wicked prosper. They will leave everything behind. Their glory does not follow them. The wise person is not envious of what will be taken away.

This psalm answers the problem of vanity with the hope of ransom. It sees death clearly, but it does not end there.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “The Son of Man came… to give his life as a ransom for many” (Mark 10:45), the ransom no one else could pay. Paul says, “We brought nothing into the world, and we cannot take anything out of it” (1 Timothy 6:7). Hosea 13:14 and 1 Corinthians 15:54-57 speak of victory over Sheol. Jesus told the story of the rich fool (Luke 12:16-21), and said, “What will a man give in return for his soul?” (Mark 8:37).

STEP 6

Application

Do not envy someone who is wealthy. Ask what they will carry with them.

Thank Jesus for being the ransom that no man could pay.

Hold your possessions loosely, knowing that God will receive you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Jesus for giving his life as a ransom for you.

Tell God what you tend to trust in besides him, such as wealth or reputation.

Ask him to loosen your fear of death.

DAY 325 · WEEK 47

Psalm 73

Truly God is good, Asaph almost slips; then sees the end

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 28 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 73. It is the story of a believer who almost lost his faith when he saw the wicked prosper. Notice the turning point in verses 16 and 17.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 73 opens Book III of the Psalter and is attributed to Asaph, a Levite who led worship in David's time. It deals with the problem Job and Ecclesiastes raise: why do the wicked prosper while the righteous suffer? The psalmist tells his own story of almost slipping. It is placed here as the Psalter's best answer to the Preacher's puzzles.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Truly God is good to Israel, to those who are pure in heart" (v. 1).
2. "But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled, my steps had nearly slipped" (v. 2).
3. "For I was envious of the arrogant when I saw the prosperity of the wicked" (v. 3).
4. "All in vain have I kept my heart clean and washed my hands in innocence" (v. 13).
5. "But when I thought how to understand this, it seemed to me a wearisome task, until I went into the sanctuary of God; then I discerned their end" (vv. 16-17).
6. "I was brutish and ignorant; I was like a beast toward you" (v. 22).
7. "Nevertheless, I am continually with you; you hold my right hand. You guide me with your counsel, and afterward you will receive me to glory" (vv. 23-24).
8. "Whom have I in heaven but you? And there is nothing on earth that I desire besides you. My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever" (vv. 25-26).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with a creed: “Truly God is good.” Then the psalmist admits that he almost lost it. He looked at the wicked, who had no pangs and bodies that were fat and sleek, free from trouble, mocking God, and he envied them. He wondered whether his own faithfulness had been pointless. “All in vain have I kept my heart clean.” Many believers have felt this. The Bible lets us say it out loud.

The turning point is a small phrase: “until I went into the sanctuary of God.” The solution to his problem was not a better argument, but worship. In God’s presence, he saw the whole picture: “then I discerned their end.” The wicked are on slippery ground and will be destroyed in a moment. They are like a dream when one awakes. What looked solid is a vapor. Perspective changes everything when we see it from God’s point of view.

The psalmist then confesses how foolish he had been: “I was brutish and ignorant; I was like a beast toward you.” His envy had been irrational. But he does not stop there. His confession leads to the greatest statement of the psalm: “Nevertheless, I am continually with you; you hold my right hand.” The “nevertheless” is the pivot. Despite his ignorance, God held him. His security rests not on his grip on God but on God’s grip on him.

Verses 25 and 26 are among the most beautiful in the Bible. “Whom have I in heaven but you?” God himself is the treasure. “My flesh and my heart may fail, but God is the strength of my heart and my portion forever.” The psalmist ends by saying, “For me it is good to be near God.” This is the answer to the problem of the prosperity of the wicked: God himself is the reward. And with that, the psalmist sees that the wicked, though rich, have nothing.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “What does it profit a man to gain the whole world and forfeit his soul?” (Mark 8:36). The sanctuary where the psalmist found perspective is fulfilled in Christ, in whom we have access to God (Hebrews 10:19-22). The poor man Lazarus and the rich man (Luke 16:19-31) illustrate verses 17 to 20. Philippians 3:8 expresses the same treasure: “I count everything as loss because of the surpassing worth of knowing Christ Jesus my Lord.”

STEP 6

Application

Think about whom you have envied. Bring it into the sanctuary of God and ask for his perspective.

Pray verses 25 and 26 slowly, and ask whether they are true for you.

When you feel like you are slipping, remember that God holds your right hand.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess your envy of those who seem to prosper.
- Tell him what you see differently in his presence.
- Tell him he is the strength of your heart and your portion.

DAY 326 · WEEK 47

Ecclesiastes 5:1-7:29

Fear God; wealth's emptiness; wisdom's limits

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ecclesiastes 5:1-7:29. These chapters include advice on worship, the problem of wealth, and reflections on wisdom and death. Notice the practical tone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Preacher shifts from observation to counsel. After describing the futility of life under the sun, he offers advice on how to live well within it. He speaks of approaching God, the limits of wealth, and the value of mourning. The tone is sober, and the advice is realistic. It is the voice of an experienced teacher.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Guard your steps when you go to the house of God. To draw near to listen is better than to offer the sacrifice of fools" (5:1).
2. "God is in heaven and you are on earth. Therefore let your words be few" (5:2).
3. "He who loves money will not be satisfied with money, nor he who loves wealth with his income" (5:10).
4. "As he came from his mother's womb he shall go again, naked as he came, and shall take nothing for his toil" (5:15).
5. "Every man also to whom God has given wealth and possessions and power to enjoy them, and to accept his lot and rejoice in his toil, this is the gift of God" (5:19).
6. "It is better to go to the house of mourning than to go to the house of feasting, for this is the end of all mankind, and the living will lay it to heart" (7:2).

7. “In the day of prosperity be joyful, and in the day of adversity consider: God has made the one as well as the other” (7:14).

8. “Surely there is no one on earth who is righteous, who does good and never sins” (7:20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Preacher begins with worship. “Guard your steps when you go to the house of God.” He warns against thoughtless religion: hurried words, empty vows, and the “sacrifice of fools.” To listen is better than to offer. “God is in heaven and you are on earth. Therefore let your words be few.” It is the posture of reverence. We approach a holy God with humility and attention, not with a flood of words.

The long section on wealth makes several observations. Money does not satisfy: “He who loves money will not be satisfied.” The more one has, the more people there are to consume it. Wealth can be lost in a bad venture. And at death, one leaves with nothing. The Preacher has no patience for the idea that riches bring security. Yet he does not say wealth is evil. The gift is that God enables a person to enjoy what he has. “This is the gift of God.” The ability to enjoy is itself a gift.

Chapter 7 gathers a series of “better than” sayings that seem strange at first. Better to go to the house of mourning than to a feast. Better sorrow than laughter. Better the rebuke of a wise man than the song of fools. The reason is that grief teaches. A funeral reminds us of the end and makes us wise. Those who avoid thinking about death live carelessly.

The Preacher gives an honest comment on the limits of wisdom. He tried to be wise, but it was “far from me.” He admits that there is much he cannot understand. He also says that God has made both prosperity and adversity, and that we cannot predict the future. The wise do not demand to know everything.

The chapter ends with a sober statement of human sinfulness: “No one on earth is righteous, who does good and never sins.” And with a key diagnosis: “God made man upright, but they have sought out many schemes.” The problem is not creation but the Fall.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Ecclesiastes 7:20 in the same spirit in Romans 3:10-12. Jesus warned against empty words in prayer (Matthew 6:7). 1 Timothy 6:6-10 says that godliness with contentment is great gain, and that the love of money is the root of all kinds of evils. Jesus said, “Blessed are those who mourn” (Matthew 5:4). He is the one who is without sin (Hebrews 4:15), the righteous one the Preacher could not find.

STEP 6

Application

Before your next time of worship or prayer, slow down. Listen before you speak.

Ask whether money is satisfying you or driving you. Practice contentment today.

Sit with mortality for a few minutes. What does it teach you about how to live?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to teach you to listen more than you speak.
- Ask him to keep you from loving money.
- Tell him where you want to be satisfied in him.

ECCLESIASTES 12:13

DAY 327 · WEEK 47

Ecclesiastes 8:1-10:20

Wisdom and rulers; death levels all; folly's cost

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ecclesiastes 8:1-10:20. The Preacher considers the injustice of life, the fate of death that comes to all, and the limits of human wisdom. Read with patience. These are some of the book's hardest passages.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Preacher continues his reflection with an eye on rulers and justice. He sees that the wicked sometimes prosper and the righteous suffer, that death comes to everyone, and that wisdom does not always bring rewards. At the same time, he repeatedly calls the reader to enjoy life as a gift. These chapters are among the most puzzling and most honest in the Bible.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Though a sinner does evil a hundred times and prolongs his life, yet I know that it will be well with those who fear God" (8:12).
2. "There is a vanity that takes place on earth, that there are righteous people to whom it happens according to the deeds of the wicked" (8:14).
3. "It is the same for all, since the same event happens to the righteous and the wicked" (9:2).
4. "A living dog is better than a dead lion" (9:4).
5. "Go, eat your bread with joy, and drink your wine with a merry heart, for God has already approved what you do" (9:7).
6. "Whatever your hand finds to do, do it with your might, for there is no work or thought or knowledge or wisdom in Sheol, to which you are going" (9:10).

7. “The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong… but time and chance happen to them all” (9:11).

8. “Dead flies make the perfumer’s ointment give off a stench; so a little folly outweighs wisdom and honor” (10:1).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Preacher is troubled by injustice. He sees wicked people buried with honor, and righteous people receiving what the wicked deserve. “There is a vanity that takes place on earth.” He does not hide it. Yet he holds fast to a central conviction: “It will be well with those who fear God.” He cannot see how, but he knows that God is just. This is faith in the dark.

Chapter 9 faces death head-on. The same fate comes to all. The living know they will die, but the dead know nothing. Our loves and hates and envies perish. This is how it looks from “under the sun,” the perspective of observation without revelation. The Preacher is describing the limits of what can be seen. He does not yet have the fullness of the resurrection hope.

Yet in the face of death, he gives a surprising command: enjoy life. “Go, eat your bread with joy.” Enjoy your wife, “all the days of your vain life.” And “whatever your hand finds to do, do it with your might.” The shortness of life is not a reason for despair but for diligence and joy. Because we will not be here forever, we should live fully now and work wholeheartedly.

He also says that life is not predictable: “The race is not to the swift.” Time and chance happen to everyone. We cannot guarantee outcomes. The Preacher does not deny God’s sovereignty, but he refuses to turn the proverbs into promises. Wisdom is valuable, but no one can control how things turn out.

Chapter 10 returns to the practical, with sayings about folly and rulers. A little folly spoils much wisdom. “The words of a wise man’s mouth win him favor, but the lips of a fool consume him.” The chapter shows that wisdom matters even though it does not guarantee success.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says that Christ has “abolished death and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel” (2 Timothy 1:10), answering the Preacher’s darkness. 1 Corinthians 15:58 says, “Your labor is not in vain in the Lord.” Jesus spoke of working “while it is day” (John 9:4). Colossians 3:23 echoes 9:10: “Whatever you do, work heartily, as for the Lord.” Revelation 14:13 says the dead who die in the Lord rest from their labors and their deeds follow them.

STEP 6

Application

Enjoy one simple pleasure today, with thanks to God.

Do a task you have been avoiding with all your might.

If you are troubled by injustice, bring it to God, who is just even when you cannot see it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Give God what you do not understand about life under the sun.

Ask him to teach you to enjoy his gifts with thanks and humility.

Ask him to keep you from folly's small costs.

DAY 328 · WEEK 47

Ecclesiastes 11:1-12:14

Remember your Creator; fear God and keep his commandments

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 24 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Ecclesiastes 11:1-12:14. The Preacher's final words call the young to remember their Creator, describe old age, and give the conclusion of the whole book. Read the last two verses slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The book comes to its end. After exploring the vanity of life under the sun, the Preacher now speaks to the young, then to the old, and then gives his closing verdict. An unnamed editor adds a few words about the Preacher. The conclusion is the key to the entire book and answers the question "What is the point?"

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Cast your bread upon the waters, for you will find it after many days" (11:1).
2. "As you do not know the way the spirit comes to the bones in the womb of a woman with child, so you do not know the work of God who makes everything" (11:5).
3. "Rejoice, O young man, in your youth, and let your heart cheer you in the days of your youth... But know that for all these things God will bring you into judgment" (11:9).
4. "Remember also your Creator in the days of your youth, before the evil days come" (12:1).
5. The poem of old age: the keepers of the house tremble, the grinders cease, the almond tree blossoms, the silver cord is snapped (12:3-6).
6. "And the dust returns to the earth as it was, and the spirit returns to God who gave it" (12:7).

7 “The words of the wise are like goads, and like nails firmly fixed are the collected sayings; they are given by one Shepherd” (12:11).

8 “The end of the matter; all has been heard. Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God will bring every deed into judgment, with every secret thing, whether good or evil” (12:13-14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 11 is an encouragement to generosity and bold action. “Cast your bread upon the waters.” Take risks in giving and investing, because you cannot know what will come. The one who waits for perfect conditions never sows or reaps. We cannot know the work of God, so we should act in faith and diligence. “In the morning sow your seed, and at evening withhold not your hand.”

The Preacher then speaks to the young. “Rejoice in your youth.” He does not tell the young to be glum. But he adds a sobering note: God will bring you into judgment. Joy and accountability go together. And in chapter 12, he gives the command: “Remember your Creator in the days of your youth.” Do it before it is too late, before the “evil days” of old age come.

The poem on old age is one of the most moving in the Bible. It describes a house falling apart: the trembling of the arms, the stooping of the legs, the loss of teeth, dimming eyes, deafness, fear of heights, white hair, and finally death, when “the silver cord is snapped.” It is a vivid portrait of how bodies fail. Its purpose is not morbid but sobering: remember your Creator now.

The last words give the book’s conclusion: “Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man.” After exploring everything under the sun, the Preacher returns to the theme that began Proverbs. The answer to vanity is not found in more experience but in the fear of God. And life matters because “God will bring every deed into judgment.” Nothing is meaningless, because everything will be seen and weighed by him.

Verse 11 says that the words of the wise are like goads and nails, given by “one Shepherd.” The book of Ecclesiastes, with its challenging honesty, is part of God’s shepherding word. It pushes us toward what matters.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says, “The fear of the Lord” and judgment are intertwined: “We must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ” (2 Corinthians 5:10). Jesus is the “one Shepherd” (John 10:11, 16), the Good Shepherd who gives us the words of life. “Remember your Creator” echoes Mark 10:14-15 and 2 Timothy 3:15. The “whole duty of man” is fulfilled in Christ, who kept the commandments perfectly, and in whom we are forgiven (Romans 8:3-4).

STEP 6

Application

Do something generous without waiting for the perfect time.

If you are young, remember your Creator now. If you are older, tell someone younger what you have learned.

Write down the Preacher’s conclusion, and ask what it means for how you spend this week.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Remember your Creator in your own words, and thank him for something from your youth or now.

Ask him to teach you to fear him and keep his commandments.

Thank Jesus, the Good Shepherd.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Ecclesiastes 12:13 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"The end of the matter; all has been heard. Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

ECCLESIASTES 12:13

REST

Meditation

This verse is the Preacher's final answer. After twelve chapters of searching, he arrives at a conclusion that is as simple as it is demanding.

"The end of the matter; all has been heard." The Preacher says that he has finished. All the observations, experiments, and puzzles have been laid out. Now comes the summary. It is a way of saying: if you want only one thing from this book, take this.

"Fear God." The book began with "vanity," and it ends with "fear." The Preacher's long reflection shows that nothing under the sun can bear the weight of our hopes. The only stable footing is a right relationship to the God who made us. To fear God is to honor him as God, to trust him, to submit to him, and to take him seriously.

“And keep his commandments.” Fear is not just a feeling. It shows itself in obedience. The two belong together. A person who says he fears God but ignores what God says has not understood.

“For this is the whole duty of man.” The Hebrew is literally “this is the whole of man.” This is what a human being is for. It is the purpose of our existence. All the things we chase, if they are not oriented to this, are a breath.

The verse that follows adds a motive: God will bring every deed into judgment. This is both a warning and a comfort. Nothing is hidden, and nothing is wasted. For the Christian, the weight of this verse is carried by Christ. He kept God’s commandments perfectly, and he bore the judgment we deserved. We now fear God not as condemned people but as forgiven children, and we obey out of gratitude. Pray this verse as a summary of your life’s purpose.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you moved from Proverbs into the heart of Ecclesiastes. You saw the Preacher’s verdict on life under the sun: vanity of vanities, a breath. You read the poem of times and the promise that God has put eternity into our hearts. You read the Psalter’s answers to the same questions: Psalm 49, in which God ransoms the soul from Sheol, and Psalm 73, where the psalmist’s near-slip ended in the sanctuary and in the great confession, “Whom have I in heaven but you?” You followed the Preacher’s counsel on worship, wealth, mourning, and mortality, and his call to enjoy life as a gift and to work with all your might. And you reached the end of the matter: fear God and keep his commandments. The week taught that nothing under the sun satisfies, that death is real, and that God himself is our portion.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The Preacher says God has “put eternity into man’s heart.” Where do you feel that longing for something more, and how does it point you to God?

Psalm 49 says no one can ransom another, but God will ransom the faithful from Sheol. How does Jesus fulfill this promise, and how does it change how you think about death?

Psalm 73 says, “Whom have I in heaven but you?” If you honestly answer that question today, what do you find?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you want to fear him and keep his commandments.

Thank Christ for the ransom.

Rest in him as the strength of your heart.

DAY 330 · WEEK 48

Song of Solomon 1:1-4:16

Love, desire, and covenant

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 68 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Song of Solomon 1:1-4:16. This is a love poem between a man and a woman. Read it slowly, as poetry. Do not rush to allegory or avoid it as embarrassing. First, let it be what it is.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The Song of Songs, "which is Solomon's," means "the best song." It is a collection of love poems in dialogue between a bride, a bridegroom, and a chorus of friends, the "daughters of Jerusalem." It celebrates erotic love within marriage. It is placed here because the wisdom books explore how to live well in God's world, and a good marriage is one of the central gifts. The song has also been read throughout church history as a picture of Christ's love for his people.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Let him kiss me with the kisses of his mouth! For your love is better than wine" (1:2).
2. "I am black and lovely, O daughters of Jerusalem" (1:5).
3. "As a lily among brambles, so is my love among the young women" (2:2).
4. "He brought me to the banqueting house, and his banner over me was love" (2:4).
5. "My beloved is mine, and I am his" (2:16).
6. "I adjure you, O daughters of Jerusalem… that you not stir up or awaken love until it pleases" (2:7).
7. "You are altogether beautiful, my love; there is no flaw in you" (4:7).
8. "A garden locked is my sister, my bride, a spring locked, a fountain sealed" (4:12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The Song begins with desire. The woman speaks first, and her words are bold. She longs for her beloved's kisses. The Bible does not shy away from the physical side of love. The Song presents it as a good gift of God, to be celebrated within the covenant of marriage. In a world that treats sex either as shameful or as trivial, the Song says it is beautiful and holy.

The couple exchange compliments in rich poetic images that can sound strange to modern ears: eyes like doves, hair like a flock of goats, a nose like a tower of Lebanon. These were images of beauty and delight in the ancient world. The man praises the woman's beauty, and the woman praises his. They value each other. The mutuality is striking.

The refrain of 2:7, "Do not stir up or awaken love until it pleases," appears three times in the Song. It is a warning to the daughters of Jerusalem: love should not be forced or rushed. It has a time. This is a wise word for a culture that hurries into physical intimacy. Love is powerful, and it should be treated with care.

In chapter 2, the poem moves to spring. "For behold, the winter is past; the rain is over and gone. The flowers appear on the earth." Love is like the renewal of the earth. There are scenes of longing and search, of delight in the other's presence. The woman says, "My beloved is mine, and I am his." It is a statement of covenant belonging.

Chapter 3 includes a dream or search at night and the wedding procession of Solomon. Chapter 4 is the groom's long praise of his bride on their wedding night. The garden imagery, "a garden locked," speaks of purity and exclusivity. And the bride's response is an invitation: "Let my beloved come to his garden, and eat its choicest fruits." Love is both reserved and freely given.

STEP 5

Connection

Christian readers have long seen in the Song a picture of Christ and his church. Ephesians 5:25-32 calls marriage a profound mystery pointing to Christ and the church. John 3:29 says, "The one who has the bride is the bridegroom." Revelation 19:7 describes the marriage of the Lamb. At the same time, the Song stands as a celebration of human marriage in its own right. Jesus affirmed marriage as God's design from the beginning (Matthew 19:4-6).

STEP 6

Application

If you are married, speak words of praise to your spouse today.

If you are single, thank God for the gift of marriage as a picture of Christ's love.

Ask God to help you honor desire in the right time and place.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for love and for the picture of Christ and his church in marriage.

Ask him to teach you to value what he has given in its proper time.

Pray for those who are lonely or married, as it fits.

PROVERBS 3:5-6

DAY 331 · WEEK 48

Song of Solomon 5:1-8:14

Longing, union, and love strong as death

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Reading · 58 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Song of Solomon 5:1-8:14. The mood becomes more complex, with longing, loss, and the great declaration about love in chapter 8. Read 8:6-7 slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The second half of the Song continues the cycle of love poems. There is delight, but also absence and search. The woman dreams of her beloved knocking at the door and then disappearing. She searches the city and is beaten by the watchmen. The couple reunite, and the poem moves toward its conclusion with one of the most famous statements about love in all literature.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “I slept, but my heart was awake. A sound! My beloved is knocking” (5:2).
2. “I opened to my beloved, but my beloved had turned and gone” (5:6).
3. “My beloved is radiant and ruddy, distinguished among ten thousand” (5:10).
4. “I am my beloved’s and my beloved is mine; he grazes among the lilies” (6:3).
5. “Come away, my beloved, let us go out into the fields” (7:11).
6. “Set me as a seal upon your heart, as a seal upon your arm, for love is strong as death, jealousy is fierce as the grave” (8:6).
7. “Its flashes are flashes of fire, the very flame of the LORD” (8:6).
8. “Many waters cannot quench love, neither can floods drown it. If a man offered for love all the wealth of his house, he would be utterly despised” (8:7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 5 opens with a scene of near-miss. The woman is in bed, and her beloved knocks, but she hesitates. By the time she opens the door, he is gone. She searches the streets and is struck by the watchmen. It is a picture of the pain of missed connection, and perhaps of the way that love can be strained by hesitation. The daughters of Jerusalem ask what is so special about her beloved, and she answers with a long praise. Love is not blind. She can say exactly why he is distinguished among ten thousand.

The poem describes reconciliation. “I am my beloved’s and my beloved is mine.” The repeated phrase is a statement of covenant belonging. In chapter 6 the man praises her as “terrible as an army with banners,” awe-inspiring. In chapter 7, the couple expresses desire and delight in the language of the vineyard and the garden. The woman invites him to the field, where she will give him her love.

The center of the whole Song is 8:6-7. “Set me as a seal upon your heart.” A seal was a mark of ownership and a pledge of identity. She wants to be marked as his, permanently. “For love is strong as death.” Death cannot be resisted. Neither can love. “Jealousy is fierce as the grave.” This is the jealousy of covenant love, which cannot share its beloved. And “its flashes are flashes of fire, the very flame of the LORD.” Some versions read, “a flame of Yah.” Love is a spark of the divine. It is one of the only places in the Song where God’s name appears.

“Many waters cannot quench love.” It is the kind of love that endures floods. And it cannot be bought. If a man tried to purchase it with all his wealth, he would be despised. Love is a gift, not a commodity.

The Song ends with the woman’s invitation: “Make haste, my beloved.” It is a note of longing that is not fully satisfied. Love in this world points beyond itself.

STEP 5

Connection

The words about love strong as death find their fullest meaning in Christ’s love, which defeated death. “Greater love has no one than this” (John 15:13). Romans 8:35-39 says that nothing, neither death nor life, can separate us from the love of God in Christ. Paul says in Ephesians 5 that Christ gave himself for his bride. Revelation 22:17 and 20 echo the final invitation: “Come, Lord Jesus.” The seal on the heart recalls Ephesians 1:13, where believers are “sealed with the promised Holy Spirit.”

STEP 6

Application

If you are married, renew your commitment to your spouse. Say, “I am yours.”

Ask God to help you love with a love that endures floods.

Think about the love of Christ, which was stronger than death, and rest in it.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank Christ for giving himself for his bride.

Ask him to set you as a seal on his heart, and tell him what that means.

Tell him where you long for him.

PROVERBS 3:5-6

DAY 332 · WEEK 48

Psalm 45

The bridal song and its Messianic echo

Year 1 · Unit 10 · Psalm · 17 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 45. You read this psalm in Unit 9, with attention to the king. Today read it again, this time paying special attention to the bride in verses 10 to 17 and to how the psalm echoes the Song of Solomon.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 45 is a royal wedding song, and in Unit 9 (Day 290) you read it as a portrait of the Davidic king. Now it appears at the close of the wisdom books, right after the Song of Solomon. The two works belong together. Both celebrate a royal wedding and a bridegroom's love, and both have been read by the church as a picture of Christ and his people. This time, look at the bride.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "My heart overflows with a pleasing theme; I address my verses to the king" (v. 1).
2. "Your throne, O God, is forever and ever" (v. 6).
3. "At your right hand stands the queen in gold of Ophir" (v. 9).
4. "Hear, O daughter, consider, and incline your ear: forget your people and your father's house" (v. 10).
5. "and the king will desire your beauty. Since he is your lord, bow to him" (v. 11).
6. "All glorious is the princess in her chamber, with robes interwoven with gold" (v. 13).
7. "With joy and gladness they are led along as they enter the palace of the king" (v. 15).
8. "I will cause your name to be remembered in all generations; therefore nations will praise you forever and ever" (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

In Unit 9 the focus was on the king: his majesty, his righteousness, and his eternal throne. Here the focus shifts to the bride. She is told to forget her people and her father's house. A wedding means leaving one family to join another. It echoes Genesis 2:24: "A man shall leave his father and his mother and hold fast to his wife." She is called to a new loyalty. The call is not a loss but a gain, because "the king will desire your beauty." Her beauty is a gift of his love.

The bride is clothed in splendor. She stands at the king's right hand in gold. She is led to the king in embroidered garments, with companions, with joy and gladness. The picture is not of a servant but of a queen. In the Song of Solomon, we saw the same mutual delight of the bridegroom and bride. In both texts, love is a covenant that transforms and glorifies.

Reading with the Song in mind, we notice how both works use the language of royalty and beauty to speak of love. The bridegroom is a king, and the bride is a queen. The ordinary becomes extraordinary. A wedding is a picture of how God loves his people.

The psalm closes with a promise concerning the king's name: "Nations will praise you forever." The love story of the king extends to the nations. What began as a royal wedding becomes a universal blessing.

Read with the whole Bible, the psalm points to Christ the King and his bride the church, a love that began in a promise and ends in a wedding feast. The wisdom books end with love, which is the end of wisdom: knowing and being known by God.

STEP 5

Connection

Ephesians 5:25-27 says that Christ loved the church and gave himself for her, "that he might present the church to himself in splendor." Revelation 19:7-8 shows the bride arrayed in fine linen, bright and pure. Revelation 21:2 pictures the New Jerusalem "prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Hebrews 1:8-9 quotes verses 6 and 7 of this psalm of the Son. Jesus is the Bridegroom (Mark 2:19-20).

STEP 6

Application

Read verse 10 as a call to give your first loyalty to Christ. What does "forget your father's house" mean for you?

Thank God that the Bridegroom desires his people.

Think about how the church is being prepared for the wedding. How can you take part?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what fills your heart as you think of the King and his bride.

Ask him to teach you to give Christ your first loyalty.

Ask him to prepare his church for his coming.

Meditation

Today there is no new reading. Today is for review and reflection on what you have learned in Unit 10.

Begin by memorizing the verse above if you have not already. Say it aloud several times, then try writing it from memory. These verses have been the anchor of this unit, and they sum up the instruction of the wisdom books.

"Trust in the LORD with all your heart." Wisdom begins with trust, not with technique. In Proverbs, we saw that the fear of the LORD is the beginning of wisdom. Trust is the same posture seen from the inside. We believe that God is good and that he knows what he is doing.

"And do not lean on your own understanding." Ecclesiastes shows what happens when we do. The Preacher explored the world with all his intelligence and found it a vapor. Psalm 73 shows a man who nearly fell because he trusted what he saw. The way that seems right to a man ends in death. Our understanding is not useless, but it cannot be our final authority.

"In all your ways acknowledge him." Not only in church, but in work, money, marriage, friendships, speech, and decisions. This is the lived side of wisdom: bringing God into everything.

“And he will make straight your paths.” This is a promise. It does not say the path will be easy. It says that God will direct it. The Song of Solomon reminds us that his love is stronger than death. The Preacher ends with fear God and keep his commandments. The Psalms say that God holds our right hand.

Think of Christ, who trusted the Father perfectly and did not lean on his own understanding, and who is himself the wisdom of God. In him, the paths of all who trust are made straight.

Unit Recap

In Unit 10 you have read the wisdom books of the Old Testament: Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and the Song of Solomon, along with Psalms 19, 45, 49, 73, and a long journey through Psalm 119. If the story of Israel’s history showed how God rules his people, these books show how to live in the world God made.

Proverbs opened with the fear of the LORD as the beginning of knowledge, and called the reader to choose between the way of Wisdom and the way of Folly. You read the father’s instruction to his son, the warnings about adultery, laziness, and bad company, and the beautiful alternative of faithful love. You read Wisdom’s own speech in chapter 8, where she stands beside God at creation, a poetic picture that the New Testament sees fulfilled in Christ. You read hundreds of sayings on speech, work, friendship, justice, generosity, and pride, and saw that God holds human plans in his hand. The book ended with Agur’s humility and the portrait of the excellent wife, whose praise rests on the fear of the LORD.

Ecclesiastes asked the hard questions. The Preacher looked at life under the sun and found it a breath. He tried pleasure, work, and wisdom, and found that death comes to all. Yet he did not despair. He called us to receive life as a gift from God, to enjoy and to work, and to remember that God will bring every deed into judgment. His conclusion was simple: fear God and keep his commandments. Psalms 49 and 73 gave the hope the Preacher could only glimpse: God will ransom the soul from Sheol, and he himself is our portion.

The Song of Solomon celebrated love between husband and wife as a good gift from God, and a picture of the love between Christ and his church. Its great declaration was that love is strong as death. Psalm 119 offered a long meditation on the word of God as a lamp, honey, and light. And Psalm 45 closed the unit with the royal wedding.

Together these books teach that God is not only the Lord of history but the Lord of ordinary life. They also leave us longing for the one in whom all wisdom dwells.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What is the “fear of the LORD” and why is it the beginning of wisdom?

Look back at Proverbs 1:7, 9:10, and the closing of Ecclesiastes. The fear of the LORD is reverent trust: taking God seriously as God. Write a few sentences describing what it means, and how it differs from terror. Why is it the starting point rather than an add-on? How does the cross show both the reason to fear and the reason to trust?

How does Ecclesiastes’s conclusion answer the problem of vanity?

Recall the Preacher’s long exploration of work, pleasure, wealth, and wisdom, and his verdict that all is a breath. Then recall his final words: fear God and keep his commandments, for God will bring every deed into judgment. Write about how this conclusion answers the problem. Where is the hope in the book, and where does it point beyond itself to Christ?

How does Wisdom in Proverbs 8 point us toward Christ?

Look at Proverbs 8:22-31, where Wisdom speaks of being beside God as a master workman at creation. Compare it with John 1:1-3, Colossians 1:15-17, and 1 Corinthians 1:24. Write a few sentences on how the New Testament reads this passage, and what it means that Christ is the wisdom of God. How does this change how you seek wisdom?

What is the Song of Solomon ultimately about, and how should we read it?

Think about the Song as a celebration of married love, and then about the church’s long tradition of seeing in it a picture of Christ and his people. Look at Ephesians 5:25-32. Write a few sentences on how both readings can be held together. What does the Song teach about the goodness of desire, the value of covenant, and the strength of love?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for what the wisdom books have taught you.

DAY 334 · WEEK 48

1 Kings 12:1-14:20

The kingdom divides; Jeroboam's golden calves

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 62 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 12:1-14:20. The kingdom splits in two, and Jeroboam makes a fateful religious decision. Read the account of Rehoboam's choice and Jeroboam's golden calves carefully, because this sin will be named again and again through the rest of Kings.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Solomon is dead, and his son Rehoboam goes to Shechem to be confirmed as king. The northern tribes ask for relief from the heavy labor and taxes Solomon imposed. What Rehoboam decides will tear the kingdom apart, as God had said through the prophet Ahijah. Around 930 BC, the nation splits into the northern kingdom of Israel under Jeroboam and the southern kingdom of Judah under Rehoboam. This begins the story of the divided kingdom.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The people say, "Your father made our yoke heavy. Now therefore lighten the hard service of your father" (12:4).
2. Rehoboam rejects the counsel of the old men who served Solomon and follows the young men (12:6-14).
3. "My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add to your yoke. My father disciplined you with whips, but I will discipline you with scorpions" (12:14).
4. "What portion do we have in David? We have no inheritance in the son of Jesse. To your tents, O Israel!" (12:16).
5. "So Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David to this day" (12:19).

6. Jeroboam says in his heart, “If this people go up to offer sacrifices in the temple of the LORD at Jerusalem, then the heart of this people will turn again to their lord” (12:26-27).
7. He makes two golden calves and says, “Behold your gods, O Israel, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt” (12:28).
8. “And this thing became a sin” (12:30).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The narrator is clear that the split was God’s doing: “It was a turn of affairs brought about by the LORD.” It was judgment on Solomon’s idolatry. But that does not excuse Rehoboam. He had the chance to serve. The old men told him, “If you will be a servant to this people today and serve them… they will be your servants forever.” It was wise advice, and it is the way of a true king. But Rehoboam chose arrogance over service, the way of Pharaoh rather than of a shepherd. A proud word split a nation.

Jeroboam received a promise. Through Ahijah, God had said that if he walked in God’s ways, he would have “an enduring house, as I built for David.” It was a remarkable offer. But Jeroboam did not trust it. He feared that if the people went to Jerusalem to worship, they would go back to Rehoboam. So he set up his own religion for political reasons: two golden calves at Bethel and Dan, his own priests, and his own festival. “He had devised from his own heart.” It was convenient, efficient, and idolatrous.

This is the “sin of Jeroboam,” and it becomes the measuring stick for every northern king after him. Notice what he did. He took the story of the exodus, “who brought you up out of the land of Egypt,” and attached it to a calf. He did not reject the LORD. He reshaped worship to suit his needs. It is a warning about religion that is designed for convenience or politics. When we decide how God should be worshiped, we are no longer following him.

Chapter 13 shows the seriousness. A man of God from Judah prophesies against the altar, but he is deceived by an old prophet and killed by a lion. The message is that obedience to God’s word must be complete. And chapter 14 ends with the death of Jeroboam’s son and the prophecy that God will “give Israel up because of the sins of Jeroboam, which he sinned and made Israel to sin.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the king who came not to be served but to serve (Mark 10:45), where Rehoboam threatened scorpions. He is the true shepherd, who united what was divided: “He himself is our peace, who has made us both one” (Ephesians 2:14). Jesus said that true worshipers “will worship the Father in spirit and in truth" (John 4:23-24), not in a religion of our own devising. Paul warns of a religion of "self-made" worship (Colossians 2:23).

STEP 6

Application

Ask where you are tempted to answer pressure with pride instead of service.

Consider whether you have shaped your faith around convenience rather than God's word.

Pray for the unity of Christ's church, divided in many ways.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you from Rehoboam's pride and Jeroboam's convenient religion.

Ask him to teach you to serve and not to rule harshly.

Ask him to help you worship him as he has revealed.

DAY 335 · WEEK 48

1 Kings 14:21-16:34

A succession of unfaithful kings; Ahab and Jezebel

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 14:21-16:34. The narrative moves quickly through a series of kings in Judah and Israel. Notice the repeated formulas, and slow down at the arrival of Ahab and Jezebel.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

In the decades after the split, the books of Kings tell the story of both kingdoms side by side. The author uses a formula for each king: when he began to reign, how long he reigned, and a verdict on whether he did right or evil in the eyes of the LORD. In the south, Rehoboam, Abijam, and Asa reign. In the north, a succession of kings, with coups and civil war, leads to Omri and then to his son Ahab.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Judah under Rehoboam did evil: they built high places, pillars, and Asherim, and there were male cult prostitutes in the land (14:22-24).
2. Shishak king of Egypt attacks Jerusalem and takes the treasures of the temple (14:25-26).
3. “For David’s sake the LORD his God gave him a lamp in Jerusalem” (15:4).
4. “Asa did what was right in the eyes of the LORD, as David his father had done” (15:11).
5. Asa removes idols and his own mother’s position as queen mother, but “the high places were not taken away” (15:12-14).
6. Northern kings rise and fall: Nadab, Baasha, Elah, Zimri, Omri, each “walking in the way of Jeroboam” (15:25-16:28).

7. “Ahab the son of Omri did evil in the sight of the LORD, more than all who were before him” (16:30).
8. He married Jezebel, daughter of the king of Sidon, “and went and served Baal and worshiped him” (16:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The summaries can seem repetitive, but the repetition teaches. In the north, king after king “walked in the way of Jeroboam.” No dynasty lasts. Baasha kills Nadab. Zimri kills Elah and reigns seven days before burning his own palace. Omri comes to power. The northern kingdom is unstable because it is built on a false foundation. Without the Davidic promise, it has no secure line.

In the south, the pattern is different. Even when kings are bad, there is a recurring phrase: “for David’s sake the LORD gave him a lamp in Jerusalem.” God’s faithfulness to the covenant with David continues. A lamp is a small light, but it does not go out. Judah’s survival, in spite of its unfaithful kings, is a sign of grace.

Asa stands out as a reformer. He removes idols and even deposes his grandmother for making an image of Asherah. It is a costly act of obedience. But his reform is incomplete, because the high places remain. And later, when threatened by Baasha, Asa will turn to a foreign king rather than to the LORD (2 Chronicles 16). Even the best kings have limits.

Chapter 16 introduces the worst. Ahab is described as doing evil “more than all who were before him.” The narrator says it was a “light thing” for him to walk in the sins of Jeroboam. He went further and married Jezebel, a Sidonian princess devoted to Baal, and built a temple and altar for Baal in Samaria. The northern kingdom is now officially committed to a foreign god of storms and fertility.

The chapter ends with a detail that reaches back to Joshua. Hiel of Bethel rebuilds Jericho “at the cost of Abiram his firstborn,” fulfilling Joshua’s curse. God’s word does not fail. The same word that brought the walls down still stands.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the Davidic king whose light is not a small lamp but the light of the world (John 8:12). Where the kings of Israel and Judah failed one after another, he is the one faithful king. Matthew 6:24 states that no one can serve two masters, a truth Ahab’s reign illustrated. 1 John 5:21 says, “Little children, keep yourselves from idols.”

STEP 6

Application

Ask what “high places” remain in your life, areas you have not fully surrendered.

Thank God for the lamp he keeps burning for his promises.

Consider how easily “light things” become heavy. What small compromise do you tolerate?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for keeping a lamp burning for the sake of his promise.

Ask him to keep you from half-obedience and the high places you leave standing.

Ask him to help you serve him alone.

THE READING

Today's reading

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Trust in the LORD with all your heart, and do not lean on your own understanding. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths."

PROVERBS 3:5-6

REST

Meditation

You memorized this verse in the last unit. Today, return to it with the opening of the divided kingdom in mind.

Rehoboam leaned on his own understanding. He took the counsel of his young friends and refused the advice of the elders. The result was a torn nation. Jeroboam leaned on his own understanding too. He feared losing his people and invented a new religion. The result was a sin that haunted a kingdom for two hundred years. Both are living illustrations of what happens when we do not trust the LORD with all our heart.

The verse does not say that thinking is bad. It says that our own understanding is not the final guide. We are limited. We cannot see the future. We cannot see the heart of another. We cannot be sure of our own motives. When we rest our whole weight on what seems wise to us, we are in danger.

“In all your ways acknowledge him.” Rehoboam did not consult God. He did not ask. Jeroboam did not ask either. He worked out a plan that made sense politically. But acknowledging the LORD means bringing him into the decision, before we act. It means asking, “What has God said?”

“And he will make straight your paths.” Note that this is a promise for those who trust. God will direct the paths. This is a comfort for anyone who has made a mess of things. It is not too late to begin trusting.

Hold this verse as the unit moves into a darker period. In a time of idolatry and violence, the way to stay faithful is not to rely on our own cleverness but on the LORD.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week the united kingdom of David and Solomon came apart. You read of Rehoboam’s proud answer and Jeroboam’s golden calves, and the sin of Jeroboam that became the standard of evil for the northern kings. You saw how God kept a lamp for David’s sake in Jerusalem, even as Judah’s kings failed. You followed the quick succession of northern kings, with their coups, until Ahab and Jezebel brought Baal worship into the heart of Israel. The week taught that a proud word can tear a nation, that convenient religion is idolatry, and that God keeps his promises to David even when his people do not keep theirs.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Rehoboam refused the counsel of the elders. Who are the wise people in your life, and are you listening to them?

God kept a lamp burning for David’s sake even when Judah’s kings failed. How does Christ, the true Son of David, give you confidence that God keeps his promises?

Jeroboam designed a religion that was convenient. Where are you tempted to adjust your faith to fit your comfort?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God you trust him with all your heart, and name one thing you lean on yourself for.

Thank him for keeping his promises to David and for Christ the true king.

Rest in him today.

DAY 337 · WEEK 49

Psalm 42

As a deer pants for flowing streams

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 42. It is the cry of a person who longs for God in a time of depression and exile. Pay attention to how the psalmist talks to his own soul.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 42 opens Book II of the Psalter and is attributed to the sons of Korah. The psalmist is far from the temple, "from the land of Jordan and of Hermon," in the far north. He is cut off from worship and surrounded by taunts. Placed here, at the beginning of the divided kingdom, it speaks for believers who feel the loss of the true worship of God. Psalms 42 and 43 are really one poem with a repeated refrain.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "As a deer pants for flowing streams, so pants my soul for you, O God" (v. 1).
2. "My soul thirsts for God, for the living God. When shall I come and appear before God?" (v. 2).
3. "My tears have been my food day and night, while they say to me all the day long, Where is your God?" (v. 3).
4. "These things I remember, as I pour out my soul: how I would go with the throng and lead them in procession to the house of God" (v. 4).
5. "Why are you cast down, O my soul, and why are you in turmoil within me? Hope in God; for I shall again praise him, my salvation and my God" (v. 5).
6. "Deep calls to deep at the roar of your waterfalls; all your breakers and your waves have gone over me" (v. 7).

7. “By day the LORD commands his steadfast love, and at night his song is with me, a prayer to the God of my life” (v. 8).

8. “I say to God, my rock: Why have you forgotten me?” (v. 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with one of the most beautiful images in the Bible: a deer in a drought, panting for water. The word “pants” conveys urgency. The animal’s life depends on finding a stream. The psalmist’s soul feels the same need for God. It is not a mild interest in religion. It is a thirst that cannot be satisfied by anything else.

The cause of his pain is twofold. First, he is cut off from the community of worshipers. He remembers going with the crowd to the house of God, with shouts of joy and thanksgiving. Now it is only a memory. Second, he faces mockery: “Where is your God?” The question is cruel because the psalmist himself half wonders. In times of suffering, God’s absence feels real.

What the psalmist does next is crucial. He talks to himself. “Why are you cast down, O my soul?” He does not simply give in to his feelings. He questions them. He addresses his soul as a person to be instructed. And he gives it an instruction: “Hope in God.” The refrain appears three times in Psalms 42 and 43, as though the psalmist must say it over and over. Faith is sometimes a matter of preaching to oneself.

Verse 7 is one of the most haunting: “Deep calls to deep.” The waves of trouble come one after another, and he feels submerged. But even there, God has not left. “By day the LORD commands his steadfast love, and at night his song is with me.” In the midst of the flood, there is a song. The psalmist does not claim to feel better, but he affirms where hope lies.

He does not hide the hard question: “Why have you forgotten me?” Honest prayer includes honest questions. And he answers them not with explanations but with the refrain: “Hope in God.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “If anyone thirsts, let him come to me and drink” (John 7:37), and he promised the woman at the well living water (John 4:10-14). He experienced forsakenness on the cross for our sake (Matthew 27:46). Revelation 7:17 promises that the Lamb “will guide them to springs of living water.” Peter calls us to hope in God through Christ (1 Peter 1:21). Jesus himself said, “My soul is very sorrowful” (Matthew 26:38).

STEP 6

Application

Preach to yourself today. Take the refrain, “Hope in God,” and speak it to your soul.

Remember a time of joyful worship, and let it feed your longing.

Bring your honest question, “Why?” to God. Do not stop at the question; add the hope.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what your soul thirsts for.
- Ask him to teach you to hope in him when you are cast down.
- Ask him for his steadfast love by day and song by night.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 49

1 KINGS 18:39

DAY 338 · WEEK 49

Psalm 43

Send out your light and your truth

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 5 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 43. It is the second half of the poem you began yesterday. Notice how the psalmist asks for light and truth, and how he moves toward the altar of God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 43 has no title in the Hebrew, and many manuscripts join it with Psalm 42 as a single poem. It shares the same refrain. The first psalm described the longing, and this psalm makes the request. The psalmist is surrounded by deceitful people, and he asks God to vindicate him and bring him back to worship.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “Vindicate me, O God, and defend my cause against an ungodly people” (v. 1).
2. “From the deceitful and unjust man deliver me!” (v. 1).
3. “For you are the God in whom I take refuge; why have you rejected me?” (v. 2).
4. “Why do I go about mourning because of the oppression of the enemy?” (v. 2).
5. “Send out your light and your truth; let them lead me; let them bring me to your holy hill and to your dwelling!” (v. 3).
6. “Then I will go to the altar of God, to God my exceeding joy” (v. 4).
7. “And I will praise you with the lyre, O God, my God” (v. 4).
8. “Why are you cast down, O my soul, and why are you in turmoil within me? Hope in God; for I shall again praise him, my salvation and my God” (v. 5).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Where Psalm 42 was a lament, Psalm 43 is a petition. The psalmist asks God to be his advocate. He is in the middle of a case, and he wants God to judge between him and his enemies. He does not take revenge. He asks for vindication, for God to set things right.

Verse 2 repeats the question from Psalm 42:9: "Why have you rejected me?" The psalmist is honest about how it feels. He knows that God is his refuge, and yet he feels abandoned. The two statements sit side by side. This is not contradiction. It is the real experience of believers who have faith but not yet sight.

Verse 3 is the center of the poem: "Send out your light and your truth." The psalmist treats God's light and truth as if they were two messengers who could be dispatched to lead him. They are personified, almost like angels. Light shows the way, and truth keeps him from deception. He needs both. When surrounded by lies, he asks for truth. When in darkness, he asks for light.

Where do they lead? To God's holy hill, his dwelling place. The psalmist's goal is not just rescue but worship. He wants to return to the altar and to "God my exceeding joy." Literally, "the gladness of my joy." God himself is the source of the psalmist's deepest happiness. He wants to be where God is.

The refrain returns for a third time. It is almost stubborn. "Hope in God; for I shall again praise him." The "again" is important. The psalmist is confident that the dry time will end and that praise will return.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the light and truth that God sent. "I am the light of the world" (John 8:12) and "I am the way, and the truth, and the life" (John 14:6). "Grace and truth came through Jesus Christ" (John 1:17). Hebrews 10:19-22 shows that through Christ we have access to God's presence, the "altar" the psalmist longed for. Jesus is our advocate with the Father (1 John 2:1).

STEP 6

Application

Pray verse 3 for a specific situation: "Send out your light and your truth."

Ask God to lead you to his dwelling, to a deeper experience of worship.

Say the refrain aloud, "Hope in God," and add "for I shall again praise him."

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to send out his light and truth to lead you.
- Tell him that he is your exceeding joy.
- Tell your soul to hope in him.

1 Kings 17:1-19:21

Elijah, drought, Zarephath, Carmel, Horeb

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 17:1-19:21. These are the great chapters about Elijah: the drought, the widow of Zarephath, the showdown on Mount Carmel, and the quiet voice on Mount Horeb. Read them slowly, and pay attention to what God does at each stage.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Under Ahab and Jezebel, Baal worship has been established as the official religion in Israel. Baal was a Canaanite storm and fertility god, credited with sending rain. Into this setting steps Elijah the Tishbite, a prophet from Gilead. His name means "my God is Yahweh." He announces a drought, and the confrontation is on: which God controls the rain?

STEP 3

Observation

1. "As the LORD, the God of Israel, lives, before whom I stand, there shall be neither dew nor rain these years, except by my word" (17:1).
2. The LORD sends Elijah to the brook Cherith, where ravens bring him bread and meat (17:2-6).
3. At Zarephath, a widow gives Elijah her last meal, and "the jar of flour was not spent, neither did the jug of oil become empty" (17:8-16).
4. Elijah raises the widow's son, and she says, "Now I know that you are a man of God, and that the word of the LORD in your mouth is truth" (17:17-24).
5. "How long will you go limping between two different opinions? If the LORD is God, follow him; but if Baal, then follow him" (18:21).

6. Baal's prophets cry out from morning to evening, but "there was no voice. No one answered" (18:26-29).
7. "Then the fire of the LORD fell and consumed the burnt offering"; the people said, "The LORD, he is God; the LORD, he is God" (18:38-39).
8. At Horeb, God is not in the wind, earthquake, or fire, but in "a low whisper" (19:11-12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The drought is a direct challenge to Baal. The god of the storm cannot bring rain, and the LORD controls the weather. But the first part of Elijah's ministry takes place away from the public eye. He hides at Cherith, fed by ravens, and then goes to Zarephath, in Sidon, the homeland of Jezebel. The God of Israel is caring for a foreign widow and her son, and showing that his power reaches beyond Israel. Jesus will point to this very story (Luke 4:25-26).

The showdown at Carmel is the center of the passage. Elijah does not ask the people for loyalty to God alone. He asks them to decide: "How long will you go limping between two opinions?" Divided loyalty is not neutrality. It is a form of unfaithfulness. The contest is simple. The god who answers by fire is God. Baal's prophets cry and cut themselves all day. Nothing happens. Elijah mocks them, "Cry aloud, for he is a god." Then he rebuilds the LORD's altar with twelve stones, representing all Israel, soaks it with water three times, and prays a short prayer. Fire falls. The people declare, "The LORD, he is God."

Then comes an odd turn. After the greatest victory of his life, Elijah runs in fear from Jezebel's threat. He sits under a broom tree and asks to die. "It is enough; now, O LORD, take my life." The prophet who stood boldly on Carmel is now exhausted, depressed, and alone. God's response is gentle. He lets Elijah sleep and sends an angel with food. The first thing God offers is rest and a meal.

At Horeb, the same mountain where Moses met God, Elijah expects power. Wind, earthquake, and fire pass, but the LORD is not in them. Then a low whisper. The God of fire is also the God of the quiet voice. And he tells Elijah that he is not alone: seven thousand in Israel have not bowed to Baal. He gives him work to do, including calling Elisha.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus cited the widow of Zarephath in his first sermon (Luke 4:25-26). John the Baptist came "in the spirit and power of Elijah" (Luke 1:17), and Jesus said Elijah had already come (Matthew 17:11-13). Jesus fed the five thousand, a greater miracle of provision. He raised a widow's son at Nain (Luke 7:11-17). At the transfiguration, Elijah appeared with Moses to speak with Jesus (Luke 9:30). Romans 11:2-5 uses the story of the seven thousand to show that God always keeps a remnant.

STEP 6

Application

Where are you limping between two opinions? Make your decision today.

If you are exhausted after a hard season, remember that God first gave Elijah food and sleep.

Listen for the low whisper of God in the quiet today.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep you from limping between two opinions.
- Tell him where you are weary, and ask him to feed and rest you.
- Listen for his whisper and tell him what you hear.

DAY 340 · WEEK 49

1 Kings 20:1-22:53

Ahab's wars; Naboth's vineyard; Jehoshaphat

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 103 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 1 Kings 20:1-22:53. Ahab's wars with Syria, the story of Naboth's vineyard, and the death of Ahab are told here. Notice the way God uses prophets to confront the king, and the key difference between the true prophet Micaiah and the 400 who tell the king what he wants to hear.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

After Carmel, Ahab remains king, and the chapters that follow show him at war with Syria and in conflict with the prophets. The story of Naboth's vineyard is one of the most disturbing accounts of abuse of power in Scripture. The section ends with an alliance between Ahab and Jehoshaphat, the godly king of Judah, and a battle at Ramoth-gilead where Ahab dies.

STEP 3

Observation

1. A prophet tells Ahab that God will give him victory over the Syrians "that you may know that I am the LORD" (20:13).
2. The Syrians say, "The LORD is a god of the hills but he is not a god of the valleys," and God defeats them again (20:28).
3. Ahab spares Ben-hadad, and a prophet says, "Your life shall be for his life" (20:34-42).
4. Naboth refuses to sell his vineyard: "The LORD forbid that I should give you the inheritance of my fathers" (21:3).
5. Jezebel arranges false witnesses and has Naboth stoned (21:5-14).
6. Elijah confronts Ahab: "Have you killed and also taken possession?" (21:19).

7. Ahab humbles himself, and God delays the disaster (21:27-29).
8. The prophet Micaiah says, “As the LORD lives, what the LORD says to me, that I will speak” (22:14).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 20 shows God’s patience with Ahab. Twice he gives him victory over a stronger enemy, so that Ahab will know that God is the LORD. The Syrians’ belief that the LORD is a god of the hills only is corrected. His power is not limited by geography. Yet Ahab fails to follow through, making a treaty with a man God had devoted to destruction.

Chapter 21 shows what power does when it ignores God. Ahab wants a vineyard. Naboth refuses on principle: it is his family’s inheritance, given under the covenant law (Leviticus 25:23). Ahab goes home to sulk. Jezebel takes over, forges letters, arranges a show trial with false witnesses, and Naboth is killed. The scene mimics a legal process while committing murder. When Ahab comes to take the vineyard, Elijah is waiting. “Have you killed and also taken possession?” This is one of the great confrontations of the Bible. A prophet stands against a king to defend the rights of a poor man.

Naboth’s story shows that God cares about justice, property, and truth. The abuse of the weak by the powerful is not outside his concern. The prophets will return to this theme in Amos and Micah, which you will read later in this unit.

The most surprising detail is that Ahab humbles himself when he hears the judgment. He tears his clothes and fasts. And God sees it, and delays the disaster to the next generation. The mercy of God is wide. Even a wicked man’s partial repentance is noticed.

In chapter 22, Ahab asks 400 prophets whether to go to battle. They all say yes. Jehoshaphat asks, “Is there not here another prophet of the LORD?” Micaiah is the one prophet who says what God says, and it is bad news. He stands alone against the crowd. The story ends with Ahab disguised in battle, struck by a random arrow, and dying as the prophets said. The word of the LORD stands.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus, too, stood alone before a crowd and spoke the truth. He defended the vulnerable and confronted powerful men (Matthew 23). The false witnesses at Naboth’s trial recall the false witnesses against Jesus (Matthew 26:59-61). Jesus said, “Woe to you when all people speak well of you, for so their fathers did to the false prophets” (Luke 6:26). Hebrews 11:36-38 speaks of the faithful who suffered for the truth.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether you are listening to the voices that tell you what you want to hear.

Think about someone who has less power than you. Are you protecting them?

Speak the truth in love this week, even when it is costly.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God that he sees the poor and hears the cry of the wronged.

Ask him for the courage of Micaiah to speak what he says.

Ask him to keep you from the chorus of flatterers.

DAY 341 · WEEK 49

2 Kings 1:1-2:25

Elijah taken up; Elisha receives the mantle

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 43 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 1:1-2:25. Elijah's ministry ends in a whirlwind, and Elisha takes up his mantle. Notice the careful details about the crossing of the Jordan and the request for a double portion.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The book of 2 Kings begins where 1 Kings ended, with Ahab's death and his son Ahaziah on the throne. Elijah's final acts include a confrontation over consulting a foreign god. Then the narrative turns to the transition from Elijah to Elisha, one of the most dramatic passages in the Old Testament. The crossing of the Jordan recalls Joshua and the exodus.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Ahaziah sends messengers to inquire of Baal-zebub, and Elijah says, "Is it because there is no God in Israel that you are going to inquire of Baal-zebub?" (1:3).
2. Fire falls from heaven on two companies of fifty, but the third captain pleads for his life (1:9-15).
3. Elijah and Elisha cross the Jordan on dry ground when Elijah strikes the water with his cloak (2:8).
4. Elisha says, "Please let there be a double portion of your spirit on me" (2:9).
5. "And behold, chariots of fire and horses of fire separated the two of them. And Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven" (2:11).
6. Elisha cries, "My father, my father! The chariots of Israel and its horsemen!" (2:12).

7. Elisha takes up Elijah's cloak and asks, "Where is the LORD, the God of Elijah?" and strikes the water, and it parts (2:13-14).

8. The sons of the prophets say, "The spirit of Elijah rests on Elisha" (2:15).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 1 shows once again the foolishness of seeking help from other gods. Ahaziah is ill and sends to Baal-zebub, the god of Ekron. The question Elijah asks is blunt: "Is it because there is no God in Israel?" It is a rebuke to all who treat the true God as one option among many. The fire episode is dramatic and shows the seriousness of opposing God's prophet. The third captain's humble approach is the one that finds mercy.

Chapter 2 is the high point. Elijah is about to be taken, and Elisha will not leave him. Three times Elijah tells him to stay behind, and three times Elisha refuses. His loyalty and persistence are remarkable. When Elijah asks what he can do for him, Elisha does not ask for wealth or safety. He asks for a double portion of Elijah's spirit, the share of the firstborn son. He wants to be Elijah's heir and to continue his ministry.

The departure of Elijah is one of two times in the Old Testament that someone is taken to heaven without dying (the other is Enoch). Chariots and horses of fire appear, a vision of the heavenly army. Elisha's cry, "My father, my father!" acknowledges Elijah as a spiritual father and as Israel's real defense. The chariots of Israel are not its armies but its prophets.

Then Elisha takes the cloak, steps to the Jordan, and asks the question that sums up the whole passage: "Where is the LORD, the God of Elijah?" The prophet is gone, but God remains. The waters part. Elisha is not Elijah, but the same God is with him.

The chapter ends with a hard episode: boys mock Elisha and are attacked by bears. This is not about baldness. It is about contempt for God's prophet, and the seriousness of mocking God's word.

STEP 5

Connection

John the Baptist came in the spirit and power of Elijah (Luke 1:17). Jesus ascended into heaven, taken up before the eyes of his disciples (Acts 1:9-11), and sent the Spirit on them. The "double portion" finds its fulfillment at Pentecost. Hebrews 2:2-4 warns against ignoring a greater salvation. Jesus crossed from death to life and opened the way for all his people.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether you want a double portion of God's Spirit, and what you would do with it.

Practice Elisha's persistence in following a spiritual mentor.

When someone you depend on is taken from you, ask, "Where is the LORD, the God of Elijah?" and trust that he remains.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to give you a hunger for his Spirit.

Thank him that he remains when those who guide you are gone.

Ask him to keep you from mocking what he sends.

Moab defeated; Elisha's miracles begin

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 56 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 3:1-4:44. Elisha's ministry begins with the defeat of Moab and a series of miracles of provision and restoration. Look for how these miracles echo the work of Elijah and anticipate the work of Jesus.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Elisha begins his ministry under King Jehoram of Israel, son of Ahab. A coalition of Israel, Judah, and Edom marches against Moab and nearly dies of thirst. Elisha is called, and God provides. Chapter 4 follows with four miracles in the lives of ordinary people: a widow's oil, a Shunammite woman's son, a poisoned stew, and a feeding of one hundred men.

STEP 3

Observation

1. The three kings are without water, and Jehoshaphat asks, "Is there no prophet of the LORD here, through whom we may inquire of the LORD?" (3:11).
2. Elisha says, "You shall not see wind or rain, but that streambed shall be filled with water" (3:17).
3. The Moabite king sacrifices his son on the wall, and "there came great wrath against Israel" (3:27).
4. A widow cries, "Your servant my husband is dead… and the creditor has come to take my two children," and Elisha multiplies her oil (4:1-7).
5. A woman of Shunem builds a room for Elisha, and God gives her a son (4:8-17).
6. The boy dies, and the woman says, "It is well," and Elisha raises him (4:18-37).

7. Elisha purifies a poisoned stew: “Then bring flour... and there was no harm in the pot” (4:38-41).

8. He feeds a hundred men with twenty loaves, “For thus says the LORD, They shall eat and have some left” (4:42-44).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 3 shows God’s mercy to a flawed alliance. Jehoram is no friend of the LORD, but because of Jehoshaphat, Elisha speaks. The water arrives not by rain but by a miracle, and in the morning the sun on the water looks like blood to the Moabites. The victory is God’s gift. The ending is strange and grim: the king of Moab sacrifices his own son, and Israel withdraws. The chapter shows how dark pagan religion could be.

Chapter 4 turns to the ordinary lives of the poor. The widow is about to lose her sons to a creditor. She has only a jar of oil. Elisha tells her to borrow empty vessels, as many as she can, and the oil flows until all the jars are full. God’s provision is limited only by her faith and the number of jars. It is a picture of grace that meets need and overflows.

The Shunammite woman is a model of hospitality. She sees that Elisha is a holy man and builds a small room for him. When she receives a promise of a son, she is incredulous. And when the boy dies, she says, “It is well.” Her faith is mixed with grief, but she goes straight to the man of God. Elisha stretches himself over the boy and he lives. It is the first account of resurrection in the Old Testament after Elijah’s raising of the widow’s son.

The last two miracles are simple. Death in the pot is turned to food, and a small gift of bread feeds a hundred men with some left over. The theme is the same: in a land of famine and idolatry, God’s word brings life and provision. The “sons of the prophets” are fed because of the faithfulness of a few.

Elisha’s miracles are works of mercy. They are directed at the vulnerable. They show what kind of God the LORD is: one who sees the needs of the poor.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus did every one of these miracles on a larger scale. He fed the five thousand with five loaves and two fish, “and they all ate and were satisfied” (Luke 9:12-17). He raised a widow’s son (Luke 7:11-17), and Jairus’s daughter (Luke 8:49-56). He turned water into wine (John 2). He said, “I am the bread of life” (John 6:35). Elisha’s miracles point to the One who has power over death and hunger.

STEP 6

Application

Ask God to show you your “empty jars,” places where you need his provision. Bring them in faith.

Practice hospitality, as the Shunammite did. Whom can you welcome?

When you face a loss, say with the Shunammite, “It is well,” as an act of trust, even through grief.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what vessels in your life feel empty.
- Ask him to teach you hospitality.
- Thank him that you can say “It is well” in sorrow.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And when all the people saw it, they fell on their faces and said, The LORD, he is God; the LORD, he is God."

1 KINGS 18:39

REST

Meditation

This is the people's response on Mount Carmel after fire falls from heaven. It is a simple confession, repeated for emphasis, and it is the heart of what the prophets were sent to say.

"When all the people saw it." They had been standing on the fence. Elijah asked them how long they would go limping between two opinions, and they had said nothing. Now they see. God does not always answer prayer with fire from heaven, but when he acts, his people recognize it.

"They fell on their faces." This is the posture of worship and of surrender. It is not a casual nod of agreement. They are overwhelmed. They realize that they have been wrong.

"The LORD, he is God." This is the confession that Israel was made for. The Hebrew is emphatic: Yahweh, he is the God. It echoes the Shema: "The LORD our God, the LORD is one." And it echoes Elijah's own name, "My God is Yahweh." All of Elijah's mission is encapsulated in this sentence.

"The LORD, he is God." The repetition is the people's way of saying it with their whole heart. They say it twice because they cannot say it enough.

In the days of the divided kingdom, the question was always, "Who is God?" Baal or the LORD? Money or the LORD? The king or the LORD? The same question faces us. This verse is an invitation to make the confession again. Not just once, but daily. The LORD, he is God. Christ is Lord (Philippians 2:11). Say it when you are tempted to serve something else.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed the divided kingdom into the age of Elijah and Elisha. You read Psalms 42 and 43, the cry of a soul thirsting for God, with the refrain "Hope in God." You saw Elijah announce the drought, be fed by ravens, and confront the prophets of Baal on Carmel, where fire fell and the people confessed, "The LORD, he is God." You saw the same prophet, exhausted and afraid, meet God in a low whisper at Horeb. You read the story of Naboth's vineyard, and the lone prophet Micaiah. You watched Elijah taken to heaven and Elisha take up the mantle, and you read the miracles of Elisha for widows, a Shunammite, and the hungry. The week taught that God is the one true God, that he cares for the weak, and that he speaks even in whispers.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Elijah moved from triumph on Carmel to despair under the broom tree. How does God's gentle care of him encourage you in a season of exhaustion?

Elisha's miracles of provision and resurrection point to Jesus, the bread of life and the conqueror of death. Which of these miracles speaks most to a need you have right now?

Naboth was wronged by the powerful, and God sent a prophet to defend him. Who in your world needs someone to speak up for them?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God that the LORD, he is God, and why you say it.

Thank him for answering by fire and speaking in a whisper.

Thank him for caring for the poor and grieving.

DAY 344 · WEEK 50

Psalm 44

We have not forgotten you, communal lament

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 26 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 44. This is a corporate lament, the prayer of a whole people who feel abandoned by God even though they have been faithful. Notice that the psalm does not confess a sin. Read it with those who suffer innocently.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 44 is a psalm of the sons of Korah. It reflects a time of national defeat: the army has been routed, the people scattered, and the nation mocked. We do not know the exact occasion. It fits any period of national humiliation, and it has been prayed by God's people in many centuries. Here, in the age of the divided kingdom, it gives voice to the faithful in a time of judgment.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O God, we have heard with our ears, our fathers have told us, what deeds you performed in their days" (v. 1).
2. "For not by their own sword did they win the land, nor did their own arm save them, but your right hand and your arm" (v. 3).
3. "In God we have boasted continually, and we will give thanks to your name forever" (v. 8).
4. "But you have rejected us and disgraced us and have not gone out with our armies" (v. 9).
5. "You have made us like sheep for slaughter and have scattered us among the nations" (v. 11).

6. “All this has come upon us, though we have not forgotten you, and we have not been false to your covenant” (v. 17).
7. “Yet for your sake we are killed all the day long; we are regarded as sheep to be slaughtered” (v. 22).
8. “Awake! Why are you sleeping, O Lord? Rouse yourself! Do not reject us forever!” (v. 23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with memory. The people recall what God did for their ancestors in the conquest. They know that victory was God’s gift, not their own achievement. This is the foundation of their confidence: God has acted before.

Then comes the shock of verse 9, marked by the word “But.” The God who gave them victory has now rejected them. The psalm describes the defeat in blunt terms. The army is routed. The people are sold for nothing. Neighbors mock. The psalmist feels deep shame.

The most striking feature is the claim of innocence. “All this has come upon us, though we have not forgotten you.” Unlike many laments, there is no confession of sin. The people say that they have been faithful. Whether this is a claim of perfection or a statement about their covenant loyalty in general, the psalm expresses the experience of suffering that is not explained by wrongdoing. The Bible allows for this. Not every hardship is a punishment. Sometimes the righteous suffer, and the psalm lets them say so.

The language of the closing verses is bold. “Awake! Why are you sleeping, O Lord?” It is not irreverence. It is the language of covenant. The people are saying, “You promised to be with us. Where are you?” They have no explanation, only an appeal: “Redeem us for the sake of your steadfast love.” The final plea rests on God’s character. It is not their merit but his covenant love that gives them hope.

Verse 22 is quoted by Paul in Romans 8:36, and he applies it to the experience of believers: “For your sake we are killed all the day long.” He then declares, “In all these things we are more than conquerors through him who loved us.” The psalm’s question is answered in Christ.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes verse 22 in Romans 8:36 and answers the psalm’s cry with the assurance that nothing can separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus (Romans 8:37-39). Jesus is the Lamb led to slaughter (Isaiah 53:7; Acts 8:32). 2 Corinthians 4:8-11 describes the suffering of the faithful. Jesus himself cried, “Why have you forsaken me?” (Matthew 27:46), taking the experience of abandonment on himself.

STEP 6

Application

If you are suffering though you have been faithful, pray this psalm. God hears the cry that does not explain.

Recall what God has done for your ancestors in faith, and tell it to someone younger.

Read Romans 8:31-39 alongside this psalm and hold both.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God what he has done in days of old that you cling to.
- Ask him to rise up and help.
- Thank him that nothing can separate you from his love.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The title of Psalm 60 places it in a time when David fought Aram and Edom, and Joab struck down 12,000 Edomites in the Valley of Salt (see 2 Samuel 8). It reflects an initial defeat before the victory. It follows Psalm 44 as a second corporate lament, but ends with more resolve. It is a prayer of a king and nation that have been shaken.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O God, you have rejected us, broken our defenses; you have been angry; oh, restore us" (v. 1).
2. "You have made the land to quake; you have torn it open; repair its breaches, for it totters" (v. 2).
3. "You have made your people see hard things; you have given us wine to drink that made us stagger" (v. 3).
4. "You have set up a banner for those who fear you, that they may flee to it from the bow" (v. 4).
5. "That your beloved ones may be delivered, give salvation by your right hand and answer us!" (v. 5).
6. "God has spoken in his holiness: With exultation I will divide up Shechem" (v. 6).
7. "Oh grant us help against the foe, for vain is the salvation of man!" (v. 11).

8 “With God we shall do valiantly; it is he who will tread down our foes” (v. 12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with the same bewildering confession as Psalm 44: God has rejected us. But here, the language is of an earthquake. The land has cracked open. The structure of national life is shaking. The psalmist does not blame bad luck or strategy. He sees God’s hand in it. This may seem harsh, but it is also a comfort: if God broke it, God can repair it. “Repair its breaches, for it totters.” The one who allowed the crack is the only one who can mend it.

The image of the wine that makes people stagger is strong. God has made his people drink a cup of reeling. They have “seen hard things.” The Bible does not shy away from the fact that God’s people sometimes go through suffering that disorients them.

Yet verse 4 offers a turn: “You have set up a banner for those who fear you.” A banner is a rallying point in battle. God provides a place to gather. In the midst of defeat, there is a standard to flee to. For those who fear him, he is both the one who shakes and the one who shelters.

Then, in verses 6 to 8, God speaks. His voice cuts through the confusion. He claims Shechem, Succoth, Gilead, Manasseh, Ephraim, and Judah as his. Moab, Edom, and Philistia are described as his washbasin, his sandal, and his subjects. Everything belongs to him. The promise of God’s word is the foundation of the king’s confidence.

The final prayer is one of the best in the Bible for a time of need: “Oh grant us help against the foe, for vain is the salvation of man!” Human help is empty. “With God we shall do valiantly.” The psalm ends in confidence, not because circumstances changed, but because the speaker has remembered who God is.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul says, “If God is for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31). Jesus is the banner raised for the nations (Isaiah 11:10; John 12:32). 2 Corinthians 12:9-10 shows strength made perfect in weakness. Psalm 108:6-13 repeats this psalm’s final section. 1 Corinthians 15:57: “Thanks be to God, who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ.”

STEP 6

Application

If something in your life feels like an earthquake, ask God to repair the breach.

Look for the “banner” God has set up for you, whether it is his word, his church, or his promise.

Pray verse 12 today: “With God we shall do valiantly.”

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to repair what has been shaken in your life.
- Admit that human help is vain, and ask for his.
- Thank him that with him we shall do valiantly.

DAY 346 · WEEK 50

2 Kings 5:1-6:33

Naaman healed; Gehazi's greed; the Syrian siege

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 60 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 5:1-6:33. Naaman the Syrian is healed of leprosy, Gehazi's greed is judged, and Elisha is surrounded by an army and sees a greater one. Read the story of Naaman as a picture of grace that humbles.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Elisha's ministry extends to foreigners. Naaman is a commander of the Syrian army, Israel's enemy, and a leper. Through the witness of a captured Israelite girl, he comes to the prophet. These chapters include one of the Bible's best stories of grace, followed by a sad story of greed, and the account of the Syrian siege of Samaria.

STEP 3

Observation

1. A little Israelite girl says to Naaman's wife, "Would that my lord were with the prophet who is in Samaria! He would cure him of his leprosy" (5:3).
2. Elisha sends a messenger: "Go and wash in the Jordan seven times, and your flesh shall be restored" (5:10).
3. Naaman is angry: "Behold, I thought that he would surely come out to me" (5:11).
4. His servants say, "If the prophet had commanded you to do some great thing, would you not have done it?" (5:13).
5. "His flesh was restored like the flesh of a little child, and he was clean" (5:14).
6. Naaman says, "Behold, I know that there is no God in all the earth but in Israel" (5:15).
7. Gehazi takes a gift Elisha refused, and Naaman's leprosy clings to him (5:20-27).
8. "Do not fear, for those who are with us are more than those who are with them" (6:16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The story begins with a nameless girl. She is a captive and a servant, with every reason to be bitter. Yet she wishes her master's health and points him to the prophet. A small voice of faith makes a large difference. God uses the unnoticed.

Naaman comes with horses, chariots, silver, gold, and a letter from a king. He expects a spectacle. Elisha does not even come out. He sends a messenger with a plain instruction: wash in the Jordan. Naaman is furious. The muddy Jordan seems beneath him. He wanted to be healed on his own terms, in a way that honored his status. It is a picture of pride that resists grace. His servants help him see sense: "If he had commanded you to do some great thing, would you not have done it? How much more, when he says to you, Wash, and be clean?" The simplicity of the remedy was the offense.

When he humbles himself and obeys, he is healed and his skin becomes like a child's. He confesses the LORD as the only God. It is a conversion. He asks to take two mule-loads of earth, so that he can worship the LORD in Syria.

The contrast with Gehazi is sharp. Gehazi, who has been with the prophet and seen miracles, sees an opportunity to profit from grace. He lies to get the gift. The leprosy of Naaman passes to him. The outsider is cleansed, and the insider is judged. Proximity to God's work is no substitute for faith.

Chapter 6 gives a different scene. The Syrian army surrounds Elisha's city. His servant is terrified. Elisha prays, and the servant's eyes are opened to see the hills full of horses and chariots of fire. The unseen world is real. And Elisha's unusual response to the captured Syrian army is to feed them and send them home. "And the Syrians no more came on raids." Kindness did what swords could not.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus used Naaman's story in his sermon at Nazareth (Luke 4:27), pointing out that God's mercy reaches the Gentiles. Baptism is a washing that seems simple but is a sign of cleansing by grace (Titus 3:5). Romans 12:20-21 says to feed your enemy and overcome evil with good. Jesus told his disciples, "Do not be afraid, little flock" (Luke 12:32), and Revelation 5:11 shows the heavenly host surrounding the throne. 1 Timothy 6:10 warns of the love of money, as seen in Gehazi.

STEP 6

Application

Ask where pride keeps you from receiving grace in a simple form.

Think about the “little girl” in your life who points you to God. Thank them.

Pray for the eyes of your heart to be opened, as Elisha prayed for his servant.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to humble your pride so that you can receive his grace in the simple way he gives it.

Thank him for the little ones who point to him.

Ask him to open your eyes to see his armies around you.

2 KINGS 6:16

DAY 347 · WEEK 50

2 Kings 7:1-8:29

The siege lifted; Elisha's prophecies fulfilled

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 52 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 7:1-8:29. The siege of Samaria is lifted by four lepers, and Elisha's prophecies are fulfilled. Notice how God's word comes true in unexpected ways, and the quiet sadness of Elisha's meeting with Hazael.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Samaria is under siege by the Syrians, and the famine is so severe that people are eating the unthinkable. In the middle of the despair, Elisha announces that by tomorrow, food will be cheap. The chapter that follows tells how God does it. In chapter 8, the story widens to include the Shunammite woman's land and the beginning of Hazael's reign in Syria.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Elisha says, "Hear the word of the LORD: thus says the LORD, Tomorrow about this time a seah of fine flour shall be sold for a shekel" (7:1).
2. The king's officer says, "If the LORD himself should make windows in heaven, could this thing be?" (7:2).
3. Four lepers at the gate say, "Why are we sitting here until we die?" (7:3).
4. They find the Syrian camp abandoned: the LORD had made the army hear the sound of chariots and horses (7:6-7).
5. "We are not doing right. This day is a day of good news. If we are silent and wait until the morning light, punishment will overtake us. Now therefore come, let us go and tell" (7:9).
6. "And the people went out and plundered the camp of the Syrians" (7:16).

7. The officer who doubted is trampled at the gate and dies (7:17-20).
8. Elisha weeps before Hazael: “I know the evil that you will do to the people of Israel” (8:11-12).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The chapter turns on a surprising set of heroes. Four lepers, outcasts and untouchables, sitting outside the city gate, are the ones God uses to deliver Samaria. They have nothing to lose. They reason that if they stay, they die, and if they go to the Syrian camp, they may live. When they find the camp empty and full of food, they eat and hide treasure. Then their conscience speaks: “We are not doing right. This day is a day of good news.” They go to tell the city.

The scene is a picture of evangelism. The lepers did not earn the abundance. They were simply the first to discover it. Having received, they felt compelled to share. “This day is a day of good news.” The Greek word for gospel is “good news.” The image of beggars telling other beggars where to find bread is one that has been used to describe the gospel.

God’s word is fulfilled to the letter. The price of flour drops overnight, exactly as Elisha said. And the officer who scoffed, “Could this thing be?” sees it but does not eat of it. He is trampled in the rush at the gate. The word of the LORD does not fail, and unbelief has a cost.

In chapter 8, the story of the Shunammite’s land shows God’s providence in small things. She returns from famine exactly when the king is hearing Gehazi tell her story, and her land is restored. Timing is not an accident.

The meeting with Hazael is sobering. Elisha weeps when he sees what Hazael will do to Israel. Hazael, who calls himself a dog, will become a brutal king. Elisha does not rejoice in judgment. The prophet weeps over what God shows him. And the chapter ends with the continuing decline of Judah, which has now joined itself to Ahab’s family by marriage.

STEP 5

Connection

The four lepers’ discovery is a picture of the gospel: poor, outcast people finding a feast and telling others. Jesus said, “Freely you have received; freely give” (Matthew 10:8). Jesus healed lepers (Luke 17:11-19) and sent his disciples to proclaim the good news. Elisha’s tears over Israel recall Jesus’ tears over Jerusalem (Luke 19:41). Hebrews 4:2 warns that the message did not benefit those who did not share the faith.

STEP 6

Application

Think of someone who needs to hear good news. Tell them today.

Examine yourself for unbelief like the officer's, a "could this thing be?" attitude toward God's word.

Weep over what grieves God, as Elisha did over Israel.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for good news for the poor, and ask him to make you someone who cannot keep it to yourself.

Confess where his word has met your unbelief.

Tell him one person to share it with.

DAY 348 · WEEK 50

2 Kings 9:1-10:36

Jehu's bloody reform, judgment on Ahab's house

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 73 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 9:1-10:36. Jehu is anointed to destroy the house of Ahab. This is one of the most violent sections of the Bible. Read it as God's judgment on a house that had murdered Naboth and the prophets, and notice what Jehu fails to do.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

A young prophet sent by Elisha anoints Jehu, a commander in the army, as king of Israel. His mission is to carry out the judgment announced by Elijah on the house of Ahab, which had led Israel into Baal worship and shed innocent blood. The story is fast, bloody, and sobering. It shows both the seriousness of God's judgment and the limits of human zeal.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Thus says the LORD, the God of Israel, I anoint you king over the people of the LORD, over Israel" (9:6).
2. "You shall strike down the house of Ahab your master, that I may avenge on Jezebel the blood of my servants the prophets" (9:7).
3. Jehu says to Joram, "What peace can there be, so long as the whorings and the sorceries of your mother Jezebel are so many?" (9:22).
4. Jezebel is thrown from her window, and the dogs eat her, as Elijah had said (9:30-37).
5. Jehu has all seventy sons of Ahab killed (10:1-11).
6. Jehu says to Jehonadab, "Come with me, and see my zeal for the LORD" (10:16).
7. Jehu tricks the worshipers of Baal into the temple and kills them, and "Jehu wiped out Baal from Israel" (10:18-28).

8 “But Jehu was not careful to walk in the law of the LORD, the God of Israel, with all his heart. He did not turn from the sins of Jeroboam” (10:31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

This is a hard story to read. It is full of violence, and it is not easy to feel comfortable with it. The first thing to see is the context. Ahab’s house had killed Naboth, killed prophets, led the nation into idolatry, and ignored every warning. Elijah had announced judgment years before, and God had delayed because of Ahab’s humility. Now the delay is over. The word of the LORD is fulfilled to the letter: Jezebel is eaten by dogs, Ahab’s sons are killed, and Baal worship is purged.

The Bible does not present these events as a model for how believers should behave today. The church does not wield the sword. It is a record of God’s judgment against a specific house at a specific time, in the period of the old covenant, when Israel was a nation-state under God’s law.

The second thing to see is the flaw in Jehu. He is zealous, but his zeal is partial. He destroys Baal, but he does not turn from the golden calves of Jeroboam. He is efficient, but he also kills beyond what God commanded, and the prophet Hosea later criticizes the “blood of Jezreel” (Hosea 1:4). He says, “See my zeal for the LORD,” but he is also proud of it. Zeal without a whole heart is dangerous. Jehu cleans out one idol but keeps the other, and he does not love God with all his heart.

The summary verdict is one of the saddest in Kings: “Jehu was not careful to walk in the law of the LORD with all his heart.” God rewards his obedience with four generations of kings, but the decline continues. Partial reform is not enough.

The scene reminds us that God’s judgment is real. He does not overlook innocent blood. The judgment of Jezebel is the downfall of one who had killed prophets. And the passage invites us to examine whether our own obedience is whole-hearted.

STEP 5

Connection

Revelation 2:20 uses Jezebel as a symbol for false teaching in the church. Jesus is the king who will judge with righteousness, but who first took judgment on himself. Romans 12:19 reminds believers that vengeance belongs to God. Jesus rebuked James and John for wanting to call down fire (Luke 9:54-55). Matthew 22:37 calls us to love the LORD with all our heart, soul, and mind, the wholeheartedness Jehu lacked.

STEP 6

Application

Ask what you have removed from your life in the name of faith and what you have kept.

Examine whether your zeal is for God's glory or for your own reputation.

Thank God that judgment fell on Christ, so that mercy can reach even the worst sinner.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God that he is just and does not forget innocent blood.
- Ask him for a whole heart, not partial reform.
- Ask him to keep your zeal from pride.

DAY 349 · WEEK 50

2 Kings 11:1-13:25

Athaliah; Joash; Jehoahaz

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 86 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 11:1-13:25. Athaliah tries to destroy the line of David, and a child king is hidden and crowned. Watch how God preserves the Davidic line, and read the story of Elisha's death.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

In Judah, Ahaziah is killed by Jehu, and his mother Athaliah, the daughter of Ahab, seizes power by murdering the royal family. The Davidic line seems to be extinguished. In the north, the successors of Jehu rule under Syrian pressure. The section ends with the death of Elisha and a note about God's covenant faithfulness.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "When Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the royal family" (11:1).
2. Jehosheba, Ahaziah's sister, takes baby Joash and hides him in the house of the LORD for six years (11:2-3).
3. The priest Jehoiada brings out the king's son, puts the crown on him, and anoints him, and they shout, "Long live the king!" (11:12).
4. "Then Jehoiada made a covenant between the LORD and the king and people, that they should be the LORD's people" (11:17).
5. The temple of Baal is torn down (11:18).
6. "And Jehoash did what was right in the eyes of the LORD all his days, because Jehoiada the priest instructed him" (12:2).

7. Jehoahaz seeks the LORD's favor, "and the LORD listened to him, for he saw the oppression of Israel" (13:4).

8. The LORD "was gracious to them and had compassion on them… because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob" (13:23).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Athaliah's rise is one of the darkest moments for Judah. She kills her own grandchildren to take the throne. The line of David, through which the promised Messiah is to come, is almost wiped out. It looks as though the covenant of 2 Samuel 7 has failed. But a woman named Jehosheba takes one baby, Joash, and hides him in the temple. For six years, while a murderous queen rules in Jerusalem, the hope of the world sleeps in a room in God's house.

It is a quiet picture of providence. God keeps his promises through the courage of ordinary people, a princess, a priest, a nurse. And in the seventh year, Jehoiada brings Joash out, surrounded by guards, and crowns him. The people clap their hands and shout, "Long live the king!" Athaliah, hearing the noise, cries "Treason!" and is put to death. The covenant is renewed: the king, the people, and the LORD.

Joash begins well. He repairs the temple, collecting money for the work, and the workers deal honestly. But the text says he did right "all his days, because Jehoiada the priest instructed him." It hints at a faith that depended on his mentor. We learn in 2 Chronicles that after Jehoiada's death, Joash drifted into idolatry and even killed Jehoiada's son. Borrowed faith is fragile.

In the north, the picture is grim. Syria oppresses Israel, and the kings continue in Jeroboam's sin. Yet there is a flash of mercy: Jehoahaz seeks the LORD, and God gives a deliverer. And the last verses of the section give the reason: God has compassion "because of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." It is grace that keeps Israel, not merit.

Elisha dies, and even in death his bones bring life: a dead man thrown into his tomb touches the bones and revives. God's power is not limited by death.

STEP 5

Connection

Herod would later try to kill the baby of David's line (Matthew 2:16), echoing Athaliah. God protected Jesus, as he protected Joash. Jesus is the true king hidden for a time who will be fully revealed. Revelation 12 shows the dragon trying to devour the child. Romans 11:28-29 says God's calling is irrevocable. The touch of Elisha's bones points to the resurrection life that flows from Christ (1 Corinthians 15:20).

STEP 6

Application

Think about the quiet acts of faithfulness, like Jehosheba's, that God uses to keep his promises. Is there one you can do?

Ask whether your faith depends on another person's influence. How can you make it your own?

Thank God for the covenant that keeps his people, even when they fail.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for hidden acts of courage that preserved his promises.

Ask him to make your faith your own.

Ask him to be gracious to his people.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Do not fear, for those who are with us are more than those who are with them."

2 KINGS 6:16

REST

Meditation

Elisha says these words to his terrified servant, who has just woken up to find an enemy army surrounding the city. They are among the most comforting words in the Old Testament.

"Do not fear." This is one of the most common commands in the Bible. It is not a shallow instruction to stop feeling afraid. It comes with a reason. The servant had every reason to be afraid. The army was real. The danger was real. But the command rests on something he could not yet see.

"For those who are with us." Elisha says "us." He includes himself and his servant, and he points to a company that has not been introduced. Throughout Scripture, God's people are surrounded by unseen allies. Angels minister to the heirs of salvation (Hebrews 1:14). The host of heaven is real.

“Are more than those who are with them.” It is a statement of comparison. The enemy has numbers, but the people of God have more. It is not a promise that nothing bad will happen, but that, in the end, no enemy can overpower the LORD’s side.

Then Elisha prays, “O LORD, please open his eyes that he may see.” The servant looks again, and the hills are full of horses and chariots of fire. Nothing in the situation changed except the servant’s sight. Faith is not pretending the army isn’t there. It is seeing that there is something greater.

For the Christian, the greater presence is the LORD himself. “If God is for us, who can be against us?” (Romans 8:31). “He who is in you is greater than he who is in the world” (1 John 4:4). When you feel surrounded, ask God to open your eyes.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the healing of Naaman and the greed of Gehazi, the siege of Samaria lifted by four lepers, and Elisha’s vision of the chariots of fire. You read Psalms 44 and 60, the laments of a people who feel rejected by God, and the confidence that vain is the salvation of man. You saw the fall of the house of Ahab at the hand of Jehu, whose zeal was partial, and the near end of David’s line under Athaliah, thwarted by Jehosheba and Jehoiada. And you saw that God keeps his people for the sake of his covenant with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. The week taught that God uses the small and the outcast, that unbelief is costly, and that God preserves his promises through hidden faithfulness.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Naaman nearly missed his healing because the remedy seemed too simple. Where are you tempted to resist grace because it comes in a form you did not expect?

God hid the line of David in the temple for six years. How does that encourage you when God’s promises seem hidden or delayed? How does Christ, the true son of David, fulfill them?

The four lepers said, “This day is a day of good news,” and told others. Who needs to hear good news from you this week?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to open your eyes to see those who are with you.

Thank him for his covenant faithfulness.

Rest in Jesus, the true son of David.

DAY 351 · WEEK 51

Psalm 50

I do not rebuke you for sacrifices

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 50. You read this psalm in Unit 6. This time read it as a prophet's sermon, with the books of Kings in mind, and ask what God is saying to a people that went through the motions of religion but lived in injustice.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 50 is a psalm of Asaph, the temple musician. It presents God as a judge who summons his people to court. You first read it in Unit 6 as part of the story of worship. Here, in the age of the prophets, it takes on a different weight. This is exactly the charge that Amos, Hosea, and Micah will bring: sacrifices without obedience, religion without righteousness. Hosea 6:6, the anchor verse of this unit, could be a summary of the psalm.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The Mighty One, God the LORD, speaks and summons the earth from the rising of the sun to its setting" (v. 1).
2. "Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty, God shines forth" (v. 2).
3. "Hear, O my people, and I will speak, O Israel, I will testify against you" (v. 7).
4. "I do not rebuke you for your sacrifices; your burnt offerings are continually before me" (v. 8).
5. "For every beast of the forest is mine, the cattle on a thousand hills" (v. 10).
6. "If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for the world and its fullness are mine" (v. 12).
7. "Offer to God a sacrifice of thanksgiving, and perform your vows to the Most High, and call on me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you, and you shall glorify me" (vv. 14-15).

8 “These things you have done, and I have been silent; you thought that I was one like yourself” (v. 21).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The scene is a courtroom, and God is both judge and witness. He summons the whole earth to listen, but the case is against his own people. The covenant people are on trial. This is the language of the prophets: God has a case against Israel.

The surprising part is the charge. God does not say, “You have failed to offer sacrifices.” He says, “I do not rebuke you for your sacrifices.” They have kept the rituals. The problem is that they think the rituals are what God needs. He answers with one of the Bible’s great statements of divine self-sufficiency: “If I were hungry, I would not tell you, for the world and its fullness are mine.” God does not depend on offerings. He owns every animal. To treat sacrifice as a way of feeding or bribing God is to misunderstand who he is.

What he wants is thanksgiving, vows kept, and prayer: “Offer to God a sacrifice of thanksgiving.” The real sacrifice is a heart that gives thanks. The relationship is not transactional. “Call on me in the day of trouble; I will deliver you, and you shall glorify me.” He is the giver, and we are the receivers. Our part is gratitude and trust.

The second half of the psalm turns on the wicked, those who recite God’s statutes but hate discipline. They steal, commit adultery, and slander, while keeping up the appearance of religion. They thought God’s silence meant approval: “You thought that I was one like yourself.” The great danger of religious hypocrisy is the assumption that God is like us, that he overlooks what we overlook.

The psalm ends with a warning and a promise. “Mark this, then, you who forget God, lest I tear you apart.” But “the one who offers thanksgiving as his sacrifice glorifies me; to one who orders his way rightly I will show the salvation of God.”

STEP 5

Connection

Hosea 6:6, which Jesus quotes in Matthew 9:13 and 12:7, says, “I desire steadfast love and not sacrifice.” Hebrews 13:15 says, “Through him then let us continually offer up a sacrifice of praise to God.” Acts 17:24-25 says that God is not served by human hands as though he needed anything. Jesus confronted those who honored God with their lips while their hearts were far from him (Matthew 15:8).

STEP 6

Application

Ask if you ever treat your religious activity as a way of earning God's favor.

Offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving today: name five things you are grateful for.

Examine whether any part of your life is hidden behind religious appearance.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

DAY 352 · WEEK 51

Psalm 52; Psalm 53

The boastful and the fool

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 17 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 52 and Psalm 53. The first is a psalm about a powerful, boastful man who is destroyed. The second is a near twin of Psalm 14, with the fool who says there is no God. Notice the contrast with the green olive tree.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 52 has the title "when Doeg the Edomite, came and told Saul, David has come to the house of Ahimelech." You read that story in Unit 9 (1 Samuel 22). Psalm 53 is a variation of Psalm 14, which you read earlier. Both psalms are by David, and they deal with the arrogance of evil and the fate of those who reject God. Together they fit a unit about a nation that forgot God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Why do you boast of evil, O mighty man? The steadfast love of God endures all the day" (52:1).
2. "Your tongue plots destruction, like a sharp razor, you worker of deceit" (52:2).
3. "You love evil more than good, and lying more than speaking what is right" (52:3).
4. "But God will break you down forever; he will snatch and tear you from your tent" (52:5).
5. "See the man who would not make God his refuge, but trusted in the abundance of his riches" (52:7).
6. "But I am like a green olive tree in the house of God. I trust in the steadfast love of God forever and ever" (52:8).

7. “The fool says in his heart, There is no God” (53:1).
8. “Oh that salvation for Israel would come out of Zion! When God restores the fortunes of his people, let Jacob rejoice, let Israel be glad” (53:6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Psalm 52 addresses Doeg directly, a man who used his power and his tongue to destroy the priests of Nob. David asks the question that exposes all boasting in evil: “Why do you boast?” The wicked man has power, but he does not have God’s steadfast love, which “endures all the day.” Evil has a limited life. The psalm describes a tongue like a razor, a man who loves lies, a man who trusts in riches. And it declares that God will break him down.

The central image is the contrast. The wicked man will be uprooted from his tent and from the land of the living. David, by contrast, is “like a green olive tree in the house of God.” An olive tree is long-lived and fruitful. It is planted in God’s house, in the place of his presence. The wicked man is torn out. The righteous man is rooted. The difference lies in where each puts his trust: in riches, or in “the steadfast love of God forever and ever.”

The psalm ends with thanksgiving. David says he will thank God forever for what he has done, and “wait for your name, for it is good.” He does not take revenge. He waits.

Psalm 53 is almost the same as Psalm 14, with small changes, and the repetition makes a point. The human heart’s tendency to say, “There is no God,” is not an occasional problem. It is universal. “They have all fallen away; together they have become corrupt; there is none who does good, not even one.” The Psalter wants us to hear this twice, so that we do not forget how deep the problem is.

Verse 5 adds a unique line: “There they were in great terror, where there was no terror, for God scatters the bones of him who encamps against you.” God defeats those who oppose his people, sometimes by simply causing fear. And again the psalm ends with the prayer for salvation to come out of Zion.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus is the root and the vine in whom we are planted (John 15:5). Psalm 1 and Jeremiah 17:7-8 echo the image of the tree. Paul quotes Psalm 14 and 53 in Romans 3:10-12 to prove that all are sinners, and he points to Christ as the answer (Romans 3:21-26). 1 Timothy 6:17 warns the rich not to trust in uncertain riches. Salvation did come out of Zion in Jesus (Romans 11:26).

STEP 6

Application

Name something you boast in. Bring it to God and ask for humility.

Thank God that you are planted in his house like an olive tree.

Pray, “Oh that salvation would come out of Zion,” for someone who does not yet know Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to keep you from boasting in evil or trusting in riches.
- Ask him to plant you like an olive tree in his house.
- Confess where you have lived as though there is no God.

DAY 353 · WEEK 51

2 Kings 14:1-15:38

Jeroboam II's prosperity; the northern kingdom's final decades

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 66 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 14:1-15:38. These chapters trace the final decades of the northern kingdom, with Jeroboam II's prosperity and the rapid succession of kings after him. Notice the mixture of God's mercy and judgment.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

In the first half of the 700s BC, Israel and Judah enjoy a period of prosperity and expansion. Jeroboam II of Israel reigns for forty-one years, and Uzziah (Azariah) in Judah for fifty-two. This is the world of Amos and Hosea, whom you will read next. After Jeroboam II, Israel collapses quickly, with six kings in about thirty years, and the Assyrian empire begins to take its land.

STEP 3

Observation

1. Amaziah of Judah does right "yet not like David his father" and wins a victory over Edom but is defeated by Jehoash of Israel (14:3, 7-14).
2. Jeroboam II "did what was evil in the sight of the LORD" (14:24).
3. "He restored the border of Israel from Lebo-hamath as far as the Sea of the Arabah, according to the word of the LORD… which he spoke by his servant Jonah the son of Amittai" (14:25).
4. "For the LORD saw that the affliction of Israel was very bitter… But the LORD had not said that he would blot out the name of Israel from under heaven, so he saved them by the hand of Jeroboam" (14:26-27).
5. Azariah (Uzziah) reigns fifty-two years, and "the LORD touched the king, so that he was a leper to the day of his death" (15:5).

6. Zechariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, and Pekah each reign briefly, with murders and coups (15:8-31).
7. Tiglath-pileser, king of Assyria, takes cities and carries people captive (15:19, 29).
8. Jotham of Judah "did what was right… only the high places were not removed" (15:34-35).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Jeroboam II's reign is a paradox. By outward measures, it is the best of Israel's northern kings: territorial expansion, wealth, and stability. But the verdict is the same: "He did what was evil." The reason for his success is that God saw the bitter affliction of Israel and had compassion. The prosperity is mercy, not approval. This is a striking reminder that material success is not a sign of God's favor. Israel is flourishing and also rotting. Amos will describe the injustice beneath the prosperity.

Notice the mention of Jonah son of Amittai. The prophet Jonah, whose story you will read in this unit, lived in this time. He delivered a word of hope for Israel's borders. That same man will be sent to preach to Nineveh, Israel's future conqueror.

After Jeroboam II's death, the collapse is quick. The text lists king after king, each murdered by his successor or soon deposed. It is a picture of a nation that has no foundation. Within about thirty years, Assyria will take the land. The speed shows the rottenness of the kingdom.

In Judah, the picture is more stable. Uzziah reigns fifty-two years, and Jotham is faithful. But even the good kings leave the high places. The pattern of partial obedience continues. And Uzziah's leprosy is mentioned briefly here; 2 Chronicles 26 tells us it came when he proudly entered the temple. Pride undoes even the strong.

The chapters prepare the way for the prophets. The nation's outward success covers its decay. The rich oppress the poor. Worship goes on while justice is neglected. The coming words of Amos and Hosea will strip off the surface and show what is underneath.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, "Why do you call me Lord, Lord, and not do what I tell you?" (Luke 6:46). He warned that wealth can blind us (Mark 10:23-25). The mention of Jonah anticipates Jesus' sign of Jonah (Matthew 12:39-41). Revelation 3:17 describes a church that says, "I am rich… I need nothing," and does not know it is wretched. Hebrews 3:13 warns of the deceitfulness of sin.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether your comfort or success has made you less attentive to God.

Think of a time when God showed mercy that you did not deserve. Thank him.

Pray for the leaders of your nation to seek the LORD in their prosperity.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you from mistaking comfort for his approval.

Ask him to strip away surface religion in you.

Thank him for seeing the affliction of Israel and showing mercy.

AMOS 5:24

DAY 354 · WEEK 51

Amos 1:1-2:16

Judgment on the nations and Israel

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 32 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Amos 1:1-2:16. Amos, a shepherd from Judah, announces God's judgment on the nations around Israel and then, to the shock of his hearers, on Israel itself. Notice the pattern: "For three transgressions... and for four."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Amos prophesied around 760 BC, during the reign of Jeroboam II, "two years before the earthquake." He was not a professional prophet. He was a herdsman and dresser of sycamore figs from Tekoa in Judah, sent north to Israel. His message is one of the sharpest in the Bible: God demands justice, and ritual without righteousness is worthless. The book opens with a series of oracles on the surrounding nations, a pattern that draws Israel in.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The words of Amos, who was among the shepherds of Tekoa" (1:1).
2. "The LORD roars from Zion and utters his voice from Jerusalem" (1:2).
3. "For three transgressions of Damascus, and for four, I will not revoke the punishment" (1:3).
4. The same formula is repeated for Gaza, Tyre, Edom, Ammon, and Moab (1:6-2:3).
5. For Judah: "because they have rejected the law of the LORD, and have not kept his statutes" (2:4).
6. For Israel: "because they sell the righteous for silver, and the needy for a pair of sandals" (2:6).

7. “They trample the head of the poor into the dust of the earth and turn aside the way of the afflicted” (2:7).

8. “Also it was I who brought you up out of the land of Egypt” (2:10).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Amos begins like a preacher drawing a crowd. He starts with Israel’s enemies: Damascus, Gaza, Tyre, Edom, Ammon, Moab. His listeners would nod. These nations are guilty of brutality: threshing Gilead with iron sledges, selling whole communities as slaves, tearing open pregnant women, burning the bones of a king. God is a judge of the nations. They are accountable even though they do not have the law of Moses. There is a moral order that all people are expected to honor.

Then Amos turns to Judah, Israel’s southern cousin, and the crowd probably cheers. But the last oracle is the longest, and it is against Israel itself. The formula is the same. But the sins are different. The nations were accused of atrocities in war. Israel is accused of oppressing the poor in times of peace: selling the righteous for silver, trampling the needy, profaning God’s name through sexual exploitation, taking garments in pledge and drinking wine bought with fines. The sins are social and economic. They are everyday injustices committed under cover of respectable religion.

God reminds them of his grace: “It was I who brought you up out of the land of Egypt.” He destroyed the Amorites before them. He raised up prophets and Nazirites. They have responded by making the Nazirites drink wine and silencing the prophets. This is the heart of the charge. Privilege increases responsibility. “You only have I known of all the families of the earth” (3:2). Having received more, they are held to a higher standard.

The consequence is a judgment so complete that “the one who is stout of heart among the mighty shall flee away naked.” No strength will help.

The message of Amos is that God cares about how we treat each other. A faith that has no effect on how we treat the poor is not faith. The same God who roars from Zion is the God who sees the needy sold for a pair of sandals.

STEP 5

Connection

James 1:27 says that pure religion is to visit orphans and widows in their affliction. Jesus said, “Everyone to whom much was given, of him much will be required” (Luke 12:48). Amos speaks to the problem Jesus addressed in Matthew 23:23: neglecting justice, mercy, and faithfulness while tithing mint and dill. 1 Peter 4:17 says that judgment begins at the household of God. Jesus came to proclaim good news to the poor (Luke 4:18).

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether your faith has any effect on how you treat the poor and the vulnerable.

Examine your business or workplace dealings. Is there any unfairness you tolerate?

Remember that you have been given much. What does that require?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Confess the injustices you overlook.

Ask him to let your faith show in how you treat the vulnerable.

Thank him for bringing his people home.

AMOS 5:24

DAY 355 · WEEK 51

Amos 3:1-5:27

The covenant lawsuit; seek the LORD and live

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 54 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Amos 3:1-5:27. These chapters contain three “Hear this word” sermons against Israel, with famous calls to seek the LORD and to let justice roll down. Look for what God says about worship.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Having announced judgment, Amos now explains why. These chapters are made up of three sermons, each beginning with “Hear this word.” They accuse Israel of oppression and complacency, and of a worship that was lavish but empty. In the middle, there are calls to repentance. The language is vivid and sharp, and includes some of the most quoted lines in the prophets.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “You only have I known of all the families of the earth; therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities” (3:2).
2. “Do two walk together, unless they have agreed to meet?” (3:3).
3. “For the Lord GOD does nothing without revealing his secret to his servants the prophets” (3:7).
4. “The lion has roared; who will not fear? The Lord GOD has spoken; who can but prophesy?” (3:8).
5. “Hear this word, you cows of Bashan, who are on the mountain of Samaria, who oppress the poor” (4:1).
6. “Yet you did not return to me, declares the LORD” (4:6, 8, 9, 10, 11).

7. “Seek me and live” (5:4). “Seek good, and not evil, that you may live” (5:14).
8. “I hate, I despise your feasts, and I take no delight in your solemn assemblies… But let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream” (5:21, 24).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 3 opens with one of the most important principles in the prophets: privilege means accountability. “You only have I known… therefore I will punish you.” To be known by God means to be held to his standards. Israel assumed that being God’s people guaranteed protection. Amos says it guarantees accountability.

The series of rhetorical questions in 3:3-8 establishes cause and effect. Do two walk together unless they agree? Does a lion roar without prey? Does a trap spring without bait? Does disaster come to a city unless the LORD has done it? The point is that nothing happens without a cause, and the prophets speak because God has spoken. Amos is not a free agent. “The Lord GOD has spoken; who can but prophesy?”

Chapter 4 addresses the wealthy women of Samaria, whom Amos calls “cows of Bashan,” who oppress the poor and say to their husbands, “Bring, that we may drink!” It then describes God’s attempts to get Israel’s attention: famine, drought, blight, plague, and defeat. After each, the same refrain: “Yet you did not return to me.” It is one of the saddest lines in the Bible. God had been calling through hardship, and they did not listen. The chapter ends with the warning, “Prepare to meet your God, O Israel!”

Chapter 5 begins with a funeral song for Israel and then offers a way out: “Seek me and live.” The alternative is to seek Bethel, Gilgal, and Beersheba, the places of religious activity. God says, “Do not seek Bethel.” The religion of the nation had become a substitute for the LORD himself.

The center of the section is 5:21-24. God says that he hates their feasts. He will not listen to their songs. He rejects their offerings. What he wants is justice and righteousness: “Let justice roll down like waters.” This does not mean that worship is unimportant. It means that worship divorced from justice is an offense. The two belong together.

STEP 5

Connection

Martin Luther King Jr. and many others have quoted 5:24 as a call to justice. Jesus echoed the prophets: “Not everyone who says to me, Lord, Lord, will enter the kingdom of heaven” (Matthew 7:21). Hebrews 12:25-29 warns against refusing the one who speaks. Revelation 22:17 echoes the call to seek and live. Jesus is the one who "fulfills all righteousness" (Matthew 3:15) and will establish justice (Isaiah 42:1-4).

STEP 6

Application

Ask if your worship and your daily life belong together, or whether there is a gap.

Look back at "Yet you did not return to me." Is God calling you through something right now?

Pray for justice to roll down like waters in your community, and ask how you can take part.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess any gap between your praise and your life.
- Ask him to let you return when he calls you through hardship.
- Ask him to let justice roll in your community.

AMOS 5:24

DAY 356 · WEEK 51

Amos 6:1-9:15

Woes; visions; the booth of David rebuilt

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 56 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Amos 6:1-9:15. The book ends with woes against the complacent, five visions of judgment, a confrontation with the priest of Bethel, and a final promise of restoration. Read the closing verses slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The last chapters of Amos strip away the last illusions. The wealthy are comfortable and indifferent. Visions of locusts, fire, a plumb line, and a basket of summer fruit show that the end is near. Then, in the last paragraph, the tone changes completely. God promises to rebuild David's fallen shelter and to restore his people. It is among the great hopeful notes in the prophets.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Woe to those who are at ease in Zion, and to those who feel secure on the mountain of Samaria" (6:1).
2. "Who lie on beds of ivory and stretch themselves out on their couches… but are not grieved over the ruin of Joseph" (6:4-6).
3. Amos sees a plumb line: "Behold, I am setting a plumb line in the midst of my people Israel; I will never again pass by them" (7:7-8).
4. Amaziah the priest tells Amos to go home. Amos says, "I was no prophet, nor a prophet's son, but I was a herdsman and a dresser of sycamore figs. But the LORD took me from following the flock" (7:14-15).
5. A basket of summer fruit: "The end has come upon my people Israel" (8:1-2).

6. “Hear this, you who trample on the needy and bring the poor of the land to an end” (8:4).
7. “Behold, the days are coming… when I will send a famine on the land… of hearing the words of the LORD” (8:11).
8. “In that day I will raise up the booth of David that is fallen and repair its breaches, and raise up its ruins and rebuild it as in the days of old” (9:11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The woes of chapter 6 describe a comfortable elite: lying on ivory couches, eating lambs from the flock, singing idle songs, drinking wine by the bowl, and anointing themselves with the best oils. “But they are not grieved over the ruin of Joseph.” The problem is not wealth itself but indifference. They are at ease while the nation is falling apart. Complacency is a sin when others suffer.

The visions show God’s patience and its limit. In the first two visions, Amos pleads, and God relents. In the third, a plumb line, there is no more relenting. The plumb line measures a wall. The wall is crooked, and it will be torn down. The standard is God’s own righteousness, and Israel does not match it.

Amaziah, the priest, tries to silence Amos: “Never again prophesy at Bethel, for it is the king’s sanctuary.” The priest’s complaint is revealing. The place of worship has become the king’s property. Amos answers by telling his story. He was a farmer. God took him. He has no choice but to speak. A person called by God cannot be silenced by human authority.

Chapter 8 describes a famine unlike any other, not of bread or water but of hearing the words of the LORD. When God’s word is rejected long enough, it is withdrawn. It is one of the most frightening judgments in the Bible. Yet it also shows how precious the word of God is.

But the book does not end in judgment. The last words are promises: God will raise up the fallen booth of David, restore the fortunes of his people, and plant them in their land, “never again to be uprooted.” The same God who judges also restores. The nations are included: “that they may possess the remnant of Edom and all the nations who are called by my name.” The hope reaches beyond Israel.

STEP 5

Connection

In Acts 15:15-18, James quotes Amos 9:11-12 to show that the inclusion of the Gentiles in the church fulfills God’s promise to rebuild David’s tent. Jesus is the son of David who rebuilds the ruins. Jesus said, “Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that comes from the mouth of God" (Matthew 4:4). John 12:48 and Hebrews 2:3 warn about neglecting God's word. Luke 16:19-31, the rich man and Lazarus, is a New Testament echo of Amos 6.

STEP 6

Application

Ask if you are at ease while others suffer. What would it look like to be grieved over the ruin of Joseph?

Treasure God's word, and use it, knowing that there can be a famine of hearing it.

Thank God for the promise to rebuild David's fallen tent, fulfilled in Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have grown complacent.
- Ask him to grieve you over what grieves him.
- Ask him to measure you by his plumb line and make you straight.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"But let justice roll down like waters, and righteousness like an ever-flowing stream."

AMOS 5:24

REST

Meditation

This verse is the climax of God's message through Amos. It comes right after God says that he hates their feasts, despises their assemblies, and will not listen to their songs. What he wants in place of all that is this.

"But let justice roll down like waters." The image is of a flood. The Hebrew word for "roll down" suggests a torrent of water in a wadi, pouring through a dry land. It is not a trickle or a drip. The picture is of justice as something abundant, powerful, and unstoppable.

"Justice" is about fairness, the setting right of wrongs. It means that the poor are not trampled, that the weak are protected, that courts are honest, and that the powerful are held accountable.

“And righteousness like an ever-flowing stream.” Righteousness is the character that produces justice: faithfulness to God and to others. The stream is “ever-flowing,” like a perennial spring that does not dry up in summer. Righteousness is not an occasional burst but a constant supply.

In a land where many streams dried up each summer, the image of an ever-flowing stream would have been especially welcome. God wants a justice that does not fail.

How does this verse apply to us? It does not tell us to stop worshiping. It tells us that worship and justice belong together. Our songs and prayers must flow into our workplaces, our families, and our communities.

For the Christian, the source of this stream is Christ. He is the righteous one, who brings justice to the nations (Isaiah 42:1-4). And his Spirit is the living water that flows from within his people (John 7:38). Ask him to make you a channel of justice.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you followed the divided kingdom into the age of the writing prophets. You read the paradox of Jeroboam II’s prosperity, and the collapse of the northern kingdom that came after. You read the psalms of Asaph and of David that warn against empty religion and boasting in evil. And you spent the end of the week with Amos, the shepherd from Tekoa who announced judgment on the nations and then on Israel, because those who had been given much had trampled the poor. You heard God say that he hates their feasts and wants justice to roll down like waters. And you ended with the promise that God will rebuild David’s fallen shelter. The week taught that privilege brings responsibility, that worship without justice is an offense, and that God keeps his promise of restoration.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

God says through Amos that he hates empty worship. What would make your worship more real this week, in your heart and in how you live?

Amos 9:11-12 promises the rebuilding of David’s fallen tent, and Acts 15 says this is fulfilled in Christ and the church. How does this change how you see the church, and the nations who are part of it?

Who are the “poor and needy” in your life, and what does it mean for justice to roll down toward them?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to let justice roll down like waters.

Thank him for rebuilding David's fallen tent in Christ.

Ask him to make you a channel of his justice.

DAY 358 · WEEK 52

Psalm 58

Do you indeed decree what is right?

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 11 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 58. It is one of the hardest psalms in the Psalter, a cry for God to judge unjust rulers. Read it as the voice of the oppressed asking for justice, and notice where it ends.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 58 is a Miktam of David set to the tune "Do Not Destroy." It addresses corrupt rulers and judges, the very people Amos condemned for trampling the poor. This is the first of five psalms in this unit about injustice, and the Psalter's prayer for God to act as judge when human courts fail.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Do you indeed decree what is right, O gods? Do you judge the children of man uprightly?" (v. 1).
2. "No, in your hearts you devise wrongs; your hands deal out violence on earth" (v. 2).
3. "The wicked are estranged from the womb; they go astray from birth, speaking lies" (v. 3).
4. "They have venom like the venom of a serpent, like the deaf adder that stops its ear" (vv. 4-5).
5. "O God, break the teeth in their mouths; tear out the fangs of the young lions, O LORD!" (v. 6).
6. "Let them be like the snail that dissolves into slime" (v. 8).
7. "The righteous will rejoice when he sees the vengeance" (v. 10).

8 “Surely there is a reward for the righteous; surely there is a God who judges on earth” (v. 11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The opening question is directed at those who hold power in the courts, possibly human judges or rulers. They are supposed to “decree what is right,” but their hearts devise wrongs. The scandal is not just that they commit injustice, but that they do it while sitting in judgment. When the institutions designed to protect the weak become tools of the strong, the cry for justice goes up.

The language of the psalm is vivid and violent: teeth broken, fangs torn out, a snail melting. These are not private threats but prayers addressed to God. The psalmist does not take up the sword. He asks God to act. It is important to see this difference. The imprecatory psalms place vengeance in God’s hands. They express honest anger at evil and trust that God will deal with it.

How should Christians read such psalms? We cannot treat them as a license for personal hatred. Jesus taught us to love our enemies and pray for those who persecute us. Yet these psalms still teach us something. They teach that God cares about injustice, that evil is not trivial, and that it is right to want it stopped. They give voice to those who suffer under oppression and who have no other recourse. We can pray them on behalf of the oppressed, and ultimately we can read them in light of the cross, where God’s judgment on evil was carried out in Christ, and at the last day, when it will be completed.

The key line is the last: “Surely there is a God who judges on earth.” It is a statement of faith in the face of apparent injustice. Evil does not have the last word. The psalm teaches us to wait for the God who sees.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness” (Matthew 5:6), and told of a widow who pleaded with an unjust judge until God’s justice was shown (Luke 18:1-8). Revelation 6:9-10 shows the souls of martyrs crying, “How long?” Paul says, “Never avenge yourselves, but leave it to the wrath of God” (Romans 12:19). Acts 17:31 says God has fixed a day on which he will judge the world in righteousness by a man whom he has appointed.

STEP 6

Application

Pray for someone who is suffering under an unjust system, and ask God to act.

Examine your own use of whatever power you have. Are you using it for justice?

Remember that vengeance belongs to God, and trust him with what you cannot fix.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to break the power of the oppressor and defend the weak.
- Ask him to keep you from taking vengeance yourself.
- Tell him you believe there is a God who judges on earth.

DAY 359 · WEEK 52

Psalm 82

God has taken his place in the divine council

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 8 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 82. It is a short psalm in which God holds court over the “gods” and condemns them for judging unjustly. Read it slowly, and notice that Jesus quotes it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 82 is a psalm of Asaph. It describes God taking his place in the divine council and passing judgment on those called “gods.” Interpreters differ on who these are: human judges and rulers, or heavenly beings who held authority over the nations. Either way, the psalm’s point is clear: all who hold power answer to the LORD. It pairs with Psalm 58 as a statement of God’s concern for the weak.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “God has taken his place in the divine council; in the midst of the gods he holds judgment” (v. 1).
2. “How long will you judge unjustly and show partiality to the wicked?” (v. 2).
3. “Give justice to the weak and the fatherless; maintain the right of the afflicted and the destitute” (v. 3).
4. “Rescue the weak and the needy; deliver them from the hand of the wicked” (v. 4).
5. “They have neither knowledge nor understanding, they walk about in darkness; all the foundations of the earth are shaken” (v. 5).
6. “I said, You are gods, sons of the Most High, all of you” (v. 6).
7. “Nevertheless, like men you shall die, and fall like any prince” (v. 7).
8. “Arise, O God, judge the earth! For you shall inherit all the nations!” (v. 8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens in a courtroom in heaven. God is the judge, and those who stand before him are called "gods." The word elohim in the Hebrew can refer to God, to angels, or to human authorities who act in God's name. Some read the "gods" as the spiritual powers behind the nations, and others as human judges, called gods because they exercise God-given authority. In either case, the meaning of the psalm is the same. Those entrusted with rule are accountable to the one who rules over all.

God's charge is about the poor. He does not accuse them of false doctrine. He accuses them of partiality and injustice. The tests of a ruler are: do the weak receive justice? Are the fatherless and the afflicted protected? God lists four things: give justice, maintain rights, rescue, and deliver. These are the duties of anyone with power.

Verse 5 describes the consequence. When rulers fail, "all the foundations of the earth are shaken." Injustice at the top destabilizes everything. A society that does not protect its weakest members loses its footing.

Verse 6 and 7 are the heart of the psalm. God says that he appointed them: "You are gods, sons of the Most High." They have a high calling. But they will die like any man. The honor of their office does not make them immortal. The psalm humbles all who hold power.

The final verse is a prayer: "Arise, O God, judge the earth!" When human rulers fail, the psalmist turns to God. He is the only perfectly just ruler, and he will inherit all the nations.

When Jesus was accused of blasphemy for calling himself the Son of God, he quoted verse 6 (John 10:34-36). If Scripture could call mere human rulers "gods" because the word of God came to them, how much more could the one whom the Father consecrated and sent into the world claim to be God's Son?

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus quotes this psalm in John 10:34-36. He is the true judge, to whom the Father has given all judgment (John 5:22). Colossians 2:15 says that Christ disarmed the rulers and authorities. 1 Corinthians 15:24-25 says he must reign until he has put all his enemies under his feet. The psalm's last line is fulfilled in Revelation 11:15: "The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ."

STEP 6

Application

If you have authority at work, in your family, or in your church, ask how you treat the weak.

Pray for rulers to remember they will die, and that they answer to God.

Pray “Arise, O God, judge the earth” for a specific situation of injustice.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Pray for those in authority to give justice to the weak.

Ask him to keep you from abusing any power you have.

Praise him as judge of all the earth.

DAY 360 · WEEK 52

Psalm 94

O LORD, God of vengeance, the cry for justice

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 94. It is a prayer to the God of vengeance for the oppressed. Notice how it moves from complaint to teaching, and from anxiety to the comfort of God's steadfast love.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 94 has no title. It is a communal and personal lament, and it is also a wisdom psalm, with a section that instructs the arrogant. The enemies are oppressors within the covenant community, who "kill the widow and the sojourner, and murder the fatherless." It is the third of the psalms of justice in this unit.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O LORD, God of vengeance, O God of vengeance, shine forth!" (v. 1).
2. "Rise up, O judge of the earth; repay to the proud what they deserve!" (v. 2).
3. "How long shall the wicked, O LORD, how long shall the wicked exult?" (v. 3).
4. "They kill the widow and the sojourner, and murder the fatherless; and they say, The LORD does not see" (vv. 6-7).
5. "He who planted the ear, does he not hear? He who formed the eye, does he not see?" (v. 9).
6. "Blessed is the man whom you discipline, O LORD, and whom you teach out of your law" (v. 12).
7. "When I thought, My foot slips, your steadfast love, O LORD, held me up" (v. 18).
8. "When the cares of my heart are many, your consolations cheer my soul" (v. 19).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with a bold double address: “O God of vengeance.” The word “vengeance” here means just retribution, the action of a judge who puts things right. It is not petty revenge. The psalmist asks God to “shine forth,” to appear as a judge and deal with the proud.

The complaint is fully honest. The wicked exult. They boast. They crush God’s people. And they say, “The LORD does not see.” This is the arrogance of those who think no one is watching. The psalmist answers them with a rhetorical question: “He who planted the ear, does he not hear? He who formed the eye, does he not see?” It is the answer of logic. The Creator of ears and eyes must himself hear and see. God’s knowledge is not less than ours but infinitely greater.

Then the psalm shifts to a more personal note. “Blessed is the man whom you discipline, O LORD, and whom you teach out of your law, to give him rest from days of trouble.” A person who is taught by God finds rest even in times of trouble. This is a different way to see suffering: as a place of instruction. The psalmist knows that the LORD will not forsake his people.

The center of the psalm’s comfort is verses 18 and 19. “When I thought, My foot slips, your steadfast love held me up.” The psalmist’s footing was failing. And God’s covenant love caught him. And when the cares of his heart multiplied, God’s consolations cheered his soul. The word “cares” can mean also “anxious thoughts.” When anxieties pile up, God’s comfort is greater.

The psalm ends in confidence: “The LORD has become my stronghold, and my God the rock of my refuge. He will bring back on them their iniquity.” God will deal with the wicked in his own time. Meanwhile, he is a refuge.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said that nothing is hidden that will not be made known (Luke 12:2-3), and that the Father sees in secret (Matthew 6:4). Hebrews 12:5-11 draws on this teaching about discipline. Philippians 4:6-7 speaks of casting anxieties on God. 1 Peter 5:7 says, “Casting all your anxieties on him, because he cares for you.” 2 Corinthians 1:3-5 describes God as the Father of mercies and God of all comfort.

STEP 6

Application

When anxious thoughts multiply, pray verse 19 and let God’s consolations cheer you.

Ask whether you ever act as if God does not see. Bring any hidden thing to him.

Thank God that when your foot slips, his steadfast love holds you up.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to shine forth against injustice.
- Thank him that when your foot slips he holds you.
- Ask him to console you when cares are many.

DAY 361 · WEEK 52

Psalm 109

Be not silent, O God of my praise, the cry against the wicked

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 31 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 109. This is the most severe of the imprecatory psalms. Read it carefully, ask whose voice is speaking in the middle section, and watch how the psalm ends.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 109 is a psalm of David, and the psalmist is the target of slander and false accusation. He prays against a particular enemy with one of the longest curses in the Bible. Interpreters differ on whether verses 6 to 19 are the psalmist's curse or a quotation of what his enemies say about him. Whichever reading is taken, the psalm shows what to do with the deepest anger: bring it to God.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Be not silent, O God of my praise!" (v. 1).
2. "For wicked and deceitful mouths are opened against me, speaking against me with lying tongues" (v. 2).
3. "In return for my love they accuse me, but I give myself to prayer" (v. 4).
4. "So they reward me evil for good, and hatred for my love" (v. 5).
5. The long curse: "May his days be few; may another take his office" (vv. 6-19).
6. "But you, O GOD my Lord, deal on my behalf for your name's sake; because your steadfast love is good, deliver me!" (v. 21).
7. "For I am poor and needy, and my heart is stricken within me" (v. 22).
8. "For he stands at the right hand of the needy, to save him from those who condemn his soul to death" (v. 31).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with a plea for God not to be silent. The psalmist has been slandered. The attack is cruel because it is unprovoked: “In return for my love they accuse me.” His response is not to retaliate but to pray: “I give myself to prayer.” The Hebrew is literally, “I am prayer.” His whole life has become an act of prayer in the face of attack.

The long section in verses 6 to 19 is severe. The language is of a legal curse on a specific person: may he be condemned, may his prayer be counted as sin, may his children be fatherless. Many readers find this unsettling, and it is. Some scholars suggest that verses 6 to 19 are a quotation of the accusers’ words against the psalmist, which he then answers beginning in verse 21. In that reading, he is quoting their curses and handing them to God. Others understand the section as his own prayer against an unrepentant persecutor. In either case, the psalm shows what the Bible allows: raw honesty before God about injustice.

Whatever one concludes, the key move is what the psalmist does next. He does not stop with the curse. He turns to God: “But you, O GOD my Lord, deal on my behalf for your name’s sake.” He appeals not to his own righteousness but to God’s name and steadfast love. “Because your steadfast love is good, deliver me!” He admits that he is “poor and needy.” He is desperate.

The psalm ends with confidence and praise: “With my mouth I will give great thanks to the LORD.” He will praise in the midst of the throng. The reason is verse 31: God “stands at the right hand of the needy.” Where an accuser stands at the right hand of the wicked (v. 6), God stands at the right hand of the poor, as an advocate.

The psalm shows us that we may bring even our darkest feelings to God, and that he will turn them toward trust.

STEP 5

Connection

Peter quotes verse 8 in Acts 1:20 in connection with Judas, and the early church read this psalm as a picture of the suffering of Christ. Jesus was repaid with hatred for his love (John 15:25). On the cross he prayed for his enemies (Luke 23:34). He is the one who stands at the right hand of God as our advocate (Acts 7:56; 1 John 2:1). Romans 12:14 says, “Bless those who persecute you; bless and do not curse.”

STEP 6

Application

If you have a bitter feeling against someone, bring it to God in prayer, not into action.

Remember that God stands at the right hand of the needy, as your advocate.

Pray for an enemy by name, for their repentance and their good.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Bring God the accusations or hurts you carry, and give yourself to prayer.

Ask him to deal for you for his name's sake.

Pray for the one who wronged you, as Jesus did.

DAY 362 · WEEK 52

Psalm 140; Psalm 142

Deliver me from evil men; with my voice I cry to the LORD

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 140 and Psalm 142. The first asks God to protect from violent and slanderous men. The second is David's prayer in the cave. Notice how each ends with a statement of confidence.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 140 is a psalm of David asking for deliverance from violent men. Psalm 142 is a Maskil of David, when he was in the cave, which refers to his flight from Saul in 1 Samuel 22 or 24. They conclude this series of psalms on injustice. In the first, evil men plot. In the second, the psalmist cries out from a place where no one cares for him.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Deliver me, O LORD, from evil men; preserve me from violent men" (140:1).
2. "They make their tongue sharp as a serpent's, and under their lips is the venom of asps" (140:3).
3. "I say to the LORD, You are my God; give ear to the voice of my pleas for mercy, O LORD!" (140:6).
4. "O LORD, my Lord, the strength of my salvation, you have covered my head in the day of battle" (140:7).
5. "I know that the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted, and will execute justice for the needy" (140:12).
6. "With my voice I cry out to the LORD; with my voice I plead for mercy to the LORD" (142:1).

7. “When my spirit faints within me, you know my way!” (142:3).
8. “I cry to you, O LORD; I say, You are my refuge, my portion in the land of the living” (142:5).

STEP 4

Interpretation

In Psalm 140, the danger is both physical and verbal. The enemies “plan evil things in their heart and stir up wars continually.” Their words are sharp as a snake’s. The psalmist feels hunted: they have hidden a trap for him and spread a net. His response is not to fight but to pray. “I say to the LORD, You are my God.” It is the simplest declaration of faith. In the middle of danger, he claims his relationship with the LORD.

A phrase deserves attention: “You have covered my head in the day of battle.” In war, the head is the most vulnerable. God has been his helmet. It is a vivid expression of divine protection. And at the end, the psalmist declares confidence: “I know that the LORD will maintain the cause of the afflicted.” He knows. His faith rests not on seeing but on God’s character.

Psalm 142 brings us to the cave. David is alone, hunted, and desperate. He prays aloud: “With my voice I cry out.” There is no pretense. He pours out his complaint and tells his trouble before God. The line that stands out is verse 4: “Look to the right and see: there is none who takes notice of me; no refuge remains to me; no one cares for my soul.” It is the cry of utter loneliness. But the next verse is the turn: “I cry to you, O LORD; I say, You are my refuge, my portion in the land of the living.”

When no human refuge remains, the psalmist declares that God is his refuge. “You are my portion,” he says, as the Levites who had no land received the LORD as their inheritance. Everything has been stripped from David, and he discovers that God is enough.

The psalm ends with a hope: “Bring me out of prison, that I may give thanks to your name! The righteous will surround me, for you will deal bountifully with me.” The cave will not be the last word. He will again be among God’s people.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus, in Gethsemane and on the cross, was alone, forsaken by his disciples (Matthew 26:56). Yet he said, “I am not alone, for the Father is with me” (John 16:32). Hebrews 13:5-6 promises, “I will never leave you nor forsake you,” so we can say, “The Lord is my helper.” Ephesians 6:17 says to take the helmet of salvation. 2 Timothy 4:16-17 echoes Paul’s abandonment and the Lord’s strengthening.

STEP 6

Application

If you feel that no one cares for your soul, pray Psalm 142:5 aloud: “You are my refuge, my portion.”

Pray verse 140:7 and ask God to cover your head in the day of battle.

Look for someone who is alone and take notice of them.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God you are his and he is yours.
- Ask him to deliver you from evil and to be your refuge.
- Tell him what faints within you.

DAY 363 · WEEK 52

Hosea 1:1-3:5

Hosea and Gomer; the broken marriage as Israel's story

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 30 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Hosea 1:1-3:5. Hosea is told to marry a woman who will be unfaithful, and his marriage becomes a picture of God and Israel. This is one of the most moving stories in the Bible. Read the whole of chapter 2, and ask what God is feeling.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Hosea prophesied in the northern kingdom in the decades before its fall, from the time of Jeroboam II to about 722 BC. He was a contemporary of Amos, but the tone of his message is different. Amos spoke of justice, and Hosea speaks of love. His own marriage becomes a living sermon. God tells him to marry a woman who will be unfaithful, so that he can feel something of what God feels over Israel's unfaithfulness.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Go, take to yourself a wife of whoredom and have children of whoredom, for the land commits great whoredom by forsaking the LORD" (1:2).
2. The children are named Jezreel, No Mercy (Lo-ruhamah), and Not My People (Lo-ammi) (1:4-9).
3. "Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be like the sand of the sea... In the place where it was said to them, You are not my people, it shall be said to them, Children of the living God" (1:10).
4. "She did not know that it was I who gave her the grain, the wine, and the oil" (2:8).
5. "Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and bring her into the wilderness, and speak tenderly to her" (2:14).

6. “And I will betroth you to me forever. I will betroth you to me in righteousness and in justice, in steadfast love and in mercy” (2:19).
7. “And I will say to Not My People, You are my people; and he shall say, You are my God” (2:23).
8. “Go again, love a woman who is loved by another man and is an adulteress, even as the LORD loves the children of Israel” (3:1).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The story of Hosea is shocking on purpose. God tells his prophet to marry Gomer, and the text implies that she will be unfaithful. Their children are given names that preach: Jezreel, a reminder of Jehu’s bloodshed; No Mercy; and Not My People. The names are a message of judgment. A nation that broke covenant will lose the privileges of the covenant.

Chapter 2 is a courtroom drama that turns into a love song. First, God speaks as a wronged husband. Israel has run after her lovers, the Baals, thinking they were the ones who gave her grain, wine, and oil. “She did not know that it was I who gave her the grain.” Idolatry is ingratitude. It credits the gifts to the wrong giver. God says he will strip away what she was relying on, so that she will see.

Then, in verse 14, the tone changes completely. “Therefore, behold, I will allure her.” After the judgment, God does not abandon her. He takes her to the wilderness, the place of their first love, and “speaks tenderly to her.” The word means to speak to the heart. And he promises to make the Valley of Achor, the valley of trouble, “a door of hope.” He promises a new marriage: “I will betroth you to me forever.” The phrase is repeated three times. And it comes with a list of the gifts of the new covenant: righteousness, justice, steadfast love, mercy, and faithfulness. The result: “You shall know the LORD.”

The names are reversed. “I will say to Not My People, You are my people.” Mercy is given to those who had no mercy.

Chapter 3 is the costly part of the story. Hosea is told to buy back his wife from slavery or prostitution, for fifteen shekels of silver and some barley. This is the picture of redemption. God loves the unlovable and pays the price to bring her home. And the chapter ends by looking forward to the day when Israel will seek the LORD and “David their king.”

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Hosea 1:10 and 2:23 in Romans 9:25-26 and Peter quotes them in 1 Peter 2:10 to describe the church: “Once you were not a people, but now you are God’s people; once you had not received mercy, but now you have received mercy.” Hosea’s redemption of Gomer is a picture of Christ’s redeeming his bride (Ephesians 5:25-27; 1 Corinthians 6:20). Jesus said, “I came not to call the righteous, but sinners” (Mark 2:17).

STEP 6

Application

Reflect on being “Not My People” and now “My People.” What does mercy mean to you?

Ask God to speak tenderly to you in your wilderness.

Think about whom you are tempted to give up on. How does Hosea’s love challenge you?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for loving you when you were not his people.
- Thank him for buying you back.
- Ask him to allure you and speak tenderly to you.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"And I will betroth you to me forever. I will betroth you to me in righteousness and in justice, in steadfast love and in mercy."

HOSEA 2:19

REST

Meditation

This promise is spoken to an unfaithful wife. It is the Bible's most tender picture of what God intends for his people.

"And I will betroth you to me forever." To betroth is to make a solemn promise of marriage. It is the beginning of a covenant. Israel had broken the covenant again and again, but God does not take back his love. The word "forever" stands out. This is not a temporary arrangement that could be broken again. It is a permanent commitment.

The word "betroth" is repeated three times in verses 19 and 20, as if God cannot say it enough. A man who had been wronged has every reason to refuse. Yet he says it again and again.

“In righteousness and in justice.” These are the foundation of the new marriage. This is not sentimental love that ignores wrong. It is a love that is built on what is right. In the new covenant, justice is satisfied, not set aside. The cross is where righteousness and love meet.

“In steadfast love and in mercy.” These are the heart of the covenant. Steadfast love is covenant loyalty, the faithful love that does not let go. Mercy is compassion toward the needy. God promises to give them to his people, not because of their record but because of who he is.

The verse that follows adds, “And you shall know the LORD.” The goal of the marriage is a relationship of knowledge. The people will know their husband.

For the Christian, this promise is realized in Christ. He is the bridegroom, and the church is his bride. He has paid the price. “I will betroth you to me forever” is a promise for you, if you are in him. Say it as a statement of what God has done.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the psalms of injustice: Psalms 58, 82, 94, 109, 140, and 142, the cries of those who suffer under corrupt power, with the confidence that there is a God who judges on earth. You saw that Jesus quoted Psalm 82 and that God stands at the right hand of the needy. And you began the book of Hosea, the prophet whose marriage to an unfaithful woman became a picture of God’s love for Israel. You read about the children with names like No Mercy and Not My People, and about the God who allures his wayward bride into the wilderness and speaks tenderly to her. You saw Hosea buy back Gomer, and you heard the promise: I will betroth you to me forever. The week taught that God hears the cry of the oppressed, and that his love is stronger than his people’s unfaithfulness.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

The psalms of this week take honest, angry prayers to God. What injustice or hurt do you need to bring to him in prayer rather than in action?

Hosea buys back his unfaithful wife, a picture of Christ redeeming his people. What does it mean to you that you were bought at a price?

God says he will “speak tenderly” to Israel in the wilderness. Where do you need to hear his tenderness right now?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for betrothing you to himself forever.

Thank him for buying you back at the cost of his Son.

Ask him to speak tenderly to you this Sabbath.

DAY 365 · WEEK 53

Hosea 4:1-7:16

"I desire steadfast love not sacrifice"

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 60 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Hosea 4:1-7:16. The prophet now brings God's charges against Israel: no knowledge of God, empty worship, and a heart that is like a morning cloud. These chapters include the unit's anchor verse, Hosea 6:6. Read it in its setting.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The second part of Hosea consists of a series of oracles that mix accusation and pleading. God has a lawsuit against Israel. The charge is unfaithfulness to the covenant: idolatry, injustice, and a lack of the knowledge of God. The priests and the political leaders are especially blamed. The section includes a beautiful invitation to return and a sharp reply that shows how shallow Israel's repentance was.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Hear the word of the LORD, O children of Israel, for the LORD has a controversy with the inhabitants of the land. There is no faithfulness or steadfast love, and no knowledge of God in the land" (4:1).
2. "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge; because you have rejected knowledge, I reject you from being a priest to me" (4:6).
3. "A spirit of whoredom has led them astray, and they have left their God to play the whore" (4:12).
4. "Ephraim is joined to idols; leave him alone" (4:17).
5. "Come, let us return to the LORD; for he has torn us, that he may heal us; he has struck us down, and he will bind us up" (6:1).

6. “Let us know; let us press on to know the LORD; his going out is sure as the dawn” (6:3).
7. “What shall I do with you, O Ephraim? What shall I do with you, O Judah? Your love is like a morning cloud, like the dew that goes early away” (6:4).
8. “For I desire steadfast love and not sacrifice, the knowledge of God rather than burnt offerings” (6:6).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The lawsuit begins with a three-part diagnosis: no faithfulness, no steadfast love, and no knowledge of God. The first two are relational. The third is the root. The people had stopped knowing God. They no longer understood who he was or what he wanted. As a result, the society fell apart: swearing, lying, murder, stealing, adultery. “My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge.” The knowledge in view is not just information but a relationship, the knowledge of a husband and wife. It is the loss of intimacy with God.

Priests are especially blamed. They fed on the sin of the people, wanting them to sin so that the offerings would increase. A priesthood that profits from the sins of the people has lost its purpose.

Chapter 6 opens with what sounds like a model of repentance: “Come, let us return to the LORD.” The words are beautiful. They acknowledge that God has torn and will heal, that he will revive them after two days. But God’s response is devastating: “What shall I do with you?” He knows how shallow it is. “Your love is like a morning cloud, like the dew that goes early away.” Their repentance burns off with the morning sun. It is a feeling, not a commitment.

Then comes the unit’s anchor verse. “For I desire steadfast love and not sacrifice, the knowledge of God rather than burnt offerings.” The people thought that offering sacrifices would fix the relationship. God says that what he wants is a heart that loves and knows him. It does not make sacrifice meaningless, since God himself commanded it. It means that sacrifice without love is empty.

Chapter 7 continues with a series of pictures of Israel’s folly: a cake that is burned on one side and raw on the other, a silly dove flitting between Egypt and Assyria. Israel is half-baked, unstable, and turning to the wrong help. “They do not cry to me from the heart.”

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus quotes Hosea 6:6 twice: when defending his eating with sinners (Matthew 9:13) and when defending his disciples on the Sabbath (Matthew 12:7). He told the Pharisees, “Go and learn what this means.” John 17:3 says, “This is eternal life, that they know you the only true God.” Paul longs to know Christ (Philippians 3:10). Hebrews 13:15-16 says that the sacrifices pleasing to God are praise and doing good.

STEP 6

Application

Take Hosea 6:6 with you, and let it search you.

Ask whether your repentance has been like a morning cloud. What would a lasting change look like?

Make time to know God, not just to do things for him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God you desire to know him, and ask him to keep your love from fading like a morning cloud.
- Confess where religious activity has replaced your heart.
- Ask him to teach you to love steadfastly.

DAY 366 · WEEK 53

Hosea 8:1-11:12

Israel's persistent adultery; "How can I give you up?"

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 56 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Hosea 8:1-11:12. Chapters 8 to 10 describe Israel's idolatry and coming judgment. Chapter 11 is one of the most emotionally powerful chapters in the prophets: God's heart breaks over his people. Read chapter 11 slowly.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These chapters continue the lawsuit against Israel. The people have made kings without God's approval, set up idols, and made alliances with Assyria. They will reap what they sow. But in chapter 11, the language changes from a courtroom to a family. God is a father who taught his child to walk, and the child went away. The chapter is among the clearest statements in the Old Testament of God's compassionate heart.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "For they sow the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind" (8:7).
2. "For Israel has forgotten his Maker and built palaces" (8:14).
3. "Sow for yourselves righteousness; reap steadfast love; break up your fallow ground, for it is time to seek the LORD, that he may come and rain righteousness upon you" (10:12).
4. "You have plowed iniquity; you have reaped injustice; you have eaten the fruit of lies" (10:13).
5. "When Israel was a child, I loved him, and out of Egypt I called my son" (11:1).
6. "Yet it was I who taught Ephraim to walk; I took them up by their arms, but they did not know that I healed them" (11:3).
7. "I led them with cords of kindness, with the bands of love" (11:4).

8 “How can I give you up, O Ephraim? How can I hand you over, O Israel?... My heart recoils within me; my compassion grows warm and tender” (11:8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The sayings of chapters 8 to 10 contain some of the most quoted lines in Hosea. “They sow the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind.” Sin has consequences that exceed what we expect. A small seed of rebellion grows into a storm. “Israel has forgotten his Maker and built palaces.” The root of the problem is forgetting God, and the result is a grand life built without him.

Chapter 10 contains a call that is both an accusation and an invitation: “Break up your fallow ground.” Fallow ground is hard, unplowed soil. The people’s hearts have become hard. God invites them to cultivate them, to sow righteousness and reap steadfast love, to seek the LORD until he rains righteousness on them. Even in judgment, there is an open door.

Chapter 11 is the emotional center of the book. God remembers when Israel was a child. “Out of Egypt I called my son.” He taught him to walk, held him by the arms, healed him, and led him with cords of kindness. The picture of a parent teaching a toddler to take steps is touching. But the more they were called, the more they went away. They sacrificed to Baals and offered incense to idols. Now they will go into exile.

Then God asks, “How can I give you up, O Ephraim?” The sentence is a cry from the heart. Admah and Zeboiim were cities destroyed along with Sodom. God says, “How can I make you like Admah?” His heart recoils. “My compassion grows warm and tender.” God does not simply carry out judgment. He struggles with it. The text shows his holiness and his love in tension, and love wins: “I will not execute my burning anger... for I am God and not a man, the Holy One in your midst.”

This is a deep statement of who God is. His love is not like human love, which gives up when it is wounded. He is God, and he will not give up.

STEP 5

Connection

Matthew 2:15 quotes Hosea 11:1 and applies it to Jesus, who was called out of Egypt as God’s true Son, the faithful Israel. Jesus wept over Jerusalem as a hen gathering her chicks (Matthew 23:37). Jesus is the one in whom God’s compassion took flesh. Luke 15:20 shows the father running to the prodigal son. 1 John 4:10 says, “In this is love, not that we have loved God but that he loved us.”

STEP 6

Application

Ask where you have “fallow ground,” areas where your heart has hardened. Begin to break it up.

Take comfort from the image of God teaching you to walk. Where has he held you by the arms without your noticing?

Reflect on “How can I give you up?” and let it settle in your heart.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess what you have sown and fear to reap.
- Ask him to break up the fallow ground of your heart.
- Thank him for teaching you to walk and leading you with cords of kindness.

JONAH 2:9

DAY 367 · WEEK 53

Hosea 12:1-14:9

God's love persists; the promise of return

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 41 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Hosea 12:1-14:9. Hosea ends with a review of Jacob's story, a final warning, and one of the most beautiful calls to repentance in the Bible. Read chapter 14 slowly, and ask what God promises.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The last section of Hosea draws on Israel's history, going back to their ancestor Jacob, and shows how the nation has repeated his deceit. It then moves to a final accusation and the announcement of judgment. But the book does not end in judgment. In chapter 14 God offers words to say, a promise of healing, and a vision of flourishing. It is among the great gospel passages of the Old Testament.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In the womb he took his brother by the heel, and in his manhood he strove with God" (12:3).
2. "So you, by the help of your God, return, hold fast to love and justice, and wait continually for your God" (12:6).
3. "I am the LORD your God from the land of Egypt; you know no God but me, and besides me there is no savior" (13:4).
4. "I shall ransom them from the power of Sheol; I shall redeem them from Death. O Death, where are your plagues? O Sheol, where is your sting?" (13:14).
5. "Return, O Israel, to the LORD your God, for you have stumbled because of your iniquity" (14:1).

6. “Take with you words and return to the LORD; say to him, Take away all iniquity; accept what is good” (14:2).

7. “I will heal their apostasy; I will love them freely, for my anger has turned from them” (14:4).

8. “I will be like the dew to Israel; he shall blossom like the lily; he shall take root like the trees of Lebanon” (14:5).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Hosea revisits the story of Jacob, the schemer who grasped his brother’s heel and wrestled with God. Jacob is a mirror for Israel: a deceiver, a striver. But Jacob also “wept and sought his favor” and met God at Bethel. The point is that the same God who found Jacob can find Israel. “So you, by the help of your God, return.” Repentance is possible, with God’s help.

Chapter 13 contains a reminder that God alone is the Savior. “You know no God but me, and besides me there is no savior.” This is a central claim of the Bible. And in the middle of the chapter, there is an astonishing promise: “I shall ransom them from the power of Sheol; I shall redeem them from Death.” Paul quotes this in 1 Corinthians 15:55, as a proclamation of the resurrection. Even in a chapter about judgment, God declares that he will defeat death.

Chapter 14 is the climax. It begins with a call: “Return, O Israel.” Then God gives them words to use. “Take with you words.” Repentance should not be left to chance. God provides the language: take away all iniquity, accept what is good, we will no more say to the work of our hands, “Our God.” Israel is to confess, to turn from false hopes, to trust in God alone. “In you the orphan finds mercy.”

God’s reply is stunning. “I will heal their apostasy; I will love them freely.” The word “freely” means without any cost, without conditions. This is grace. God’s anger has turned away. The language of the garden follows: dew, lily, roots, branches like an olive tree, fragrance like Lebanon, grain, vine. It is a picture of life and fruitfulness. The barren, unfaithful nation will flourish. “From me comes your fruit.”

The book ends with a wisdom question: “Whoever is wise, let him understand these things.” The ways of the LORD are right, and the righteous walk in them, but transgressors stumble. The hearer must choose.

STEP 5

Connection

Paul quotes Hosea 13:14 in 1 Corinthians 15:55: “O death, where is your victory? O death, where is your sting?” Christ’s resurrection fulfills it. Romans 3:24 says we are “justified by his grace as a gift,” echoing “I will love them freely.” Jesus said, “I am the vine; you are the branches… apart from me you can do nothing” (John 15:5). Hebrews 13:15 calls us to offer a sacrifice of praise, “the fruit of lips that acknowledge his name,” echoing Hosea 14:2.

STEP 6

Application

Use Hosea 14:2 as a prayer of repentance today. Say the words God provides.

Receive the promise: “I will love them freely.” What would change if you believed it?

Ask where you are trusting in Assyria, horses, or the work of your hands rather than in the LORD.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to take away all iniquity and accept what is good in you.
- Tell him you return to him, and heal your apostasy.
- Ask him to be like the dew to you.

JONAH 2:9

DAY 368 · WEEK 53

Psalm 74

Why do you cast us off forever?

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 23 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 74. It is a communal lament over the destruction of the sanctuary. Notice how the psalmist reasons with God, recalling his past deeds and appealing to his covenant.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 74 is a Maskil of Asaph. It was likely written after the destruction of the temple by the Babylonians, though the destruction of the northern sanctuaries by the Assyrians also fits. It is placed here as the Psalter's response to the fall of the divided kingdoms. The congregation is bewildered, as Hosea predicted, and asks God how long and why.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O God, why do you cast us off forever? Why does your anger smoke against the sheep of your pasture?" (v. 1).
2. "Remember your congregation, which you have purchased of old, which you have redeemed to be the tribe of your heritage" (v. 2).
3. "Your foes have roared in the midst of your meeting place; they set up their own signs for signs" (v. 4).
4. "They said to themselves, We will utterly subdue them; they burned all the meeting places of God in the land" (v. 8).
5. "We do not see our signs; there is no longer any prophet, and there is none among us who knows how long" (v. 9).
6. "Yet God my King is from of old, working salvation in the midst of the earth" (v. 12).

7. “Yours is the day, yours also the night; you have established the heavenly lights and the sun” (v. 16).

8. “Have regard for the covenant… Arise, O God, defend your cause” (vv. 20, 22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm opens with the question, “Why?” It does not hold back. God has cast off his people, and his anger smokes. The picture of “the sheep of your pasture” reminds us that God is a shepherd. How can a shepherd be angry at his own sheep? The psalmist asks God to look at what has happened. He asks him to walk through the ruins.

The description of the destruction is vivid. The enemies hacked the carved work with axes and hatchets. They burned the sanctuary and profaned God’s dwelling place. The worst part is that God’s own place has been dishonored, and his name reviled. The psalmist is grieved less for his own loss than for the offense to God.

Verse 9 is a sorrowful statement: “We do not see our signs; there is no longer any prophet.” The people are in the silence Amos predicted, a famine of hearing the word of the LORD. No prophet knows how long. It is one of the hardest places for faith: when there is no word.

But in verse 12, a turn: “Yet God my King is from of old.” The word “yet” is the pivot. The psalmist recalls what God did: dividing the sea, breaking the heads of the sea monsters, drying up ever-flowing rivers. He remembers the creation: day and night, sun and moon, boundaries of the earth, summer and winter. The God who ordered the cosmos is the same God who is silent now. Memory becomes the foundation for hope.

The psalm ends with a series of petitions. “Have regard for the covenant.” “Arise, O God, defend your cause.” “Remember how the foolish scoff at you all the day.” The psalmist appeals to God’s own honor. He asks God to act for the sake of his own name and covenant. This is the pattern of prayer when everything seems lost: remember who God is, and ask him to act as he has promised.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus predicted the destruction of the temple (Matthew 24:2) and said, “Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up” (John 2:19). He is the true sanctuary that cannot be destroyed. Hebrews 8:1-2 speaks of the true tent. Mark 4:39 shows Jesus rebuking the storm, like God who “divided the sea.” Romans 8:35-39 assures us that nothing can separate us from God’s covenant love.

STEP 6

Application

When things fall apart, follow the psalmist's pattern: state the complaint, then remember what God has done.

Pray for those whose places of worship have been destroyed or who cannot worship freely.

Pray, "Have regard for the covenant," knowing that God has bound himself to you in Christ.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Tell God about what feels like abandonment.
- Remember aloud that he is King from of old.
- Ask him to remember his covenant and his people.

DAY 369 · WEEK 53

Psalm 77

I cry aloud to God; I remember your deeds

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Psalm · 20 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 77. You read this psalm in Unit 6. This time read it as the prayer of someone who has lived through national catastrophe. Notice how the psalmist moves from his own distress to the memory of the exodus.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 77 is a psalm of Asaph, and it belongs with the other Asaph psalms of this unit. You read it earlier as an example of the discipline of remembering. Now, at the end of the divided kingdom and the fall of Israel, it takes on a new weight. When God's people were cast into exile, this was the question: has his steadfast love ceased? And the answer given is: remember the exodus.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "I cry aloud to God, aloud to God, and he will hear me" (v. 1).
2. "In the day of my trouble I seek the Lord; in the night my hand is stretched out without wearying; my soul refuses to be comforted" (v. 2).
3. "I remember God, and I am troubled; I meditate, and my spirit faints" (v. 3).
4. "Will the Lord spurn forever, and never again be favorable? Has his steadfast love forever ceased?" (vv. 7-8).
5. "Has God forgotten to be gracious? Has he in anger shut up his compassion?" (v. 9).
6. "Then I said, This is my grief: that the right hand of the Most High has changed" (v. 10).
7. "I will remember the deeds of the LORD; yes, I will remember your wonders of old" (v. 11).

8 “Your way was through the sea, your path through the great waters; yet your footprints were unseen. You led your people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron” (vv. 19-20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm is a record of a spiritual struggle. The psalmist cries out. He cannot sleep. His soul “refuses to be comforted.” Even remembering God makes him troubled. This is a striking detail: the thought of God, which should comfort, brings distress because God seems absent. He asks a series of questions that every believer in exile has asked: Will the Lord reject forever? Has his steadfast love ceased? Has he forgotten to be gracious?

These are honest questions, and the Bible includes them. Faith does not require us to suppress doubt. It requires us to bring it to God.

The turn comes in verse 10 and 11. The psalmist says, “This is my grief.” Some read the line as: “It is my weakness that the right hand of the Most High has changed.” The meaning is that he has been looking at the problem from the wrong angle. He decides to change his focus. “I will remember the deeds of the LORD; I will remember your wonders of old.” He deliberately turns his mind from his present trouble to God’s past acts.

He then recounts the exodus. God’s way was in the sea, in the great waters, “yet your footprints were unseen.” This is a striking line. God’s footprints were not visible, but he was there. The people crossed the sea, led by an invisible God. In our own times of darkness, we may not see the footprints, but he is leading.

The psalm ends with a quiet image: “You led your people like a flock by the hand of Moses and Aaron.” It is a modest closing line. God leads through ordinary human leaders. The God of the thunder and lightning also leads like a shepherd.

For a people in exile, this was the answer. Remember the exodus. God has rescued before, and he will again.

STEP 5

Connection

The exodus is the pattern of the greater salvation in Christ, who leads us out of slavery to sin (Luke 9:31 speaks of his “exodus” in Jerusalem). Hebrews 13:20 calls him the “great shepherd of the sheep.” Jesus walked on the sea, and his footsteps were seen by the disciples in the storm (Mark 6:48-51). 1 Corinthians 10:1-4 describes the passage through the sea as a baptism into Moses.

STEP 6

Application

When you feel that God has changed, practice remembering. Write a list of his past deeds in your life.

Bring your honest questions to God. Do not edit them.

Look back for “footprints” you did not see at the time.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Cry aloud to God and tell him what your soul refuses to be comforted about.

Remember one of his wonders and rest on it.

Thank him that he leads like a flock, even through unseen footprints.

DAY 370 · WEEK 53

Jonah 1:1-2:10

Jonah flees; the storm; the great fish

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 27 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Jonah 1:1-2:10. A reluctant prophet runs from God's call, a storm threatens the ship, and a great fish swallows Jonah. Read the story as the Bible tells it: with humor, irony, and a surprising ending.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Jonah son of Amittai was a prophet in the northern kingdom during Jeroboam II (see 2 Kings 14:25). God sends him to Nineveh, the capital of Assyria, the empire that will later destroy Israel. For an Israelite, this was the last place he would want to go. The book is unusual among the prophets: it is mostly a story about the prophet rather than his sermons. And it shows that God's mercy reaches those whom Israel considered enemies.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and call out against it, for their evil has come up before me" (1:2).
2. "But Jonah rose to flee to Tarshish from the presence of the LORD" (1:3).
3. "But the LORD hurled a great wind upon the sea" (1:4).
4. "But Jonah had gone down into the inner part of the ship and had lain down and was fast asleep" (1:5).
5. "I am a Hebrew, and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land" (1:9).
6. "Pick me up and hurl me into the sea; then the sea will quiet down for you" (1:12).

7. “Then the men feared the LORD exceedingly, and they offered a sacrifice to the LORD and made vows” (1:16).

8. “And the LORD appointed a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights” (1:17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The book begins with a command and a flight. Jonah is told to go to Nineveh, and he goes in the opposite direction. The text notes the movement: he goes down to Joppa, down into the ship, down into the hold. Every step is downward. When we run from God, we go down.

The irony is rich. The pagan sailors are devout and the prophet is asleep. They cry out to their gods, while the one man who knows the true God is unconscious. The captain says to him, “Arise, call out to your god!” using the same words God had said to Jonah in 1:2. When Jonah confesses, “I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, who made the sea and the dry land,” the irony is complete. He says he fears the LORD, yet he is running from him. His words are right, but his life is not.

The sailors are more compassionate than Jonah. They try to row back to land rather than throw him overboard. They pray that they will not be guilty of innocent blood. And when they do throw him in and the sea grows calm, they fear the LORD and offer a sacrifice. The pagans are converted, and the prophet is sinking.

Then God appoints a great fish. The fish is not a punishment but an act of rescue. Jonah was drowning, and God saves him. Chapter 2 is Jonah’s prayer from inside the fish, and it is a psalm of thanksgiving. He describes sinking into the deep, with seaweed wrapped around his head. “I called out to the LORD, out of my distress, and he answered me.” He recalls that he was cast “into the heart of the seas.” He confesses: “Those who pay regard to vain idols forsake their hope of steadfast love.” And he concludes: “Salvation belongs to the LORD!”

The prayer is theologically right, but notice that it contains no repentance for running away. Jonah thanks God for deliverance but does not yet say that he will obey. The fish then vomits him onto dry land. Salvation is God’s work from beginning to end.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “An evil and adulterous generation seeks for a sign, but no sign will be given to it except the sign of the prophet Jonah. For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the great fish, so will the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth" (Matthew 12:39-40). Jesus slept in a boat during a storm and calmed it (Mark 4:38-39). He is the one who was thrown into the sea of judgment so that others might be saved. "Salvation belongs to the LORD" is fulfilled in Jesus, whose name means "The LORD saves."

STEP 6

Application

Where are you running from something God has asked of you? Name it.

Notice the grace of God in the "appointed fish" in your life, rescues you did not recognize at the time.

Pray Jonah's last line, "Salvation belongs to the LORD," as a statement of trust.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have run from God.
- Thank him for pursuing you and rescuing you.
- Ask him to help you go where he sends.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"But I with the voice of thanksgiving will sacrifice to you; what I have vowed I will pay. Salvation belongs to the LORD!"

JONAH 2:9

REST

Meditation

Jonah says these words from inside the great fish. He has just been swallowed, and he is saved. The last line has become one of the central statements of the Bible's teaching on salvation.

"But I with the voice of thanksgiving will sacrifice to you." Jonah contrasts himself with those who worship idols, mentioned in the previous verse. They give their loyalty to what is worthless. He will give thanks to the LORD. The sacrifice he promises is not an animal but the voice of thanksgiving. This echoes Psalm 50:14, which you read earlier: "Offer to God a sacrifice of thanksgiving."

"What I have vowed I will pay." Jonah made vows in his distress. Many of us do the same: we promise God things in a crisis. Jonah says he will keep his word. It is a commitment to obedience, and one that he will be tested on when he is called again to go to Nineveh.

“Salvation belongs to the LORD!” This is the summary of the story and of the Bible. Salvation is not something we produce or earn. It is not found in idols, in human strength, or in our own efforts. It belongs to the LORD. He is the one who saves, from the storm, from the deep, from judgment, and from death.

The sailors were saved by recognizing it. Jonah was saved by his rescue. And Nineveh will be saved because the LORD is the God of salvation, whether the prophet likes it or not.

For the Christian, this is the heart of the gospel. “For by grace you have been saved through faith. And this is not your own doing; it is the gift of God” (Ephesians 2:8). Say this verse when you are tempted to think that you saved yourself, or that someone is beyond saving.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you read the psalms of lament and justice: Psalms 74 and 77 on the fall of the sanctuary and the memory of the exodus, and Psalms 58, 82, 94, 109, 140, and 142 on the God who judges and defends the poor. You walked through the whole book of Hosea, from the unfaithful wife and the names of No Mercy and Not My People, through the lawsuit against Israel, to the cry of a heartbroken father, “How can I give you up?”, and the promise of healing in chapter 14. You also read the first half of Jonah: a prophet running away, a storm, pagan sailors who feared the LORD, and a fish appointed by God. The week taught that God’s love pursues the unfaithful, that he desires mercy and not sacrifice, and that salvation belongs to the LORD.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Hosea shows God buying back an unfaithful wife. Where do you most need to remember that you were redeemed rather than earned your place?

Jesus said that the sign of Jonah points to his death and resurrection. How does Jonah’s rescue from the deep help you understand the gospel?

Jonah ran from a call that seemed too hard. Is there something you are running from that God is asking you to do?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Offer God thanksgiving for pursuing you.

Pray, “Salvation belongs to the LORD,” and mean it.

Thank Jesus, who entered the depths for you.

Read Jonah 3:1-4:11. God commands Jonah a second time, Nineveh repents, and Jonah is angry. The book ends with a question and no answer. Read it slowly and ask what the question is asking of you.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Jonah has been rescued and returned to dry land. The word of the LORD comes to him "a second time." This is the last scene of a book that began with a runaway prophet. Nineveh was the capital of Assyria, the cruel empire that would soon destroy the northern kingdom. For Jonah to preach to them and see them spared is a scandal, and the book exposes why.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Now the word of the LORD came to Jonah the second time" (3:1).
2. "Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown!" (3:4).
3. "And the people of Nineveh believed God. They called for a fast and put on sackcloth" (3:5).
4. "Who knows? God may turn and relent and turn from his fierce anger, so that we may not perish" (3:9).
5. "When God saw what they did, how they turned from their evil way, God relented of the disaster that he had said he would do to them" (3:10).
6. "But it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was angry" (4:1).
7. "For I knew that you are a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love, and relenting from disaster" (4:2).

8 “And should not I pity Nineveh, that great city, in which there are more than 120,000 persons who do not know their right hand from their left, and also much cattle?” (4:11).

STEP 4

Interpretation

God gives Jonah a second chance. This is a pattern in Scripture: the God who rescues also recommissions. This time Jonah goes, and his sermon is eight words in Hebrew. There is no call to repent in it, only a warning. Yet the whole city believes. From the greatest to the least they fast and wear sackcloth, and even the king takes off his robe and sits in ashes. The most unlikely audience in the Old Testament responds better than Israel ever did to many prophets.

The king’s reasoning is worth noting: “Who knows? God may turn and relent.” He has no guarantee. He repents on the bare chance of mercy. And God does relent. This does not mean God changed his mind in a way that surprised him. It shows that his threats of judgment are real invitations to repent, and that when people turn, he is always ready to forgive.

Chapter 4 is the real point of the book. Jonah is furious. His prayer reveals why he ran in the first place: “I knew that you are a gracious God and merciful, slow to anger and abounding in steadfast love.” He quotes the great self-description of God from Exodus 34:6, and he resents it. He did not want Nineveh to be shown the mercy that he himself had just received. The prophet who was rescued from the deep is angry that God rescues others.

God does not rebuke him harshly. He asks a question: “Do you do well to be angry?” Then he uses a plant, a worm, and a scorching wind to teach him. Jonah pities the plant that gave him shade, though he did not make it. Should God not pity a city of 120,000 people, and even the animals?

The book ends with that question, unanswered. We do not know what Jonah did. The question is left for the reader. Will you rejoice in God’s mercy to those you think do not deserve it?

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said that the men of Nineveh will rise up at the judgment and condemn the generation that rejected him, “for they repented at the preaching of Jonah, and behold, something greater than Jonah is here” (Matthew 12:41). Jesus told the parable of the prodigal son, which also ends with an angry older brother outside the feast (Luke 15:28-32). 1 Timothy 2:3-4 says God desires all people to be saved. Acts 10:34-35 shows Peter learning that God shows no partiality. 2 Peter 3:9 says God is patient, not wishing that any should perish.

STEP 6

Application

Ask yourself who your “Nineveh” is, a person or group you would rather not see forgiven.

Pray for God to show mercy to someone you find hard to love.

Thank God for giving you a second chance, as he gave Jonah.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for the second chance he gave you.
- Ask him to search your heart for anger where he is merciful.
- Ask him to teach you to care for those you would rather not.

Micah 1:1-3:12

Judgment on Samaria and Jerusalem

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 50 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Micah 1:1-3:12. Micah was a prophet from a small town in Judah, and he speaks for the poor against the powerful. Read these chapters as a courtroom speech, and notice who is accused.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Micah prophesied in Judah during the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, in the same period as Isaiah and Hosea. He came from Moresheth, a village in the countryside, far from the court. His message is about both Samaria and Jerusalem. Where Hosea spoke of love, and Amos of justice, Micah brings both together and ends with a promise of a ruler from Bethlehem.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “Hear, you peoples, all of you; pay attention, O earth, and all that is in it, and let the Lord GOD be a witness against you” (1:2).
2. “Woe to those who devise wickedness and work evil on their beds! When the morning dawns, they perform it, because it is in the power of their hand” (2:1).
3. “They covet fields and seize them, and houses, and take them away; they oppress a man and his house, a man and his inheritance” (2:2).
4. “If a man should go about and utter wind and lies, saying, I will preach to you of wine and strong drink, he would be the preacher for this people!” (2:11).
5. “Is it not for you to know justice?” (3:1).
6. “You who hate the good and love the evil, who tear the skin from off my people” (3:2).

7. “Its heads give judgment for a bribe; its priests teach for a price; its prophets practice divination for money” (3:11).

8. “But as for me, I am filled with power, with the Spirit of the LORD, and with justice and might, to declare to Jacob his transgression and to Israel his sin” (3:8).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Micah begins with a cosmic summons. All the peoples of the earth are called to hear, and the LORD himself comes down from his temple, the mountains melt under his feet. The first judgment falls on Samaria and Judah for idolatry and corruption. The prophet is so grieved that he goes barefoot and naked and wails like a jackal.

The center of chapter 2 is economic sin. People lie awake at night planning how to seize fields and houses. Because they have the power, they do it. This is not a distant, abstract evil. It is landowners taking the inheritance of poorer families, each one of whom held land as a gift of the covenant. To take the land is to attack God’s gift. And Micah notes that the people prefer false prophets: if a man preaches comfort, wine, and strong drink, he is their kind of preacher.

Chapter 3 turns on the leaders. Rulers who should know justice hate the good. Micah uses a shocking image: they eat the flesh of the people and flay their skin. When they cry to the LORD, he will not answer. Prophets who mislead the people for money will find that the vision becomes night. Then Micah gives his own claim: “I am filled with power, with the Spirit of the LORD.” His message is not his own invention. It has the authority of God’s Spirit.

The chapter ends with a verdict: “Therefore because of you Zion shall be plowed as a field, Jerusalem shall become a heap of ruins.” Jeremiah 26:18 later recalls that this prophecy saved Jerusalem in Hezekiah’s day, because the king listened and repented. Hard words can lead to healing when they are heard.

Yet in the middle of chapter 2, there is a flicker of hope: “I will surely assemble all of you, O Jacob… I will set them together like sheep in a fold.” The LORD will be the king who breaks open the way and leads his people out. Judgment is not the last word.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus announced the good news to the poor (Luke 4:18) and warned against those who devour widows’ houses (Mark 12:40). James 5:1-6 warns the rich who defraud workers. Acts 1:8 promises power from the Holy Spirit to witness, as Micah was filled with the Spirit to declare. 1 Peter 5:2-3 charges elders to shepherd the flock willingly, not for shameful gain.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether any of your gain comes at someone else's expense. Look closely at your work and spending.

Pray for leaders in the church to teach faithfully and not for a price.

Pray for the courage to speak truth, as Micah did, in the power of the Spirit.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask God to keep you from coveting and seizing what is not yours.

Pray for church leaders to be faithful and free from greed.

Ask him to fill you with power, justice, and might by his Spirit.

MICAH 6:8

DAY 374 · WEEK 54

Micah 4:1-5:15

Bethlehem's ruler; future peace among the nations

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 28 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Micah 4:1-5:15. After the judgments of chapters 1 to 3, the tone changes to hope. Read the vision of the mountain of the LORD, then slow down at 5:2, the promise of a ruler from Bethlehem.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

These two chapters are the hinge of Micah. After the threat of destruction, God shows what he will do beyond it: gather the nations to Zion, bring peace, and raise up a ruler who will shepherd his people. Verse 5:2 is one of the best known prophecies of the coming Messiah, and it was already being quoted by the scribes in Jesus' day.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "It shall come to pass in the latter days that the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established as the highest of the mountains" (4:1).
2. "Many nations shall come, and say: Come, let us go up to the mountain of the LORD" (4:2).
3. "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation" (4:3).
4. "But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree, and no one shall make them afraid" (4:4).
5. "And you, O Bethlehem Ephrathah, who are too little to be among the clans of Judah, from you shall come forth for me one who is to be ruler in Israel" (5:2).
6. "Whose coming forth is from of old, from ancient days" (5:2).

7. “And he shall stand and shepherd his flock in the strength of the LORD” (5:4).
8. “And he shall be their peace” (5:5).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Micah 4:1-3 is almost identical to Isaiah 2:2-4, a sign of how important this vision was to the prophets. In the last days, the temple mount will be exalted, and the nations will come, not as conquered subjects but as willing learners. “He may teach us his ways and that we may walk in his paths.” The word of the LORD will go out from Jerusalem. And as a result, the nations will stop fighting. Weapons become farming tools. Everyone sits under their own vine and fig tree, a picture of security and peace.

What makes this vision striking is its setting. It follows the destruction of chapter 3. The very hill that will be plowed like a field becomes the highest mountain. God does not give up on his plan. Out of ruins he builds a worldwide kingdom.

The prophet admits that suffering comes first. Israel will go to Babylon, “writhing like a woman in labor,” but there God will rescue and redeem them. Their enemies think they are finished, but “they do not know the thoughts of the LORD.”

Then comes 5:2. Bethlehem was a tiny village, “too little to be among the clans of Judah.” Yet from it will come the ruler of Israel. God consistently chooses the small things. David had been the youngest son from this same town. And the ruler’s origin is “from of old, from ancient days,” language that points beyond a merely human king. He will “shepherd his flock in the strength of the LORD,” and “they shall dwell secure, for now he shall be great to the ends of the earth.” And the key line: “And he shall be their peace.”

He does not just bring peace. He is peace. The final part of the chapter promises the purging of idols and the removal of every false security. The kingdom is not built on horses and chariots but on the LORD.

STEP 5

Connection

When the magi came to Jerusalem asking where the king of the Jews was born, the chief priests and scribes quoted Micah 5:2 (Matthew 2:1-6). Jesus is the shepherd (John 10:11) and “our peace” (Ephesians 2:14). The nations streaming to the mountain of the LORD are fulfilled in the gathering of the church from every tribe (Revelation 7:9). Isaiah 9:6-7 names the coming child “Prince of Peace.”

STEP 6

Application

Reread Micah 5:2 and thank God for Bethlehem, a small place that held the greatest gift.

Notice where God works through things that seem small and overlooked, including in your own life.

Pray for peace in a specific conflict, and for the day when swords become plowshares.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Thank God for the ruler from little Bethlehem.
- Ask him to shepherd you in his strength.
- Ask him to be your peace.

MICAH 6:8

DAY 375 · WEEK 54

Micah 6:1-7:20

"Do justice, love mercy"; God pardons iniquity

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 36 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Micah 6:1-7:20. God brings a lawsuit against his people, and Micah answers with the most famous summary of the faith in the prophets. Read 6:8 carefully, then enjoy the ending, which is among the loveliest statements of forgiveness in the Bible.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

This final section of Micah is built as a courtroom scene, followed by a lament and a hymn of confidence. God calls the mountains and hills to be the jury, and he asks Israel what he has done to deserve her unfaithfulness. The prophet's answer to the question of what God requires has become a guide for Christians and Jews alike. The book ends not with judgment but with a song about a God who pardons.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "O my people, what have I done to you? How have I wearied you? Answer me!" (6:3).
2. "I brought you up from the land of Egypt and redeemed you from the house of slavery" (6:4).
3. "With what shall I come before the LORD, and bow myself before God on high? Shall I come before him with burnt offerings?" (6:6).
4. "Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?" (6:7).
5. "He has told you, O man, what is good; and what does the LORD require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?" (6:8).
6. "Woe is me! For I have become as when the summer fruit has been gathered" (7:1).

7. “But as for me, I will look to the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation; my God will hear me” (7:7).

8. “Who is a God like you, pardoning iniquity and passing over transgression for the remnant of his inheritance? He does not retain his anger forever, because he delights in steadfast love” (7:18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The lawsuit opens with God’s tender question: “O my people, what have I done to you?” He does not accuse first. He asks. He reminds them of the exodus, of Moses, Aaron, and Miriam, and of the story of Balaam. Everything he has done has been for their good. “Remember… that you may know the righteous acts of the LORD.”

The people respond with a panic of religious inflation. What does God want? Burnt offerings? Calves a year old? Thousands of rams, ten thousand rivers of oil? Even their firstborn? The questions escalate toward absurdity. They think that if enough is given, God will be satisfied. This is the religion of bargaining, and it is the opposite of the gospel.

The answer in 6:8 is simple and searching. “He has told you what is good.” It is not a secret. The LORD requires three things. To do justice: to act rightly toward others, especially the weak. To love kindness: the word is the covenant love hesed, loyal, merciful love that we should delight in, not merely practice. And to walk humbly with your God: a life lived in daily company with him, aware of dependence. This is Hosea 6:6 in another form. It is the same heart of the faith.

Chapter 7 begins with grief. Micah feels as if he is alone in a world with no godly person left. Even families are divided. But then comes a great “but as for me.” “I will look to the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation.” When the enemy mocks, he says, “Rejoice not over me, O my enemy; when I fall, I shall rise.” He accepts the LORD’s discipline because he knows that the LORD will plead his cause.

The book ends with a hymn: “Who is a God like you?” It lists what God does with sin: he pardons iniquity, passes over transgression, does not retain his anger, has compassion, tramples our iniquities underfoot, and casts all our sins into the depths of the sea. He keeps the promise he swore to Abraham and Jacob.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said the weightier matters of the law are justice, mercy, and faithfulness (Matthew 23:23). Hebrews 10:5-10 says that the sacrifices could never take away sins, but the offering of Christ's body does. In Christ the sins are cast into the sea (Colossians 2:13-14; Hebrews 8:12). Ephesians 2:8-10 says we are saved by grace, created for good works. Romans 12:1 calls us to present our bodies as a living sacrifice.

STEP 6

Application

Memorize Micah 6:8 and take one concrete action today in each of its three parts.

Consider where you are tempted to bargain with God, as the people did.

Thank God that your sins are cast into the depths of the sea. Say it aloud.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what it looks like for you to do justice, love kindness, and walk humbly this week.

Thank him that he pardons iniquity.

Ask him to teach you to do this out of love and not to earn his love.

2 Kings 16:1-17:41

Ahaz; the fall of Samaria, the northern kingdom exiled

Year 1 · Unit 11 · Reading · 65 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 16:1-17:41. These chapters give the fall of the northern kingdom. Notice the contrast between Ahaz of Judah and the kings of Israel, and read the long explanation in chapter 17 of why Israel fell.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The prophets you have read in this unit, Amos, Hosea, Jonah, and Micah, spoke before this event. Now the narrator tells what happened. In 722 BC, Assyria captured Samaria and took Israel into exile, ending the northern kingdom that Jeroboam had founded two centuries earlier. The southern kingdom of Judah, under Ahaz, was saved for a time, but it followed the same path.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “But he walked in the way of the kings of Israel. He even burned his son as an offering” (16:3).
2. “And King Ahaz went to Damascus to meet Tiglath-pileser king of Assyria… and saw the altar that was at Damascus” (16:10).
3. “In the ninth year of Hoshea, the king of Assyria captured Samaria, and he carried the Israelites away to Assyria” (17:6).
4. “And this occurred because the people of Israel had sinned against the LORD their God, who had brought them up out of the land of Egypt” (17:7).
5. “Yet the LORD warned Israel and Judah by every prophet and every seer, saying, Turn from your evil ways” (17:13).

6. “But they would not listen, but were stubborn, as their fathers had been, who did not believe in the LORD their God” (17:14).
7. “They went after false idols and became false” (17:15).
8. “They feared the LORD but also served their own gods” (17:33).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 16 describes Ahaz of Judah, one of the worst kings. He burned his own son as an offering, sacrificed at the high places, and when threatened by Syria and Israel, sent the temple treasures to the king of Assyria for help rather than trusting the LORD. Isaiah had told him to trust God (Isaiah 7), but he would not. He then copied a pagan altar he saw in Damascus and had it installed in the temple, pushing the bronze altar aside. A king who should have led the people to God remodeled God’s house to fit the world.

Chapter 17 is the theological summary of the whole northern kingdom. The fall of Samaria is told in just a few verses. The rest is an explanation. Israel fell because they had sinned against the LORD who had brought them out of Egypt. The list is long: they feared other gods, followed the customs of the nations, built high places, set up pillars and Asherim, burned incense, served idols, and sacrificed their sons and daughters. “They despised his statutes and his covenant.”

One line stands out. “They went after false idols and became false.” We become like what we worship. Those who worship empty things become empty. And the writer insists that God had warned them: “by every prophet and every seer.” The judgment was not unjust or sudden. It followed centuries of patient calls to return. Hosea, Amos, and others had given fair warning.

The chapter ends with a tragic picture. The Assyrians resettled foreigners in the land, who feared the LORD in a superficial way while still serving their own gods. “They feared the LORD but also served their own gods.” It is a portrait of syncretism, trying to mix the true God with others. The verse repeats: “To this day they do according to their former manner.”

The warning for the reader is plain. Hearing the word is not enough. The covenant requires faithful obedience from the heart. Judah is next, and the same pattern will bring them to Babylon.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “You cannot serve God and money” (Matthew 6:24). Paul writes that the things which happened to Israel “were written down for our instruction” (1 Corinthians 10:11). 1 John 5:21 ends: “Little children, keep yourselves from idols.” Romans 11:20-22 warns the church not to be proud but to continue in God’s kindness. Samaria later became the place of the encounter of Jesus with a Samaritan woman (John 4) and the gospel’s early spread (Acts 8).

STEP 6

Application

Ask what you fear and serve alongside God. Be honest, and name it.

Remember that you become like what you worship. Ask what you are becoming like.

Thank God for the prophets who warned and for the greater prophet who came.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Ask God to help you listen to what he has already said.
- Ask him to keep you from mixing worship with the idols of your age.
- Name one idol and give it to him.

Unit Verse

> "For I desire steadfast love and not sacrifice, the knowledge of God rather than burnt offerings."
> HOSEA 6:6

REST

Meditation

This is the anchor verse of the unit, and Jesus quoted it twice. It summarizes what the prophets of the divided kingdom said again and again. Israel had built a religion of rituals and sacrifices while its heart was far from God, and its society was full of injustice.

"I desire steadfast love and not sacrifice." God does not reject sacrifice, for he commanded it. But he refuses sacrifice without love. Ritual that is cut off from covenant loyalty is empty. The heart that gives to God what he wants will also care for the poor, be faithful to the covenant, and refuse idols.

"The knowledge of God rather than burnt offerings." To know God is to be in relationship with him: to trust, to love, and to obey. It is the thing Hosea said was missing in the land. When people know God, they act with justice and mercy. Micah says the same in 6:8, and Amos in 5:24.

Say the verse from memory. Then ask what it would mean for your own devotion. Is there any activity of faith that you do, but without love? What would it look like to know God more deeply this week?

LOOK BACK

Unit Recap

This unit followed the divided kingdom from its beginning to its end. After Solomon's death, the nation split. Jeroboam set up golden calves at Dan and Bethel, and "the sin of Jeroboam" became the standard by which each northern king was judged. Prophets arose to call the people back. Elijah confronted Ahab and Jezebel on Mount Carmel, and Elisha carried on his work with miracles of mercy. Amos preached justice, that it should "roll down like waters." Hosea married an unfaithful wife and showed God's heartbroken, faithful love. Jonah was sent to Assyria and learned that God's mercy reaches even enemies. Micah spoke for the poor and promised a ruler from Bethlehem. Finally, in 722 BC, Samaria fell. The psalms of the unit gave voice to lament, to cries for justice, and to hope. Through it all, God's steadfast love does not give up, and the greater prophet is on the way.

REFLECT

Review Questions

What was the sin of Jeroboam, and why did it become the measure for every northern king after him?

Think about 1 Kings 12:25-33 and what it shows about the danger of making worship convenient and political.

How do Elijah and Elisha point forward to John the Baptist and to Jesus?

Consider the confrontation on Mount Carmel, the still small voice, the raising of the dead, and the feeding of many from little.

What did Hosea's marriage to Gomer teach about the heart of God toward his people?

Consider the names of the children, the purchase of Gomer in chapter 3, and the cry of "How can I give you up?"

What does the book of Jonah teach about the scope of God's mercy, and what does it ask of the reader?

Think about Nineveh's repentance, Jonah's anger, and the unanswered question at the end.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"He has told you, O man, what is good; and what does the LORD require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God?"

MICAH 6:8

REST

Meditation

This verse has been called the whole of religion in a sentence. It follows a series of absurd questions: how many sacrifices would be enough? Micah cuts through them. "He has told you." God's will is not hidden. It is not a puzzle for experts. It has been spoken clearly, and it is simple, though not easy.

"To do justice." Justice is not an idea to hold but a thing to do. It means setting right what is wrong, especially for those who have no power to defend themselves. It is the opposite of the land-grabbing and bribe-taking that Micah condemned.

"To love kindness." The word is hesed, covenant loyalty and mercy. We are not only to practice kindness but to love it, to delight in being merciful, as God delights in showing mercy. It is the difference between a duty performed and a joy shared.

“To walk humbly with your God.” The image is of a companion on a journey. We walk with God, not ahead of him or away from him. Humility means we know we are dependent on his grace, that we did not earn our place beside him.

This verse does not replace the gospel. It describes the life of those who have received it. We cannot do any of these three things by our own power. Jesus did them perfectly in our place, and through his Spirit he now enables us to follow him. Say this verse as a prayer for the week ahead.

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you finished the book of Jonah and learned that God’s mercy extends even to Nineveh, and that the prophet who was rescued from the deep was angry at the mercy shown to others. You read Micah, the prophet from a small village, who spoke against land-grabbing, corrupt leaders, and false prophets, and who promised a ruler from tiny Bethlehem who would be the peace of his people. You read the lawsuit of chapter 6 and its great summary of what God requires, and the closing hymn to the God who casts our sins into the depths of the sea. And you read the account of the fall of Samaria in 2 Kings, with its sober explanation: they would not listen. The week taught that God asks for justice, kindness, and humble faith, and that he delights to pardon.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Jonah was angry that God showed mercy to Nineveh. Is there anyone whose forgiveness you find hard to accept?

Micah promises that a ruler will come from little Bethlehem, and that “he shall be their peace.” How has Christ been your peace?

Micah 6:8 names three things: do justice, love kindness, walk humbly. Which one do you most need to grow in this week, and what is one step you can take?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what doing justice, loving kindness, and walking humbly will look like for you.

Thank Jesus, who is our peace and casts sins into the depths of the sea.

DAY 379 · WEEK 55

2 Kings 18:1-20:21

Hezekiah's faithfulness; the Assyrian threat; deliverance

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 78 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read 2 Kings 18:1-20:21. After the fall of Samaria, Judah stands alone against Assyria. Read Hezekiah's story as a test of what faith does when the empire is at the gate, and notice the sad ending in chapter 20.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Hezekiah became king of Judah around 715 BC, a few years after Samaria fell. He is one of the best kings in Judah's history. He removed the high places, destroyed the bronze serpent Moses had made, and trusted the LORD. Assyria, the empire that had swallowed the north, now turned on Judah. This unit follows that crisis from the viewpoint of the king and of the prophet Isaiah, who spoke to him throughout.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "He trusted in the LORD, the God of Israel, so that there was none like him among all the kings of Judah after him" (18:5).
2. "He broke in pieces the bronze serpent that Moses had made, for until those days the people of Israel had made offerings to it" (18:4).
3. "In the fourteenth year of King Hezekiah, Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against all the fortified cities of Judah and took them" (18:13).
4. The Rabshakeh asks, "On what do you rest this trust of yours?" (18:19).
5. "Do not let Hezekiah make you trust in the LORD by saying, The LORD will surely deliver us" (18:30).
6. Hezekiah spreads the letter before the LORD and prays (19:14-19).

7. “For I will defend this city to save it, for my own sake and for the sake of my servant David” (19:34).

8. Hezekiah shows the Babylonian envoys all his treasures, and Isaiah says, “Days are coming when all that is in your house… shall be carried to Babylon” (20:12-18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Hezekiah’s reforms show what real faith looks like in leadership. He did not merely keep the temple clean. He destroyed the bronze serpent, a God-given object that had turned into an idol. Even good things from the past become dangerous when people worship them. The writer says there was none like him in his trust in the LORD.

Then the crisis comes. Sennacherib captures the fortified cities and Hezekiah, at first, tries to buy him off with silver stripped from the temple. It fails. The Assyrian spokesman then delivers a speech designed to break the people’s confidence. He asks the central question: “On what do you rest this trust of yours?” He argues that Egypt is a broken reed, that Hezekiah’s reforms have offended God, and that no god of any nation has ever stopped Assyria. He speaks Hebrew loudly so that the people on the wall will hear. This is psychological warfare.

Hezekiah’s response is the model. He tears his clothes, goes to the temple, and sends to Isaiah. When a threatening letter arrives, he does something striking: he spreads it out before the LORD. He brings the threat into God’s presence and prays that all the kingdoms of the earth may know that the LORD alone is God. God answers through Isaiah and strikes down the Assyrian army in the night.

Chapter 20 turns to Hezekiah’s illness and recovery, and then to a quiet failure. When envoys from Babylon come, he shows them everything, perhaps proud of his wealth, perhaps hoping for an alliance. Isaiah tells him the day will come when it is all carried off to Babylon. Hezekiah responds with a short-sighted relief that there will be peace in his days. The great king who trusted God in the crisis is weaker in prosperity. Faith has to be kept through easy times as well.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “Whoever believes in me will not be put to shame” (Romans 10:11 quotes Isaiah). Hezekiah’s prayer, spreading a trouble before the LORD, anticipates Philippians 4:6 and 1 Peter 5:7. Paul calls on us to “take every thought captive” (2 Corinthians 10:5) against arguments raised against the knowledge of God. The bronze serpent lifted by Moses became a picture of Christ lifted up (John 3:14), but it was not to be worshiped in itself.

STEP 6

Application

Ask whether anything good from your past, a ministry, habit, or tradition, has become something you rely on more than God.

Take a worry or a threatening message and spread it out before the LORD in prayer.

Watch for pride in good times. Ask God for humility when things are going well.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Tell God what voices ask you to rest on something else, and say you rest on him.

Spread your fears before him, as Hezekiah spread the letter.

Thank him for the deliverance he has given.

ISAIAH 7:14

DAY 380 · WEEK 55

Isaiah 1:1-3:26

God's indictment; Zion's daughters, covenant lawsuit

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 62 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 1:1-3:26. Isaiah is the longest and most quoted prophet in the New Testament. Read the opening chapters as a courtroom scene, and listen for God's offer in 1:18.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Isaiah son of Amoz prophesied in Jerusalem during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, roughly 740 to 690 BC. He was probably a man of standing in the city, with access to kings. The book that bears his name has sixty-six chapters, and it falls into two great halves: judgment and the Assyrian crisis in chapters 1 to 39, and comfort and the coming Servant in chapters 40 to 66. The first chapter works as a summary of the whole.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Hear, O heavens, and give ear, O earth; for the LORD has spoken: Children have I reared and brought up, but they have rebelled against me" (1:2).
2. "The ox knows its owner, and the donkey its master's crib, but Israel does not know, my people do not understand" (1:3).
3. "Bring no more vain offerings; incense is an abomination to me" (1:13).
4. "Learn to do good; seek justice, correct oppression; bring justice to the fatherless, plead the widow's cause" (1:17).
5. "Come now, let us reason together, says the LORD: though your sins are like scarlet, they shall be as white as snow" (1:18).
6. "How the faithful city has become a whore" (1:21).

7 “He shall judge between the nations, and shall decide disputes for many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares” (2:4).

8 “Stop regarding man in whose nostrils is breath, for of what account is he?” (2:22).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The prophet opens with God calling heaven and earth as witnesses, as in Deuteronomy. The charge is rebellion by children who have been loved and raised. The comparison is humbling: an ox and a donkey know where their food comes from, but Israel does not. The nation is sick from head to foot, with wounds that no one has treated. They are like Sodom, spared only because a few survived.

The religion of the people is another problem. They keep the feasts, offer the sacrifices, spread out their hands in prayer. And God says he cannot stand it. This does not mean God rejects worship. It means worship from people who plot evil and ignore the oppressed is an offense. Hosea 6:6 and Micah 6:8, which you just read, say the same. The remedy is practical: learn to do good, seek justice, correct oppression, defend the fatherless, plead for the widow.

Then comes one of the great invitations in the Bible. “Come now, let us reason together.” God does not simply condemn. He argues, he offers, and he promises. “Though your sins are like scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.” The cleansing that no sacrifice by itself could provide is offered freely, on the condition that they are willing and obedient. The choice is plain: eat the good of the land, or be devoured by the sword.

Chapter 2 sets a vision of the last days beside the failure of the present. The nations will stream to the mountain of the LORD, as in Micah 4. Then the prophet turns to the pride of Judah: idols, wealth, horses, and haughty looks. God will humble all that is lofty. The day of the LORD is against everything proud. Chapter 3 describes the collapse of social order, with children as leaders and women of Zion strutting in finery that will be replaced by sackcloth.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus quoted Isaiah’s description of hollow worship: “This people honors me with their lips, but their heart is far from me” (Mark 7:6, from Isaiah 29:13). Revelation 7:14 speaks of those whose robes have been washed in the blood of the Lamb and made white. 1 John 1:7-9 promises that the blood of Jesus cleanses us from all sin. James 1:27 defines pure religion as visiting orphans and widows in their affliction.

STEP 6

Application

Memorize Isaiah 1:18 and take it as a personal invitation. Name a sin that you carry, and bring it to God.

Choose one act of justice or mercy this week: help a widow, a child, or someone who is being treated unfairly.

Examine your worship. Is there any area where your religious activity is not matched by how you live?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess where you have rebelled as one of God's children.
- Ask him to reason with you and wash your sins white.
- Thank him for his invitation to come.

ISAIAH 7:14

DAY 381 · WEEK 55

Isaiah 4:1-5:30

The Branch of the LORD; the vineyard song

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 46 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 4:1-5:30. A beautiful promise of the Branch of the LORD is followed by the famous song of the vineyard. Read the song as a story, and notice how the listeners are caught by it.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 4 closes the first section of Isaiah with a picture of a cleansed Jerusalem after judgment. Chapter 5 opens with a love song that suddenly turns into a lawsuit. Isaiah probably sang or recited it publicly at a feast. The vineyard, a common image for Israel, appears again and again in Scripture, in the Psalms (like Psalm 80, in two days), and in Jesus' parables.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In that day the branch of the LORD shall be beautiful and glorious" (4:2).
2. "And he who is left in Zion and remains in Jerusalem will be called holy" (4:3).
3. "Then the LORD will create over the whole site of Mount Zion and over her assemblies a cloud by day, and smoke and the shining of a flaming fire by night" (4:5).
4. "Let me sing for my beloved my love song concerning his vineyard" (5:1).
5. "He dug it and cleared it of stones, and planted it with choice vines" (5:2).
6. "What more was there to do for my vineyard, that I have not done in it? When I looked for it to yield grapes, why did it yield wild grapes?" (5:4).
7. "He looked for justice, but behold, bloodshed; for righteousness, but behold, an outcry!" (5:7).

8 “Woe to those who call evil good and good evil, who put darkness for light and light for darkness” (5:20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Chapter 4 begins with a bleak scene: seven women clinging to one man because the men have died in war. It shows the depth of the coming loss. Then comes the promise. “The branch of the LORD” will be beautiful and glorious. The word “branch” (Hebrew tsemach) is a title that will later become a name for the Messiah (Jeremiah 23:5; Zechariah 3:8). The survivors of Zion will be called holy. God will wash away the filth and cleanse the bloodstains. And he will cover the city with a canopy of cloud and fire, just as he did in the wilderness. After judgment, a new exodus.

Chapter 5 is a masterpiece of rhetoric. Isaiah sings of a friend who owned a vineyard on a fertile hill. He dug, cleared, planted choice vines, built a watchtower and a winepress. Everything necessary was done. And the vineyard produced wild grapes, sour and useless. The listeners must have enjoyed the song and probably sided with the owner. Then Isaiah turns the question on them: “What more was there to do?” The listeners are the vineyard. God looked for justice, and found bloodshed. He looked for righteousness and heard the cry of the oppressed.

The consequences are given: God will remove the hedge, break down the wall, and let it be trampled. The judgment is the withdrawal of protection. The following six woes detail the sins: greedy land accumulation, drunken feasting, mocking God’s plan, calling evil good, pride in one’s own wisdom, and bribery. Verse 20 is among the most relevant in the whole book. When a society reverses its moral categories, it is ripe for judgment.

The passage ends with the sound of a distant army. God whistles for Assyria from the ends of the earth. It is a dark picture. But the reader knows from chapter 4 that this is not the last word. The Branch will come.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus told his own vineyard parable of the wicked tenants who killed the owner’s son (Mark 12:1-12), clearly echoing Isaiah 5. In John 15:1-8 he says, “I am the true vine,” the faithful Israel who bears fruit. Jeremiah 23:5 and Zechariah 6:12 call the Messiah the Branch. Galatians 5:22-23 describes the fruit of the Spirit, the good grapes that God wants.

STEP 6

Application

Ask what kind of fruit your life is bearing. Is it justice, mercy, and righteousness, or sour grapes?

Notice where our culture calls evil good and good evil. Pray for clarity and courage.

Thank God for the Branch, Jesus, who is the true vine, and ask to abide in him.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Confess the wild grapes you have produced.
- Ask Jesus, the true vine, to help you abide and bear fruit.
- Thank God for all he has done for his vineyard.

ISAIAH 7:14

DAY 382 · WEEK 55

Psalm 80

Restore us, O God, the vine brought out of Egypt

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Psalm · 19 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 80. It is a prayer of the northern tribes for restoration, and its image of the vine echoes Isaiah 5. Notice the refrain that returns three times, each time with a fuller name for God.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 80 is a psalm of Asaph set to the tune "Lilies, a Testimony." It names the northern tribes Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh, and so was probably written around the fall of the northern kingdom. It is placed here to answer Isaiah's vineyard song. Isaiah says the vineyard produced wild grapes. The psalmist asks the vinedresser to come back and tend it.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, you who lead Joseph like a flock" (v. 1).
2. "Restore us, O God; let your face shine, that we may be saved!" (v. 3).
3. "O LORD God of hosts, how long will you be angry with your people's prayers?" (v. 4).
4. "You have fed them with the bread of tears and given them tears to drink in full measure" (v. 5).
5. "You brought a vine out of Egypt; you drove out the nations and planted it" (v. 8).
6. "Why then have you broken down its walls, so that all who pass along the way pluck its fruit?" (v. 12).
7. "Turn again, O God of hosts! Look down from heaven, and see; have regard for this vine" (v. 14).

8 “But let your hand be on the man of your right hand, the son of man whom you have made strong for yourself!” (v. 17).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The psalm begins with the image of a shepherd and moves to the image of a vine. In both, God is the caretaker of his people. The psalmist reminds him of what he did: he brought a vine out of Egypt, cleared the ground, and let it take root until it filled the land. The vine reached from the mountains to the sea. Then the walls fell, and the vine was burned and cut down. This is Isaiah 5 from the other side. Isaiah says the vine did not bear fruit. The psalmist pleads that God would not abandon it.

The refrain is the heart of the prayer. It appears three times, with the name of God growing. “Restore us, O God” (v. 3). “Restore us, O God of hosts” (v. 7). “Restore us, O LORD God of hosts” (v. 19). Each time the same request: “Let your face shine, that we may be saved.” As the prayer deepens, the psalmist uses a fuller and more covenantal name. It is the language of someone who is coming closer to God as they pray.

Notice that the psalmist does not ask for the nation to reform itself. He asks God to restore. The people cannot fix their own spiritual condition. “Let your face shine” is the old priestly blessing of Numbers 6. Salvation is the shining of God’s face.

Verse 17 introduces a mysterious figure: “the man of your right hand, the son of man whom you have made strong.” Perhaps this is the king, or Israel as God’s son. But the language points beyond them. The vine needs a representative who will do what the vine failed to do. The psalm ends with a vow: “Then we shall not turn back from you; give us life, and we will call upon your name.” Renewal produces faithfulness.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “I am the true vine” (John 15:1), the faithful Israel who bears fruit and in whom we are branches. “The son of man at God’s right hand” is a title Jesus used of himself (Mark 14:62; Daniel 7:13). Hebrews 1:3 says he sits at the right hand of the Majesty. 2 Corinthians 4:6 says God has shone in our hearts “to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.”

STEP 6

Application

Pray the refrain “Restore us, O God; let your face shine, that we may be saved” for yourself and for your church.

Think about an area of your life that has been “broken down.” Ask God to restore it.

Thank God that the true vine, Jesus, bears all the fruit that Israel did not.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Ask the Shepherd of Israel to restore you where you are ruined.

Ask him to let his face shine on you.

Thank him for the man at his right hand.

ISAIAH 7:14

DAY 383 · WEEK 55

Psalm 81

I am the LORD your God, if only my people would listen

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Psalm · 16 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Psalm 81. It is a festival psalm in which God himself speaks and pleads with his people. Notice how it moves from joyful praise to a wistful "if only."

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Psalm 81 is a psalm of Asaph, to be sung at a festival, probably the Feast of Tabernacles or Passover, as it refers to the new moon and the full moon. The people are called to celebrate. Then, in verse 5, the voice shifts, and God himself speaks. The psalm pairs with Psalm 80: there the people asked God to restore them, and here God asks them why they will not listen.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Sing aloud to God our strength; shout for joy to the God of Jacob!" (v. 1).
2. "I relieved your shoulder of the burden; your hands were freed from the basket" (v. 6).
3. "In distress you called, and I delivered you" (v. 7).
4. "Hear, O my people, while I admonish you! O Israel, if you would but listen to me!" (v. 8).
5. "There shall be no strange god among you; you shall not bow down to a foreign god" (v. 9).
6. "I am the LORD your God, who brought you up out of the land of Egypt. Open your mouth wide, and I will fill it" (v. 10).
7. "But my people did not listen to my voice; Israel would not submit to me" (v. 11).
8. "Oh, that my people would listen to me, that Israel would walk in my ways! … I would feed you with the finest of the wheat, and with honey from the rock I would satisfy you" (vv. 13, 16).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first part of the psalm is exuberant. Musical instruments are named: tambourine, lyre, harp, trumpet. The people are told to celebrate because it is a statute for Israel. Worship is an obligation, and it is also a delight.

Then God speaks, and the voice is full of pathos. He reminds them of the exodus: he relieved their shoulders of the burden, freed their hands from the baskets of brick-making, and answered them in the thunder. He tested them at the waters of Meribah. The history is in the background of everything that follows.

God's central appeal is verse 8: "Hear, O my people." It echoes the Shema of Deuteronomy 6. The first commandment follows: no strange god among you. And then a promise that is also an invitation: "Open your mouth wide, and I will fill it." Like a baby bird with its beak open, the people are invited to depend on their provider. God is not reluctant. He has more to give than they dare ask.

The sad part comes in verse 11. "But my people did not listen to my voice." So God "gave them over to their stubborn hearts, to follow their own counsels." Sometimes the worst judgment is to be left to what we want.

The psalm ends with God's wistful "if only." If they would listen, if they would walk in his ways, he would subdue their enemies and feed them with the finest wheat and honey from the rock. This is God's heart. He does not delight in judgment. He longs for his people to listen and to receive his blessings.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, "Come to me, all who labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest" (Matthew 11:28), the same relief of burdens. John 6:35 says he is the bread of life, the finest wheat. 1 Corinthians 10:4 says that the rock in the wilderness was Christ, from whom flowed the water, and in Psalm 81 the honey. Luke 13:34 echoes the divine longing: "How often would I have gathered your children… and you would not!" Revelation 3:20 shows Christ knocking at the door.

STEP 6

Application

Ask where God is saying "if only you would listen" to you. What is he asking that you have not done?

Open your mouth wide. Bring a large request to God this week, a need for yourself or for others.

Thank God for the burdens he has lifted from your shoulders.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Shout to God for his strength, and tell him why.

Confess where you have not listened to his voice.

Ask him to open your ears.

ISAIAH 7:14

DAY 384 · WEEK 55

Isaiah 6:1-8:22

Isaiah's call; Immanuel, God with us

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 71 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 6:1-8:22. Chapter 6 is the call vision, one of the most important scenes in the Bible. Read it slowly, then continue into chapter 7, where Isaiah gives King Ahaz the sign of Immanuel.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Isaiah has a vision of God in the year King Uzziah died, about 740 BC. Uzziah had reigned for fifty-two years, a time of stability, and his death left a sense of insecurity. In chapters 7 and 8, the setting shifts to the crisis of 734 BC, when Syria and Israel allied against Judah and threatened King Ahaz. Isaiah goes out to meet Ahaz and offers him a sign.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "In the year that King Uzziah died I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up; and the train of his robe filled the temple" (6:1).
2. "Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory!" (6:3).
3. "Woe is me! For I am lost; for I am a man of unclean lips" (6:5).
4. "Behold, this has touched your lips; your guilt is taken away, and your sin atoned for" (6:7).
5. "Here I am! Send me" (6:8).
6. "If you are not firm in faith, you will not be firm at all" (7:9).
7. "Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign. Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel" (7:14).

8 “To the teaching and to the testimony! If they will not speak according to this word, it is because they have no light of dawn” (8:20).

STEP 4

Interpretation

Isaiah’s vision is the pattern of all true encounters with God. First, God is seen in majesty: seated on a throne, the hem of his robe filling the temple. Seraphim cover their faces and their feet and cry, “Holy, holy, holy.” The threefold repetition is the strongest superlative in Hebrew. Holiness is the one attribute of God that is repeated this way in Scripture. It means that God is utterly set apart, pure, and other. The doorposts shake and the house fills with smoke.

Second, the response is a recognition of sin. “Woe is me! For I am lost.” Isaiah, a respected man, a prophet who had already pronounced woes on others, now sees himself. The nearer one comes to God’s holiness, the clearer one’s own uncleanness becomes.

Third, there is cleansing. A seraph takes a burning coal from the altar and touches his mouth: “Your guilt is taken away, and your sin atoned for.” Isaiah does not clean himself. God provides the atonement, through the altar, a picture of sacrifice.

Fourth, the commission. Only now does God ask, “Whom shall I send?” And Isaiah, forgiven, says, “Here I am! Send me.” Service follows grace. The message he is given is a hard one: the people will hear and not understand, until the land is laid waste. Yet “the holy seed” is the stump that remains.

In chapter 7 the lesson is applied to a king. Ahaz is afraid. Isaiah tells him to be calm and trust. When Ahaz refuses to ask for a sign, with a pious excuse, God gives one anyway: a virgin will conceive and bear a son, Immanuel, “God with us.” In the immediate setting, a child would be born as a sign that the enemy kings would fall before he grew up. Yet the language reaches beyond. The promise is that God himself will be with his people.

STEP 5

Connection

John 12:41 says that Isaiah saw Jesus’ glory and spoke of him. Matthew 1:22-23 quotes Isaiah 7:14 as fulfilled in the virgin birth of Jesus. Revelation 4:8 echoes the seraphim, “Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord God Almighty.” Romans 10:15 asks, “How are they to preach unless they are sent?” 1 Peter 2:8 quotes Isaiah 8:14 about the stone of stumbling.

STEP 6

Application

Spend a few minutes in silence before God's holiness. Let it correct how small your view of him has been.

Confess one sin by name, and receive the cleansing God has provided in Christ.

Pray Isaiah's words, "Here I am! Send me," and ask where God may be sending you.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God as holy, holy, holy, in your own words.
- Confess your unclean lips, and thank him for taking away your guilt.
- Tell him, "Here I am," and listen.

THE READING

Today's reading

No new reading today. Read Isaiah 7:14 slowly, several times, and then say it from memory. Read the meditation and the week in review, and choose one of the three questions to write about, pray over, or share with someone.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

MEMORY

Memory Verse for the Week

"Therefore the Lord himself will give you a sign. Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a son, and shall call his name Immanuel."

ISAIAH 7:14

REST

Meditation

Ahaz, king of Judah, was afraid. Two armies were marching against him, and Isaiah met him with an offer: ask for any sign you like, as deep as Sheol or as high as heaven. Ahaz refused with a pious-sounding excuse. He had already decided to trust Assyria instead of God. So the Lord gave a sign anyway.

"The Lord himself will give you a sign." It is a gift that is given whether or not it is asked for. Grace often works like that. God gives more than we ask and sometimes more than we deserve.

"Behold, the virgin shall conceive and bear a son." In Isaiah's time, a young woman would bear a child, and before he was old enough to know right from wrong, the threat from the northern kings would be gone. Matthew, writing under the Spirit's guidance, sees a deeper meaning. The sign finds its full meaning in Mary and the birth of Jesus, born of a virgin.

“And shall call his name Immanuel.” The name means “God with us.” It is the whole message of the gospel in two words. God has not stayed at a distance. He has come near, in flesh, in the middle of our fear and trouble. Ahaz needed to know that God was with him. We need to know it too.

Say this verse when you are afraid. The promise is not that every threat will vanish, but that God is with you. In Christ, the one who is called Immanuel has promised, “I am with you always, to the end of the age.”

LOOK BACK

The Week in Review

This week you began the unit that surrounds the Assyrian crisis. You read of Hezekiah’s trust in the LORD when Sennacherib’s army stood outside Jerusalem, and of his later pride when he showed the Babylonian envoys his treasures. You entered the book of Isaiah, with the courtroom scene of chapter 1 and its great invitation, “Though your sins are like scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.” You read the song of the vineyard, in which God looked for justice and found bloodshed, and you prayed Psalms 80 and 81 for the vine to be restored and for the people to listen. And you stood in the temple with Isaiah, saw the Holy One high and lifted up, heard the cry of “Holy, holy, holy,” and received the sign of Immanuel. The week taught that God is holy, that he provides his own cleansing, and that he is with his people.

REFLECT

Questions for Reflection

Isaiah saw God’s holiness and was undone, then cleansed, then sent. Where are you in that pattern right now?

Jesus is the true vine who bears the fruit Israel never did. What would it look like to abide in him this week?

Immanuel means “God with us.” Where do you most need to remember that he is with you right now?

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for Immanuel, God with us.

Ask him to cleanse you, send you, and be with you.

Rest in his presence.

DAY 386 · WEEK 56

Isaiah 6:1-7; 1 Peter 1:14-16

The holiness of God

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Doctrine · 10 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 6:1-7 again, then turn to 1 Peter 1:14-16. Today is a doctrinal pause, so you are reading two passages together: Isaiah's vision of the Holy One and Peter's command that God's people be holy. Ask as you read: what is holiness, and what does it have to do with me?

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Isaiah saw the Lord on a throne in the temple, and the seraphim cried, "Holy, holy, holy." Seven centuries later, the apostle Peter wrote to scattered believers who were living as strangers in a pagan world, and he took a command from Leviticus: "You shall be holy, for I am holy." Between them stands the central idea of the whole Bible. This is a day to stop and think carefully about what it means to say God is holy.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "Holy, holy, holy is the LORD of hosts; the whole earth is full of his glory!" (Isaiah 6:3).
2. The foundations of the thresholds shook at the voice, and the house was filled with smoke (Isaiah 6:4).
3. "Woe is me! For I am lost; for I am a man of unclean lips, and I dwell in the midst of a people of unclean lips" (Isaiah 6:5).
4. "Your guilt is taken away, and your sin atoned for" (Isaiah 6:7).
5. "As obedient children, do not be conformed to the passions of your former ignorance" (1 Peter 1:14).
6. "But as he who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct" (1 Peter 1:15).

7. “Since it is written, You shall be holy, for I am holy” (1 Peter 1:16).

8. The holiness commanded is rooted in the holiness of the one who calls.

DOCTRINAL PAUSE

Doctrinal Focus

To say that God is holy is to say first that he is different. The Hebrew word means “set apart” or “cut off.” God is not part of creation. He is not a bigger version of us. He is the Creator, infinitely above everything he has made, in power, in knowledge, in being. When the seraphim cover their faces and feet, they show that even the highest created beings cannot look at him without reverence.

Holiness also means that God is morally pure. In him there is no darkness at all (1 John 1:5). He cannot tolerate evil, and he cannot be tempted by it. This is why Isaiah’s response to the vision was not delight but terror. In the presence of perfect purity, his own uncleanness was exposed. Holiness is not a cold attribute alone. It is bound up with God’s love, justice, and mercy. His love is a holy love, and his justice is a holy justice. This is why forgiveness is costly: a holy God cannot simply look away from sin. He deals with it, and he does so by providing atonement. The coal on the altar points to a sacrifice.

Third, holiness is shared. God does not remain in splendid isolation. He calls his people to be holy, as Peter says, in all their conduct. This is what it means to be saved: to be set apart for God, and to be changed to be like him. We are not holy by our own effort. In Christ, believers are already declared holy (1 Corinthians 1:2), and yet we are called to become holy in practice. Holiness is a gift we receive and a goal we pursue by the Spirit.

The right response to a holy God is reverence, repentance, and worship. And the good news is that the holy God has made a way to come near.

STEP 4

Interpretation

Put the two passages side by side and they teach a unified lesson. Isaiah’s vision shows us the God who is holy. Peter’s command shows us what holiness means for those who belong to him. Neither is possible without the other.

Isaiah’s experience follows an order: vision, confession, cleansing, and service. He did not choose to confess. The sight of God’s holiness did that for him. And the cleansing was not earned. The seraph brought the coal from the altar, and the declaration was made: “Your guilt is taken away.” Holiness begins with God’s initiative.

Peter writes to Christians who were tempted to go back to their old way of life. He tells them not to be conformed to the passions of their former ignorance. They once lived without knowing God. Now they have been called by a holy God, and they are to be holy. The command is based on the character of the one who calls. He does not say, be holy because it is difficult and noble. He says, be holy because I am.

The surrounding verses explain the foundation. Holiness comes from knowing that we have been ransomed "with the precious blood of Christ." The holiness that God requires is the holiness that he has paid for. We are not trying to become acceptable. We have been made acceptable, and we now live out what is true of us.

This changes how we think about the Christian life. It is not mainly a list of rules but a way of life that reflects the character of the God we have met. We look at him, and we begin to be changed into the same image.

STEP 5

Connection

Hebrews 12:14 says, "Strive for peace with everyone, and for the holiness without which no one will see the Lord." Hebrews 10:10 says we have been sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ. 2 Corinthians 3:18 says we are being transformed into the same image from one degree of glory to another. 1 Thessalonians 4:7 says God has called us to holiness. Revelation 4:8 shows the living creatures still crying "Holy, holy, holy" before the throne.

STEP 6

Application

Take five minutes to sit before God without asking for anything. Let the word "holy" fill your mind.

Choose one area of life where your conduct does not reflect the God who called you. Ask for the Spirit's help to change.

Thank God that holiness is first something he gives, in Christ, and not something you must earn.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Praise God for his holiness, and tell him how it moves you.

Thank him for taking away your guilt through Christ.

Ask him to make you holy as he is holy.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 56

"For to us a child is born, to us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."

ISAIAH 9:6

DAY 387 · WEEK 56

Isaiah 9:1-12:6

The child born to us; the shoot of Jesse; peaceable kingdom

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 83 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 9:1-12:6. These chapters contain the great Messianic promises of Isaiah: the child born to us, the shoot from the stump of Jesse, and the peaceable kingdom. Read them as light dawning in a dark place.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Chapter 8 ended in darkness and distress, with a people who consult mediums and find only gloom. Chapter 9 begins with a "but." The land of Zebulun and Naphtali, the first to be devastated by Assyria, will be the first to see light. In these chapters, Isaiah gives his most famous portrait of the coming king, and promises that after the Assyrian axe comes a shoot from the stump of David's family.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The people who walked in darkness have seen a great light; those who dwelt in a land of deep darkness, on them has light shone" (9:2).
2. "For to us a child is born, to us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder" (9:6).
3. "And his name shall be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace" (9:6).
4. "Of the increase of his government and of peace there will be no end" (9:7).
5. "For all this his anger has not turned away, and his hand is stretched out still" (9:12).
6. "There shall come forth a shoot from the stump of Jesse, and a branch from his roots shall bear fruit" (11:1).

7. “The Spirit of the LORD shall rest upon him, the Spirit of wisdom and understanding” (11:2).

8. “The wolf shall dwell with the lamb… for the earth will be full of the knowledge of the LORD as the waters cover the sea” (11:6, 9).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The light in chapter 9 is a reversal. Isaiah says the very place that first suffered under Assyria will be honored. Galilee, a region in the far north that was despised, becomes the setting for the good news. The prophecy then explains why: a child is born. The one who comes is a human child, born into the line of David, and yet his names point beyond the human. “Mighty God” and “Everlasting Father” are titles that no merely human king could carry. “Wonderful Counselor” means that he needs no advice, and “Prince of Peace” means that he brings wholeness. His government will have no end, and it will rest on justice and righteousness.

Notice the phrase, “The zeal of the LORD of hosts will do this.” God himself is committed to accomplishing it. Yet the rest of chapter 9 and chapter 10 describe the judgment that comes first. Assyria is God’s axe, used to chop down his own people, but then judged for its pride. The tool that boasts against its maker will be broken. “Shall the axe boast over him who hews with it?”

Chapter 11 returns to hope. The Assyrian army is described as a forest cut down, but a shoot comes from the stump of Jesse. The picture is of a royal family reduced to a stump after the fall of David’s line, and yet life springs from it. Upon him rests the Spirit in sevenfold fullness. He judges the poor with righteousness. And his reign restores creation itself: the wolf with the lamb, the leopard with the young goat, a child leading them. The cause is that “the earth will be full of the knowledge of the LORD as the waters cover the sea.”

Chapter 12 ends the section with a song. “Behold, God is my salvation; I will trust, and will not be afraid.” “With joy you will draw water from the wells of salvation.” The proper response to such promises is song.

STEP 5

Connection

Matthew 4:12-16 quotes Isaiah 9:1-2 and says that Jesus began his ministry in Galilee. Luke 1:32-33 echoes Isaiah 9:7 in the angel’s announcement to Mary. Revelation 5:5 calls Jesus the Root of David, and Romans 15:12 quotes Isaiah 11:10. At his baptism the Spirit rested on Jesus (Matthew 3:16). Romans 8:19-21 speaks of creation itself being set free. John 7:37-38 recalls the wells of salvation.

STEP 6

Application

Read Isaiah 9:6 aloud and pause on each of the four names. Which one do you most need today?

Think about a dark place in your life or community. Pray for light to shine there.

Sing or read Isaiah 12:2 as a prayer of trust.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

Thank God for the light that has dawned on you.

Praise the child as Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.

Ask him to bring his peace where you are.

ISAIAH 9:6

DAY 388 · WEEK 56

Isaiah 13:1-17:14

Oracles against Babylon, Assyria, Philistia, Moab [survey]

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 86 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 13:1-17:14. This is a survey day. These chapters contain oracles against Babylon, Assyria, Philistia, Moab, Damascus, and others. Do not worry about every name. Read for the main point: God rules over all the nations.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

Isaiah's message so far has been to Judah. Now he turns outward. The oracles against the nations make up chapters 13 to 23, and they teach that the God of Israel is not just a tribal deity. He is the judge of all the earth. Babylon and Assyria, the great powers of the day, are included. These oracles also served a purpose for Judah: they showed that trusting in alliances with the nations was foolish, since all of them are under God's judgment.

STEP 3

Observation

1. "The oracle concerning Babylon which Isaiah the son of Amoz saw" (13:1).
2. "Behold, the day of the LORD comes, cruel, with wrath and fierce anger, to make the land a desolation" (13:9).
3. "I will punish the world for its evil, and the wicked for their iniquity; I will put an end to the pomp of the arrogant" (13:11).
4. "How you are fallen from heaven, O Day Star, son of Dawn! ... You said in your heart, I will ascend to heaven" (14:12-13).
5. "This is the purpose that is purposed concerning the whole earth, and this is the hand that is stretched out over all the nations" (14:26).
6. "For the LORD has had compassion on Jacob and will again choose Israel" (14:1).

7. “My heart cries out for Moab” (15:5).
8. “In that day man will look to his Maker, and his eyes will look on the Holy One of Israel” (17:7).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The first oracle is against Babylon, which at this time was not yet the dominant power. Isaiah looks ahead to its rise and fall. The day of the LORD is a day of judgment on pride, “to put an end to the pomp of the arrogant.” Babylon is described as “the glory of kingdoms,” yet it will be like Sodom and Gomorrah, a place for desert animals. In the Bible, Babylon becomes a symbol of human pride and organized rebellion against God, from the tower of Babel to the book of Revelation.

The taunt against the king of Babylon in chapter 14 is one of the most striking passages in Isaiah. The king is addressed as “Day Star, son of Dawn,” who tried to ascend to heaven and set his throne above the stars of God. He is brought down to Sheol. Christian tradition has often read this passage as describing Satan’s fall, and the pattern of pride that leads to a fall certainly applies. In its original setting, it is a mocking song about a tyrant whose arrogance ended in the grave. Either way, the lesson is the same. Whoever exalts himself will be humbled.

Notice that in the middle of the judgment, Isaiah describes God’s compassion on Jacob. God’s justice toward the nations is connected to his faithfulness to his people. And the purpose is “purposed concerning the whole earth.” History is not random. God has a plan, and none can annul it.

Even in the oracle against Moab, Isaiah weeps. “My heart cries out for Moab.” The prophet is not gleeful about judgment. And Damascus, Ephraim, and the others show the same: trust in human alliances will fail. In the day of judgment, people will “look to their Maker.” Some will turn to him.

STEP 5

Connection

Jesus said, “I saw Satan fall like lightning from heaven” (Luke 10:18). Revelation 18 describes the fall of Babylon the great, and Revelation 17 shows its pride. Daniel 4:30-37 shows Nebuchadnezzar humbled. James 4:6 says, “God opposes the proud but gives grace to the humble.” Acts 17:26-27 says God made every nation and determined their times and boundaries. Ezekiel 33:11 shows that God takes no pleasure in the death of the wicked.

STEP 6

Application

Look at the news and remember that God rules the nations. Pray for a nation that is in turmoil.

Examine yourself for the pride expressed in “I will ascend.” Where do you want to be on top?

Weep for someone you might be tempted to judge, as Isaiah did for Moab.

PRAY

Respond in Prayer

Talk to God in your own words. You might:

- Praise God as ruler of all nations.
- Ask him to humble pride in you.
- Pray for a nation in turmoil.

MEMORY VERSE FOR WEEK 56

“For to us a child is born, to us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder, and his name shall be called Wonderful Counselor, Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace.”

ISAIAH 9:6

DAY 389 · WEEK 56

Isaiah 18:1-23:18

Oracles against the nations continue [survey]

Year 1 · Unit 12 · Reading · 105 verses

THE READING

Read the passage

Read Isaiah 18:1-23:18. This is another survey day. The oracles continue against Cush, Egypt, Babylon, Edom, Arabia, Jerusalem, and Tyre. Look for the repeated message: do not put your trust in the nations.

Read from your own Bible. The ESV is recommended.

STEP 2

Setting the Scene

The oracles against the nations continue. Judah was tempted to look to Egypt and Cush (Ethiopia) for protection against Assyria, and Isaiah repeatedly warns against it. One of the strangest passages in the book appears in chapter 20, where Isaiah walks naked and barefoot for three years as a sign of what would happen to Egypt and Cush. Chapter 22 turns the oracles back toward Jerusalem itself.

STEP 3

Observation

1. “In that time a present will be brought to the LORD of hosts from a people tall and smooth-skinned” (18:7).
2. “The LORD will strike Egypt, striking and healing, and they will return to the LORD, and he will listen to their pleas” (19:22).
3. “Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel my inheritance” (19:25).
4. “Thus shall it be with the nations in which we hoped… and how shall we escape?” (20:6).
5. “Watchman, what time of the night?” (21:11).
6. “You were not looking to him who did it, or have regard for him who planned it long ago” (22:11).

7. “And I will place on his shoulder the key of the house of David” (22:22).
8. “Her merchandise and her wages will be holy to the LORD” (23:18).

STEP 4

Interpretation

The oracles of these chapters appear dry, but they carry a thread of astonishing hope. Egypt, the old oppressor of Israel, will be struck by the LORD and then healed. In chapter 19, there is a vision of a day when Egypt will speak the language of Canaan, build an altar to the LORD, and cry out to him. He will send them a savior, and they will know him. And then the climax: “Blessed be Egypt my people, and Assyria the work of my hands, and Israel my inheritance.” Three nations, former enemies, become a blessing in the midst of the earth. The gospel of God’s mercy for the nations is already in the Old Testament.

The oracle of chapter 20 is bizarre but purposeful. Isaiah’s three years of walking naked and barefoot is a sermon without words: this is how the Egyptians and Ethiopians will be led away by Assyria. Those who relied on them will say, “Where can we escape?” It was designed to make Judah afraid of putting hope in the wrong place.

Chapter 22 is the oracle about Jerusalem, “the valley of vision.” The city celebrates when it should mourn. People prepare their defenses, store water, fortify the walls, and count houses, but “you did not look to him who did it.” They prepared everything but did not seek God. The result is a dreadful motto: “Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we die.” Paul quotes it in 1 Corinthians 15:32. The chapter also contains the story of Shebna, a proud steward replaced by Eliakim, who receives “the key of the house of David.” He can open, and none can shut.

The last oracle, against Tyre, ends with a surprise: her profits will be set apart for the LORD. The nations are not simply doomed. Some are redeemed.

STEP 5

Connection
